At the camp ground we received a cordial welcome from Pastor C. R. Godfrey and his ready helpers. Nowhere have we enjoyed more generous hospitality than at Downsview. We found a spacious tabernacle capable of accommodating twelve or fifteen hundred persons and thirty well-fitted tents. What an array of children! That is the land of the old-fashioned, typical large family. And parents seemed to rejoice in their numerous households with old Judean pride. One venerable brother had a family reunion on the camp ground. His ten children and twenty-six grand children were all present. And how joyful the greeting! From divergent paths and varied responsibilities they returned and lived over again the sports and scenes of exuberant childhood. In the old home circle we are always young in spite of whitened locks and weary limbs.

In addition to President Rush and this editor, Bros. Cornett, Hart, Stone and Hodge assisted the active, popular pastor in the labors of the pulpit. Vast congregations crowded the tabernacle and gave respectful attention to the word preached. A note received from Bro. Godfrey, after we left on Monday morning, reported the results of the meeting as follows: "Thirty-five or more conversions, nineteen accessions, fourteen baptisms, and the church wonderfully revived." On Sunday, at eleven o'clock, we held a Centenary service. President Rush represented Centenary College in a short address, and the editor discoursed on Methodism at some length; but "the patience of the people was sublime." The Centenary collection amounted to $250, which, with the amount already raised by the pastor, aggregates from Downsview circuit, thus far, about $325.

We were much encouraged by warm commendations of the ADVOCATE. Our friends there are legion and loyal. After a thousand expressions of brotherly kindness, they bade us a God-speed homeward, with thirty-two subscribers and a purse substantially relieved of its leanings. Bro. Rush spent Sunday night with Bro. Pipes in the village of Downsview, a mile or so distant. We joined him there at six o'clock sumptuous breakfast, next morning, and then retraced our journey to the railroad.

John Wesley and High Churchmen.

A thoughtful brother has kindly forwarded us the notice of a book written by an English clergyman, entitled "John Wesley and High Churchmen." The writer claims to have established the fact beyond cavil, viz., "that John Wesley was a veritable Ritualist." Such claims are very common among church people. They are fond of saying that Mr. Wesley lived and died loyal to the Church of England, and deprecated the separation of Methodists from the church—all of which is mere cant. Mr. Wesley repudiated the High Church idea of episcopal ordination, and, in the exercise of his presbyterial authority, ordained Thomas Coke, superintendent or Bishop, and Richard Whatcoat and Thomas Vasey, elders, for the American colonies. If loyal to veritable Ritualism, why was the church so startled, while every Bishop and priest turned loose upon him "the dogs of war." We reproduce the following from Dr. Riggs' recent "Life of Wesley," which ought to settle the question in every candid mind:

In the beginning of 1738 Wesley had been a High Churchman; and even after his conversion in that year he continued for several years to hold in the abstract High Church views as to points ecclesiastical. But in 1746 he abandoned once for all his ecclesiastical High Churchmanship. He relates in his journal, under date January 20, 1746 how his views were changed by reading Lord (Chancellor) King's account of the primitive church. From that time forward he constantly maintained that "the uninterrupted succession was a fable which no man ever did or could prove." One of the convictions derived by him at this time from reading Lord King's book was that the office of Bishop was originally one and the same with that of presbyter; and the practical inference drawn by Wesley was that he himself was a "Scriptural Episcopos," and that he had as much right as any primitive or missionary Bishop to ordain ministers as his representatives and helpers, who should administer the sacraments instead of himself to the societies which had placed themselves under his spiritual charge.

Church—Financing—Honesty and Economy.

While defaulting bank officials, dishonest speculators, disreputable tradesmen and corrupt political partisans are burdening the telegraphic columns of our metropolitan dailies with their ways that are dark, his cheering to contemplate the history of church economics. These daily records threaten to destroy all confidence in human integrity. In sheer despair we exclaim, Is honesty yet found on the earth! Is any one worthy of trust! The inventive mind of man is taxed to its utmost tension to invent schemes and devices to elude or circumvent dishonesty. Combination and time locks, bell punches, anti-fraud ballot boxes, etc., are but expressions of the general suspicion and espionage that shadow every employee and member of society. And the daily thefts and frauds that are emblazoned in the newspapers only intensify this suspicion. But when we turn to the church of Christ, what a tribute to her virtue! Collecting and disbursing thousands every year, her hands are free from stain. Her trusted officials need not be guarded by a more vigilant sentinel than an awakened conscience, nor restrained by a bond other than the love of Christ and a sense of duty. To these reflections we have been led by an article from Rev. J. M. Reid, misslonary secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the July Manual, respecting expenditures in the operation of their benevolent societies. Those ignorantly fond of repeating the old threadbare taunt that "it takes two dollars to send one to convert the heathen" will find some facts that will turn food for reflection. He says:

In the line of our own church work what a magnificent record we have! A century is now closing of our church organization, and millions upon millions of dollars have flowed through its channels of benevolence to the appointed objects; but the first dime of any default in any department has yet to be revealed. In every department of our benevolent work, moreover, the cost of administration is reduced to the minimum. No agents are employed either to collect or disburse funds. Our general pastorate, conferences, Bishops and missionaries do this work without additional remuneration. This will explain the fact, so incredible to many, that our great Missionary Society, with its 4,000 employees, is able to collect and disburse $750,000 per annum at a cost not exceeding two and a half per cent, and even most of this is extinguished by rentals from the Mission House; so that of the collections nearly every dime goes to the mission field.

Letter from Georgia.

Our passage from Mississippi to Georgia was this year by a new route in part, and a shorter one than ever before. Leaving Jackson, Miss., at about eleven o'clock at night, the next day, at noon, we were at Birmingham, Ala., where we took the Georgia Pacific train, and at six in the evening were at Temple, Ga., a village forty-five miles west of Atlanta. The region through which we had passed was sparsely inhabited and rather barren in appearance, though towns are springing up here and there, and Anniston is a beautiful little city charmingly located on a high plain, surrounded by mountains which lift the horizon heavenward on every side. From Temple we were promptly carried in a good hack twelve miles to Carrollton, where we had a comfortable night's rest and took the train early the next morning for Turin, which we reached in about two hours.

One reason for going by Carrollton was that I might learn on the spot the results of the efforts of the friends of temperance to suppress the whisky traffic in that city and county, for it was among the first places where such efforts were made in the South. Years ago it was a part of the religion of the people of Carroll to make, sell and drink whisky; but good people undertook to abolish the nefarious business by repealing the laws by which it had been established among them. A law to permit implies the possibility of a law to forbid. They worked for prohibition. They were six years in getting it, and for six years they have had it. And what is the result? All that its friends could have expected—almost all they could have desired: peace, order and prosperity where their opposites had been. There were twelve stores in Carrollton before; there are thirty-two now. Where night was made hideous by drunken revelry before, now, though it is heard but the cheery music of domestic circles or the resounding praises of the temples of God; and many a home in the country which the devil of the bowl often turned into a hell enjoys now the unpeepable blessing of a sober husband and father. Yes, prohibition prohibits and prosperity attends its onward march. Whisky has been voted out of ninety counties in Georgia, and still the work of expulshim goes on. The Georgians are determined to put away this evil thing from among them.

I preached in a village, on Sunday last, where, a few years ago, some patriotic citizens bought all the liquor a saloon keeper had and poured it on the ground, expecting him to sell no more. But he soon bought more whisky and began to sell again. Soon afterward John Knight, a Methodist preacher, came to the place and went to the saloon and prayed for the keeper and his family. The next day the same minister prayed most fervently to the church that the Lord would convert that saloon keeper; but if that could not be done, that the Lord would kill him. A short time thereafter that saloon keeper ceased to sell whisky, and has never sold it since. He had married his niece. They have eight children—the second, fourth, sixth and eighth of whom are all deaf and dumb. He has finally shut himself up in a dark room and never sees the light of day nor the face of man. His wife and children feed him.

I dwell upon this question of the liquor traffic because it is the paramount social question of the day. Legislators must enact laws to suit the people on this subject or be succeeded in office by those who will. The progress of high moral ideas on this and other subjects throughout the country is one of the most hopeful signs of the times. A few years since a representative in Congress from a certain district in Georgia, who had been highly commended for his ability, and who was known to be a Christian gentleman, was nominated for Congress; but a representative of the whisky interest was nominated and elected. Now the first-mentioned gentleman is nominated and will be returned to Congress by a large majority. A Congressman from another district said of this gentleman, while in Congress with him formerly, that he would like him better if he were not so d—l religious that he would not take a drink with a friend. The man who swears about the religiosity of his friend stays at home most of the time, and a better man succeeds him in Congress. In yet another district the question of nomination for Congress lay between one who was addicted to gambling and a Christian gentleman. The Constitution, of Atlanta, boldly advocated the election of the gambler; but the people, by their virtuous wisdom, declared that they would not have a gambler to represent them in Congress. Thus Christian sentiment prevails and the spirit of Christ is ruling the world.

Crops in almost all parts of the country through which I have passed are good or promising. The wheat and oat crops were not the best, and were damaged by rain both before and after cutting. Corn will be plentiful. Cotton has good seed; but most of the fruit is yet in embryo—two weeks later than usual. Fruits of most kinds are in excellent quantity for domestic use. Peaches have rotted extensively on the trees. Watermelons, in places, large and abundant. Grapes in sufficient quantity for eating. Many fig trees were killed by last winter's cold. A general stock law has been in force in many counties of this State for several years. All seem to be pleased with its operation, and stock has been greatly improved.

Railroad supervision, which was adopted in Georgia several years ago, has resulted in great benefit to the people and in no perceptible injury to the roads. They were never in better condition, and new ones are being surveyed and built as fast as they are needed.

Protracted meetings, basket-meetings and camp meetings are now the order of the day. What a pleasure it is to preach to a full house of attentive hearers, and especially to find them, as I did last Sunday, ready to heed the word! The altar was crowded and many knelt for prayer in the congregation at the eleven o'clock service. On Monday I saw a man, whom the love of strong drink had driven to steal his wife's clothing to sell to get whisky, join the church, and was enabled to hope, as I could never have done in such a case before, that he would stand fast in the Lord; for I am free to confess that I have no confidence in any drunkard's profession of religion while the drinking saloon remains convenient.

The flowers bloomed as sweetly as ever around the cosy home in Turin; but the old armchair is vacant, and the form which occupied it when last I saw it before I shall see no more on earth. He lived for God, and God took him.

W. L. C. H.

The following resolution passed by the Camp Meeting Association at Crystal Springs, attended this year by fully three thousand persons, shows the growing interest of the people in this important matter:

Whereas the question has been agitated before the public as to whether the gates of the World's Exposition, to be held in New Orleans, next winter, should be closed on the Sabbath; And, whereas it has been the former custom of similar Expositions held in the United States to close their gates on the Sabbath; And, whereas it is the opinion of this association that the leave open the gates of said Exposition on the Sabbath would have the effect of lessening the regard of the masses in attendance for the Sabbath; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this association respectfully appeal to the managers of said Exposition to close the gates of same upon the Sabbath; that a copy of the foregoing preamble and resolution be sent to the president of the Exposition, and the also sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

J. W. McNEIL,
Sec. Hennington C. M. Assn.

Presiding Elder Terry, of the Sardis district, in forwarding a list of Quarterly Conference appointments, makes some personal mention, as follows:

Bro. Sage is still improving, and we hope he may soon be fully recovered. Bro. Brown is very little improved, and I have very little hope of his ever being able to do any work. Bro. Durr has also been quite sick; but I hear that he is at work again. We are inviting some meetings, and expect more. Doubtless you will hear from the presiding elders and other workers. The good Lord bless and prosper you!

MISCELLANEOUS.
TEST YOUR BAKING POWDER TO-DAY!
Breads, cakes, etc., should be made with a certain amount of AMMONIA.

THE TEST:
Place a teaspoon of powder in a bowl, then add a few drops of water. If it bubbles, it is good. If it does not, it is bad.

DOES NOT CONTAIN AMMONIA.
THE TEST OF THE OVEN.
PRICE BAKING POWDER CO.,
CHICAGO, ILL.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts,
Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gums
FOR SALE BY GROCERS.
CHICAGO, ILL. ST. LOUIS, MO.

LIGHT HEALTHY BREAD

Price Baking Powder Co.,
CHICAGO, ILL. ST. LOUIS, MO.

FOR DAY SCHOOLS.

THE International DAY SCHOOL
SINGER

For Public and Day Schools, Juvenile Classes, Institutes, Conventions, Seminars, etc.
Published by JOHN CHURCH & CO.,
CINCINNATI, OHIO.

ALABAMA
CENTRAL FEMALE COLLEGE,
TUSCALOOSA, ALABAMA.

For a quarter of a century has had the reputation of the most thorough and successful college in the South. Location, buildings, equipment, faculty, and course of instruction are all of the highest quality. Tuition and board, $40 per session of nine months. Address: C. S. BELL, President, Tuscaloosa, Ala.

LAW SCHOOL
OF WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY.
GEN. G. W. C. LEE, President.

Instruction by text-books and printed lectures, with original cases, and practical exercises. Tuition and board, $40 per session of nine months. Address: C. S. BELL, President, Washington, D. C.

The College of Letters, Music and Art. Exercises begin Sept. 25th. For catalogue and full information, address: I. F. COX, President, La Grange, Ga.

ROSE GEORGIA
An excellent school in one of the most beautiful and healthy cities of the South. Tuition and board, $40 per session of nine months. Address: C. S. BELL, President, Rose, Ga.

ASTHMA
CURES

CERMAN ASTHMA CURE
Lying Agents can't FILL and sell. Buy direct from the manufacturer. Price, $1.00 per bottle. Address: J. F. COX, President, La Grange, Ga.

YOU ARE
A LIAR
$60.5 TON
WAGON SCALES
Largest and most complete stock of scales in the South. Address: J. F. COX, President, La Grange, Ga.

Our Young People.

A SHORT SERMON.
BY ALICE CARP.

Children, who read my lay,
This much I have to say:
Each day, and every day,
Do what is right—
Right things in great and small,
Then, though the sky should fall,
Sun, moon, and stars and all,
You shall be light.

This further would I say:
Do you tempt as you may,
Each day, and every day,
Do what is right—
Right things in great and small,
Then, though the sky should fall,
Sun, moon, and stars and all,
You shall be light.

Purpose, and No Purpose.

BY W. H. W. CAMPBELL.

"Look here, Alf, I've got something to amuse you. Don't bother any longer with that tiresome story."

"Thank you, Mark, but I'm interested in this story, and I want to finish it this afternoon."

"O, come out! To-morrow 'it do just as well. I've got a box of dominoes. Let's have a quiet little game. That's the way to pass the time."

It was a very humdrum piece of business that the two boys—Alfred and Mark—were talking about.

The scene was the basement of the dry goods jobbing house of Wigan, Dunnett & Co. Alfred had just opened a box of dominoes, and was proceeding to "take the yards" for comparison with the number charged in the invoice.

It was a rainy afternoon in the dull season. The senior partner was the only member of the firm about the premises, and he was reading the paper in his office upstairs. The older clerks and salesmen were lounging here and there, or making pretenses of business in the other departments of the store.

Mark, who was a young man of about twenty, was sitting on a box, and was looking at the dominoes with a bored expression.

"Now, Mark, you have badgered me into a blunder. Please leave me alone for the present. If you like, I will come to your house this evening and try a hand at dominoes, or while you are at billiards. But just now I have something more important on hand."

At this Alfred turned away, muttering to himself what a solemn old stick Alf Reed was.

And here, let us look at this point a minute, and see what sort of a "stick" Alf might truly be called.

The two boys were fair samples of two sorts of clerks which may be found in almost every commercial house. Alfred entered the employ of Wigan, Dunnett & Co. about six months before this date, Mark being then the "boy" or junior clerk.

The task of sweeping out the store, dusting the counters and tills, and arranging the goods, was divided between the two. Alfred, who was a little taller and more robust than Mark, was in charge of the sweeping, and the white goods and domestics to Alfred. It did not take long for young Alfred to discover that Mark was a thorough shirk. He had a bustling and obsequious manner in the presence of his employers, but when out of their sight he did as little as possible.

On the contrary, Alfred entered the store, as he said, to work, and to learn the business. Consequently, he never wasted a minute, but did all his duties promptly and thoroughly. He had not held his position many weeks, when Mark proposed that he should do the work of both. By way of compensation, Mark offered him one half of his perquisites, which in those days yielded quite a handsome amount of pocket money to the boys. Alfred accepted the offer, and thereafter made his appearance at the store once more, but just in season to escape detection by his superiors.

The members of the firm had not failed to notice the superiority of the new boy over his predecessor, and but a short time previous to this date had shown him a special mark of their regard. He was permitted to take the store keys to his own home at night, whereas shiftless Mark had been compelled to make a long journey out of his way to leave them at the house of the junior partner.

Now to return to the humdrum matter of the crash. It was required of the boys that in opening packages of goods they should examine the contents and compare them with the invoices. But Mark had always looked upon crash as a special bore. To begin with, the pieces were chalked with mysterious symbols, which denoted Russian or other foreign goods; these had to be translated into English yards, and so marked on the goods. This being accomplished, Mark had fallen into the lazy habit of omitting to foot up the total.

"O, crash is of no consequence!" he said, and so proceeded without ado to check the bill as correct.

It happened that the crash which Alfred was opening was a sample lot from a new manufacturer. Mr. Dunnett had dithered himself in buying it, he had done a good thing. After Mark walked away, Alfred became absorbed in his examination. His first footing of the yards had proved incorrect. As soon as he was left to himself he went over them again. To his surprise, he found the figures agreed with his former total, being about fifty yards short of the amount. He again reviewed his work, and with the same result. "Perhaps the wrong yards are entered for this bale," he muttered to himself. "I'll try another."

He opened a second bale, and an examination revealed a similar discrepancy. Alfred was puzzled, and again carefully reviewed the bill and the marks on the bales. There could be no mistake. The goods were short. Then a new idea struck him. He seized a yardstick and began measuring the pieces. As he had begun to suspect, every piece fell short.

"Ala, Mr. Russian!" Alfred chuckled, "did you think you were going to take W. D. & Co. in?"

He started upstairs in search of the hook-keeper, and met Mr. Wigan, who was making a report of inspection about the store. In reply to an inquiry what he was doing, Alfred related his experience with the crash. Mr. Wigan at once became interested. He went below with Alfred and superintended a fresh examination, which gave the same results as the first. Then he ordered a third bale opened, but this proved to be as short as the others.

"H'm, h'm," muttered Mr. Wigan, as he slowly returned to his office, "but that crash aside, Reed, till further orders."

"By Jove!" cried the jolly Mark, who had happened around just at the time "you have made a ten strike with old Wigan, Alf, and he won't forget it. He looks at you dreadfully to be sure."

Now the upshot of this humdrum crash affair, which was too petty altogether for lofty and lazy Mr. Mark was this: The goods were short, and the invoice was a heavy one, the firm was spared no little loss and vexation.

A few days afterwards, Mr. Dunnett, who was standing near the woolen counter, beckoned to Alfred.

"Reed, see here," he said, "aro you a judge of woolen goods? Can you tell which of these is the best?"

Alfred, rather hesitatingly, expressed a preference for one of the pieces.

"Yes, yes you are correct," said Mr. Dunnett, "that's as good a place as we have in stock. Just cut off enough for a coat pattern, will you, and I'll give you a box of vest and trousers. Take anything you like. Have the suit made up at Smithers' and charged to the firm. I think, Alfred," he added slowly, "that you are a very likely boy." And after this wonderful outburst of commendation from the dignified Mr. Dunnett, the gentleman walked away with an approving nod of the head.

It is not the object of this narrative to trace the subsequent career of the two boys in detail. The thoughtful reader can easily guess where they came out. But if you want to see Mark to-day, you will find him in the office of a well-known office, over the door of which his name figures in a firm which is held in the highest honor in all commercial circles. The Golden Argosy.

Beautiful Hands.

As a young friend was standing with us, noticing the pedestrians on the sidewalk, a young lady very elegant and stylish passed us.

"What beautiful hands Miss Blank has!" exclaimed he.

"Why, they are so white, soft, and exquisitely shaped. The fingers taper down delicately, and there is a rosy flush on the finger-nails that no artist could successfully imitate."

"Is that all that constitutes the real beauty of the hand?" he asked something more to be included in your catalogue of beauty, which you have not enumerated, to make the hands desirable?"

"What more would you have?"

"Are they charitable hands? Have they ever fed the poor? Have they ever parried the necessities of life to the widow and the orphan? Have their soft touch ever soothed the irritation of sickness, and calmed the agonies of pain? Do the poor bless those rosy-fingered fingers as their wants are supplied by them?"

"Are they useful hands? Have they been taught the art of the needle, or a more laudable trade? Do they ever employ the domestic duties of life, the homely, ordinary employments of the household? Or does the owner leave all that to her mother, while she pursues her delicate hands in idleness?"

"Are they modest hands? Will they perform their charities or their duties without vanity? Or do they prander to the pride of their owner by their delicacy and beauty? Does she think more of her display than of the improvement of her intellect and character? Had she rather be called 'the girl with the beautiful hands,' than to receive any other praise for excellence of conduct or character?"

"Are they humble hands? Will their owner extend them to grasp the hand of the poor, or to help the widow and the orphan, or to the same relation, but who now must earn her living by her labor? Or will they remain concealed in their exclusiveness, in her aristocratic mien, as she sweeps by her former companion?"

"Are they religious hands? Are they ever clasped in prayer, or elevated in praise? Does she remember the God who has made her, and devote her mind, her heart, and her hands to his service? Does she try to imitate her Saviour by 'going about doing good?' Or are her hands too delicate, too beautiful, to be employed in such good works?"

"These are the qualities that make the hand a beautiful one, in my estimation. There is an amaranthine loveliness in hands superior to the rosy hue of the nail."

"You have given me something to think of," said my young friend. Ballou's Magazine.

The girls in Africa, as elsewhere, are fond of dolls, but they like them best alive, so they take puppies for the purpose, and carry them about tied to their backs, as their mothers carry children. Some of them "play baby" with little pigs.

The boys play shoot with a gun made to imitate the "white man's gun." Two pieces of cane tied together make the barrels, the stock is made of clay, and the smoke is a tuft of loose cotton.

One African tribe the boys have spears made of reeds, shields, bows and arrows, with which they imitate their fathers' doings; and they make animals out of clay, while their sisters "jump the rope." Besides, the African children, like children all over the world, enjoy the game of "making believe." They imitate the life around them, not playing "keep house," "go visiting," or "give a party," because they see none of these in their homes; but they pretend building a hut, making clay jars, and enrolling car to enl—Woman's Missionary Advocate.

Merchants and grocers, hotel-keepers, college managers of boarding department, and others would do well to address Mrs. P. M. Goodwyn, manufacturer, 170 Girod St., N. O., for price list of Goodwyn's Eureka Yeast Powder, a superior home product of the Crescent City. Positively free from Alum or any other harmful ingredient. It not only invites, but squarely challenges comparison with any and all standard articles in its line.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Christian Editor's Opinion.

Mr. G. R. Lynch, publisher of the Alabama Christian Advocate, at Birmingham, writes: "I travel all over the State, and my friends say they feel your Lesson Eight is a most excellent medicine. My book-keeper and foreman both use it in place of alcohol, pills, etc."

Twenty-five Years a Citizen of Georgia

and the past seven years I have suffered continually from indigestion, and bronchitis of a most severe type. I was treated by two prominent physicians, and had taken all the patent medicines recommended for these diseases. I got no relief, and continued to grow worse until I commenced the use of Dr. Morley's Lesson Eight. One dozen bottles made me a new man. I am now in the best of health.

J. R. HILL,
No. 12 Connelly St., Atlanta, Ga.

A CARD.

From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the meritorious Dr. Morley's Lesson Eight, the following named gentlemen pronounce it the only pleasant, thoroughly reliable and economical remedy they have ever used for the diseases for which it is recommended.

DR. MORLEY'S LESSON EIGHT, prepared at his drug store, 16 Whitehall street, Atlanta, Ga.
It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, dizziness, nervous prostration, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder.
Fifty cents for one half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. One dollar and fifty cents for three bottles. Sent by mail on receipt of the price.

A Home Production.

GOODWYN'S EUREKA

YEAST POWDER.

It is, as it always has been, a pure, unadulterated article. Entirely free from Alum. It has been analyzed by a chemist, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being a pure powder and a home production, it is certainly worthy the patronage of the public.

Still manufactured at 170 Girod street, by Mrs. A. F. Goodwyn, widow of the late P. M. Goodwyn. It is supplied by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether in can or bulk, will be promptly filled by sending to 170 Girod street, New Orleans, La.

$250 A MONTH. Agents wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

RAILROADS.

Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Old Reliable Route to all Eastern Cities.

THROUGH WITHOUT CHANGE TO

Mobile, Montgomery, Pensacola, Nashville, Louisville, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Savannah, St. Louis, Jacksonville, Fla., Lynchburg, and Washington, D. C.

IN PULLMAN CARS.

ENTIRE TRAINS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO LOUISVILLE.

Express.....$2.00 A. M. 9:50 P. M.
Coast Accommodation.....$3.50 P. M. 8:30 A. M.
Fast Mail.....6:25 P. M. 8:30 A. M.

ONLY ONE CHANGE OF CARS TO NORTHERN AND EASTERN CITIES.

Ticket office corner St. Charles and Common sts., where Sleeping Car accommodations can be secured.

C. P. ATMORE, Gen. Pass. Agent.
J. H. SMITH, Ticket Agent.

J. T. HARRIS, Gen'l Superintendent.
JOHN KILKENY, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agent, New Orleans.

O. M. DUNN, Sup't N. O. and M. Division.

MERIDIAN ROUTE.

NEW DOUBLE DAILY LINE.

—TO THE—

NORTH AND NORTHWEST,

Via N. O. and N. E., and Mobile and Ohio Railroads.

Pullman Sleepers on both trains. Close connections made at UNION DEPOT, ST. LOUIS, with all diverging lines.

Excursion Tickets on sale to the Summer Resorts of the great Northwest.

Trains leave New Orleans at 11 A. M. and 10 P. M. The 10 P. M. train daily has sleepers through to St. Louis without change.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The Eating Houses on this line are supplied by any in the country.

For Maps, Time Tables, etc., call on or address R. W. GILLENPIE,

General Agent M. and O. R. R., Gravier and St. Charles streets.

G. JORDAN, Gen. Manager, Mobile, Ala.
CHAS. J. WALLER, G. P. A., Mobile, Ala.

The Great New Southern Route

—TO—

SAN FRANCISCO, EL PASO, SAN DIEGO and Other CALIFORNIA and MEXICAN Points.

Through Sleeping Cars from New Orleans to San Francisco.

—VIA—

Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio Railway System and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Connections made at Houston with RAILROADS TO ALL POINTS IN TEXAS.

Trains start from Elysian Fields street Depot as follows:

Alexandria, 7:15 A. M. Houston, 12:15 P. M.

Alexandria, 4:45 P. M. Houston, 8:30 A. M.

For further information apply to J. G. SOHRLEYER, Ticket Agent.

J. O'BRIEN, Traffic Manager.

Office corner Magazine and Nicholls streets. NEW ORLEANS.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

Illinois Central Railroad.

The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight to All Points

—NORTH EAST AND WEST—

THE ONLY LINE RUNNING PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO CHICAGO, ST. LOUIS, MEMPHIS AND CHICAGO WITHOUT CHANGE OF TRAINS.

ONLY ONE CHANGE TO NEW YORK AND EASTERN CITIES.

THE ONLY DIRECT ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, CHICAGO AND ALL POINTS NORTH AND WEST.

Many miles shorter and many hours quicker than any other line.

STANDARD GATGE, ALL STEEL RAILS, ELEGANT COACHES, CLOSE CONNECTIONS, AND QUICK TIME.

SPEED, COMFORT, SAFETY

RATES AS LOW AS THE LOWEST.

On and after Sunday, May 27, 1883.

DOUBLE DAILY TRAINS leave and arrive at Calhoun Street Depot as follows:

LEAVE. ARRIVE.

Exp. No. 1, 9:15 A. M. Exp. No. 2, 7:00 A. M.

Exp. No. 3, 4:30 P. M. Exp. No. 4, 10:45 A. M.

Exp. No. 5, 12:30 A. M. Exp. No. 6, 11:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 7, 1:30 A. M. Exp. No. 8, 12:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 9, 3:30 A. M. Exp. No. 10, 1:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 11, 5:30 A. M. Exp. No. 12, 3:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 13, 7:30 A. M. Exp. No. 14, 5:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 15, 9:30 A. M. Exp. No. 16, 7:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 17, 11:30 A. M. Exp. No. 18, 9:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 19, 1:30 P. M. Exp. No. 20, 11:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 21, 3:30 P. M. Exp. No. 22, 1:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 23, 5:30 P. M. Exp. No. 24, 3:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 25, 7:30 P. M. Exp. No. 26, 5:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 27, 9:30 P. M. Exp. No. 28, 7:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 29, 11:30 P. M. Exp. No. 30, 9:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 31, 1:30 A. M. Exp. No. 32, 11:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 33, 3:30 A. M. Exp. No. 34, 1:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 35, 5:30 A. M. Exp. No. 36, 3:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 37, 7:30 A. M. Exp. No. 38, 5:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 39, 9:30 A. M. Exp. No. 40, 7:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 41, 11:30 A. M. Exp. No. 42, 9:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 43, 1:30 P. M. Exp. No. 44, 11:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 45, 3:30 P. M. Exp. No. 46, 1:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 47, 5:30 P. M. Exp. No. 48, 3:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 49, 7:30 P. M. Exp. No. 50, 5:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 51, 9:30 P. M. Exp. No. 52, 7:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 53, 11:30 P. M. Exp. No. 54, 9:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 55, 1:30 A. M. Exp. No. 56, 11:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 57, 3:30 A. M. Exp. No. 58, 1:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 59, 5:30 A. M. Exp. No. 60, 3:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 61, 7:30 A. M. Exp. No. 62, 5:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 63, 9:30 A. M. Exp. No. 64, 7:30 P. M.

Exp. No. 65, 11:30 A. M. Exp. No. 66, 9:30 P. M.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending August 20, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	7 1/2 @
Ordinary	8 13-16
Good ordinary	9 18-16
Low middling	10 5-16
Middling	10 1/2
Good middling	10 1/2
Middling fair	10 15-16
Fair	11 1/2
Galveston middling	11 1/2
Mobile middling	10 1/2
St. Louis middling	10 1/2

SUGAR.
Superior	—
Common	—
Good common	—
Fair	4 1/2
Good fair	4 1/2
Full fair	5
Strictly prime	5 1/2
Choice	5 1/2
Seconds	5 1/2
Yellow clarified	5 1/2
Gray clarified	5 1/2
Choice whites	6 1/2
Granulated	6 1/2

MOLASSES.
Syrup	—
Fair	—
Prime	—
Choice	—
Fancy	—

RICE.
Choice	5 1/2
Prime	5 1/2
Good	5 1/2
Fair	5 1/2
Ordinary	5 1/2
Common	5 1/2
No. 2	2 1/2

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 3/4
Minnesota patents	6 25
Extra fancy	5 25
Winter wheat patents	6 10
Choice	5 30
Fancy	5 55

CORN PRODUCTS.
Corn meal	3 75
Corn meal	3 25
Grits	3 90
Hominy	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
White	77
Yellow	—
Mixed	—
OATS:
Western	40
Texas	87
BRAN:
Choice	77 1/2
Prime	15 00

PROVISIONS.
PORK:
Meat	10 00
Prime mess	10 50
Rumps	10 50

BACON.
Choice breakfast	12 1/2
Shoulders	8 1/2
Sides, clear	11 1/2
Sides, clear rib	11 1/2

HAMS.
Sugar-cured	15 1/2
DRY SALT MEAT:
Shoulders	7 1/2
Sides, clear	11 1/2
Sides, clear rib	11 1/2

FISH.
MACERALS:
No. 1, in bbls.	14 25
Half bbls.	7 75
No. 2, in bbls.	13 75
Half bbls.	6 25
No. 3, in bbls.	13 25
Half bbls.	7 00

GROCERIES.
COFFEES:
Kio, choice	9 1/2
Cardova, choice	12 1/2
Java, choice	22 1/2

BUTTER.
Western dairy	18 20
New York dairy	20 20
Country	20 20

LARD.
Choice	5 1/2
Fair	5 1/2
Oil:
Cool, cases	18 1/2
Cool, bbls.	13 1/2
Cotton seed	50 55
Lard	50 55

VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES:
Western, bulk	10 00
Country	—
POTATOES:
Louisiana	—
Western	1 50
KROUT:
bbi.	6 00
ONIONS:
bbi.	1 40

BALING STUFFS.
BAGGING:
12 lb.	10 1/2
2 lb.	11 1/2
BALING TWINE:
1 lb.	13 1/2
2 lb.	13 1/2

SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	4 00
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 25
Young	1 50
Turkeys, Southern	9 00

EGGS.
Western	14 17
Southern	17 17
WOOL:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	17 1/2
Hurly	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2

SLAVERS.
Oak, kegs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00

HOOP POLES.
Hogshead	40 00
Barrel	20 00
Half barrel	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	12 00
Meal	25 10
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	8 00
Sulphuric acid	22 00
Bone black	8 00

When the Women of the Home are low-spirited and cross, the real trouble is probably indigestion and nervous disorder. Don't scold, but give them the remedy—a bottle of Parker's Tonic.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

BRANDON, Miss., Aug. 20.—The town of Peabody, situated ten miles east of this place, on the Vicksburg and Meridian Railroad, was totally destroyed by fire, continuing about four hours. The fire started in the store of Knight & Rhodes, and from there it spread up and across the street until the town was left in ashes.

CANTON, Miss., Aug. 20.—The most interesting revival known in this place for some time past is now being held at the Presbyterian Church, conducted by Dr. Hoyie, of Nashville, Tenn., and Rev. W. A. Alexander, of this place. All denominations seem to be alike interested, and the church is filled with worshippers. Thirty-two names have been added to the list of members so far.

BRISTOL, Aug. 22.—The United States steamer Tallapoosa, with 140 men and officers, bound to Newport to take on board Secretary Chandler, at 11 o'clock last night, during a thick fog, struck the northeast of Oak Bluffs, Martha's Vineyard, was struck on the bow by the schooner James S. Lowell, of Bath, Me., bound from Baltimore for Portland, with a cargo of coal. Her side was crushed in and she sank in five minutes in ten fathoms of water. As she went down her whistle was blown as a signal of distress and was heard by the steamer Gale City, which came up immediately, and with the schooner Mary A. Hood, which happened to be in the vicinity, rescued the crew, with the exception of the surgeon and one man, who are said to be missing.

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 23.—A train on the Southbridge branch of the New York and New England Road ran off the track near Quinebaug this morning. One of the passenger cars and the smoker went down the bank, a distance of 20 feet, but they only fell over on their sides, and the fall was gradual. About thirty passengers were aboard, most of whom were bruised.

VALEN, Miss., Aug. 23.—Last night closed at the Baptist Church in this place one of the best and grandest protracted meetings of two weeks duration that was ever known in this country. Rev. L. S. Piker, of Baton Rouge, La., did the preaching in that grand and fire-breathing style which is peculiarly his own. His voice led the singing, which was considered nearly as potent as the preaching. It resulted in quite a number of conversions and in the great revival of the church as well as the Christians of other denominations.

SUREVEPORT, Aug. 25.—The Red River and Coast Line Company steamer Shields and wharfboat Maria Louise were burned to the water's edge this morning.

PORT JEFFERIS, N. Y., Aug. 25.—A heavy frost was observed in this vicinity this morning. At Monticello, Sullivan county, it was much heavier, and at Saratoga Springs, where the wheat and grapes will suffer much in consequence, Boston dispatches indicate that last night's frost caused great damage to growing corn and buckwheat in northern New England. In many places corn is still in the milk, and the crop will prove a total failure. At Waterville, Vt., in many fields the buckwheat crop is ruined or greatly damaged.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The Times' Pekin dispatch of this date says: The French consul lowered his flag at 11 o'clock today. The interests of French subjects are entrusted to the Russian minister. China absolutely refuses to admit the French claims for indemnity.

HAVANA, Aug. 23.—There were 17 deaths from yellow fever during the past week.

ROME, Aug. 24.—The cholera is increasing in Italy. In the province of Cuneo there has been fifty-eight deaths during the past three days, and at Turin and adjoining villages seventy fresh cases and forty-eight deaths during the past two days.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 24.—The Foo Chow Arsenal was destroyed yesterday after three hours' bombardment by Cooriet's squadron. Seven Chinese gunboats were sunk. Two escaped. The European settlement was undisturbed.

The French re-commenced firing today, directing their shots against the arsenal. It is supposed the object of the renewed attack is to entirely obliterate the place. The French transports are shelling the villages on the heights around the arsenal.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The Times' dispatch from Foo Chow this afternoon says: The French iron-clad entered the mouth of the river this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The White fort opened fire with Krupp cannon while the ships were at anchor. The French retired. The Chinese fire was good.

READ THE BIBLE.—"If we really believe the Bible to be 'the oracles of God,' let us each resolve to read it more and more every year we live. In a day of many books, and tracts, and periodicals, and newspapers—in a day of business, hurry, hustle, competition, and running to and fro—I doubt whether there is as much quiet, private Bible reading as there was two centuries ago. Let us beware of neglecting the daily study of the Bible. Let us try to get it rooted in our memories and engrained into our hearts. Let us be thoroughly well provisioned with it against the voice of death. Who knows but we may have a very stormy passage? Sight and hearing may fail us, and we may be in deep waters. Oh! to have the word 'hid in our hearts,' and 'dwell in us richly,' in such an hour as that!" (Psalm cxix, 11; Col. iii, 16.)—The Oracles of God, by Bishop Ryle.

AN OVERTASKED BRAIN.

A clergyman in Iowa, after a few weeks' use of our Tonic, says: "Your Compound Oxygen has worked like a charm. I have no special ailment except from an overtasked brain. Wakefulness, nervous irritability, and tendency to paralysis were the most marked troubles. Now, after three weeks' use, increase of weight, clear mental horizon, freedom from incessant paralytic attacks, and good rest. What more could I ask?"

Our "Treatise on Compound Oxygen," containing a history of the discovery and mode of action of this remarkable curative agent, and a large record of surprising cures in Consumption, Catarrh, Neuritis, Bronchitis, Asthma, etc., and a wide range of chronic diseases, will be sent free. Address, Drs. STARKY & PALM, 1109 and 1111 Girard St., Philadelphia.

PLEASURE IN COMMON THINGS.—One great benefit I hope you will get out of this new world country life for the winter, viz.: that you will learn how to enjoy common pleasures and pleasures of common places. You have to put on all your screws of pressure and make the meagre things give out their riches; on the weather, just as various and lively in a dull country as anywhere, whistling to keep its courage up; on the trees, stripping naked and stiffening their muscle to fight the winter out; on the stumps of the stumpy fields—good symbols of written history, hiding its roots and dead and gone as to its top; on the river, mandering most where it has the dullest motion—just as lazy people go farthest because they are going nowhere; on the faces of old women you meet, considering just what lines in girlhood deeper would make them; on the roughness of church privileges, proving religion as much more convincingly, as it is loved and lived for with fewer attractions; on the piled tall, spiraling in the curli away one way—showing one more evidence of the uniformity of law, or if they have been cut off, how the lines of things once gone out never be restored! Thus when things look dull and common, put exterior upon them as mind always can upon things, and make them give up the brightness and fun that are in them. Stir up, touch off, dramatize and make alive everything. The very poverty of your sights and conditions will thus become your riches. There is even a landscape in a quarry if only we had eyes to see it. And it is a great thing to have eyes! A winter spent in getting eyes will be worth more than all the hundred eyes of Argus filled gratis with pleasing sights.—Horace Bushnell.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

ABSOLUTELY PURE.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and can be sold in competition with the adulterated goods. Short weight, almost impossible to detect.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS

THE BEST TONIC.

This medicine, combining Iron with pure vegetable tonics, quickly and completely cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weakness, Impure Blood, Malaria, Chills, Rheumatism, and Neuralgia.

It is an infallible remedy for Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver.

It is invaluable for Diseases peculiar to Women, and all who lead sedentary lives. It does not injure the teeth, cause headache, or produce constipation—admirable for the young. It cures and purifies the blood, stimulates the appetite, aids the assimilation of food, relieves heartburn and indigestion, and strengthens the muscular system.

For Intermittent Fevers, Lassitude, Lack of Energy, &c., it has no equal.

Be careful. The genuine has always trade mark and crossed red lines on wrapper. Take no other.

Made only by BROWN'S CHEMICAL CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

CRESCENT INSURANCE COMPANY.

Incorporated as a Mutual Company in 1869—Re-organized as a Stock Company in 1880.

CASH CAPITAL $1,000,000.

Has paid nearly NINE MILLIONS for losses since 1869.

Annual and Term Policies issued on Desirable Fire Business.

W. B. LYMAN, President.
CHAR. H. DOLAN, Vice President.
CHAR. E. RICE, Secretary.

WACKERBARTH & JOSEPH, MANUFACTURERS

—AND—
Wholesale Dealers in

Tobacco, Cigars, Snuff, Pipes, Etc.

45 MAGAZINE STREET,
New Orleans.

YALE & BOWLING, WHOLESALE DRY GOODS AND NOTIONS

17, 19 & 21 Magazine Street, NEW ORLEANS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ELKIN & CO.
100-CANAL STREET-100

Invites attention to their large stock of fresh importations of fine, extra quality and joint-laid.

CHINA MATTINGS.
All varieties of CARPETING at very low prices.

Oil Cloths, Window Shades, Curtains, &c.

ART DECORATIONS

WALL PAPER, WINDOW SHADES AND CORNICES, MATS AND MATTINGS, Ball and Chiffon. FRINGES, ready-made PICTURE FRAMES and CARPETS below cost, to close this branch of my business.

E. HEATH,
78 CANAL STREET.

NEW CHINA MATTING

AT LOW PRICES,
A. Brousseau's Son

22 and 24 Chartres Street 22 and 24

LACE CURTAINS

From $1.50 Pair up.

WINDOW SHADES, OIL CLOTHS, CARPETS.
All the latest styles and novelties.

NEW JOB OFFICE

CARVER & JAMIESON,

112 Camp Street,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

LETTER, NOTE and BILL HEADS, VISITING CARDS,

BLANKS!

Blank for Clerks of Court, blanks for Masonic Lodges, blanks for Granges, &c., blanks for Co-operative Stores.

—AND—
All Kinds of Job Work,

Executed in the best style and prices as low as any city in the North or West.

Send your order to
CARVER & JAMIESON,
112 Camp Street.

PHYSICIANS AND DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND IT.

CARVER & BAKER,

Cotton Factors

—AND—
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

44 Perdido Street,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

A Champion Book

FOR BOYS.

"Gildroy's Stories" is a rollicking, breezy, bright book for boys.

Send seventy-five cents to the author
R. G. PORTER,
Verona,
Miss.

By mail, postpaid, only seventy-five cents.

It Will Pay You

—TO—
READ! READ! READ!

GOOD READING

GOOD READING

CHEAP

As most every family takes secular, as well as religious journals, we have made arrangements to club with the following newspapers, at the rates annexed.

The first column of figures gives the price of the publication per year, the second the price of the two, including our ADVOCATE.

New Orleans Picayune $2 00 1 75
New Orleans Times-Democrat 1 50 1 25
Southern Cultivator 1 50 1 25
Country Gentleman 2 50 2 00
American Agriculturist 1 50 1 25

Cash to accompany all orders. No reduction allowed on these rates for remittances. Will receive subscriptions for all the leading newspapers in the United States.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers,
New Orleans Christian Advocate.

TELEPHONE FOR EVERY BODY.
Money for agents, the Bell Magnetic Telephone, only 40c. Send for circulars to Bells Telephone Co., Eastville, U.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

The presiding officers of the North Mississippi Conference will please send me promptly the names in full, of the several delegates elect to the annual Conference, and of their alternates.

JNO. BANCROFT,
BYHALLA, Mississippi.

CAMP MEETING.
There will be a camp meeting at Andrew Chapel, Camp Ground, at 11 o'clock on Friday, commencing Friday night before the first Sunday in October, on the following plan. Ministers are generally invited, and will be met at Debus, Saturday morning with conveyance. Ministers' families are invited.

There will be a camp meeting at Union Camp Ground, twelve miles east of Debus, Friday night before the first Sunday in October, on the following plan. Ministers are requested to attend. By meeting one at Debus, Miss. I will make arrangements for them to come out.

J. C. BROOKS, P. C.

The Oak Ridge Camp Meeting, three miles south-east of Verona, La., will begin on Friday night before the first Sunday in October. Ministers are cordially invited, and all are assured of a hearty welcome.

J. L. P. MERRITT, P. C.

The camp meeting for St. Matthew's Camp Ground has been resumed, and is to begin on Friday night before the third Sunday in September. Ministerial brethren are invited and urged to come. Those that come by railroad will be received at Hickory.

J. W. ELLISON.

The China Grove Camp Meeting will commence Friday before the fifth Sunday in August. All ministers are invited and will be cared for.

W. W. SIMMONS, P. C.

There will be a camp meeting at Bebel Camp Ground, Pleasant Hill circuit, Louisiana Conference, commencing on Friday before the fifth Sabbath in August, between Mansfield and Pleasant Hill.

The Bebel Camp Meeting, on same circuit, will commence on Friday before the first Sabbath in October.

The Bebel Camp Meeting will be held at Marlborough Station, and Bebel is seven miles from Fayette Station. Conveyance can be had from each place if notice is given in time.

E. PARVIS.

The annual meeting for Shiloh Camp Ground, on Shiloh circuit, Mississippi Conference, a stated ten miles south-east of Brandon, and six miles south of Peabody station, on V. & M. R. R., will commence on Thursday evening, October 3, and continue the following Tuesday, October 14, 1884. Ministers are invited to be met at Peabody station, V. & M. R. R., on Friday morning and conveyed to camp ground. Mr. Editor, we shall expect you with us on that occasion.

H. A. HURLEY, P. C.

The Hinson Camp Meeting will begin Friday before the third Sunday in September, 1884. All ministers, both local and itinerant, are earnestly requested to attend. This camp ground is situated about thirty miles west of Alexandria, in the parish of Itasca. The meeting will be conducted on the re-organizing plan. A public sanitary tent and stock lot will be kept for the convenience of persons attending the camp meeting.

J. A. MONROE, President.

The annual meeting for the Palmer Camp Ground will commence on October 3, 1884, and continue until Wednesday morning following. This camp ground is situated on the river near a house and creek, with its never failing crystal waters. A meeting of the committee, on the first Saturday in July, was well attended; all the old-time business attended to. Several new tents are expected to be built and considerable improvements laid off to be done on the public part of the ground which will make an admirable more accommodation for the camp meeting. For other news, people generally are earnestly invited to come and help out with this glorious work of the Lord. The tenters (before) prepare taking care of the people free of charge. Nothing said on their end during the meeting except, of course, unless some tenter should put out of commission, and then the tenters could go to the neighborhood tenters for help. If all the tenters coming by rail will please give notice in the newspaper, at Shiloh, Miss., in due time, so that arrangements can be made for conveyance from Mississippi City to camp ground. This camp ground is about fifteen miles north of Mississippi City. Camp is easy land, and let us worship in peace.

J. A. WALKER, President.

The camp meeting at Mt. Zion Camp Ground, near Beech Springs, N. O. A. C. M. S., will commence on Friday night before the second Sabbath in September. Ministers are invited and will be well cared for.

M. J. MILLER, P. C.

The Campbell Academy Camp Meeting commences Friday night before the first Sabbath in September. Ministers have a special invitation to come and preach the word. You will be well cared for.

A. C. COLEY.

The camp meeting for the Trenton Camp Ground, Trenton circuit, Mississippi Conference, will begin on Friday night before the first Sunday in September. All ministers are invited.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 36.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1466.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Children and wives of deceased preachers half price.

All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

CROWNED WITH THORNS.

BY HOLDS FREEMAN.

In this dark and narrow alley
Bumblers abide,
Dwelling on the turbid billows
Of sin's blackest tide.
Only sound the fables cursing,
Oath and wall of woe;
Only seek the first superior,
Stille, and cruel blow.
Yet the pestilential darkness
No glad light doth shine,
None walks with trimmed lamp burning,
Laid by hand divine.
Nought whistles sweet cones blowing
Through lost Eden's trees,
One gleam, struggling breath upheaving,
Home on blessed breeze.
How never sweeps the spring's glad greenness,
Gilding wood and hill,
When she laughing comes with treasures
Earth's green lap to fill.
How no scent of summer's freshness
From the rose-creeked soil,
No aromatic flow of autumn's beauty
Leaving back to God.
Alas, the stain and darkness resting
On this sin-cursed earth!
Thorns and briars of evil sowling,
Steeled with this death.
Fathoms deep night's curtains
Shadow hope's sweet morn,
Till one upward glance revealing
Shows Christ crowned with thorns.
Fathoms deep the gloom and darkness,
Blinded light stream down,
For I saw the earth redeemed
By that pined crown.
Fathoms deep and curse all banished,
Gaily men and free,
Awake of thorns and briars,
Blessed the myrtle tree.
— Zion's Herald.

Letter from China.

(Continued.)

MR. EDITOR: On the one hundred and twenty-eighth day out we were within three hundred miles of Shanghai, with no wind to fill our sails and the sun heaving down upon us. I quote here from my journal: "One hundred and twenty-eighth day out, no wind, a complete calm until noon, when a light breeze sprang up and wafted us along at the rate of one knot an hour. Nearly all our little band are discouraged—almost in sight of land and not able to reach it. It is trying on us all, but I do not feel discouraged. Of the blasphemous language we are compelled to hear! Captain and officers seem desperate when we are becalmed, and often take the name of God in vain."
The next day a head-wind sprang up, and we had to "tack ship" to make any headway at all. The heat was intense, but we were led to praise God that one of our devoted band, dear Sister Kelley, had been spared to us through a severe illness.
The tenth of September was Sabbath, a beautiful day, but warm. I concluded the service on board that day, which was our last service aboard. Many times during the day did we all go to the "bow of the ship" and look anxiously in the distance for the shores of China. My heart yearned to be there and engaged in leading the heathen to the Lord Jesus. Often did the members of our little band walk the deck of our ship and scan with all eagerness every little rising cloud, and pray from the very depths of their hearts that God would send a breeze to carry us on our way. Still a calm, with scarcely a breath of air. One hundred and thirtieth day out, and still a calm. Occasionally we would have a puff of wind for a few minutes, and then a dead calm. Many times have we heard our dear sisters say: "Oh when shall we get to China?" We were then in the China Sea, and the heat was almost suffocating. It was impossible to stay in our rooms, for they were all below. We had eighteen sailors, and all slept in the fore-cabin, a room only about fifteen feet square. The nights were pleasant, and for this we were very thankful to God, and we were led to praise his holy name.

I felt truly thankful that my dear wife had kept so well during this long and trying voyage. She, too, was anxious to get to our field of labor. On this day we were told by our captain that our supply of water was getting so low as to necessitate our using salt water to wash with. This was the first day we had been called on to use salt water, and we did not find it very agreeable. On the one hundred and thirty-second Thursday what a joy thrilled every heart when told by the captain we would in all probability be in Shanghai before the close of the week! This glad news put new life into our little missionary band, and we felt like we were almost there. We could already anticipate the joyous feeling of being once more ashore, even though it would be in a strange land and far from loved ones in the home land. We began to think of packing up our goods, and some of our party did begin in good earnest. Yes, we had been aboard the ship long enough, and were ready to go with glad hearts.

On the one hundred and thirty-third day we struck on soundings, and soon we were in the muddy waters of the great river, Yang-Tze. We were passing through its mouth, which is about forty miles in width. None of our little band could stay below now. All were on deck, and looking with intense eagerness to catch the first sight of the shores of China. Many fishing junks came in sight, and our hearts were gladdened with the thought that the hour was near when we could say good-bye to the sea for a while at least. Sighted many islands, and saw the tide ebbing and flowing. On this day we saw a large fish called the thrasher fighting a whale, and we were told they often killed them. This great fish would elevate itself out of the water some ten feet or more, and come down with its entire weight upon the body of the whale as it struggled through the water trying to escape.

At eight o'clock P. M. the little breeze we had died away, and left us drifting in a strong current upon the Sedalla Islands, only one mile distant. The ship refused to answer to the helm, and we were swiftly drifting, drifting towards the shore. We could see that the captain was greatly excited, as he walked the deck back and forth, and would look anxiously, first, at the island, and then at the sails of his ship. Most of our little band were on deck watching with intense anxiety the result, which must appear within twenty or thirty minutes. None can imagine the intense anxiety of every one of us aboard that ship. Not a word was spoken for some time, until the captain called out: "Back with the sails and let go the anchor." The sails were drawn up, the yard arms crossed and the cage anchor was cast overboard. We could distinctly hear the water dashing against the rocks of the island, which could be seen very plainly from the deck of the ship. At this moment of intense anxiety, thanks to our kind heavenly Father, a light breeze sprang up from the shore, filled our sails and bore us away from the island. There was great joy, and thanksgiving to God for this providential deliverance; yes, we were sure that we were in God's hands, and that he guided the helm of this ship which was bearing us on to China to spread the glad news of salvation among that heathen people.

Saturday, the one hundred and thirty-fourth day out, we were still in the mouth of the Yang-Tze, the Mississippi of China. All aboard were in a great state of excitement, expecting a pilot to board us and take us safely into our destined port. Several ships were in sight, and some Chinese junks were seen, but no pilot. The captain fired three heavy guns, and soon, to our great joy, we saw bearing down upon us a pilot boat, and in an hour a red-faced Scotchman boarded us as our pilot.

About the first thing he said when he reached the deck of our ship was: "Bring me a glass of whisky." It was not a very pleasant thought to know that we had such a man to direct the helm of our ship when many shoals were all around us. Our faith was strong in God's protecting power who had directed us thus far, and our prayer was that he would overrule all evil for good. Had some Chinese to come aboard and offer their services as pilots. One addressed me, and said: "Capt., want-see pilot? Me number one." I referred him to the true captain. Their complexion is similar to that of the Malay, but all were decently dressed. During the day we saw the low land of China, all covered with green.

On Sunday morning, the one hundred and thirty-fifth day from New York, we cast anchor in the mouth of the Whong-Poo, opposite the small village of Woosung. We watched the Chinese with feelings of deep interest all day as they passed and repassed us in their boats. We listened with delight at the conversation between Dr. Jenkins and the Chinese, though we could not understand a word said. Upon the shore on each side of the river we saw near two hundred heavy guns planted in the mud just where they were left in the war of 1842, when defeated by the English. At three P. M. the steam-tug, "Confucius," came down and towed us into port, about twelve miles from Woosung, reaching our anchorage at seven P. M., September 17, 1884. Here ended our voyage, and we were not sorry. The entire country on either side of the river is flat and monotonous, and not a mountain or hill to be seen, except the myriad grave hills which appear on every side. The nearest hills are twenty miles distant, and west from Shanghai. I was surprised to see so many large ships in port, and quite a number of foreign buildings lined the front part of the settlement. We anchored in the middle of the stream, for there were no wharves then. Cargo boats were brought alongside of the ship, and all the cargo was discharged into them. Two foreign gentlemen came down to Woosung on the steam-tug, "Confucius," to meet the captain, and their faces were so pale it astonished us, who had been so long tanned by the hot sun. We did not then understand that they had just passed through a trying summer. Mrs. Lambuth and I remained aboard Sunday night. On Monday morning Bro. Cunningham kindly came aboard for us. We were taken ashore in a little boat called "three planks," and so our voyage came to an end.

Yours in Christ,
J. W. LAMBUTH.
SHANGHAI, CHINA, July 1, 1884.

Baptist High Churchism.

Our Baptist brethren in some parts of Mississippi are exceedingly High Church in their notions. They do not, and will not, have any pulpits affiliated with the preachers of any other so-called denominations. They say it would be inconsistent for them to do so; that if they invited other, so-called preachers to fill their pulpits it would be equivalent to admit that they had authority to preach; and that if admitted to their pulpits they might preach heresy to their people. Consistency is a good thing, provided it is not consistently wrong. These same preachers ask ministers of their so-called denominations to hold prayer meetings for them—to pray in their prayer meetings and to come forward and talk to the mourners in the altar. Is the altar less sacred than the pulpit? Is there not as much danger of heresy in a prayer meeting talk as in a sermon? Could an Arminian pray otherwise than as an Arminian? Would a Methodist preacher exhort a mourner at the altar to a Baptist Church differently to one at the altar in a Methodist Church? If it is inconsistent to preach with other people how can it be consistent to pray with them? or sing with them? The hymn books in Baptist Churches are well stocked with the hymns of Charles Wesley—some of them fearfully changed. How can they worship God by singing Wesley's hymns and not listen to Wesley's sermons? This looks to me like inconsistent consistency—High Churchism gone to seed. Is it consistent, is it truthful, to print a hymn with Charles Wesley's name to it when it is so changed as to teach what Wesley never wrote? Is it consistent to add a stanza or two to one of Wesley's hymns, stanzas he never wrote, and call it Wesley's hymn? Is it consistent to read out of the King James' version of the Bible and then charge the translators with being dishonest men? Consistency is a jewel, but not this kind of consistency. Now, for my own part, praying and singing hymns of praise to God is just as solemn, just as sacred, just as much a part of worship as preaching; and I honestly confess that I am not in the proper frame of mind to conduct a prayer meeting for a brother who says: "My brother, I can not recognize you as a Christian minister by asking you to preach in my pulpit, or by having my deacons ask you to preach; but I would be glad if you would conduct my prayer meeting for me." I have no authority to preach, I am not in the church, I profess to be a Christian, and yet, according to the dictum of my brother, I am living in open violation of one of the positive commands of my Lord, and still he asks me to pray for and with him.

The Roman Catholics and Episcopalians, also High Church people, are more consistent in this respect than my Baptist brother. God has called me to preach, and he has given me souls for my hire, and some of them join the Baptist Church and testify that they were led to Christ by my ministry. Now, they testify to what is not true, or, else, God owns me as a preacher of the gospel when his own peculiar, elect, chosen people, who hold a monopoly of the kingdom of God, will not do it. If God uses me as an instrument in the salvation of the people of Baptist parents in a Methodist Church, why would he not make the same use of me in a Baptist Church? But, says one good Baptist brother, "God converts sinners not through you, but in spite of you." Then could he not do this in spite of me in a Baptist Church just as easily as he can in a Methodist Church? If my heterodoxy and heresy provoke God to the saving of souls they are good things, and they should by all means be encouraged. If God foreordained whatsoever comes to pass then he foreordained that I should be a Methodist and preach Methodist doctrine, and in doing this I am running in the groove God cut out for me and for which he cut me out. Why should any brother blame me for doing what God made me do, unless it is because God made him to have a big notion of himself and of his church? If this be so then God has foreordained and predestinated that my Baptist brother should snub me at the pulpit and hug me at the altar. I am not hankering after recognition in Baptist pulpits, for I have as much as I can do in my own, and I am content as long as God recognizes me by giving me souls for hire.

VERONA, MISSISSIPPI.

Preaching to Children.

MR. EDITOR: I am greatly in favor of what we call our children's meeting, held in connection with our camp and other large meetings, and also of lectures from our ministers to our Sabbath-schools, but I often see and hear things from them in their sermons and lectures to the children, not only inconsistent with my views of ministerial dignity and propriety, but also deeply mortifying to my feelings. Why is it that some of our ministers seem to think that children are not prepared to listen to and appreciate a sermon or lecture until they assume the role of a clown or buffoon and get them into a titter and filled with childish levity? This studied tomfoolery is not only incompatible with ministerial dignity, but has a tendency to prepare the minds of the children to receive profitably the solemn truths of the gospel of Christ. We have not one gospel for the salvation of adults and another for the salvation of children. The same gospel that is the power of God unto our salvation is intended to be the power of God unto the salvation of our children. Why then preach it with all seriousness to grown people and with facetious levity to children, unless we wish to train them up to make light of the gospel call in maturer years? The only difference between preaching to grown people and children should be to simplify our language, figures and facts to the comprehension of the children, without the introduction of such antics and witty sayings as are only intended to excite laughter. It is an insult to the good sense of our thoughtful little ones to think their attention can not be held to the gospel message unless it is interspersed with pen-making gestures and epithets to excite laughter. Sermons to children should be easy of comprehension, addressed to their consciousness and always short; never tedious and withdrawn. Preaching to children, as it should be done, is one of the most fruitful fields in which a faithful minister can labor. Do faithful work among them and multitudes of them would be truly born of the Spirit between the ages of four and fifteen years, and then give them the proper training and they will make as life-long Christians as we get from any class.

J. O. JONES.

HAVERHURST, MASS.

A Church Dedication.

MR. EDITOR: On the third Sabbath I had the pleasure of dedicating a new church in Jefferson county. Leaving home on Saturday evening, a railroad ride of twenty-eight miles landed me at Harrison, the junction of the N. J. & C. with the L. N. O. & T. R. R. Thence a carriage drive of four miles brought me to the residence of Bro. Horace Millsaps, an old schoolmate. This is headquarters for Dennisville circuit; the pastor, Rev. J. V. Penn, boarding here. I enjoyed the hospitalities of Bro. Millsaps and his excellent family two nights, returning on Monday.

Sabbath morning we drove to the church, one mile distant. It is a very neat, well-proportioned building, and its acoustic properties are admirable. It is also eligibly located; standing on a level spot in the edge of a large forest, and commanding an extensive view up and down the public highway that runs hard by its portals. Mizpah, like Mt. Zion, is "beautiful for situation." A copious supply of clear, sparkling water from one of Nature's perennial fountains adds largely to the eligibility of the spot, at least in mid-summer.

The congregation considerably exceeded the capacity of the building. After the sermon the pastor "lifted a collection," which lacked a very little of paying all indebtedness on the building. There was on the grounds an ample supply of refreshments for the luncheon. There was an afternoon service, at the close of which the altar was crowded with penitents. The meeting will be continued during the week. This church promises to be a power for good in that community. Although organized only last year it already has more than fifty members, with a probability of a large increase in the near future. Rev. J. V. Penn is to be congratulated on his success. He will probably build two other churches this year—one at Rodney and one at Russell's on the L. N. O. & T. R. R. This is certainly quite an achievement for a tyro or anybody else.

Mizpah is also a standing vindication of the wisdom of our church extension movement. But for the aid rendered by our Church Extension Board it is more than probable that the lovers of our Zion in that community would have been unable to build at all. Yours,

W. O. BLACK.

NATCHEZ, MISS., Aug. 29, 1884.

From Bastrop, La.

We are just in from Oak Ridge, sixteen miles distant, and one of the points where Rev. John F. Wynn dispenses a pure, unadulterated gospel. We had a very pleasant ride through a beautiful and prosperous country on Jennie, our spirited pony, and we greatly enjoyed looking on the promising cotton fields and on the acres of corn that lately seemed so "sorry," but that now are full of encouragement, thanks to the dear Father who sent the rains just in time. Our business in Oak Ridge was to help Bro. Wynn in his labor for souls, and we trust God has blessed some who came to hear. On Saturday the Bastrop Woman's Christian Temperance Union ladies and gentlemen came up and organized the Oak Ridge Union. There was singing, an elegant address by our very able president, Mrs. Frank Vaughan, a few remarks by the writer, and then the circulation of the pledge. A large number signed, and among them are the most prominent and influential in that section.

The election resulted in the choice of the following named as the officers of the Oak Ridge Woman's Christian Temperance Union: President, Mrs. Rev. John F. Wynn; vice-president, Mrs. M. E. Blakemore; recording secretary, Mrs. John Hampton; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Dr. Trezevant; treasurer, Mrs. M. E. Dorsey; solicitors for the Union Signal, Mrs. T. H. Williams, Miss Lizzie Britton and Miss Alice Wynn. At night the Bastrop Woman's Christian Temperance Union ladies organized, with the assistance of Rev. L. P. Miller, Thomas G. Brigham, Esq., and the writer, a large colored union in the Oak Ridge Colored Baptist Church. This last union begins with over eighty members. The Prairie Mer Rouge neighborhood will soon be organized. If we could get Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, of South Carolina, and Rev. Dr. C. B. Galloway, of Mississippi and Louisiana, to stump our parish for prohibition, we might gain a glorious victory in October. Pray for us all anyhow, Mr. Editor.

ALBERT H. 1884.

Our Neighbors—Good or Bad.

The following from the Southern Churchman is good to use of edifying. Our neighbors are apt to be what we make them. There may be some cross-grained, sour-croty, jaundiced people who would not entertain an angel awakes or unawares. With such in view the Scriptures exhort, "if it be possible live peaceable with all men." But that generation is not numerous. By being a good neighbor, we will have good neighbors. If we have any readers in a section of insecure fences, neglected gaps and rickety gates, where neighborhood quarrels have divided churches and estranged families, we commend to them the following. Mark it and pass it around:

"Neighbor" has its origin in near by—people who lived near by were neighbors. Though Christ has enlarged the meaning of the word, still, for practical purposes, near by is good definition. And what kind of neighbors do we have? An interesting question, and one with meaning. He was a man of hard, common sense, though he did keep a roadside tavern on the way to Texas. Families immigrating thereto must needs pass by that way and put up at his house for the night. Like many of the old time bonfires he loved conversation, and being of inquiring turn of mind would ask questions of his guests. "And what kind of neighbors did you have where you came from?" "First rate," one replied; "no man ever had better ones.—And what kind of neighbors in Texas where I am going?" "First-rate," was mine host's answer; "just as good as those you left." In a few days another traveler would make appearance; so out came the question, "And what kind of neighbors did you have where you came from?" "The meanest kind; no man ever had worse ones.—And what kind of neighbors in Texas where I am going?" "The meanest you ever saw; as mean as those you left behind," was the answer. Did we not say our host was a man of hard, common sense? He knew if one was a good neighbor he had good ones; if he was a bad neighbor he had bad ones.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

—If we are God's children, we need not fear the developments of his providence.—It. Newton.

—He needs no other rosary whose thread of life is strung with beads of love and thought.

—The power to do great things generally arises from the willingness to do small things.

—A torn jacket is soon mended, but harsh words bruise the heart of a child.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1884.

$1,324.70.

At the Homer District Conference, held at Lisbon, Claiborne parish, La., we had the pleasure of lifting a Centenary collection last Sunday amounting to $1,324.70. The pastor of that circuit, Rev. J. W. Medlock, had previously secured other contributions, as had most of the preachers in the district. Of the above sum, $1,055 were given directly to the endowment fund of Centenary College. In no section have we found a more liberal and intelligent Centenary spirit than in North Louisiana.

Almost everything depends upon the pastor. If he has missionary zeal, he will bring up good reports to the Board of Missions. And so in every department to which special attention is given, Centenary offerings, therefore, will gauge the pastor as well as the people.

From the remarks made by Bishop Bedell before the House of Bishops of the Canterbury Convocation, we judge that some American Episcopal Bishops display a good deal of fluency when abroad. The Southern Churchman calls it "amiable weakness." The Bishop said that many of them lost their heads when they went over to England, and their adept for their garb (the apron, breeches, and gaiters, and even drop their hats, to make themselves as English as possible. Poor, pitiable persons!

Godly women have had a good deal to do with the spread of the gospel. The women have not been an unimportant factor in the history and progress of Methodism. Methodism in England owes a good deal to the devotion of its women, and Methodism in this country owes its start to Barbara Heck. Now comes this paragraph from an exchange:

Mr. John Evans, converted about the year 1763, was the first person who joined the Methodist society in America. He was awakened by a conversation at table about experimental religion with Mrs. Strawbridge. Thus the first convert of Methodism in America was led to a conviction of sin by the testimony of a faithful Christian woman.

If a man intended to take up his residence in a country whose laws and language were different from those of his own country, common prudence would dictate that he learn something of the language and become somewhat familiar with the laws of that country before he removed to it. Reader, if you believe the Bible your intention is to take up your residence, after while, in the kingdom of God above. You do not intend to live forever with the lost spirits in a world of woe. Then would it not be more reasonable and prudent for you to spend more time in the study of the language and laws of the kingdom of God? The statute book of that realm is written with a free, bold hand and in a clear style and in words easy to be understood and ignorance of its provisions is inexcusable.

Bishop H. M. Turner, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, writes us a note correcting the statement in our columns, reproduced from an exchange, that the General Conference of his church had passed certain stringent resolutions on the use of robes or gowns by "the Bishops and other clergy." He says such a resolution was introduced, but not seriously considered. The Bishop adds that he favors "the robe theory" for the following reasons:

1. Our General Conference started the custom by requesting our Bishops to wear robes. 2. The use of them was enjoined by the God of Israel upon those who administered in holy things, and there has been no revocation in precept or example. 3. I believe ministerial simplicity or, rather, ministerial commonness has detracted from the estimate which should accompany the calling.

We cheerfully give place to the correction, but except the first (the request of the General Conference) the Bishop's reasons for enjoining have no force. The plain old Methodist way is preferable. We need not be common or unclean because we avoid that awfully inappropriate surplice. A gowned clergyman wears a distant expression—too far removed to be touched with the feeling of our infirmities.

Arctic Cannibalism and Its Lessons.

While a nation was rejoicing over the rescue of the Greely Arctic Exploring Party in the last agonies of starvation—some of their comrades dead, and all ready to perish—a story found currency that strangely and suddenly reversed public sentiment. The Secretary of the Navy and other naval officials, a governor, an United States Senator, two Congressmen and a candidate for the Presidency, all spoke words of welcome at Portsmouth, and paid eloquent tribute to the heroism of the voyagers and the value of their discoveries. The fact that Greely had gone further north than any other Arctic explorer was considered a feather in America's cap, and he was canonized as a real hero. But just then the New York Times appeared with a charge of cannibalism against the survivors, dressed up in such sensational phrase that the Arctic heroes became disgusting man-eaters. At once the laurel crowns were torn from their brows and a brand burned into their foreheads. But this indignation seems to us premature and undeserved. In the first place, the story is greatly exaggerated. Only one or two of the bodies had been touched, and, instead of the flesh being entirely stripped from their bones as alleged, a few small bits of flesh had been cut as bait for catching shrimps to prolong the lives of the starving survivors.

That Henry should have been shot is to be regretted, though death was not undeserved. By his repeated and petty thefts of the small pittance left of their stores he was speedily assuring the death of the entire party. Several times he had been caught in his roguery, and at last warned by Lieutenant Greely that if again discovered he would be shot. Still he bore with him until, with the approval of his comrades, Greely issued the military order and Henry paid the death penalty.

But, under the gravest public charges, the Greely survivors deserve not to be called cannibals, nor their course to be indiscriminately condemned. Feasting at well-laden boards with our healthy appetites entirely gratified, we are not competent to sit in judgment upon men suffering the pangs and horrors of starvation. The taste of human flesh would be as shocking to them as us when in good health and in reach of proper food. But when life is being consumed with an internal fire that will not be quenched, when reason is dethroned and the eye gleams with visions of death, when the bony fingers vainly clutch at the air to find a single morsel, a man is not responsible for such an act. Repulsive in health, it would be allowable in the presence of threatened death. They had fed upon bark, sealskins, lichen, shrimps and everything possible to sustain life, and in the frenzied craze of hunger the body of a dead comrade was consumed, they are not to be denounced as cannibals. As has been properly observed by a secular exchange, a cannibal is a man-eater by choice. "He relishes it and prefers it to other articles of food." These Arctic explorers only laid knife upon the flesh of a dead friend to stay for a few days the hour of their own departing, praying in the meantime that relief might come.

But there are illustrative lessons in this sad story that can not fail to arrest the observant reader:

1. Man's utter helplessness in certain emergencies. All resources had been exhausted with no possibility of advance or return. They could only wait for death or some relief expedition to end their sufferings. In such an hour how vain is boasted self-sufficiency! Fast locked in a field of ice, with a pitiless Arctic sky almost mocking their every prayer, and the bitter winds chilling their blood, how helpless they were! Just so we stand before the law of God. Without strength or merit or possibility of escape, we can only plead for pardoning love and a relieving hand. Well for us if in our spiritual experiences we can learn this lesson as forcibly as did the Arctic explorers.

2. The joy of rescue. How brightly waved the American flag against that leaden sky! To every sufferer it was the sweet, swift wing of an angel bringing life to the dead. It was the divine messenger sent down to open the long-locked gates of the morning after a weary night of deep and dreadful darkness. If they had strength enough left, every voice must have shouted aloud for joy. Praise becometh the rescued. And so there is no rejoicing equal to the songs of the redeemed. It is a "new song" never sung by that loosened tongue before.

3. Conduct is affected by the stress of circumstances. Amid other surroundings the bodies of fallen comrades would have been shrouded with reverent hands and carried to their burial with solemn pomp and prayer. A sacred silence would have greeted their bier, and the funeral train followed with soft, muffled tread. But in the maddened frenzy of starvation their flesh was used for food or as bait with which to secure food. And so moral principle is often put to the test. When driven to great straits men will do things which at other times are repulsive and mortifying. Having ventured into unsuccessful speculations, bank cashiers have appropriated the funds of others to cover their losses and at length been compelled to fly from the penalty of the law. Such like offences are the shame of our money-grasping age. The idea of theft or embezzlement was insulting to their manly honor; but in the face of bankruptcy and ruin the deed was done. The warning comes to us, therefore, not to be beguiled into moral peril. If Greely had not gone to the Arctic seas, this story had not have been told. We must flee the ice fields of temptation if we are to escape moral cannibalism. But Greely was sent by those in authority. Ours is a voluntary service and venture. We can go or stay as faith and principle may elect.

The Measure of One's Religion.

The first impulse of a converted soul is to bring others to Christ. And the growth of this spiritual concern for the unsaved is the measure of our religion. We are solicitous for sinners in proportion as we love God. The more we live to Christ the more anxious do we become for those in spiritual peril. We are partakers of the Divine nature. What he loves, we love; what he hates, we hate. His purposes are the inspiration of our desires and labors. We measure a man's interests in any enterprise by his efforts and anxiety for its success. If indolent and listless, we correctly conclude that there is no fire in his bones. His unremitting labors amid so many obstacles, rebuffs and disappointments before the needed vessels were provided and launched, which resulted in the discovery of a new world, evidenced the absorbing interest of Columbus in the success of his daring enterprise. No dangers, difficulties or disappointments checked his efforts or curbed his restless spirit. Not for a moment did he stay his hand until a new world burst upon his enraptured gaze, and his heart was humbled with gratitude at the grandeur of his success. So a Christian's solicitude and labors to save the lost—measures his sympathy with Christ and his great salvation. We discern the spirit of Paul in his tireless missionary wanderings on land and sea. Amid poverty and persecution he labored with unremitting zeal to bring men to Jesus. There is no mistaking his intimate spiritual acquaintance with his Lord. His meat and drink was the salvation of sinners. We know the mind of Luther and Doddridge and Wesley and Whitefield. Their lives are an imperishable memorial of divine sympathy and quenchless love for perishing souls.

By this standard we are all to be measured. It is not "some great thing" we are to do, but a constant, cordial, consecrated service we are to render. A soul in spiritual health can not be "at ease in Zion." There must be effort, solicitude, sympathy—the love of Christ that constrains. Indifference is evidence of deadness or a sleep that tendeth to death. It behooves us, therefore, to ascertain our condition according to this test.

And, first, let the inquiry be started in the pulpit. Does the same intense yearning for the conversion of souls inspire our pulpit labors as in the beginning of our ministry? Then we longed for immediate results, and every sermon, in matter and manner, breathed the fervor and fragrance of a divine impatience for the enlargement of Christ's kingdom. How left to-day? Has earnest, direct appeal given place to dry speculation or platitudinal verbosity? What motive prompts the selection of a certain text and indicates the line and character of discussion? These are personal, pertinent inquiries, and, if prayerfully pondered, will lead to profitable introspection. The temptation of the pulpit is to perfunctoriness of spirit and method: to become official rather than fervently evangelical. The ministry is not a profession, but a calling, and the Divine call should ring afresh in the conscience every day. We should not only enter, but continue in the work, because we can but preach.

And a like test must be applied to every Christian. If in the church, and not concerned for its welfare and filled with sorrow on account of the imperiled souls for whom Christ died, something is sadly wrong. In full enjoyment of religion, we have a consuming zeal to work. We exult in every triumph of the cross and feel personal bereavement in every soul lost to heaven. God save the church from a spiritual stupor that has no heart to pity and no hand to save a dying world!

And to parents this inquiry has special application. Anxious for the worldly prospects and prosperity of their children, how strangely indifferent they often are to their spiritual welfare. When sick in body, how unwearied their tender watchings and attentions! But when the soul is sick—the soul which must live and suffer, maybe, when this body shall have returned to dust—what an absence of alarm! They counsel them about their health, education, manners, business, associations, etc., but never a word about personal salvation. To this matter let us give more earnest heed.

Responsibility Augmented.

The clear conception of a man's responsibility to God is a very startling matter; but it becomes dreadful in the extreme when we remember the plain teaching of Jesus that there are circumstances which continually augment it. "For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required" are words which fasten burdens which can never be laid down. No matter what others may do; no matter what subterfuges our own deceitful hearts may suggest; no matter what earnest pleas our cowardly conscience may put forth; no matter how we may try to evade the issue, the burden of responsibility is on us to stay. We can no more lift ourselves out of this condition than we can fly away from the earth. There would be some relief if the burden would remain of the same size and weight, but that is a mere fancy. The fact is just the opposite. The burden grows larger and becomes heavier every day. The "munch" that is given to-day becomes, by the natural law of progress, "more" to-morrow, and the increase of responsibility is in the same ratio. "Much" is given in the word of God, and to-day the Bible lies on our tables wider open than when our fathers and mothers searched its sacred pages, and the responsibility which this lays upon us is greater than that which was upon them. "Much" is given in the church and her ordinances, and to-day there are more churches with doors wider open and larger and freer means of grace accessible to us than were ever dreamed of by our ancestors, and this adds to the weight of the burden upon us. There is more preaching of the word of salvation, and better and clearer presentation of "the truth as it is in Jesus," than the world ever had before, and this augments our responsibility far beyond that of any generation preceding us. The number of books and periodicals which the religious press sends out in radiating lines through all the land contributes "much" to this fearful addition. The earth is opening and the skies parting and the horizon broadening in every direction, and these openings disclose everywhere new privileges, and these privileges create new duties, and these duties impose heavier obligations. Our boast is that we live in "the blaze of the nineteenth century," but it is a "blaze" that will burn us to cinders if we do not live aright. It is a fearful thing to live at all. Life is awful. But to live in this day of light, and have this awfulness increasing in intensity continually, is the most dreadful thing to contemplate. The contemplation of it ought to arouse every sleeping conscience and warm every benumbed energy and stir every latent faculty and put in active and zealous movement all the spiritual forces and mental powers, for such responsibility as the age lays upon us can only be met and discharged by an unrestrained consecration of the whole being to the service of him who, in his wisdom, "hath determined the times and the bounds of our habitation" to be in this nineteenth century.

Not only is individual responsibility augmenting continually, but the responsibility of churches is increasing steadily in the proportion of the increase of facilities and the aggregation of power. The powers which the churches are in possession of to-day far exceed anything that the most sanguine of our fathers could ever conceive. The natural talents and the abilities acquired through education, which the men and women of the churches possess, now eclipse everything of the sort which her past history reveals. The wealth that is in the churches in these days is enormous. If the churches of an hundred years ago could have been told of it, they would have listened to the tale as to another South Sea bubble. To us it is a simple fact. The arts and the sciences have opened the doors of their luxurious resources to the churches of Christ. Agriculture and commerce are breaking down the barriers between the nations and opening the whole world for the entrance of the gospel of peace. These things add to the responsibility of the churches. These talents of wealth and education and position are trust-funds committed to the churches, and the responsibility of the trust is such as should arouse vigilance and urge energy and quicken industry and fire ambition to dare and to do all that these wonderful endowments have qualified the churches to do. The on-goings of God's providence have laid these enormous burdens of responsibility upon the churches of to-day, and they, too, are enlarging and settling heavier every hour. The churches that meet their responsibility bravely and discharge their duty are the growing ones. Those who fail are dying. As in individual life—the Christian who does his duty to the best of his ability, grows, and the one who fails, dies—so in church life. The working church lives and strengthens and enlarges; the not-working church dwindles and dies. This is the law, and it is immutable, as God, God works, Christ works, the Holy Spirit works, and will churches or individual Christians be excused? The woe that fastened itself upon Capernaum, and sank it lower in perdition than God-smitten Sodom, was uttered by the Son of God because it did not live up to the measure of privilege and blessing! And Bethsaida, with its "beautiful little bay and broad margin of pebbly sand, with its sheltering hills behind and projecting bluffs on each side," has for ages been naught but "prostrate ruins and a lonely, desolate shore." The law of God is irrevocable. The people and churches who will not make the best of their talents are doomed to die.

OUTING.

Two Years and a Half.

If the work were not going on we should say nothing.

But within two years and a half the board has sent the Rev. D. L. Anderson and wife, and the Rev. O. G. Mingle and wife, to reenforce the China Mission. Now Dr. Dukes and Prof. Bonnell are ready to sail on the order of Bishop McIntyre. Others who have been accepted by the board are awaiting orders. When the church sends us the money, they, too, will go. The harvest truly is great—four hundred millions of Chinamen.

The Anglo-Chinese University has been built at a cost of over six thousand dollars, and is now filled with students—more than twenty of whom are applicants for church-membership. We say nothing here of the hospital, the churches, and the other schools. The annual report shows twenty-seven "appointments" for 1884—many of these are filled with native preachers.

Within two years and a half the board has strengthened the Central Mexican Mission by the addition of the Rev. J. W. Grimes and wife, the Rev. Geo. B. Winton and wife, the Rev. D. W. Carter, and the Rev. D. F. Watkins. The last annual report shows that Bishop Keener made forty-nine "appointments"—many of these are served by natives.

The mission headquarters in the City of Mexico have been built at an expense of twenty-three thousand dollars.

Within this period of time the board has sent the Rev. J. W. Tarbox and wife to Brazil, which enables the superintendent of that mission to announce ten "appointments." The new church in the city of Rio will cost largely over ten thousand dollars.

Beside all this the board has sent Robertson, MacDonald, Carter, Kilgore, Corbin, and MacDonnell to the Mexican Border Mission—making thirty "appointments" in this field. Most of these are supplied with native Mexican preachers.

Then come the missions among the Indians, the Germans, the Cubans in Key West and Havana, and missionaries among our own people in all the Conferences west of Kansas City. Indeed, the appropriations have gone up from $133,000 in May, 1882, to $200,000 in May, 1884. On this amount the board expects a recoupment from the Centenary contributions.

Now, why do we state all these things? First, to let you know that the missionary enterprises of your church are widening and strengthening all the time, and rapidly. Second, that the kingdom of Christ among us demands money, and a great deal of it.

Brethren, the Board of Missions is in debt. We have been in debt for several years. In August it is large—in January it is small. But why should we be in debt at all—anywhere or anywhere? Don't tell us that every board of missions carries a large debt. We know that. Notably some boards north of us. Our appropriations to our mission-fields are not too large for our ability, but they certainly exceed the income of our treasurer. Our drafts are at a high premium in all foreign lands, because we are backed by the banks of Nashville.

Let us get out of debt this year. Therefore lift your regular collections at once, and in fact, do not wait until Conference, but send the money here. More, gather up all your Centenary contributions that are intended for foreign missions, and send the money to our treasurer. When the Methodists meet in Christmas Conference at Baltimore next December, let there be one missionary board out of debt—Ours, R. A. YORK.

Another Jubilee.

Surely we have fallen upon the anniversary period of great events. The semi-centenaries and centenaries of epochal facts are being celebrated with rejoicings everywhere. In Church and State we are alike engaged in commemorating great characters and occurrences. But none will call forth more joyous enthusiasm than the one mentioned below in a short extract from the Christian Intelligencer, of New York. This century has been eminently missionary, and its last few decades preeminently so. Since woman's consecration to this work the cause has commanded more than ever the heart of the church. And results have correspondingly increased. The harvest-time has come at last to many long-cultivated mission fields. Years of weary waiting and watching are being rewarded with many sheaves. We rejoice in the work being accomplished by our Christian women. Their jubilee should be a time of great thanksgiving. Let it be appropriately celebrated. The Christian Intelligencer says:

The jubilee of the first society organized and by Christian women for foreign missionary work occurs this year. It was in 1834 that the Rev. David Abel and Bishop Boone, on their way to the United States from China, addressed a meeting of English ladies in regard to the condition of women in China, representing their ignorance and degradation, and their exclusion of females in all Oriental pagan lands, and urging that ladies should organize a society to send ladies to evangelize heathen women. The meeting resulted almost immediately in the formation of "The Society for Promoting Female Education in the East." The meeting for organization was held in St. John's Chapel, Bedford Row, London, under the auspices of Baptist Noel. Coming to this country, Mr. Abel presented the same plea to ladies here, and here also a society was formed, in which Mrs. Dives Bethune, the mother of Dr. Bethune, and Mrs. Doremus were prominent and active. Of the date of the organization in this city we can not speak definitely, but judge that it must have fallen in the latter part of 1834 or early in 1835.

At last reports 150 had been converted in the revival at Corinth.

Blaine, Cleveland and Hendricks were all school-teachers in their younger days.

Rev. Dr. Maclay, a missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, first in China and then in Japan, has safely landed in the capital of Corea, and is opening a Methodist mission there.

Dr. Edwards says that the Norfolk district is doing more for the Centenary movement than any district in the Virginia Conference. Possibly every district hasn't a Dr. Sledd.

Rev. Thomas Cameron desires us to state that all subscribers to "Neeley's Sermons" in the North Mississippi Conference will receive the book from Mrs. Neeley through the Southern Methodist Publishing House.

The Rev. Newman Hall, of London, has arrived in the United States, and will make us an extended visit. Dr. Joseph Parker, of the City Temple, London, is also in this country. These distinguished brethren have a cordial invitation to visit the Sunny South.

The Pittsburg Christian Advocate says: "We understand that Dr. J. P. Newman, of New York, is likely to re-enter the regular ministry of our church." He has been too long a Methodist to work well in Congregational harness. The old moving spirit gets on him, and after three of four years in one charge, you can no more hold him, than a typical mule can be made to run a straight furrow after the dinner-hour has blown.

To Our Agents.

As an inducement for the fall campaign, we make this extraordinary offer for new subscribers to the ADVOCATE, viz: For ten new subscribers, with cash in full for same, we will send a full set (four volumes) of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary, bound in half morocco; or for fifteen renewals and new subscribers, we will send the full set, postage prepaid—cash in full to accompany all orders.

An Address to the Friends of Prohibition in Mississippi.

A State Convention of the Friends of Prohibition in Mississippi was held in the city of Jackson, July 21, and reaffirmed a declaration of principles. This was an able, representative body, and its deliberations were characterized by a true conservatism, united with profound conviction and vigorous determination. Reports from all parts of the State were reassuring. The past year has marked a signal advance in our cause. Organizations are being effected in sections hitherto unglorified, while in communities already awakened our friends are multiplying and doing more aggressive work. Ten entire counties are now covered by prohibitory laws, while many separate supervisors' districts, municipalities and neighborhoods in other counties have like legal protection. These achievements are a sure prophecy of grander triumphs in the near future.

The convention wisely concluded to keep our cause aloof from the entanglements of party politics. We do not desire the spoils of office. Ours is a great moral reform entrenched above all petty ambitions for mere place and power. All we ask is for legislators to give us a local option law by counties, so that a majority of the people can decide at the ballot box the question of "license" or "prohibition." Such a boon can be granted without disturbing any man's party affiliations. That much we shall demand. And to this end our united and immediate efforts must be expended.

Our friends in every county are, therefore, urged to perfect their county and neighborhood organizations without delay. Let the agitation continue. Appoint frequent meetings, secure available speakers and scatter liberally prohibition literature. We must turn on the light. Give the colored people a friendly hand. In some counties they have been our strong and ready helpers, marching with us to glorious victory. Their church organizations are speaking out on the liquor iniquity with intelligent boldness. We must aid in striking down their greatest enemy.

In each county funds must be raised to carry on the work. The convention, by resolution, asked at least an hundred dollars from each county to be used by the Executive Committee in a State canvass. Let these amounts be remitted to the treasurer, Col. W. L. Nugent, at Jackson.

All county or beat organizations should be reported at once to the secretary of the Executive Committee, Mr. B. T. Hobbs, at Brookhaven. Friends desiring to make a thorough canvass of their respective counties are requested to communicate with the chairman, at Jackson, or the secretary, at Brookhaven.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY,
Chairman Executive Committee.

To the Preachers of the Louisiana Annual Conference.

I design getting out a centennial number of our Conference minutes to be published at the close of our next session, and among other items of interest to publish a short biography of every preacher on our roll. Will you please assist me by furnishing the following items of your personal history, at once, viz: Time and place of birth; names of parents; date and place of conversion, and under whose ministry; date of joining the church, and by whom received; when and to whom married; date of admission into Conference on trial, and into full connection; and in what Conference; date of ordination as deacon, as elder, and in each case by whom ordained; all the works traveled, and when, if local, give date and date of readmission and where readmitted; if transferred, state time and place, and by whom; if in supernumerary or supernumerated relation, state when and how long; if any churches, parsonages, school-houses, or camp grounds have been built, state when and where; if in General Conference appointed in charge of schools or colleges, or as agent, or if on publishing committee of ADVOCATE, state when and how long; if chairman of any standing committee, or Committee of Examination for under-graduates, state when and how long. State also the number of years in your present appointment. Please prepare these items in a clearly legible hand, and forward them to me without delay, and oblige,

Yours truly,
CHAS. F. EVANS,
Sec. of Conf.

Vitalizing Treatment of Drs. Starkey & Malen, 1109 Girard St., Philadelphia, has been discovered an agent that gives directly this higher vitality, which generally becomes apparent at the very outset of its use. This is manifest in an almost immediate increase of appetite, and in a sense of life and bodily comfort. If the treatment is continued, a steady improvement nearly always follows; and where the disease has not become too deeply seated, a cure may be confidently looked for. If you would have satisfactory evidence of this, send to Drs. Starkey & Malen for such documents and reports of cases as will enable you to judge for yourself, and they will be promptly furnished.

HAVANA, Aug. 30.—There were 18 deaths from yellow fever here in the last week.

Texas & Pacific Road.

This great road, after a suspension of through travel for some months, on account of the Davis Crevasse, is now running two daily trains—one to Baton Rouge, and the other through Northeastern, Western and Central Texas to San Francisco, with through sleeper. Only one change to San Francisco.

The long suspension of travel from this city to Shreveport has enabled the company to place the road and rolling stock in excellent condition, so that all freight offered will go through without delay. We trust their patronage may be equal to their means for transportation, which now is ample for all the demands of the trade. See their advertisement. Let the thousands of readers please take notice.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kind, and it makes the best bread, cakes, pies, etc. Sold only in original tins.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS
—THE BEST TONIC.

This medicine, combining Iron with pure vegetable tonics, quickly and completely cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weakness, and Neuritis. It is an infallible remedy for Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver.

It is invaluable for Diseases peculiar to Women, and all who lead sedentary lives. It cures constipation, restores the blood, stimulates the appetite, and the assimilation of food. It cures Heartburn, Belching, and strengthens the muscles and nerves.

For Interfering with Sleep, Loss of Energy, etc., it has no equal.

See the genuine has above trade mark and crossed red lines on wrapper. Take no other. Made only by BROWN CHEMICAL CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

PHYSICIANS AND DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND IT.

JAMES PYLE'S PEARLINE

The Great Invention, FOR EASY WASHING, IN HAND OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER. Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS. Without Harm to Warm Climates, and particularly adapted to Warm Climates, and particularly adapted to Warm Climates.

No family, rich or poor should be without it. Sold by all Grocers, but beware of imitations. PEARLINE is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

WANTED A WOMAN
of name and energy for our business in her locality. Substantial interest $25 to $50. References exchanged. HAYES & CO., 14 BAY ST., NEW YORK.

NO MORE NAUSEOUS DOSES.
It has been reserved to our swamps to furnish outlets for the greatest good and besting strip extant for all throat and lung complaints. The New York for cough, cold, bronchitis, and in delicate cases. Contains no poison, and is delicious. Name references by thousands. Life tonic, infallible for chills.

Home Supply, 151 Julia St., N. O.

TELEPHONE FOR EVERY BODY.
Money for agency. The Life Machine Telephone, only $10. Send for circular to BALS TELEPHONE CO., Zanesville, O.

Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh.

Several years previous to his death, Bishop Kavanaugh entrusted to Rev. A. H. Redford, D. D., the task of writing his life, and one year ago, while in Florida, renewed the request. The work is just now completed, and the first thousand subscribed for. The work is published in two styles of binding, and sold by subscription only. The advertisement will be found in another column.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickinson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

Advocate Calendar.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

We call attention to the new firm of Anderson & Dabbs, successors to Danner & Co., 51 Carondelet street. They are enterprising, and worthy the confidence of the public. Their Alabama coal is of fine quality. We advise consumers to lay in their supplies early, and thus avail themselves of the lowest prices.

Young Physician: No, it is not in good taste for a young physician, when willing to a patient, to sign himself, "Yourself, I do."

The time for chills is at hand. It will prevent much sickness, loss of time and money to keep Life Tonic on hand. A single bottle has often crushed the chills in twenty-four hours. Splendid invigorator.

The following notice is posted in the police station of Council Bluffs, Iowa: "No loafers allowed here, except police."

SANITARIUM, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate cures. Nose, Throat, Lung, full idea, 38 p. route, cost free.

When a real shrewd Virginia farmer wants a big tree chopped down and cut up, he tells the neighbors that there's a coon in it, and they'll have it down in no time.

Her face was young, yet her hair was gray. She tried Parker's Hair Balsam, and now her hair is soft and brown. Only $5.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans sells pianos at low prices and on easy payments. This house is reliable and fully guarantees satisfaction. Chickering, Mathis, Werlein and other pianos can be bought for $50 cash and $10 monthly payments. A fine Werlein, either square or upright, is $300-10 per cent off cash—shipped from factory, New York, direct or from warehouses, New Orleans. Mason & Hamlin's organs can be had at very low prices; other popular makers also. Other pianos taken in exchange for new ones, as part pay. An organ can be bought on $5 monthly payments, $15 as first payment. No family should be without music if possible. It is a pleasure which no one should be deprived of. All should sing and be happy.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

Send the ADVOCATE to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officers.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the ADVOCATE or no.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.
Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for cough, cold, bronchitis, and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, bland and nutritious form in which Cod liver oil can be used, and with most beneficial results to the patient by a single spoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TRUCK, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

J. H. MUSE,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law.
OFFICE AND RESIDENCE: WHITE CITY, LA.
Will practice in New Orleans and any other part of the State to which professional interest or duty may require him to go.

ANDERSON & DABBS
—DEALERS IN—

Alabama Coal and Coke,
54 Carondelet street.

Coal and Coke in Hhds. for Shipment.

COUNTRY ORDERS SOLICITED.

A Home Production.
GOODWYN'S EUREKA

YEAST POWDER.
It is, as it always has been, a pure, unadulterated article. Entirely free from Alum, has been analyzed by a chemist, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being pure Powder and a home production, it is certainly worthy the patronage of the public. Still manufactured at 179 Girard street, by Mrs. A. F. Goodwyn, widow of the late P. M. Goodwyn. It is handled by wholesale grocers, and by all of our leading family grocers. Orders from the country whether in case or bulk, will be promptly filled by sending to 179 Girard street, New Orleans, La.

ARTHUR WACKERBARTH. L. H. JOSEPH WACKERBARTH & JOSEPH.
MANUFACTURERS
—AND—
Wholesale Dealers in
Tobacco, Cigars, Snuff, Pipes, Etc.
45 MAGAZINE STREET,
New Orleans.

YALE & BOWLING,
WHOLESALE
DRY GOODS
AND NOTIONS
17, 19 & 21 Magazine and 45 Common Streets,
NEW ORLEANS

ELKIN & CO.
100-CANAL STREET-100
Invite attention to their large stock of fresh importations of blue, extra quality and jointless.

CHINA MATTINGS.
All varieties of CARPETING at very low prices.

OIL Cloths,
Window Shades,
Curtains, &c.

ART DECORATIONS
—IN—
WALL PAPER,
WINDOW SHADES AND CORNICES,
MATS AND MATTINGS,
Hall and Chimney FRINGS, ready-made
PICTURE FRAMES and CARPETS below cost, to close this branch of my business.

E. HEATH,
75 CAMP STREET.
NEW CHINA MATTING
AT LOW PRICES.

A. Brousseau's Son
22 and 25 Chartres Street 22 and 25
LACE CURTAINS
From $1 50 pair up.

WINDOW SHADES,
OIL CLOTHS,
CARPETS,
All the Latest Styles and Novelties.

A Champion Book
FOR BOYS.
"Gilderoy's Stories" is a rollicking, breezy, bright book for boys.

Send seventy-five cents to the author
R. G. PORTER,
Verona, Miss.

By mail, postpaid, only seventy-five cents.

Alabama Conference Female College.
Tuskegee, Ala.

Wesleyan Female College, Georgia.
The forty-seventh Annual Session begins Oct. 1st. All students are required to attend the following grounds:
1. The location of the school is unrivaled for healthfulness and beauty.
2. Its equipment are, all in all, fully equal to those of any other College in our Church.
3. The Faculty, recently enlarged, is fully competent to do first class college work.
4. The terms are cheaper than are offered by any other school of similar grade in the South.
5. The character of the work done in the past is the best guarantee for present efficiency. Reference is had to the 6,000 young men who have been educated here.

EDUCATIONAL.

LaGrange Female College.
LAGRANGE, TENN.
LaGrange is located on the Memphis & Charleston Railroad, forty-nine miles from Memphis, and three miles from Grand Junction, the intersection of the Chicago & New Orleans Railroad.
It is noted for health, fine society and good church privileges. LaGrange Female College was organized in 1855, and has educated a large number of pupils, who are her worthy representatives in Mississippi, Tennessee, Arkansas and Texas.
Full session opens Sept. 1. Faculty complete and experienced. Charges moderate.
Address: JAS. A. HEARD, Pres.

Southern Teachers' Agency.
A 281-18 Teachers to secure desirable positions. Gives free information to Principals, Presidents and Teachers of all classes of institutions. Also sends and sells School and College Property, 25¢ each. Catalogue for ready and address Southern Teachers' Agency, or
L. G. DICKEY, A. M., Manager, Birmingham, Ala.

Port Gibson Female College,
PORT GIBSON, MISS.
A prominent and scholarly member of the Mississippi Conference writes: "To no school, North or South, would I rather commit the training of our daughters."
Unsurpassed Facilities for Female Education. Corps of Teachers, full, competent and experienced.
Buildings of Brick, large and commodious. Grounds beautiful, ample and splendidly adapted to pleasant and healthful recreation.
Music specially.
Dress, none but plain allowed.
Terms, no better can be made elsewhere.
For Catalogue address—
REV. T. C. BRADFORD, President.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE,
Located at Verona, Lee county, Miss.
Directly on the Mobile & Ohio Railroad.
Founded in 1870, and has been in successful operation since.
Fifteenth annual session begins September 1, 1884.
Buildings and grounds ample and in good repair. Site, beautiful and airy.
Location, healthful.

BLUE MOUNTAIN ACADEMY.
Young men prepared for business or College. Tuition session opens September 1, 1884. Full expenses for one year, $120 to $150. Send for Catalogue.
Principal and Proprietor,
Blue Mountain, Tippah Co., Miss.

ASHEVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE,
IN THE "LAND OF THE SKY,"
ASHEVILLE, N. C.
The full session opens September 10th. Faculty large and experienced. Course thorough. Musical advantages first rate. The place beautiful. The location elevated for healthfulness. Charges low. Send for Catalogue. Address—
REV. JAMES ATKINS, Jr.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,
JACKSON, LA.

OPENS First Monday in September, 1884. Ample Faculty. Excellent Preparatory Department. Complete Classical, Scientific and Business Courses. Composition and Elocution a specialty. Morality and Religion made prominent. Prompt attention in sickness. Reduced and cultured society. Telegraphic connection. Access by Mississippi Valley Railroad. For terms of board and tuition send for Catalogue.
D. M. RUSH, President.

Kavanaugh College.
A First Grade Male and Female College, situated in the healthy pine regions of Southern Mississippi, 2 1/2 miles South of Hattiesburg, and 1/2 mile East of Magnolia.

The First Term Begins Sept. 29, 1884.

Buildings plain, but neat and comfortable. Fare good and reasonable. It is to be a College for the masses; where the poor boy and girl may get an education as well as the rich. Hence, while the rates will be low.

RATES PER MONTH:
Board, including washing, lights and fuel, $10 00
Tuition in Collegiate Department, 3 00
Tuition in Intermediate Department, 2 00
Tuition in Primary Department, 1 00
French, 2 00
Music on Piano or Organ, 1 00
Use of Instruments for practice, 1 00
Vocal Music in Class, 1 00
Vocal Music in Singing, 1 00
Pencil Drawing, Intermediate Department, 1 00
Pencil Drawing, Collegiate Department, 1 00
Oil Painting, 4 00

Boarders must furnish their own bed covering, pillows and cases, towels and toilet articles. Payments quarterly in advance; the first may be delayed until cotton is ready for shipment. The College may be easily reached from Magnolia.

REV. H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, President.
Present Address: SUMMIT, Miss.

JUDSON INSTITUTE
MARION, ALA.

Forty-seventh session begins October 1st. Faculty of fifteen. Collegiate course for Young Ladies. Kindergarten and Preparatory Departments. School of Music, Drawing, and Painting, and Telegraphy. For catalogues send to ROBERT FLAZER, President.

WASHINGTON & LEE UNIVERSITY,
LEXINGTON, VIRGINIA.

Instructions in the usual academic studies, and in the professional schools of Law and Engineering. Local schools of Theology, Veterinary Medicine, and Telegraphy. For catalogues send to ROBERT FLAZER, President.

Emory & Henry College,
EMORY, VA.

This institution will begin its 47th Annual Session on the fourth day of September, 1884. Tuition is reduced on the following grounds:
1. The location of the school is unrivaled for healthfulness and beauty.
2. Its equipment are, all in all, fully equal to those of any other College in our Church.
3. The Faculty, recently enlarged, is fully competent to do first class college work.
4. The terms are cheaper than are offered by any other school of similar grade in the South.
5. The character of the work done in the past is the best guarantee for present efficiency. Reference is had to the 6,000 young men who have been educated here.

For Catalogue or other information, address
REV. E. E. HUGHES, M. A.,
Vice-President.

Whitworth Female College,
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

REV. H. F. JOHNSON, D. D., PRES.
Faculty, 16-20. Pupils, 250-300.
Boarding Pupils, 150-191.
Music Pupils—Vocal and Instrumental—60-200.
Pinnas, 30.

Tuition in Literary Course and Board, 1 yr., $150-160; 3 yrs., $382; 4 yrs., $478.

LOCATION HEALTHFUL.
Instruction in Literature, Music, Art, etc., thorough and practical. Send for a catalogue.

SUPERIOR BOYS' BOARDING SCHOOL,
Thorough work. References East, West, South.
REV. M. L. STIVEN, A. M.,
Hunker Hill, Ill.

Commercial College
Of Kentucky University, Lexington, Ky.
Students can begin any day in the year. No vacation. Time to complete the Full Business Course about 18 weeks. Average cost, including Tuition, Board, books and board in a board, $25. Tuition a specialty. Library Course free. Ladies received. 2,000 successful graduates. Over 50 pupils last year from 15 to 25 years of age from 22 States. Graduates prepared to enter business. Currently special courses for Teachers and Business Men. Carefully selected courses for students, and in our building, National, Full Session begins Sept. 1st. For catalogue and full particulars, address its President, WILLIAM H. SMITH, Lexington, Ky.

Wesleyan Female College, Georgia.
The forty-seventh Annual Session begins Oct. 1st. All students are required to attend the following grounds:
1. The location of the school is unrivaled for healthfulness and beauty.
2. Its equipment are, all in all, fully equal to those of any other College in our Church.
3. The Faculty, recently enlarged, is fully competent to do first class college work.
4. The terms are cheaper than are offered by any other school of similar grade in the South.
5. The character of the work done in the past is the best guarantee for present efficiency. Reference is had to the 6,000 young men who have been educated here.

For Catalogue or other information, address
REV. E. E. HUGHES, M. A.,
Vice-President.

Wesleyan Female College, Georgia.
The forty-seventh Annual Session begins Oct. 1st. All students are required to attend the following grounds:
1. The location of the school is unrivaled for healthfulness and beauty.
2. Its equipment are, all in all, fully equal to those of any other College in our Church.
3. The Faculty, recently enlarged, is fully competent to do first class college work.
4. The terms are cheaper than are offered by any other school of similar grade in the South.
5. The character of the work done in the past is the best guarantee for present efficiency. Reference is had to the 6,000 young men who have been educated here.

For Catalogue or other information, address
REV. E. E. HUGHES, M. A.,
Vice-President.

Wesleyan Female College, Georgia.
The forty-seventh Annual Session begins Oct. 1st. All students are required to attend the following grounds:
1. The location of the school is unrivaled for healthfulness and beauty.
2. Its equipment are, all in all, fully equal to those of any other College in our Church.
3. The Faculty, recently enlarged, is fully competent to do first class college work.
4. The terms are cheaper than are offered by any other school of similar grade in the South.
5. The character of the work done in the past is the best guarantee for present efficiency. Reference is had to the 6,000 young men who have been educated here.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.
FACULTY:
F. M. GRAVE, D. D., President.
A. E. CHACE, A. M., Professor.
TEACHERS:
MISS A. E. WILLIAMS, MISS K. E. FOSTER,
MISS K. E. SMITH, MISS EMMA SUTHERLIN,
MISS R. J. HARP, Music.
MISS R. M. DILLARD, Music.
MISS H. E. PERRY, Miss J. H. PERRY, Art.
MISS K. E. HADLOW, Business and Principal Preparatory School.
MISS FLORENCE BARLOW, Assistant.

FALL TERM OPENS SEPT. 10, 1884.
RATES: $120, $125 and $250 per session of 2 weeks.
The College year begins under most favorable auspices. For Catalogue, address
F. M. GRAVE, President.

Collegiate Institute
AT
BATON ROUGE, LA.

With Session, BEGINNING OCTOBER 1, 1884.

This is a select Family Boarding School for BOYS, limited in number, where they are prepared for the best colleges, or for the business or professional pursuits of life. The personal care of the Principal is given to the health, morals and manners of his pupils. The health record of the school is unrivaled.

For particulars and circular apply to W. H. N. MAURIN, Principal, or J. H. MAURIN, A. M., Assistant.

The E. A. Seminary
This school, for boys and girls, is located at Arcadia, Blountville Parish, La., a town on the railroad that joins Monroe and Shreveport.
The course of study is thorough and practical. The discipline is rigid, with mildness.
For circulars, address
R. A. SMITH, Principal.

Louisiana State University
—AND—
Agricultural and Mechanical College,
BATON ROUGE, LA.

Session Opens October 5th, and Closes July, 4th 1885.

For further information, address
D. F. HOYT, President.

HUNTSVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE, HUNTSVILLE, ALABAMA.

THIRTY-FIFTH SESSION BEGINS WEDNESDAY, September 3, 1884. Healthy, well furnished faculty. Offers thorough instruction in all departments of Female Education. A delightful Christian home for pupils. For Catalogue and special information, apply to REV. A. B. JONES, A. M., President.

METHODIST DISTRICT HIGH SCHOOL,
BLACK HAWK, MISS.

SESSION OPENS SEPTEMBER 3, 1884.

Location healthy. Faculty experienced. Course of study thorough. "Classics" low. Community refined. No whiskey sold. Musical advantages good.
J. PEEK MARSHALL, A. M., Pres.
Black Hawk, Miss.

M. G. F. INSTITUTE,
JACKSON, TENN.

The Fortieth Collegiate Year begins September 1st, 1884, with additional buildings and increased advantages. Four hundred and sixty graduates in twelve states. For full information, address Prof. G. C. JONES, M. A., or the President, A. W. JONES.

English and Classical School for Boys,
71 Prytania Street,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

NEXT SESSION BEGINS OCT. 1, 1884.

A few Boarding Pupils can be accommodated, and to them will be secured all the educational advantages afforded by frequent visits to the World's Great Exposition. For terms or other information, address
T. W. DYER, Principal.

HIWASSEE COLLEGE.
FOUNDED 1849.

In the country, seven miles from Sweetwater Depot, East Tennessee.

Delicious butter and milk fresh from the cold spring house.
Quiet retreat.
Moral place.
Moderate charges.
Thorough work.
Wide patronage.
Positively, Hiwassee College, Tennessee. Male daily, except Sunday.

Whitworth Female College,
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

REV. H. F. JOHNSON, D. D., PRES.
Faculty, 16-20. Pupils, 250-300.
Boarding Pupils, 150-191.
Music Pupils—Vocal and Instrumental—60-200.
Pinnas, 30.

Tuition in Literary Course and Board, 1 yr., $150-160; 3 yrs., $382; 4 yrs., $478.

LOCATION HEALTHFUL.
Instruction in Literature, Music, Art, etc., thorough and practical. Send for a catalogue.

SUPERIOR BOYS' BOARDING SCHOOL,
Thorough work. References East, West, South.
REV. M. L. STIVEN, A. M.,
Hunker Hill, Ill.

Commercial College
Of Kentucky University, Lexington, Ky.
Students can begin any day in the year. No vacation. Time to complete the Full Business Course about 18 weeks. Average cost, including Tuition, Board, books and board in a board, $25. Tuition a specialty. Library Course free. Ladies received. 2,000 successful graduates. Over 50 pupils last year from 15 to 25 years of age from 22 States. Graduates prepared to enter business. Currently special courses for Teachers and Business Men. Carefully selected courses for students, and in our building, National, Full Session begins Sept. 1st. For catalogue and full particulars, address its President, WILLIAM H. SMITH, Lexington, Ky.

Wesleyan Female College, Georgia.
The forty-seventh Annual Session begins Oct.

WHOLE NO. 1467.

Christian Advocate.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

Y. BISHOP KEENER

Letter from China.

(Continued)

The riding in a Sedan chair was a strange experience for Mrs. Lumbut. Indeed, at first we looked upon it as quite humiliating on our part, and a great degradation on the part of the native men. We soon became reconciled to it as being the custom of the island, and also, as the poor cooler

It was not long before a little old woman, with, we thought, very small feet, came in to see the new comers and to say how glad she was to see them. That was Mrs. Kwa, a servant woman in Mrs. Cunningham's family. She was not then a Christian, but under Christian instruction. It was with strange feelings of pity and sorrow as we both looked upon the old lady with her small feet, as we began to realize more than ever, as she went hobbling away from us, that we were in a strange land among a strange heathen people who needed the blessed gospel of the Lord and Saviour. The custom of cramming the feet we could not look upon in any other light than as a heathen custom, and by practicing it they were violating the law of God, for they were mutilating the body which God gave to them. We could not speak a word to any of them, but Bro. and Sister Cunningham kindly interpreted for us. Oh how we longed to be able to speak to them in their own tongue of

Yours in Christ,
J. W. LANDRUM

SHANGHAI, CHINA, July 9, 1894.

Our Sabbath-School System.

MR. EDITOR: Our Sabbath-school system has wonderfully improved its methods, literature and efficiency of teaching in the last two or three decades, but it has not yet attained to perfection. At several points ought to be improved. In this short paragraph I shall mention only one. I think some parents and guardians are criminally negligent about having their children remain to hear the eleven o'clock A. M. sermon after the Sabbath-school is dismissed. The fact that it is too confining and hot, some to keep the children in church so long. And yet these very children, with two or three short recesses, sit from five to eight hours five days in the week in the neighborhood school-house. And one would suppose, after the rest and recreation of Saturday, they could without inconvenience and suffering spend from two to two and a half hours on Sunday in attendance at Sabbath-school and preaching. A little attention from parents and HAELOURST, M^o 1861 pp1. J. O. JONES.

"The Smallest Tools."

2. Uncle Kim's tribe feeds a large number at other tribes of grandiose pretensions. He pays for what he gets and the extra per cent, upon goods which others buy but never pay for. Others use machinery that costs so much to keep it up that they have no time to make corn. Uncle Kim sells them corn. Others have to borrow money to go to the circus. Uncle Kim does the show. Uncle

Uncle Kim has the cabbage. Uncle Kim was made steward in the church because he was always up with his quaterage and threw in a basket of beans and a dozen roasting ears every quarterly meeting. His white neighbors on the hill found it very convenient to send down to Uncle Kim for a cabbage on extra occasions. They got many compliments for Uncle Kim's nice vegetables. His white neighbors got the reputation of being "early birds." Uncle Kim pocketed his quarter and half dollar and let his white neighbors have the cabbage and glory thereof.

3. My meditations went on in the realm of the spiritual. I have been trying to do things with large implements when the smaller were cheaper and better. I had read many a great book of heavy theology, I written many a strong argument, tried to preach many a big sermon when I might have remembered that "God had chosen the weak things to confound the mighty." How did I have gone out with Gadiah's spears to kill a sparrow! The Indian has with his bow-gun knew better.

nd | I met a preacher not long since who wanted me to tell him what encyclopedia to buy, what review to take, what course of lectures to read—Bampton, Chautauqua, Montaigne, or what. He said he wanted to load up. "Then don't load down," I replied; "Use smaller shot." I met a man with a rifle which bore up over a mile. He was great in his praises of it. "Why," said he, "if I should see a deer half a mile the other side of that hill I could kill it." Just so, but who could see the deer through the hill?"

4. Men are not usually turned upon great, but upon small points. The arrow which kills Ahab goes through the joints of armor. How seldom does one give as his experience that he was converted by reading Butler's Analogy, or some such book! It is a plain preacher, a plain sermon, a plain text, a plain conviction, a plain conversion. Man spiritually takes food by the mouthful just as he does physically. That food is not cut by machinery of enormous size, but by small knives. The richest and greenest tree has not, perhaps, the largest tap-root, but it has the most fibrous roots. So Christian luxuriance does not show itself by persistently boring into solid rocks, but by gathering the droppings of their earners which wear in winter's frost.

5. Influence over mankind is not gained or retained by great genius. He who knows how to do little things well outstrips the prodigy. "Man," says Emerson, "is an eudogen." Maybe so. But groundnuts is the accumulation of small deeds done well. Minerva may have sprung full armed from Jupiter's head; but she, no doubt, grew in his head. No genius ever swayed from above to the level of ordinary minds, but first toiled up step by step to its lofty perch. Influence is true hydraulic power. No man buys influence—none inherits it. It grows in the use of the small tools which God gives and gives to all.

6. No one knows what will be his greatest deed fifty years hence. The word forgotten, the cup of water unthought of, of the kindness to the orphan will rise out of the forest of memories as the tallest and greenest of all. A few days ago an anecdote of Bishop Simpson struck me as an example of this truth. It was the kind of thing to bury a poor orphan boy who had died of cholera. He went as readily to that office as to any of his episcopal honors. Perhaps never did he prove so grand as a Bishop. Only an orphan died of cholera. Yet it was humanity's orphan. The dead was God's dead. The sermon as such is forgotten. The text is somewhere in the Bible. But the deed rises and stands grander in the living presence than either sermon or text.

T. A. S. A.

From Bastrop, La.

Since our last we have been to the Little Creek Camp Meeting, fourteen miles from Bastrop and twelve south of Girard, La., and also to the Delta District Conference at Lake Providence, East Carroll parish, La. Bros. George P. Roberts accompanied us the former, and Bros. W. W. Gathright and Samuel W. Handy, lay delegates voyaged with us over sixty miles, mostly swamps and over-landed to the latter. Godbless his people abundantly at both places. We suppose that Rev. C. T. Munthollan, pastor in charge of the Rayville circuit, has written you in regard to the camp meeting, and so we will turn our attention to the District Conference. There were very few preachers and laymen present — indeed, we never attended a numerically small District Conference. About a dozen — one-half clerical and one-half lay — constituted our numbers. Bro.

ever, with that brother of the pulpit, administrative ability and undaunted zeal, Rev. Robert Randle, P. E., at their head, the little handful were emboldened to work and God owned their labors in the business and the preaching. Soluble resolutions were passed touching the Expulsion, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE and other important subjects, which Bro. Taylor, the secretary, will, no doubt, forward for publication. The state of the Delhi district was found to be all that could have been expected, considering the fact that almost the whole of it was covered for so long a time by the waters. In places many feet deep and very slow to retire. Floods and what not that may befall them can not drive the Louisiana immigrants from the blessed employ of preaching Jesus even in the waters as, in the wilderness and waste places. Friday night of the Conference was set apart and used unto edification for temperance. In the absence from town of the president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Mrs. Sallie Powell presided with graceful dignity and marked ability. The exercises began with an appropriate hymn, followed by prayer, led in the most fervent manner by that ripe man of God, Rev. Baxter Clegg. After more singing the Rev. James M. McKee, of Delhi, delivered an eloquent address, after which the writer exhorted and the ladies secured some sixty or seventy sinners to the pledge. There is a colored union at work in Lake Providence, and altogether the temperance cause is gaining rapidly in that town. We find the names of the officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union written on a slip of paper, but have lost it. We may state, however, that the ladies of Lake Providence are fortunate in having as their president our talented episcopal sister, Mrs. F. S. Garner, editress of that live paper, the East Carroll Democrat. The mothers and wives and sisters of Lake Providence, as everywhere, have our best wishes and heartfelt prayers for their early triumph over the destroyer of their homes and hopes. Centenary Day was fixed for Sunday, and opened with a love-feast at nine o'clock, led by Rev. T. H. McClelland. It was an occasion of rich spiritual enjoyment, all hands becoming very happy in the felt presence and power of God, his love filling to overflowing the hearts of his witnessing children. At eleven o'clock our gifted president ing elder for about two hours held the attention of the audience, while he discoursed exhaustively, eloquently and practically upon Methodism, its origin, its nature, its growth and its glorious doctrine and economy, so wonderfully adapted to bring sinners to Christ and perfect Christians for heaven. Bro. Randle easily raised what is to be considered a very liberal Centenary collection. The good people present (and the church can not possibly hold more than 150 or 160 people) gave him the sum of $162. Bro. Clegg is hoping to raise $1,500 and build a Centenary parsonage this year, and, if his health holds out, he will be likely to do it. The people need a larger church, and ought to build a substantial brick one next year if not this. Sunday night, after communion, the monners were called, and, as at every service, they came. During the meeting many were brought under conviction, some yielding and others hardening their hearts and stultifying their backs. Still there were some conversions, some abmissions to the church and much done for the membership. We left Monday morning, Bro. Clegg purposing to carry on the meeting with the lay preacher from Pin Hook, Rev. H. S. Johns, to preach Monday night.

It was a hard trip there and back in the heated August weather, but we shall ever count it one of God's richest blessings bestowed on us that we were permitted to be one of those whom God met at the Lake Providence District Conference. We shall not forget the elegant hospitality received, and we pray God's choicest blessings upon our host, Bro. Tom Powell, and his wife and children.

[illegible]

Central Centenary Committee

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.
REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D.
Chairman,
REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.
Secretary.
JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH
Treasurer.

What though all my earthly journey,
 Brief may, but warm be mine hours,
 And in reaping for life's roses,
 Thine I find instead of thorns.

If I've Jesus Jesus only,
 I possess a cluster rare;
 He's the "Lily of the Valley,"
 And the "Rose of Sharon fair."

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate
THE GOODNESS OF GOD

BY CAROLINE F. WILSON.

The Lord is good, to those that love him,
Of every blessing, suffering thing,
The holy Comforter will be
With promised healing on his wing.

Oh! let us love his radiant grace
To all who truly love our Lord,
That we may see him face to face
And worship him with one accord.

Oh! God is good in all his works
Wrought by his own almighty hands;
Oh! God is good in his mercy looks
Even in the storm his love commands.

Then bless the Lord, and praise his name,
Our stay and refuge in distress,
Then bless the day that Jesus came
To shine in this wilderness.

Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society.

REPORT OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

Your Conference Society was organized at the session of the conference at Baton Rouge in December, 1879, by a number of ladies gathered in the parlor of Mrs. M. W. Read, aided therein by Revs. Joel T. Davis, John Hannon and W. H. Foster, Esq., and the following officers were elected: Mrs. M. W. Read, president, Baton Rouge; vice-presidents, Mrs. W. H. Wise, Shreveport; Mrs. K. Knox, Baton Rouge; Mrs. Judge E. T. Merrell, and Mrs. J. H. Keller, New Orleans; Mrs. John P. Mansfield; Mrs. J. N. Pharr, Morgan City; Mrs. Dr. W. E. Hamilton, Minden; Mrs. Maggie Hayes, Opelousas; corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. H. Foster, New Orleans; recording secretary, Miss Carrie Robertson, Baton Rouge; treasurer, Mrs. R. M. Walmesley, New Orleans; and auditors, Mrs. L. Parker, New Orleans.

Your secretary endeavored first to acquaint herself with the organization and character of the Parent Society, and the work assigned by the Conference Association. As early as practicable correspondence was opened with the officers of the society, the preachers of the Conference and others, who it was thought could be interested in the Woman's Mission Work, Missionary Reports, Tracts, and Leaflets, were obtained and sent to various parties for general information upon the subject, and to create an interest in the minds and hearts of our people. Many of our preachers have responded with kind and cheering expressions. Some have gone further and acted nobly in organizing auxiliaries in their congregations. Your secretary has been brought into pleasant acquaintance with many of our noble Southern women, choice spirits with whom it is an honor and pleasure to be associated in doing "Woman's work, for Woman." Felicitous auxiliary existed prior to the organization of the Conference Society, and Baton Rouge Auxiliary was organized during the session of the Conference, so that your association had two auxiliaries to start off with.

During the first conference year the following auxiliaries were organized: Opelousas, Texas Chapel, Bayou Boeuf, Lake Providence, Pecan Grove, and Washington. The next year, 1881, the following became auxiliaries: Shreveport and North Bossier. In 1882 the following reported: Keachi and Friendship. In 1883 were added to the list, Trenton, Faulk Chapel, Colony, Alexandria and Pineville, Pleasant Hill, Mt. Zion, Tulp Church and Greenwood. And during the present Conference year, 1884, the following auxiliaries have been reported: Bastrop, DeSard, Mansfield, Waterproof, Atlanta and Montgomery. Making the number of auxiliaries associated together in the Louisiana Conference, twenty-six.

It is proper to state that of the above auxiliaries, several have made no report for several years, and whether they now have an organized existence your secretary is not informed. It is to be hoped—your first conference gathering may so stimulate and encourage our women of Louisiana that a new interest will be felt, and manifested in regular and increased quarterly reports from all the auxiliaries. The whole amount contributed and sent forward to the Parent Society at Nashville during these years, as shown by your treasurer's report, is two thousand one hundred and twenty-six dollars.

Report of work accomplished by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Louisiana Conference, from its organization in December 1879, to March 1, 1884.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT
Felicitous Auxiliary	$75.40
Baton Rouge Auxiliary	$28.75
SHREVEPORT DISTRICT
Shreveport Auxiliary	$18.00
Friendship Auxiliary	$13.25
Keachi Auxiliary	$7.90
Pecan Grove Auxiliary	$12.00
Atlanta Auxiliary	$8.65
Montgomery Auxiliary	$10.30
Waterproof Auxiliary	$3.41
Mansfield Auxiliary
ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT
Bayou Boeuf Auxiliary	$19.00
Alexandria and Pineville Auxiliary	$5.85
OPELOUSAS DISTRICT
Opelousas Auxiliary	$21.35
Washington Auxiliary	$10.00
DELAWARE DISTRICT
Texas Chapel Auxiliary	$16.00
Friendship Auxiliary	$12.00
Pecan Grove Auxiliary	$13.25
Trenton Auxiliary	$10.70
Faulk Chapel Auxiliary	$14.80
Colony Auxiliary	$10.00
Waterproof Auxiliary
Bastrop Auxiliary
Atlanta Auxiliary
DELAWARE DISTRICT
Tulp Church Auxiliary	$19.20
Keachi Auxiliary	$21.00

MRS. W. H. FOSTER,
Acting Treasurer.

In the imitation of the work many discouragements and embarrassments have to be met and overcome. This Woman's work is a new field, and it begins a new era in the life and history of Christian women. Much has to be learned, many prejudices have to be overcome. Add to this the plea set up in many parts and by many persons, the disastrous effects of the war, and the poverty of our people, and it is not wonderful that you have accomplished so much in the work you have undertaken.

Great difficulty has been experienced frequently in getting members willing to accept office and take the responsibility of the work, it is so new, and we have never had experience in such work, but this difficulty is being lessened every year as our people become better posted in regard to the character of the work, and they become fully instructed in the cause.

On account of ill-health, your treasurer, Mrs. R. M. Walmesley, in 1881 tendered her resignation; and at the urgent solicitation of your president, Mrs. M. W. Read, your corresponding secretary, consented to accept the position temporarily as acting treasurer, and from the difficulty of the president in finding some one who would take the office permanently, she has been forced to do the labor of both officers to the present, and though in weakness it may be, and inexperienced, she has done the best she could.

In conclusion allow your secretary to say that she has learned that the good that the Woman's work is accomplishing is not confined to the amount of money contributed and sent to the mission field. The work has a reflex influence. Those who engage in it are blessed. Their knowledge of the mission work is increased, their hearts are enlarged, their love of humanity is extended and broadened, till they realize that they are part of the great brotherhood of God's creating and redeeming love.

Permit the further suggestion that increased effort be made to extend the circulation of the "Woman's Missionary Advocate," commenced as an experiment, it has become a grand success, it is now the peer of the very best of its kind. It ought to be in every family of our Church, and now praying for the presence of the Holy Spirit, and the blessing of God upon you during all your session, this report is respectfully submitted,

MRS. W. H. FOSTER,
Cor. Secretary.

Sunday School Celebration—Jena Circuit, Louisiana Conference.

Mrs. Burton: Doubtless it may afford you and the many readers of your estimable and invaluable paper much pleasure to know of the wondrous change brought about in the way of a life-giving, soul awakening influence in Rev. Daniel Barr's work, known as the Jena Circuit, in this parish. For several years this work has been in a lukewarm condition, spiritually, owing to local causes, best known as well as best felt by the workers and well-wishers of the Church. But Phoenix-like a proper zeal for God's cause has sprung into renewed vigor, the latent spirit so essential in furthering the end to which the following is intended and an evidence:

On Saturday, August 2d, the M. E. C. S. Sabbath-school, of Centerville, gave their annual celebration under the supervision of Bro. W. Bodely, superintendent, and Rev. Daniel Barr, P. C. The large, airy edifice, built especially for such purposes, was on that day the centre of Centerville—as the assembly, numbering five hundred or more gave proof. Several parishes were represented, Caldwell, Grant, Winn, and Franklin, and there were visitors from your city. The worship to God as the motto read: "Jehova Reigns." The creditable and meritorious, as well as interesting exercises, was the central force or power. While the happy hearts and bright smiling faces of the overjoyed parents and friends, together with the good morals and precepts inculcated, and a benefit conducive of pleasant reminiscences was the centrifugal power. All made glorious by a circle of beauty, hallowing and mellowing the radiating light that shall shine brighter, as time volutes into years. The decorations were beautiful and appropriate. A bountiful repast spread upon a comfortable table was opportune. Space prevents an itemized list of the exercises, but "The Dialogue of Birds," "The Cold Water Army," "The Christian Graces," and others displayed study and talent on the part of the scholars, patience and skill on that of the teachers. The valiant address by a young lady from your city was splendid.

There was about one hundred and fifty scholars in the procession. After the morning hour, which belonged to the scholars, speeches were in order, first by Rev. J. D. Harper, of Columbia, who spoke upon the Sabbath-school in its various classifications, interspersed with anecdotes, and closing upon child piety. He was followed by Mr. J. B. Boutner, of Harrisburg, who so flowery and eloquently carried his hearers into such divine altitudes we were lost in an atmosphere of love.

Thus was the close of a day in the pine woods of Catahoula, and thus day Bro. Barr's influence, zeal and untiring energy forever prosper and ever be remembered by all who knew him.

ALIOH.

Notes From the Sea Shore.

Just as soon as camp-meeting adjourns a transformation is at once seen and felt. The last song and prayer have hardly died away, before the swish of the scythe is heard preparing the croquet ground. The king is dead, live the king! Length of face with many is changed for breadth; the camp-meeting look gives way to the summer-resort manner, subdued tones abdicate in favor of loud tones, the city dress is changed for costumes varied and indescribable. Ladies flourish in Mother Hubbards and immense hats brown with the sunbeams of preceding seasons and drooping in character. Gentlemen go around in white, brown, and blue navy shirts, and take on a freedom of manner and conversation that brings back to mind the Confederate soldier.

And now the hammock oscillates under the trees. The woodpecker-like tapping of croquet balls floats on the drowsy air; the crab is drawn protesting and shrinking from the deep, and the children splash and huddle from the bath-houses. All goes well enough at first, but time hurls off the edge of these enjoyments and the restless chase at the idea of limitations—the hours creep slowly by Lorena—hence the projecting and undertaking of expeditions to Ship and Horn Island. Returning from these it is soon felt that the arrival of the train at sunset is an event not to be despised. Stopping or dashing by it is felt to be a flash of the city's eye, a kind of fitting presence of the outside busy world, and so the young men in their navy shirts and the young ladies arrayed in snowy lawns and muslins flutter down to the station and glance up inquiringly at the coal-begrimed passengers who with noses flattened against the glass stare back at them.

Each station all along this route beholds a tender episode. Every evening the husband from the city emerges from the panting train covered with dust and a duster, and is received with becoming gladness by some sweetly dressed expectant wife. The kiss is witnessed with quiet—but evident satisfaction by the crowd, and the hearts of bachelors and hopeless widowers melt in their bosoms like so much wax. Each station I said beholds these passages—this makes the L. and N. Railroad along the coast a lengthened chain of saccharine conjugalities with links rivited by kisses.

But the arrival of trains is not all that entertains the dwellers by the sea. By and by is seen the floundering party—which flounders home at midnight—and that night they caught nothing; "twas ever thus." Then comes the hastily gotten up concert which is regarded with much appreciation by the dogs on the camp-ground—they seeming to be for their particular delectation. By the by the dog question at camp-meeting is getting to be a knotty, certainly a pine-knotty question. At one camp-ground in a certain State it has been found necessary to have a standing committee on dogs. I would remark here however that there is a hidden satire in the word standing, as the committee so far from standing are kept running all the time. The preaching somehow moves the dog in one way and right then and there the committee is expected to move him in another. So it has been observed that the dogs moved, though no one else should be during the entire meeting. There surely must be a religious streak in the animal or he would not be such a regular attendant on these special services. But we don't press this thought; but we add, however, that if the preaching we frequently hear at camp-meeting will move a dog, how great must be the effect of a concert upon his sensitive nature. Dickens tells of a dog that was listening to three men who were singing a song, out of tune and time, and every now and then the canine as if unable to bear another note would walk out of the room, go behind the house and howl. But the dogs I speak of didn't do this, nor had they similar provocation; but in the midst of the aforesaid entertainment, and just after a song by several ladies, three of these camp-meeting dogs broke in on the third scene of the fourth act and had a regular fight with full vocal accompaniments. The dogs it may be said "took the floor," and the ladies just as promptly "took the chair." The general opinion on the ground next morning was that this part of the opera was wretched doggerel.

A few days after this on a similar occasion, the audience applauded some piece with their hands—the dogs, of course, were on hand and always ready, and mistaking the sound, made a rapid dash and grand charge through us and by us—nothing!

What shall be done with the dogs? Don't you see it is a pine-knotty question—and requiring a pine-knotty solution.

But I started out to tell you of a delightful lawn-party given by the Sea Shore Sunday-school. Mrs. Christian Keenor, Mrs. Dr. Lyons and Mrs. Pharr were the leading spirits—and truly they made it a most pleasant occasion. For over an hour the audience comfortably seated under the trees, in full view of the Gulf, with its white caps, wheeling gulls and snowy sails—listened to song and recitation humorous and pathetic by the children. Toddlers of three and four years took their part by storm with their lisping and prattled accomplishments. Then followed a Centenary Talk by the writer —then the crowning with flowers of Edna Hall and Cora Campman, the little girls who had sold the greatest number of tickets for the lawn-gathering. Then came the orthodox termination of every church-entertainment—lemonade and ice cream. The amount realized was twenty-five dollars. This sum the children send to our mission in Mexico as a Centenary offering.

But the pleasantest event took place on last Tuesday evening, viz: the marriage of Miss Baldwin to Mr. Morrison. This is the first occurrence of the kind on the ground. Everything else has happened. Buying and selling, meeting and parting, fishing and sailing—with overtaking of sail-boats; a child was once lost and found—then we had the miracle of the fish east up on the beach. Moreover we have had deaths here, and births natural and spiritual—and engagements without number, but never before, a wedding. So almost the entire population turned out in lively interest and sympathy dashed with curiosity to witness the first marriage on the camp-ground. The writer had the pleasure of officiating. The young ladies with deft fingers had made the cottage-tent lovely with drooping moss and twinkling lights. A wedding march was played on the organ, and in the presence of a crowd of friends and acquaintances—people from distant cities and States—the two were made one. A broom was presented to the bride with appropriate remarks, a cup of rice next fell like a shower upon the couple, to be token plenty—and finally the new married pair were escorted a mile down the beach in the moonlight by a merry band of friends and well-wishers.

As their voices died away in the distance, I sought my hammock under the trees, to look for the last time this year, if not forever upon the ocean outspread before me in tremendous nocturnal beauty, and think of Him who made it and holds it with all its vastness in the hollow of his hand.

B. GARRADINE.

What Is Life?

BY REV. J. W. HARMON.

Doubtless there are times in the lives of most persons when it is difficult to sustain a line of spirits, even when there is no special provocation or cause for despondency. Say what you will by way of justification or apology, but there is evidently a sense of degradation, a libel put upon Christian character, to witness the outbursts of fretful and discontented men and women chasing under the necessary duties and obligations of life.

Existence is not the voluntary act of any human being, but when ushered into life he finds himself under law, both human and divine; laws about which he had nothing to do or to say to his origin or framing, and yet laws to which he is held amenable by an inexorable logic as fixed as the laws of life itself. There is a very large class, however, and among them many professors of Christianity, who deliberately suicide all cheerfulness out of their lives, they seem to pride themselves in the austerity and severity of their countenances, and in a spirit of sour godliness frown down all innocent displays of gaiety and laughter, representing all outbursts of joyousness. As a general thing this class of godly moralists indulge in gloomy pictures of the passing days, studying out the dark elements of life, and closing their minds and latching their hearts against the cheerful rays of sunny thoughts and the sweet aroma of life that otherwise would flow in upon them. Instead of rising up to the works of the day with hearts overflowing with love, fresh and grateful and rosy as the morning light, they are so full of sour godliness that one of this class remarked, "I never speak to my wife and children until after breakfast." No wonder that such "unhappy and undisciplined" men are like the hurst and desolate heath, where the wild beasts rove at will. They are in the moral and spiritual world, what dark and leaden storm clouds and rainy days are to the physical, casting a gloom over everything. What an oppressive, moral atmosphere have their unfortunate existence! The irrepressible mirth of childhood, the ringing laughter of young hearts, and the cheerful outbursts of genial life never find birth in the presence of such blighted conditions of humanity. They fret and creak, and make themselves miserable in general and disagreeable in particulars, and then forsooth, joy and gladness flee apace. To such the mere passage of months and years is not life in any true sense. To drag round in the chronic tread-mill of habit or trade, and daily labor, with clouded brow, and morose in speech, turning the whole mental and moral machinery of existence into lottery schemes for money getting, that is not life in any of its nobler departments.

All this sort of being and thought opens none of those holy chambers where the sanctities of the inner life, voice themselves in prayer; and the divinity of the soul chases away the winter of death.

It is spiritual, cheerfulness and knowledge; it is godliness and truth; it is love and faith; it is purity and holiness in the life. Oh! these are the elements and attributes, these are the mighty forces which stir to their mightiest depths all the wonderful machinery of human life, burdened with the majesty of its redemption in Christ Jesus.

This is life indeed, vested with glory all immortal in the hour of death and crowned in the temple of God. What a contrast is such a life as this where the heart is the birthplace of spiritual sunshine, and whose business, like the divine Master, is to make others happy and lead the way to heaven.

A great sorrow may sometimes cast its shadow over the spirit, and a temporary silence may rest upon heart and mind; but, having learned the divine lesson of cheerfulness, it has become the habit of the soul and the clothing of the spirit. Such is the moral grandeur of life, and the beauty of its immortality in Christ; but, perhaps, you are utterly indifferent to the whole subject, and only wait to be challenged by God himself for an answer; if so, damnation is nearing you rapidly in the future; and then, is life worth living?

"One Thing Needful"

More spiritually is needed to preserve the vitality, purity, efficiency and perpetuity of Methodism. Born of God and nurtured by the Holy Spirit, its growth has been truly marvelous. It appears almost fabulous that Methodism named in derision by unchristian ecclesiasticians, hoary with age, and established long centuries before in "the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof," has so far outstripped them all, and accomplished such glorious results in little over a century, and that, too, in the face of so much determined and organized opposition, and even bitter persecution! But Methodism was the child of God, and "raised up to spread scriptural holiness over the land," and nothing short of the power of God could ever have crowned her labors with such unparalleled success, which now commands the wonder and admiration of the world. Niagara-like she has poured her blessings upon the world, until they cover the earth as the waters cover the great deep. Shall she continue her spirit-spued career in full zenith of glory until the untold millions of the earth have been gathered into the fold of Christ, and still stand out "like a bright star upon the brow of evening" until time sets in eternity? or will she descend from her spiritual Pisgah, and wane in the fogs and dust of earth, and finally go down in darkness? In that sad event the good Lord, in his great mercy, will "thrash out" some other heaven-born luminary to blaze across the moral skies to warm immortal souls into spiritual life, and illumine the pathway to a brighter and better world. "God burles his workmen and carries on his work," and when they fail to work in faith and look—to him for success.

Flushed with such grand and glorious achievements, as mark the progress of Methodism throughout the world, are we not in great danger of forgetting that "God giveth the increase?" Having built goodly houses and dwelt therein, and our silver and our gold being multiplied, and all we have being multiplied, are not "our hearts being lifted up, and are forgetting the Lord our God, which brought us forth out of the land of Egypt, and from the house of bondage," from spiritual darkness, and the unavailing servitude of lifeless formalism? Are we not beginning to "say in our hearts, our power, and the might of our hands hath gathered us this wealth?" Let every one examine his heart honestly, faithfully and see what he finds there, and it shall be, if we do at all forget the Lord, our God, and walk after other gods, and serve them, and worship them, that we shall surely perish. As other churches, which the Lord hath destroyed before us, so shall we perish; because we will not be obedient unto the voice of our Lord, our God, in keeping his commandments and his judgments and his statutes, which he has commanded us.

What was the sad and awful history of the Jewish Church? Read it, ye Methodists, and tremble. The favorite of Heaven, unto it "were committed the oracles of God," and the glory of "the Shekinah" abode in the tabernacle, and yet the fire of devotion was permitted to die out upon the altar; dead formalism was substituted for living spirituality, and the Lord left his own chosen people to work out their own folly and destruction, and dreadful was their ruin! and one church or organization after another arose and shared similar fate, until Methodism dawned upon the world as the morning star of free salvation witnessed by the Holy Spirit for all mankind. And, after having been owned of God, and blessed with such grand and glorious success, what a sad commentary upon human nature will it be, if she, like her predecessors, shall descend from "the power of godliness" down to the mere "form thereof!" Wherefore, let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall!

Is not the Methodist Church becoming more formal and less spiritual? Is not the "preaching" now more "with enticing words of man's wisdom," or less "in demonstration of the spirit and of power?" Do not the preachers now strive more to please the ear than to spiritualize the heart? Do they not labor more to swell the numbers than to convert the numbers? Do they not condescend to the "Babylonish garments, the shakels of silver, and the wages of gold," instead of "sanctifying the people, saying peace, when there is no peace," and "dab with untempered mortar," instead of declaring "Thou art the man?" There are, of course, noble exceptions. But, must it be said there are not preachers who are much more concerned about their personal popularity with the world than about the spiritual welfare of the church of God, who "take more thought about what they shall eat and what they shall drink, and how they shall clothe themselves, than about things which shall abide, the 'bread of life'?" Also, are there not some occupying pulpits who know not God in the garden of their sins? who have no witness of the Holy Spirit that they have been born again? Honest men they may be, mistaking the shadow for the substance, but deceived; and consequently leading others. Let each and every preacher examine his own heart, and answer to these indictments before God, as he will have to do one day. Oh, for a ministry full of the Holy Spirit and godlike zeal for the salvation of souls! How can the stream be expected to rise higher than the fountain? Is there as much experimental religion, witnessed by the Holy Spirit in the church now, in proportion to numbers, as there used to be in the earlier days of Methodism? Let the older members, who have witnessed "the demonstrations of the spirit and of power," then and now, testify. The Lord has done great things for us, which we ought to be glad; but there are also many things among us, which we ought to repent. Let us be honest with ourselves and spend part of this centennial year in earnest, and faithful heart-searching, seeking and life-reforming. Again, is our success in winning souls to Christ as real, or as great now, in proportion to numbers and testifies, as it was formerly? Success in inducing people to give their hearts to God, and devote their lives to his service, meant (and not simply persuading them to join the church, which signifies too little now, that "satisfactory assurances of their desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins," etc., are scarcely required, and no more is now required of a member in the church than of a gentleman outside, and it is rather more popular to be in the church than otherwise,) and we have more schools and colleges; but we ought to recognize that "knowledge is power" for evil as well as good. And, if he be sanctified by the Holy Spirit, it is better to do more harm than good. And often is the little learning that is acquired at the expense of spirituality. Not necessarily so; but too often is the greatest success in saving souls been by men, who depended more upon the Holy Spirit than upon their learning outside of the Bible. Learning, baptized with the Holy Spirit, is good and to be desired; but of the spirit is infinitely the better asset in saving souls. As what learning some of the "theologues" get would seem to be at the expense of spirituality would it not be better to have only few ecclesiastical champions to the Goliaths of infidelity and error, and let them get along the best they can, preserving their spirituality through their intellectual combats? Aod let rank and file generally be content with a good common education, add to a full stock of good common sense with a heart full of the Holy Spirit, give aid and comfort and success.

To some in the pews it is best, sickening sometimes to witness vain, inglorious attempts at display of the pulpit, without any unpalatable whatever of concern for immortal souls that might be saved by the simplicity of the gospel. But, on the other hand, it is like the dew of heaven, which every expression of the messenger of God's heaven-lit countenance, soul-stirring words and his earnest actions are all full of love for God and man, and show that his one all-absorbing desire is the welfare and salvation of souls. One such preacher is worth all the pedants that afflict the world.

The following letter has been received by the American Institute of Christian Philosophy from a distinguished East Indian scholar, Bala Chandra Beze, with the request that it be inserted in this journal:

K. L. L. N. Y., August, 1884.

While listening to the argument ably brought forward by Dr. Deems, his annual address at the Summer School of Christian Philosophy, to the forth the prosperous condition of religion in this and other Christian lands, I could not but feel that if discourse was published and circulated among educated natives in India, would do good, as these young men are being brought by gross misrepresentations to the erroneous belief that Christianity is dying in Christian lands. When his address was over I stood up to state my convictions and requested the Institute to arrange to have a printed tract in Indian, as well as in English, other select papers read under auspices of the Institute. As the tract cannot do so for want of language to solicit, in behalf of my countrymen, subscriptions and donations fitted to raise up the spiritual fund, such as may ensure the circulation of the tract, as well as in Christian lands, of the very valuable literature which is growing up under the auspices of the American Institute of Christian Philosophy.

RAM CHANDRA BEZE.

In response to this call more than sixty dollars have been contributed. Other subscriptions may be sent to this office; or, to Charles M. Davis, secretary of the Institute, 4 Wall Place, New York.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. O. HURRICUTT.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1884.

$748.

At the Lake Camp Meeting, on Tuesday, of last week, a Centenary service was held and a collection lifted amounting to $348. The editor had the privilege of preaching the sermon, and President Rash, of Centenary College called for the cash. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Cammack, reported that Centenary offerings had been previously made amounting to $230, making a total of $748 thus far.

$260!

Centenary day was observed at Edwards, Miss., last Sunday. The editor had the pleasure of being present and lifting the collection amounting to $260. This is but the beginning of Centenary interest in that charge.

In a private note to the editor Bishop Keener thus speaks of the death of his honored colleague: "We are just in receipt of the news of the death of Bishop Pierce, the chief of Israel and the horseman thereof! May his mantle fall on some of the noble spirits who by faith are watching his ascent! Our people die well. He nearly turned a dying chamber into a love-feast. The Lord gave you and me such an exit—not of the bosom of our family into the bosom of our Lord!

Let the old give place for the young. Rats are made by the wheels running long in one track. Church officers get rusty sometimes. The young need to feel responsibility in order to the latest development and usefulness, and the older a change of place. If you have efficient, promising young men, give them a chance for evolution, even at the expense of a little innovation. Keep enough of the old officers in for conservatism, but call into ranks a sufficiency of fresh blood for aggression.

One of our exchanges states that bereft Ingersoll intends to give his whole time and talents to the overthrow of Christianity. He has joined company with a wonderful array of famous names—Pharaoh, Jeroboam, Nebuchadnezzar, Herod, Nero, Caligula, Porphyry, Julian, Voltaire, Volney and Tom Paine. These men—each in his turn—have utterly destroyed the religion of Christ from the earth. And now comes Ingersoll to beat it to pieces again and scatter its dust to the winds. Psalm xxxvii, 12, 13.

The proposition to close the gates of the Cotton Centennial Exposition on Sunday is receiving earnest advocacy from the religious press North and South. We beg the management to seriously consider these expressions before a final decision is reached. The Arkansas Methodist says:

Rev. C. B. Galloway, the accomplished editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, is writing some splendid articles against opening the New Orleans Exposition on Sunday. You are right, doctor, and stand to your colors.

And thus speaks the Raleigh Christian Advocate:

And now it is a contest as to whether the gates of the New Orleans Exposition shall be opened on Sunday. It will be a shame if this question is not decided in favor of the observance of the Sabbath. We should think that lottery lottery would be as much as New Orleans can well stand, without adding to its shame.

A question of practical moment must now be considered by pastors—how best to develop and train young converts? Revival fires are burning all along the line, and conversions are counted by hundreds every week. To secure this gracious result there was much groaning in spirit and patient waiting upon the Lord. But, "after the revival," is hardly less important than before the Pentecost. The training of the new convert is only second in far-reaching influence to the work of regeneration itself. They must be put into ranks at once. Service is necessary to growth in grace and knowledge. We know of the doctrine by doing the will of God. Organize prayer-meetings, class-meetings, Bible classes for weekly study—anything to give exercise to their young spiritual bones and therefore will beget indolence, which in turn will beget spiritual deadness. Backsliders are simply full-grown, do-nothing converts. That is the ideal church in which every member finds something to do.

Death of Bishop Pierce.

For the second time in this year of 1884 we are called upon to chronicle the death of one of our chief pastors. Elevated to the episcopate at the same General Conference in 1853, and consecrated to the high office the same day, Bishops Kavanaugh and Pierce have been summoned to their reward the same year. The one survived to pronounce an eloquent eulogy upon the life and labors of his honored colleague, and now, after a few months of further toil, has joined him in the general assembly and church of the first born. United by a common purpose and brotherhood of responsibility in life, they were not long separate in death. George Foster Pierce was born in Green county, Ga., February 3, 1811, and died at his residence, "Sunshine," in Sparta, Ga., September 3, 1884. Thus in the seventy-third year of his age, the fifty-third of his ministry and the thirtieth of his episcopate, a great man has fallen in our Israel.

Bishop Pierce was in every respect a great man. He combined harmoniously the rare gifts of the true orator with the poise and presence of an ecclesiastical statesman. After Bishop Bascom, he stood first among the masterful orators of the Southern Methodist pulpit, while he had few equals as a distinguished leader and wise administrator. All the circumstances of his life were favorable to the development of a great character, and a Methodist preacher of the finest type. A son of Dr. Lovick Pierce, one of the mighty and historic men of American Methodism, from whom and his no less remarkable mother he received a rich mental and moral inheritance; born in the itinerancy, and trained to its varied phases and vast responsibilities, he was eminently fitted for heroic leadership. Brilliant, ready in the acquisition of knowledge, genial in manner and majestic in manly beauty, he was early marked for a place of distinction. At eighteen years of age he graduated with honor from Franklin College, and began at once the study of law. But God designed him for a nobler work. Powerfully converted, and recognizing distinctly his call to the gospel ministry, he surrendered his cherished plans and prospects in the legal profession and entered upon his life-work with a zeal and consecration that never suffered abatement or intermission to the hour of his triumphant death. He was admitted into the Georgia Conference in 1830, and appointed the second year to Augusta as junior preacher with Dr. James O. Andrew. Then began an intimate friendship between these historic men that ripened with years, was arrested only by death, but which has been reunited in the skies. The young preacher rapidly rose to distinction. Soon his fame was in all the churches. Everywhere his pulpit ministrations were in eager demand, while the whole State rang with the story of his brilliant eloquence. When the Wesleyan Female College, at Macon, Ga., was established—that mother of colleges for the higher education of young women—he became its first president, and adorned that position until 1839, when he was summoned to the presidency of Emory College. There he displayed conspicuous executive ability and rejoiced in an administration of exceptional prosperity. In 1851, at the General Conference, in Columbus, Ga., he was elected to the episcopacy together with Bishops Early and Kavanaugh. To this high office he brought all his great powers in the splendor of their maturity and consecrated them to a single divine aim. And for thirty eventful years, in labors abundant and triumphant, he vindicated the wisdom of that selection.

With this brief outline of the epochal facts in the Bishop's career, let us study the salient points and characteristics that gave him greatness. They are worthy of all emulation. What gave him distinction will make us all useful.

Bishop Pierce was profoundly religious. His conversion was clear and powerful, his experience rich and joyous, and his call to the ministry distinct and irresistible. He preached not a Christ of theory or dogma, but a living, conscious presence and power. The great cardinal doctrines that he expounded with such wondrous success to the vast multitudes that crowded to his brilliant ministry, by the mysterious alchemy of grace, were transmuted into his own being. Out of a full heart he talked of a known and felt Christ. And no leader in our Israel ever urged more constantly and lovingly upon the ministry the importance of personal consecration. Careful and prayerful to keep his own experience warm and bright, he never sank the Christian in the preacher. Hence his preaching had the glow and power of intimate personal communion with his Lord. His ministry was not official or perfunctory, but quivered with a consciousness of the Divine presence.

Bishop Pierce was distinctly Methodist in his convictions. With a broad, catholic spirit that could grasp with cordial, fraternal hand every true lover of the Lord Jesus, he loyally and lovingly embraced Methodism in its genius, creed and polity without reservation or modification. Denominational, without sectarianism; liberal, though not latitudinarian, he was intensely devoted to every feature of his church. Jealous of her purity, careful for her integrity in doctrine, polity and administration, zealous for her evangelic spirit, he had no patience with earping critics or half-hearted members. Theological adventures and ecclesiastical tinkers found in him neither advocate nor apologist. Re-joining in the heroic history of the church, he believed that the success of the future depended upon adherence to the spirit and methods of the past. And in him we had a true incarnation of Methodism in the days of the fathers.

Bishop Pierce was singularly consecrated to his one work. When he yielded to the Divine call and entered the ministry there was no reservation. Every faculty, energy, gift, purpose and ambition were laid upon the altar. And with unwearied diligence, not sparing his own strength or consulting ease or interest, he labored unto the end. Wherever the church called he went at whatever sacrifice of time, means or comfort. Indeed, we can but feel that years would have been added to his earthly life had not the zeal of the Lord's house consumed him. When disease began its harrows upon his vigorous constitution, and that majestic, manly form—a very Apollo Belvedere—gave signs of fading, brethren interceded and endeavored to dissuade him from excessive labor, but to no purpose. An European tour and the care of a distinguished French physician were offered him by a life-long friend, but the labors of his ministry he was unwilling to intermit. As Bishop Bascom once wrote to a brother minister who contemplated leaving the itinerancy and entering the legal profession, Bishop Pierce said in effect all through life: "I am resolved to have no client but Him who at first employed me to plead the great cause of human salvation; and I know my fee will be certain and large." At the last meeting of the College of Bishops he insisted upon taking full work, and in all the sessions of the Board of Missions he gave careful attention to every matter of business. Only two weeks before death he preached a dedication sermon in a Georgia village with much of the fire and power of his younger years.

In the episcopal office Bishop Pierce displayed eminent gifts as an administrator. He was cautious, considerate, conservative, a safe dispenser of character, and held to discipline clearly apprehended duty. Unaffected and unambitious, there was no air of prerogative in manner or administration. The humblest had as ready access to his ear and heart as the most distinguished. It is probable that the Bishop displayed on occasions an excessive conservatism. Some of the more important changes in our Discipline he accepted with grave reluctance. Indeed, he was rather impatient of any modifications of the historic old order of things. Instrumental music in churches, special theological instruction, the extension of the pastoral term, etc., did not find in him either advocate or apologist. But in the skillful handling of our itinerant army and in the multifarious duties of his high office Bishop Pierce was pre-eminent, and his name will have a shining place in the history of his time.

But, above all, Bishop Pierce was a great preacher. He had all the elements of the masterful orator—a magnificent physique, graceful movement, an eagle eye, an exuberant imagination, a voice of marvelous tone and volume, intense enthusiasm, ready utterance and perfect equipose. His very appearance would attract attention among kings and nobles. In the strength of his years he was a rare specimen of manly beauty. His voice, full, flexible and mellow, he commanded with the orator's magic skill. At times it was soft and sweet as "an angel's lute," and then again in impassioned denunciation it was like "articulate thunder." Many of his pulpit efforts partook of the marvelous, the conscious of the indelible and often kindled the Christian's faith into unexpressed rapture. In the memorable General Conference of 1844, although quite a young man, he was a prominent and popular debater. And at a Bible meeting in New York, during that session, he delivered an address that fixed his fame as an almost peerless orator. He had the rare gift of clear, lucid and convincing statement. Often epigrammatic, many of his striking sayings have become the traditions of his early ministry. What Bishop Simpson was to the pulpit of the Church, North, Bishop Pierce was to our Southern Methodism.

The last hours of the Bishop were radiant with the glory of heaven. Shortly after he passed away Dr. Haygood telegraphed as follows: "Conscious to the last, and in perfect peace, Bishop Pierce died at Sunshine, his home, at 9.15 this morning." His last words were, "Rest, peace and happiness forevermore."

In the great State of Georgia almost every home is in mourning, for all people, without regard to creed, party or color, were proud of the genius of Georgia's most gifted son. A church of nearly one million members honors his memory and will sorely treasure his virtues. The funeral services were held on Friday, the 4th instant, in the court-house at Sparta, no church in the village being sufficiently large to accommodate the immense congregation. Dr. Haygood preached the sermon, and Dr. McFerrin delivered an address. Telegrams were read from Dr. Talnage, of Brooklyn, Gen. Robert Toombs, and others. Surely a prince in our Israel has fallen. May all our people die as well!

Editorial Correspondence.

To meet an engagement at the Homer District Conference we left home on Thursday morning, the twenty-eighth ultimo. At Vicksburg President Rash, of Centenary College, was on hand, according to appointment, and we were soon steaming toward Arcadia. Unlike our recent trip over that road to Downsville, the ride to Monroe was not spent in observing the crops and country, but in together reading and discussing Dr. Ashbury Lowry's recent work, "The Possibilities of Grace." It is a volume on holiness and in advocacy of the "second blessing" theory. The style is attractive and illustrative, but not always clear in definition or satisfactory in argument. While helpful to holier living, the volume is not likely to reconcile the two schools of thought on that much discussed subject. Some passages we marked for further consideration.

From Choudrant to Arcadia the country was new to us and full of interest. Arcadia, the destined metropolis of North Louisiana, as its friends echo, is the city of a day. Substantial buildings have gone up like magic, and what was a barren hillside in January is now a thriving, busy town of five hundred inhabitants. We reached Arcadia at half-past six o'clock, and found Bro. Billingsley waiting to extend the hospitality of his bright new parsonage and accompany us to his home, next day, the seat of the District Conference. From Arcadia to Lisbon is twenty-one miles; but the roads were excellent, and Bro. Dillard drove as sprightly and pretty a span of mules as ever inspired the voluble eloquence of the typical Kentuckian. That is a charming, prosperous country. Nowhere have we seen better cultivated and more neatly kept farms; the corn crops especially were abundant. Should the cotton fail, there will be seed to the sower and bread for the eater.

Lisbon was reached about two o'clock, just after a sumptuous "dinner-on-the-ground" had been served. But again Scripture history found illustration, for the gleaming seemed to be greater than the village. Lisbon is a pretty village, and is not the place of which it was written more than a century ago:

"That was the year when Lisbon town Saw the earth open and gulp her down."

No earthquake has ever disturbed that quiet retreat; but in the neighborhood we saw the track of a destructive cyclone.

We found the District Conference well advanced with its business, with Presiding Elder Cornett in the chair, and Bro. J. W. Medlock at the secretary's table. There was a full attendance of pastors and a large attendance of lay delegates. The reports had all been made before our arrival; hence our inability to make note of the general state of the church. Some facts we ascertained, however, which indicate a cheerful outlook for Methodism in the district. At least eleven new churches are in process of erection, while others are undergoing substantial repairs. There is a cozy, new parsonage at Arcadia, built this year, with two or three others completed last year.

Among visitors from abroad we were glad to see our friends from Baton Rouge, Hon. W. H. Goodale and wife. They have spent some weeks in North Louisiana, laboring in the temperance cause with signal success.

Rev. J. A. Parker offered a resolution, requesting the Board of Management of the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition to close the gates of the Exposition on the Sabbath, which was passed by a rising vote—the entire congregation voting in the request. The report of the Committee on the State of the Church, prepared by Rev. J. H. Stone, elicited profitable discussion. We feel quite sure that it will result in more vigorous and direct methods to promote the revival spirit. We are greatly indebted to the Conference for a ringing report on religious literature and a hearty endorsement of this Advocate. The privilege accorded us of addressing the large congregation present in its behalf was appreciated and improved. There was no special report on education, pledging special fidelity to Centenary College and Mansfield Female College. President Rash represented the former in an effective address, and Rev. J. A. Parker, the latter. Altogether, the Conference was a delightful occasion. The preaching was in the true spirit of the Master, and the singing worthy the days when we were denominated "the hymn-singing Methodists."

The outlook for our church in that excellent territory is most hopeful. If liberal measures are devised and pushed with vigor, the days of greater triumph will soon begin to dawn. With the completion of the railroad the country will greatly develop, and with it Methodism must advance, or other sister churches will move to the front. The next Conference will be held at Ruston. Delegates to the Annual Conference were elected as follows: A. T. Nelson, J. W. Dawson, Rev. J. L. Williams, W. P. Theus. Alternates: J. H. Barnham, C. T. Martin.

A Centenary service was held at eleven o'clock, on Sunday, and this editor had the privilege of discarding to the immense multitude. The collection amounted to $1,324.70, of which sum $1,055 was contributed to the endowment fund of Centenary College. A grand offering! It places Homer district in the very front rank for Centenary spirit and congressional liberality.

Our home was with Bro. Boykin, a prosperous merchant of Lisbon, to whom and his accomplished wife we are indebted for distinguished hospitality. To meet another engagement President Rash, Bro. Billingsley and the writer, in charge of the genial and accommodating Bro. Dillard, returned to Arcadia, on Sunday night, where we found a welcome to the beautiful home of Bro. W. P. Theus. Among the pleasant episodes not soon to be forgotten was a list of thirty subscribers and a strong sum of eleven cents.

Another Feast of Tabernacles.

Returning from the Homer District Conference we left Arcadia, La., at 8:30 o'clock on Monday morning for Vicksburg. All along the new line of railway the local travel quite surprised us. At each station passengers were getting off or on, taxing to fullness the capacity of two or three coaches. Without let or hindrance we reached Vicksburg about six o'clock in the afternoon in good condition to enjoy a toothsome supper at the Pacific House. The time intervening until eight o'clock was enlivened by a visit from Dr. C. G. Andrews, with whom we talked of Advocate, college, congressional and local church interests. Soon we were off for the Lake Camp Ground, about midway between Jackson and Meridian. Like was reached at two p. m. Some hours of delightful rest and a delicious breakfast at the hotel where special and appreciated congratulations were extended, and conversations were in readiness to take us out to the camp, about two and a half miles distant. Rev. A. B. Nicolson was in the pulpit conducting the first morning service. We have heard our friend on many occasions, but never in so felicitous, pathetic and, at times powerful, discourse as he delivered at that hour. Every Christian heart was touched, and the entire meeting was full of spiritual fragrance and fervor. At eleven o'clock, by appointment, the Centenary service was held. A large congregation filled the spacious tabernacle and gave diligent heed to the lengthy discourse. When concluded, president Rash, of Centenary College, took the stand and lifted the collection, amounting to $348. A gratifying and commendable offering. The active young pastor, Rev. W. W. Cammack, had already received Centenary donations aggregating $230, which added to the other makes a good showing for Lake camp.

The camp-meeting was pronounced in all respects the best ever held at that place. Presiding elder Williams and pastor Cammack conducted the pulpit and altar services with tact and zeal. They were aided by quite a number of brethren, whose ministrations were of a high order and fruitful of gracious results. There were fourteen accessions to the Church and about thirty conversions. That is a beautiful encouragement and will in future be to the east of the Conference what Crystal Springs is to the west, and the shore to the south. Several new and comfortable tents have been erected, and the place generally and generously improved.

From Bro. Williams we learned that the Brandon district is enjoying good revivals, and that an advanced movement is felt in almost every pastorate. Four new parsonages are in process of erection, and several churches will be dedicated this Centenary year.

To Bros. W. M. Thornton and N. Harris we are specially indebted for kind attentions and charming hospitality. Such elaborate and elegant camp meeting tables we have scarcely found anywhere or when. They believe in feelinging the weary body and the hungry soul. The meeting closed on Wednesday morning, and all returned home with sweet memories of a blessed season of divine refreshment. We found scores of Advocate friends, and added quite a number to our list of subscribers.

Praying Well.

At a District Conference, a brother reported that he had several members in his charge who "can pray well." His remark suggested inquiry. What do we mean by praying well? and some reflections thereon. No doubt the desire to pray well has been a snare to many souls. Some, delighting in a free and pleasant flow of words, seek fluency, and some aspire even after eloquence in prayer. Yet there could scarcely be a greater imprudence than to attempt anything like eloquence in a prayer addressed to God. God no more to be pleased by our fastidious speaking than by our unassuming words. Words in prayer should be both few and simple. A rapid and rapid utterance may become a source of weakness in this most solemn of all forms of speech. It is the swift and easy running stream, but that which is checked and dammed here and there that overflows its banks and waters the adjacent lands. Hence the popular preacher is often not the chosen leader of the congregation in prayer. The flippant familiarity with which some preachers address God is something to a really reverent soul. Times too, information is offered. God in prayer which sounds like the contents of a newspaper, the petting of a soul in want. The ability to talk well therefore, while so useful in other forms of speech, may be a positive disqualification where a burned heart, rather than a ready tongue, is the thing to be desired. The better the qualifications needed with a battery, the less accumulation of electric force.

On the other hand, many new pray in public or even in their families, because they think they are not proper words. If they thought they could pray well, they would try; but they shrink from undertaking the duty, rather from the fear of the criticism of man, than from the doubt of the approval of God. So should remember the public prayer, "God be merciful to me, sinner," and Paul's declaration, "God rather speak five words with understanding * * * than thousands of words in an unknown tongue." Many prayers, it is to be feared, are as far as the contents of promised grace are concerned, an unknown tongue. The prayer, humble faith, however bestial, halting in its utterance, is the prayer that prevails with God. The willing spirit is too earnestly engaged for many words. It holds to God and will not let him go, and pleases not with the eloquence of the tongue, but with the power of importunate faith. In the stenography of heaven many of the longest prayers of earth will be short, and some of the shortest will be longest and strongest, their prevalence with God. Prayers best who feels most his need of grace. Whoever prays honestly prays well. It is the heart of God that touches the heart of his fellow, and moves the arm of God. If we can only forget men and think of God we can pray, and pray anywhere. It is the fear of man that bringeth a snare and damns the tongue of God's children. I have known several devout men who stammered distressingly in conversation, and yet prayed with a regularity of utterance that melted the hearts of all hearers. If we filled with the Spirit, the Spirit would give us utterance to thank and honor God. It is a sad thing that many who talk readily on all

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!
CATARRH, BRONCHITIS AND CONSUMPTION CURED.

ONE THING IT DOES—IT CURES!

It is a Mechanical Pillow that is used the same as one's ordinary bed-pillow. It contains reservoirs for volatile medicinal vapors, and is used in the following manner: The patient lies on the pillow, and inhales the vapors through the nostrils. The vapors are so arranged that they enter the lungs, and are so distributed that they reach every part of the respiratory system. The vapors are so arranged that they enter the lungs, and are so distributed that they reach every part of the respiratory system. The vapors are so arranged that they enter the lungs, and are so distributed that they reach every part of the respiratory system.

CATARRH.
BRONCHITIS.
CONSUMPTION.

HERE IS ONE TESTIMONY OUT OF HUNDREDS.
A CURE OF THE WORST TYPE OF CATARRH.

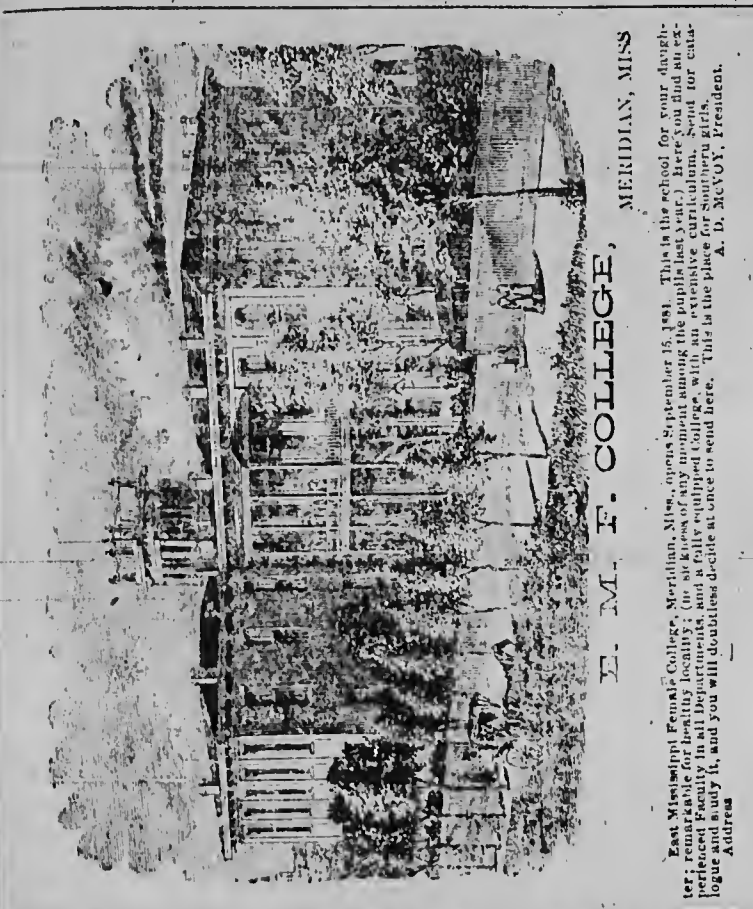

Send for Circulars and Testimony to
THE PILLOW-INHALER CO., 1520 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

D. H. HOLMES,

155 CANAL STREET,
15 Bourbon Street, - - - 15 Dauphine Street.
NEW ORLEANS.

DRY GOODS

is the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will be Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.
Samples Sent Throughout the Country, and Orders Promptly Executed.
The BONNET and DRESS-MAKING Departments are placed in most SKILFUL HANDS.

WESLEYAN FEMALE INSTITUTE,
STAUNTON, VIRGINIA.

Open for 35th Annual Session September 22, 1884. One of the First Schools for Young Ladies in the United States. Thorough in all departments. Buildings and surroundings beautiful. Climate and healthful. Terms moderate. For particulars, apply to the President, Mrs. W. A. Harris, D. D., President, Staunton, Virginia.

GULLETT'S IMPROVED

THE "MAGNOLIA" GIN.

The most highly Improved Gin made. DOES NOT BREAK THE ROLL in ginning, nor will it choke under the severest test. Gins Fast, cleans the seed perfectly and produces a Superior Sample of lint. Claimed by those who use it to bring in any market one-eighth to one-half cent per pound more than when same cotton is ginned by other gins.

For further information, address
GULLETT GIN Co.,
Amite, Louisiana.

Christian Advocate.

Obituaries.

GRIFFING—DANIEL M. GRIFFING, was born February 10, 1818, and died June 2, 1884. He was born in the city of God in early life, and joined the Church when about ten years of age. At the age of eighteen he felt the conviction that he was called to preach the Gospel, and he was ordained a minister of the Gospel. He was a devoted and successful minister of the Gospel, and he was a devoted and successful minister of the Gospel. He was a devoted and successful minister of the Gospel, and he was a devoted and successful minister of the Gospel.

COLE—MRS. JULIA WATSON COLE, daughter of Robert C. and W. H. Watson, was born in Windsor, North Carolina, December 28, 1822, and died at the residence of her son-in-law, Dr. J. Z. Crayon at Chunchula, Ala., June 21, 1884, in the sixty-seventh year of her age. Within the above dates is comprised a life of rare moral beauty, of integrity of purpose, and devotedness to the great law of love. She did not defer until middle or old age that most important of all human concerns, the salvation of the soul. In the prime and vigor of young womanhood, she turned her back upon the vanities and frivolities of life, and sought and found a Saviour's forgiving love. At the age of eighteen she was converted to God, and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church at Woodville, North Carolina, and ever after adorned her profession by a consistent Christian life. Church obligation with her was matter of principle, and the solemn vows she took upon herself at her altar she held as sacred. She did not set up her own private opinion against the rules of the Church, but regarded these as her best guide in a Christian life. Self-abnegation, disinterested love, and a desire to make others happy, were the predominant traits of her character. Kind in her disposition, with a mind of unusual strength she guided her household with discretion, and her children arose up and called her blessed. During the last few weeks of her life, the topic of her conversation was the Church and its ministers; she talked of going to heaven with as much calmness and serenity as she would of going to bed, and requested that the "Land of Beulah" be sung at her grave. The writer of this will never forget the last time he saw her, while bidding her adieu and holding her hand in his, with tears in her eyes and a voice tremulous with emotion she said: "If we meet no more on earth, we will meet in heaven." We little knew then that this was precisely what would happen. On the night of the 20th of June she retired as usual. That night verily her tomb was plucked in the "Land of Beulah." She made all good bye, went to sleep, and in the stillness of the early morn, the silent messenger came, and she awoke in heaven.

MCDOWELL—WM. FRANCIS McDOWELL, was born on the 5th of February, 1821, in Amite county, Miss. In 1841 with his parents he moved to Madison county, Miss. After five years the family returned to Amite county, where he remained until his death. At the age of 27 Bro. McDowell was married to Esther E. Brown on the 31 of February, 1848. This proved to be a happy union of hearts and lives. There were born to them twelve children. Six of them had crossed the flood before him. Bro. McDowell was stricken with paralysis and lingered in his painful mesochs about three months, until death came to his relief, which occurred on the 29th of June, 1884. Although he suffered much during his illness, he endured with an uncomplaining patience, and with entire resignation to the Divine will, and the tender unwearied attentions of his loved ones, and the continued kindness of neighbors and friends, prompted the grateful remark: "That it was almost a luxury to be sick." When able to talk he delighted to speak of the goodness of God and point his loved ones to heaven. His heart was so tender and loving that notes of the Whirl-Poor-Will falling upon his ear, caused him, in fearful gratitude, to praise God who had taught the night-bird his song. His mind was much exercised for the spiritual welfare of brothers and all his loved ones. The day before his death he asked his daughter to sing "Nearer my God to Thee" and while it was being sung whispered "I am almost there." Just before he departed he beckoned his hand and whispered "Good bye." In the early part of his sickness the writer held a prayer-meeting at the house, and full of joy and rejoiced to see his pastor, "I have a stronger hold on my Saviour to-night than I have ever had. Bro. McDowell joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at Adams Church, and professed conversion some five or six years ago. He was highly esteemed by all his fellow-citizens and beloved by his brethren, and held with clinging affection by the loved ones at home who hope to retain him "in the beautiful home of the south," by and by.

THOMPSON—DIED in Calcasieu parish, La., July 5, 1884, Mrs. ELIZABETH THOMPSON, whose maiden name was TURNER. Sister Thompson was born near the city of Mobile, Ala., October 16, 1813, from whence she moved with her parents to Jackson county, Miss. She was married to Mr. Simon Thompson in 1831, with whom she lived happily until her death. About the year 1870 she attached herself to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which she lived a consistent Christian until summoned from this world of sickness and sorrow to that of rest, where parting will be no more. The writer has been acquainted with the deceased for some time, and is glad to say that he ever found her to be a faithful Christian. Her house was always a home for the weary traveler. She always manifested a great deal of kindness and hospitality toward the ministers of Christ. She remained single after her marriage in the State of Mississippi, and from thence she moved with her family to the State of Louisiana, and settled in Calcasieu parish in 1870, where she again attached herself to the Church by letter. She was a true and devoted wife, and before her spirit left this world that she was ready and willing to go if it was God's will. She leaves a husband and nine children and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. May the Lord incline their hearts to imitate her example. Thus only by one God's children are gathering home.

POWELL—MRS. MILDRED R. POWELL, was born in St. Helena parish, La., April 23, 1822, and departed this life June 21, 1884, at her home in St. Helena parish, La. Her maiden name was Womack. She was married to Joseph Powell in 1840, and was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church at a camp meeting near St. Helena, Miss., in October 1845. Sister Powell was one of our best women, a kind neighbor, a true friend, an affectionate companion, a loving mother and a devoted Christian. No one knew her but to love her. Strong in her convictions of Christian duty, earnest and zealous in the discharge of the same. No one ever doubted the honesty and sincerity of her religion. She was well testified of. Her life was a blessing to her family and all who knew her. Her faith in the all-sufficiency of Jesus her Saviour was truly beautiful. She loved very dearly the church of her choice, and took a deep interest in its welfare. She talked freely of her approaching death, and expressed herself as ready and willing to depart and be with Christ. She told her children not to grieve for her, but to meet her in heaven, where there would be no more sickness and death. She calmly and sweetly fell asleep in the arms of a loving Saviour. She lived well and died well.

TEER—MRS. M. E. TEER, daughter of Mr. D. J. and Susan Dupree and wife of F. M. Teer, died November 18, 1883. She was converted and joined the Baptist Church in early life, and continued a faithful member till death. She was very liberal, and loved all good Christians. Sister Teer adorned a Christian profession by an upright life. Her domestic virtues were beautifully displayed; she made home happy for husband and children and friends. Neatness, comfort and skill were manifested everywhere. She had peace with God, and knew it and possessed she did know it. She was a kind and obedient daughter, a gentle sister and true wife and mother. She was a sufferer for many months, the marks of pain were often visible on her sweet countenance, but her courteous spirit always greeted her friends with a smile. She felt concerned greatly for those she left behind, and especially her husband. Dear friends your loved one has gone before us to heaven. She awaits us there, and may we so live that her waiting shall not be in vain but may meet her in happy meeting on that beautiful shore.

N. N. CARRILL, L. D.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

The country is flooded with highly chemicalled and very dangerous soaps, the result of the fierce competition among soap makers, and the average housekeeper can not determine which is the safest to use. Prof. Schaeffer, of Cornell University, says, "My analysis shows: the Ivory Soap to be a remarkably good article, and by actual trial in my house it has proven itself to be an excellent laundry soap."

WANTED A WOMAN of sense and energy for our business in New Orleans. Address: GAY BROS. & CO., 14 BARCLAY ST., New York.

Facts and Reasons.

Effects Produced by AYER'S SARSAPARILLA and by Nothing Else so Perfectly.

It strengthens and invigorates sufferers from emaciation, languor, weakness, and mental depression. It has an almost magical effect in curing eruptive and cutaneous disorders. It eradicates from the blood the taint of that terribly destructive disease, Hereditary Syphilis. It purifies the system, the beneficial poison of Mercury, which is as noxious as that of Syphilis. It purifies and regenerates the life-current, purged by the corruption of cutaneous disease. It stimulates the secretory organs, effects the removal of all impurities from the blood and makes it new, rich, and pure. It restores health to sufferers from thin blood and impaired vitality.

Advantages that AYER'S SARSAPARILLA Possesses over all Others.

It is composed of the most efficacious alterative, diuretic, and tonic drugs known in pharmacy, among which are the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock, Siliqua, and the Lulidies of Potass and Iron. It is a highly concentrated medicine, scientifically and honestly compounded so as to secure to it the highest degree of purity and perfect uniformity. It has received the hearty endorsement of the leading men in the medical profession, who recognize it as a standard pharmaceutical preparation, and prescribe it in their practice. It contains no poisonous minerals or other dangerous drugs, the use of which for temporary effect in the many eruptions and cheap mixtures sold as alteratives, produces effects on the system often worse than the diseases they are offered to cure. It costs no more than any other, but would still be the cheapest blood-purifying medicine in the world, even were its price three times greater, since it is the only one that does "real, lasting good."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., (Analytical Chemists) LOWELL, MASS.
Sold by all Druggists: Price $1.00, six bottles for $5.

A. BALDWIN & Co.

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC HARDWARE,
CUTLERY, GUNS, PISTOLS, IRON, NAILS, SHEET AND BOLT COFFER, Steel Barb Fence Wire and Agricultural Implements
A. BALDWIN & Co., 24 Canal St., New Orleans, La.

THESE GLASSES ARE CHEMICALLY TREATED IN THE PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE, AND possess the property of keeping your eyes in good condition, as when first you use them. They have been carefully examined and analyzed by American and European scientists, who claim that the MEDICATED GLASSES have no equal in the world. They are used in the following cases:
1. The eyes become inflamed by their use for the following reasons:
2. The chemicals make the glasses hard; they retain their polish. Hence you will always see through them as bright and clear as when first you use them.
3. The chemicals keep the glasses cold, and the result is that the optic nerves always cool, doing away with any feverish sensation to the eye.
4. With these glasses you can read, write or sew all night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no discomfort or tire some sensation, which necessarily improves the eye.

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS—NONE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.
THE MEDICATED GLASSES are all stamped on the frame H. HODMAN, MEDICATED.
Dealers Supplied Wholesale at Liberal Discount.

ALL EYES SUITED. Persons residing at a distance who may wish to procure these spectacles, can send for a circular containing prices, etc., and directions for insuring a perfect fit, and have them sent by mail, by addressing

HERC. HOUSAH, CRESCENT CITY SPECTACLE COMPANY.

56 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.

WM. H. PIERSON, SUCCESSOR TO WHEELER & PIERSON

CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,
Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.
Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to 16.
6 Shirts for $9. Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.
Orders from Germany solicited, and liberal reduction made to them.
Rules for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent C. O. D.

THE SOUTHERN NORMAL SCHOOL AND BUSINESS COLLEGE

(Established in 1875.) Largest Normal School in the South. Total expense guaranteed, board, tuition, and light, furnished from and including $2.50 per week. Telegraphy, shorthand, typewriting, bookkeeping, and other business branches. Full term begins September 2nd, 1884. For catalogue and full information, send for one free. Address: W. H. PIERSON, New Orleans.

CHILDS' CATARRH

Treatment For

$500 CASH, FREE!

We offer the above amount of money and a FREE FIVE GOLD DOLLAR COUPON to the first 100 persons answering the following questions. The questions are: 1. What is the name of the medicine you use for Catarrh? 2. How long have you used it? 3. How much does it cost? 4. How many bottles do you use? 5. How many times a day do you use it? 6. How many times a week do you use it? 7. How many times a month do you use it? 8. How many times a year do you use it? 9. How many times a lifetime do you use it? 10. How many times a century do you use it? The questions are to be answered in a letter to the following address: W. H. PIERSON, New Orleans. The letter should be sent by mail, and should be received by the 1st of October, 1884. The questions are to be answered in a letter to the following address: W. H. PIERSON, New Orleans. The letter should be sent by mail, and should be received by the 1st of October, 1884.

Christian Advocate

VOL. 30.—NO. 38.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1861.

WHOLE NO. 1468

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

SENT BY THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Teachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

REV. FELIX R. HILL.

REV. CHAS. W. CAITER, D. D.

REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.

REV. W. L. C. HENNING.

REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.

REV. W. P. BARTON.

REV. J. D. CAMERON.

COMPENSATION.

The most people we ever speak
Are souls of cherub.
Life has its valleys, its valleys deep;
But round our feet the shadows creep,
To prove the sunlight near.
Between the hills those valleys sleep—
The sun-crowned hills:
And down their sides will those who seek
With hopeful spirit, brave though weak,
Find gently flowing life.

For every cloud a silver light;
God will it so.
For every vale a shining height,
A glorious morn for every night,
And birth for labor's throes.
For snow-white wings a verdant field,
A gain for loss.
For buried seed a harvest yield,
For pain a strength, a joy revealed,
A crown for every cross.
—Christian Register.

Rev. John Lane.

BY REV. H. M. BHOOTH.

Next to Dr. Drake this minister has left the most indelible impress upon my affections, as he was my presiding elder in the earlier years of my ministry when the struggle was the greatest with the overwhelming sense of the responsibilities of the work and my own inadequacy to meet them. Many a time, and once in particular, in utter despair, my charge would have been surrendered but for the kind and encouraging words of this man of God whose heart was as full of sympathy and love as ever swelled the human breast. John Lane long ranked among the leading men of the Mississippi Conference. I think he was one of the little band who were organized into the first Conference held at Foster's, on Pine Ridge, Adams County, Miss., and was prominent in the councils of the church in our Annual and General Conferences during the greater portion of his long and useful life. He was a man of sound judgment, an effective preacher of great pathos and melting tenderness. His benignant countenance always suffused with tears in his pleadings for Christ.

He was one of the most liberal and hospitable men of his day. The first Conference ever held in Vicksburg was in his house—a large mansion where the itinerant was ever a welcome guest, and many a one can testify to this truth. Bro. Lane was providentially called to the management of the Vick family, into which he married. The charge of this estate necessarily engrossed a great deal of his time, and abridged the time of devotion to his great calling. But he continued in the work until the last, and gave his great influence to the Mississippi Conference, ranking with the fathers in length of effective service and high appreciation. Bro. Lane was a most genial companion, indulging with great glee in anecdotal recital of which he had an inexhaustible store. His family relations of conjugal harmony and felicity were never surpassed. I have frequently heard him say that there never was a break in the unhindered harmony existing between himself and his life-long companion, who so recently passed away beloved and honored by her family and friends. Such was the homogeneity and uniformity of their marital relationship that a life-long felicity crowned their union. Judge Lane lived the life of the righteous, and died the death of the righteous. His death was most glorious, as also that of his youngest son coincident.

In adjoining rooms each one in ecstatic joy, with the Heaven of the blessed revealed to their rapt visions, the loved ones not knowing which would be borne first by angelic ministrations or whether both should be accompanied by the same convoy. Blessed death! Let my last end be like theirs.

I have this presented five names of the leading ministers of the Mississippi Conference—immortal names who led the hosts of our Israel in the early days of our history. There are other worthies, whose names I now hope will be perpetuated upon the historic page of their compeer, Rev. J. G. Jones—Thomas Griffin, Miles Harper, J. W. Barnes, et al., ministers and laymen, male and female, whose names "were not born to die." This contribution to Methodist history is a desideratum too long delayed, extensive of the fault in which the contribution could be made. I do not suppose that any portion of the history of our church is more rich and varied and striking in historic material.

The view of the prospective contribution of these memorials of the history of the Mississippi Conference, I bring these reminiscences to a close, a heartfelt contribution to the memory of those greatly beloved and admired by a true friend.

Sin.

BY REV. W. D. ANDERSON, D. D.

The theological world is often much excited over the nature, origin and effects of sin. If it were merely a topic of discussion, a question in metaphysics, a subject for the exhibition of skill and power of the theological athlete, we should be but comparatively little interested in it. But sin is a fearful reality, a sad existence in our world, exhibiting its power in darkened human understandings, perverted and degraded appetites, and miserable and ruined lives. Thought, emotion, purpose, effort, character, conduct, each feels its sad presence. Its presence in man, individual and in masses, is the ground of divine legislation, the reason of divine provision, the basis of divine goodness. While sin is engaged in its work of ruin and riot over prostrate bodies, destroyed souls, the attributes of Godhead in loveliest harmony provide means for man's rescue and salvation, begun in this life to be completed in God's heaven for all who comply with gospel requirements.

The inspired definition of sin is "the transgression of the law." This transgression must recognize knowledge of the law, ability, natural or acquired, to keep the law and purport in the transgression. Why must sin and glory in their shame is "the carnal mind is enmity to God." Sin is the principle not only of indifference to divine claims and religious duties and obligations, but it is antagonistic to God. It does not like to retain him ever in thought, touchless in reverent affection and holy obedience. Sin has caused the discord in the otherwise perfect harmony of divine rule. It has vitiated taste, enfeebled judgment, perverted reason, degraded the affections and demoralized the will. There is in every man, whether his theological notions, the enmity of "a love of pleasure more than God," a preference for the temporal over the spiritual, a controlling disposition, without divine help, to live for self, to live for the present, "to gratify the lusts of the eye, the lusts of the flesh, and the pride of life," rather than to deny one's self, take up our cross and follow Christ. Indeed, in matters pertaining to religion, the effort is to depreciate present religious effort and attainment, and defer to the latest possible moment the homage of the heart and the actions of the life in the service of the heavenly Father.

Sin is most insulting to God and most ruinous to man. It rejects the teachings of infinite wisdom, the warnings of divine mercy, the warnings of divine justice. It questions the wisdom that directs, the integrity that assures of direction, support and reward, and the love that presents the rich inducements to obedience. Sin is a huge insult of pigmy mortals to the eternal God. It turns aside with contempt from the cross of Christ where every attribute meets in holy work and it attempts by human merits to secure God's favor and heaven. It disregards the role of Christ's righteousness, that, in its folly, tries to patch together a robe of human merit.

Sin is inexcusable folly that would never have been exhibited but for human fall and consequent depravity of tendencies and directions. The manna twisted a crown out of straw and thinks it gold and jewels. He adorns himself with parti-colored rags and counts them insignia of royal honors.

This is but pigmy folly to the redeemed; immortal man daily approaching the judgment hour and throne, and yet living as if there were no great issue and no certain pledge before which all must appear.

Sin is a most cruel tyrant. It makes promises it never means to fulfill, and deludes the soul with hope of future good never to become present. It pretends to feed the intellect, but the food is like the apples of Sodom, and the water is salt and bitter like the Dead Sea. Sin is a spendthrift of golden opportunities never to be recalled, it results in the hopeless bankruptcy of our being.

We read with sad hearts how cruel Egyptian bondage required God's people to furnish the regular and complete "tale of brick," while the straw supply was denied. The last and the feller were everywhere busy while the cry went up to heaven. Sin required the sinner to be happy while at each step he is going farther away from God, the source of happiness; endeavors to convince the wretched and hopeless that he is supremely blest, or blames his stupidity for want of true appreciation and enjoyment.

Sin is a deadly disease, more foul and fatal than Eastern leprosy itself. It knows no cure but through the divine Physician when it denies and ridicules and despises. How fearful is sin is only seen as we attempt to count the generations who have died, or to form some, even the faintest idea of the tears and sorrows sin has produced from the cradle to the grave.

While sin is sowing the seeds of death in our mortal frame, and waving the shroud for our deathless spirit, how delightful to turn away from disease and anguish and death to the precious facts. Sin may be forgiven, its guilt washed away, its scepter broken, its presence driven from the soul. How precious the name of Jesus, given to our Christ before his birth by an angel from heaven, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." Let sin drive furiously over human fortunes and lives, his hour is limited, his race will soon be run. The Abolition Jesus reigns, and sin and death will soon be "cast into the lake." How glorious the fact that each person in the Godhead is engaged in man's rescue from sin and preparation for eternal life, for all who will accept salvation through Christ and receive and trust in the Holy Spirit as guide, comforter and sanctifier. Salvation hangs on faith "the gift of God is eternal life." Redeemed man shows the loftiest, noblest act of reason in becoming a child of God and then of heaven. The "blood of Jesus cleanseth from all sin."

—Cretaker, Kentucky.

Additional Remarks about Sabbath-School Children.

Mr. Editor: Where our children are allowed to run off from church as soon as the Sunday-school is dismissed, or their parents take them off before the eleven A. M. sermon, they soon learn to claim it as a sort of holiday privilege to be absent from that service, and as their parents seldom take them out to night preaching, they hear but little preaching, and become careless about attending the ministry of the word, and are gradually alienated from the church, and lose their membership, and they lose their souls. The positive command of God is to "train them up in the way they should go," to "bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord," and not permit them to do as they please about attending our congregational worship. If they are brought up in the doctrine and discipline of the Lord, as a general rule, they will take pleasure in the public worship of God with its interesting and heart-winning conditions. It is very discouraging to a pastor to have a majority of the lambs of his flock absent from his pulpit labors, but every encouraging to have them present to receive their needed share of gospel food. I once spent several weeks in St. Louis on business, and the first Sabbath I was requested by a suburban pastor to attend his Sabbath-school at nine A. M., and preach to his congregation at eleven A. M. I coesented with pleasure; attended, prayed with, and made a short address to a full and interesting Sabbath-school, and felt much pleasure in anticipating the privilege of preaching to them at eleven A. M., but as soon as the school was dismissed they all disappeared, and there came in a small audience of tired-looking men and women who sat very quietly and rested themselves while I was trying to preach, for I could not. The unexpected absence of the dear children took all the wind out of my sails and I was glad to get to the exordium part of the service. If I might be allowed my voice in such cases I would rather preach to the children than their parents. If I could not preach to both. If you wish to encourage your pastor be sure to let him see the faces of your children in his audience.

HAZLEHURST, Mississippi.

Letter from Norfolk, Va.

Mr. Editor: Desiring to attend the meeting of the "American Association for the Advancement of Science," The International Electrical Exposition, and of several other scientific organizations in the United States, Canada and Great Britain, which are to convene in Philadelphia this month, I concluded to start some time in advance of time that I might breathe for a few days the pure air of the "Switzerland of America," and visit once more many who are dear to me by strong ties of family and friendship. Such is the speed on the Virginia and Tennessee Air Line that, leaving Oxford after breakfast, I slept that night in Knoxville, Tenn. Here I had the great pleasure of meeting my highly-esteemed friends, Col. J. W. Gaut and family, in whose house I was most hospitably and elegantly entertained. The growth of Knoxville is wonderful. At the last census the city was reported as having about 11,000 inhabitants; a recent enumeration for school purposes shows about 25,000. Buildings are going up which, in style and massiveness, would be creditable on Chestnut street, Philadelphia. Many wholesale establishments are now doing a large and profitable business here. I am glad to report the growth, enterprise and vigor of Southern Methodism fully apace with the progress of the city. Methodism here is assuredly a warm, living force. On Sunday Dr. J. S. Kennedy, P. E., preached at eleven A. M. on the "Resurrection," a sermon that showed great research and clear thinking. At night Rev. J. A. Lyons, our assistant editor of Sunday-School Periodicals, preached incisively, entertainingly and instructively on "Prayer." In the afternoon a delightful love-feast was held by the presiding elder at which not only all the gentlemen present related briefly their experience, but eight or ten ladies told of their spiritual life. This to me was a most hopeful indication. Most of these ladies are mothers, wives of some of the wealthiest and most influential business men in the city. Their testimony thus given, their example thus shown, and the strength of the inner life which makes this exhibit is a mighty agency for good in the church of God. They will not only lead their own children to Christ, but will provoke multitudes of others to love and good works. Such women are worthy of praise and honorable mention. Such as Paul made of the noble women whose fidelity and service aided him. May their example be imitated and their zeal be contagious!

In company with Col. Gaut, my accomplished daughter, Miss Mary, and his thoughtful niece, Miss McAllister, I rode on the morning of Saturday to Lynch's View, a point four miles west of the city, where the State is building a new asylum for the insane. It is a melancholy, touching fact that in Tennessee there are now six of these unfortunate persons awaiting admission to this hospital, and the one at Nashville is filled. The site chosen for this institution is beautiful, commanding, felicitous. It rests upon a lofty elevation, which slopes gracefully in every direction. The sword is the richest blue grass, and the forest trees with their luxuriant foliage dot the lawn with inviting shade. On the plain below, the Tennessee river flows westward until it reaches the base of this eminence, when it turns directly towards the South and extends itself for a great distance in full view of the building, while still further to the South the Clinch and Smoky Mountains in parallel ranges lift their blue lines in massive majesty. It is a scene of beauty and grandeur well worthy of the most skillful pencil and brush, and reminded me of the river Nekar and the mountains and the black forest as seen from Heidelberg, Germany. The brick of which this building is being constructed is very peculiar. The clay has in it a large per cent. of iron and a good deal of lime. When it is burnt the color is that of dark cast iron and has much of the lustre of iron. When laid and painted the effect of these brick on the eye is peculiar and pleasant. Mr. Rees Jones is the contractor. He is very polite in answering enquiries. The capacity of this building, when completed, is 500. It will have all the modern appliances of art and science. In the afternoon Miss Gaut, John W. Paulett, Esq., the skillful and successful agent of Miss E. H. Butler & Co.'s school books, and the entertaining gentleman and myself rode to "Island Home," two miles east of the city and on the Tennessee river. This is the place where Col. Perz Dickerson has established his magnificent farm to show to Tennesseans and others what can be accomplished by the highest, most liberal cultivation and fertilization, the freest use of costly agricultural implements of all kinds and the raising of the best breeds of cattle for beef and for milk. It is beautiful beyond description. The walks and drives are laid out with the taste of a landscape gardener and the skill of an engineer. The dwelling, the artistically constructed barns, the beds of exquisitely arranged flowers, the lawns of grass and groves of trees, with hundreds of fat cattle grazing lazily, extensive conservatories for flowers and tender plants, huge stacks of hay and masses of straw impress one with the idea that this is an assemblage of elegant villas to which wealthy gentlemen in the city retire with their families to spend the summer. The crops here are phenomenally heavy. Col. Dickerson has sold some beef cattle as high as $250 a head. He is an old gentleman man of means, who is thus acting the philosopher and benefactor. The importance of Knoxville as a railroad and commercial centre has drawn to it many men of eminence in their respective callings, among whom may be justly mentioned for his official skill and gentlemanly bearing Judge Gothard, general ticket agent for the East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad. His calm control and systematic dispatch of business is a good school for young men.

Taking the cars at noon I ate supper in Abingdon, Va. I found your genial and excellent friend, Bro. Leth, with others, at the depot to meet me. I was delighted with his frankness and cordiality, and after I had seen him and taken meals with him at the houses of mutual friends I did not wonder that you and he were such dear and constant friends. The new Methodist Church and parsonage at Abingdon are gems of architecture and convenience. I believe they cost about $20,000. They reflect great credit on the station and the preacher.

Martha Washington College has the promise of another successful year. Dr. Wiley is in fine spirits. No college in our connection affords finer, social, moral and educational advantages. Abingdon is one of the most charming towns in the Commonwealth. Society is elevated, cultured, conservative. As Bishop McIntyre says: "The air of the 'Old Virginia' is about it all." It is the home of the Campbells, Floyds, R. B.sons, Litchfields, Johnstons, Mannings, etc. It has tumbled many governors, U. S. Senators, judges, generals. A marked feature of society is that it is not fast.

Dr. Wiley, the president of the college, is known North and South, East and West. He was for a long time president of Emory and Henry College. We have no finer and more faithful man than Dr. Prof. John L. Buchanan, LL.D., an elegant scholar in the languages and sciences. A few years ago he resigned the professorship of Latin in Vanderbilt University, and has been honored with many high positions. In this college his services and influence are invaluable. No one could make a mistake in calling a daughter to Martha Washington.

The atmosphere influence of this region is delightfully exhilarating and tonic in summer. The elevation is 2,570 feet. Though Abingdon is to me such an attractive place, though the college is so charming a home, though the revival of the memories of former years and the renewal of cherished associations were so grateful to me I had to bid adieu and hurry on to Virginia's "City by the Sea" to greet my kindred according to the flesh and especially to see my oldest son, who, now a young man, is here beginning to work out the mission of his life. How my interest gathers and intensifies here! How my anxious concern and my prayers prevent him on life's highway and would erect sign-boards to warn of roads to evil and point him to the paths of good!

If you had a boy 16 or 17 miles away from you in a bustling active city, whose circumstances would forbid you to see except at long intervals, you might enter into my present joy. I would like to write something of Virginia Methodism, and especially of the work of Granby Street Church led by Dr. Stodd, but my letter is already too long. I leave for Philadelphia to-morrow. Yours,

W. W. JONES.

Note from Virginia.

Our honored friend, Rev. J. L. Parker, writes to the "dear old Advocate" from Holstein Mills, Va., as follows:

DEAR ADVOCATE: I am very glad on arriving out here, in the midst of the mountains, a way from your birth-place, (New Orleans,) to find your presence. I find you are being known far and near, and whenever your name is known and influence felt good is being accomplished. I am reading every number that is issued, and am glad to see you are known so far from home, and that, too, favorably. I have always loved you from your birth, and now, that you are advancing in life, (as well as myself,) the older you grow the more I am pleased with your life and character. In your childhood and youthful days I know you were gazed for by wise and loving guardians, which causes you to adorn the church and bless mankind so extensively. I have never loved you more than at the present period of your life. I am pleased to see you have fallen into hands so well calculated to perpetuate your honorable history. Your piety, character and influence at home and abroad certainly tell upon the lives of men. You are certainly conspicuous as well as entertaining, and no one, I presume, takes more interest in your prosperity than the writer. Would that I could induce every Methodist family to love your weekly visits and cheerful countenance as I do. May your able editor and popular friend be as successful in your future circulation as he has since his installation.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Rev. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH Treasurer.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1884.

BY MARGARET J. PEARSON.

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

What will it matter by and by
Whether my path below was bright,
Whether it wound through dark or light
Under a gray or a golden sky,
When I look back on it by and by?

bestowed prayer and thought. "Grow in Grace," was my theme, as I entered the pulpit I saw above and below well filled pews. With a heart behind me, some praying people before me, and trusting in the good Spirit to lead me, I dismissed my fears, and relied upon the Lord for help. Just before my thirty minutes discourse closed, a sister occupying a pew near the pulpit shouted aloud the praise of God, this was timely and helped me wonderfully. I could almost imagine that I was preaching in a log meeting house in the pine woods of Mississippi. That shout was more inspiring to this unpretending preacher than any he had heard before, or has since heard.

My readers must not become impatient, I will get back to the "old Willkinson circuit" after awhile.

DANIEL MORSE.
MARRIAGE, TEXAS.

The Homer District Conference.

This Conference convened at Lisbon, La., August 28, closing its labors on the 30th. Rev. A. A. Cornett, presiding elder, occupied the chair, and gave entire satisfaction by the faithful and courteous way in which he looked after all the interests of the district. All the preachers, but one were in attendance, and the attendance of laymen was fair. Quite a number of visitors were on hand, among them some of the most distinguished people of the State. It was pleasant to have the Hon. W. H. Goodale and his wife with us, who were there in the interest of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and succeeded in organizing a Union at Lisbon Sunday afternoon. At several points hereabouts Sister Goodale has been faithfully at work of late, organizing unions.

We were greatly gratified also to have with us Dr. Galloway and president Rush. These brethren won many hearts, and carried away with them satisfactory tokens of appreciation. Over a thousand dollars were given in cash and pledges for Centenary College—the entire Centenary collection after Dr. Galloway's Centenary sermon on Sunday amounting to $1329.70.

Reports from the preachers were upon the whole not very gratifying. There seemed to be progress in church building and in contributions to the general interests of the Church. The Sabbath-school interest seemed also to be pretty well looked after. But the spiritual condition of the church and the collections on pastors' salaries were reported as discouraging.

A resolution was adopted adverse to opening of the gates of the Exposition at New Orleans on Sunday. The New Orleans Christian Advocate was highly commended in the report of the Committee on Church publications, and a resolution passed pledging the Conference to increased efforts to extend its circulation.

Ruston was chosen as the place for the next District Conference. The following are the lay delegates elected to the Annual Conference: A. T. Nelson, J. W. Dawson, J. L. Williams, W. P. Theus.

J. W. MEMLOCK, Secretary.

Delhi District Conference.

Mr. Eorton: The eighteenth session of the Delhi District Conference met in this place on Wednesday, the 27th of August, Rev. Robert Randle, presiding elder, in the chair, F. H. G. Taylor was elected secretary, and W. W. Guthrie was elected assistant secretary. Out of seventy delegates—clerical and lay—composing the Conference, there were very few present. Reports from the various charges composing the district, exhibited, with a few exceptions, its steady growth in spirituality and increased membership, although falling far below what it might be; but there is a general financial depression, in consequence of continued overflows and other causes. The general outlook, however, is reported as encouraging.

Resolutions were passed, pledging this district to build a District Parsonage at Delhi, and earnestly urging upon the managers of the "World's Industrial Exposition" in New Orleans, the closing of its gates on Sunday.

Friday night was devoted to the cause of temperance. Able speeches were made by Rev. J. M. McKee and Rev. J. T. Sawyer, and fifty-seven new members were enrolled upon the list of names of the "Woman's Christian Temperance Union" already organized here.

Delegates elected to the annual conference: W. W. Guthrie, Rev. T. B. Reneau, F. H. G. Taylor and Ed. Travis. Alternates: Dr. A. S. Helmick and H. P. Wells.

On Saturday evening, after a unanimous vote of thanks to the people of Lake Providence for their hospitality and kindness, the conference adjourned sine die.

On Sunday, at eleven o'clock, a. m., the presiding elder preached an able and Centenary sermon, after which a collection, amounting to about $160 was taken up.

One of the most pleasing incidents connected with the meeting occurred after the adjournment. A little boy preacher, Henry S. Johns, of West Carroll parish, only eighteen years of age, but appearing really to be not more than sixteen, without education except such as he picked up himself, who had been in attendance as a lay delegate to the Conference, was appointed to preach on Monday night.

On Monday morning, all ministers from other charges, including the presiding elder, left, and our preacher in charge, Bro. Clegg was confined to his bed by sickness. Thus, our youthful preacher stood, in a strange place, absolutely alone, without any human aid except what one or two lay brethren of this charge could render. But he had that which is far better than any human aid. The spirit of the Master was with him. Our little church was literally packed, every available seat occupied, and many standing in and about the door unable to procure seats.

The greater portion had been attracted, no doubt, by curiosity. The speaker was very delicate in appearance, having been in bad health the most of his life, and as he ascended the pulpit, he appeared to be a mere child.

His text was taken from I Samuel xii—24. "Only fear the Lord and serve him in truth with all your heart; for consider how great things he hath done for you."

From the time he entered his first word until the close of the service, the hearers seemed spell-bound. I have never, in all my life, witnessed more profound attention in any audience; and at the close, a spontaneous movement was made in the congregation, headed by the young men of our town—many of them wild and reckless—to raise a contribution to aid our young brother in his laudable intention to obtain an education at Centenary College; and sixty dollars was raised on the spot, no one in the audience being taken more by surprise than the recipient himself.

The religious exercises, held during the intervals occurring in the business of this Conference, were attended with the union of the Spirit. Both ministers and people were blessed. There were six accessions to the church, and we hear of others who intend to join. On Sunday night there were about thirty penitents at the altar; and we feel glad in our heart of hearts that the Conference met here. It has left behind it a gracious influence which will result, we trust, in incalculable benefit to this entire community.

F. G. H. TAYLOR, Secretary.

LAKE PROVIDENCE, LA., Sept. 6, 1884.

From Minden, Louisiana.

For some time we have been in communication with the balance of the world. Our railroad, V. S. and P., gives daily trains to Minden Junction, and the Meridian Tap, and Compress Company are beginning to move up on the road from here to the junction, five miles, so that we begin to feel our hopes revive, that when the preachers and delegates come here to Conference in January 1885, "we can meet them at the depot." The tap road—standard gauge—is now ready for the ties and iron, and can be completed in a few weeks. Whether or not it will be, is known, I suppose, only to the directors.

However this may be, we have had a gathering of ladies and gentlemen from all parts of the State, none complained of inconvenience or delay. All that is needed now to put New Orleans in eighteen or twenty hours of Minden, change the names if you wish, is close connection with the Valley road at Vickburg.

The Louisiana Educational Association met here August 12, and continued in session three days. During the session quite an impetus was given to education hereabouts, and no doubt great good will result from it. A Teachers Association was organized, with Mr. Wm. O. Rogers, of New Orleans, as president. The Executive Committee, (of which your correspondent is a member) is expected to meet in New Orleans in February of next year and perfect the organization, provide charter, by-laws, seal, etc.

After an address from Hon. Mr. Blanchard, M. C., from the fourth Louisiana district, on the subject: "National Aid to the States for Educational Work," a resolution was adopted requesting the Executive Committee of the Educational Association to place petitions in the hands of each of the vice presidents of that association, with instructions to secure signatures thereto, praying Congress to pass the Blair bill, or some other bill, by which the surplus money in the United States Treasury might be put to use, in fitting men for citizenship.

At (or rather after) the close of the session of the Educational Association there was a grand temperance rally at Concert Hall of the Female College, in which the exercises were conducted in the interest of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Louisiana.

Hon. and Mrs. W. H. Goodale, of Baton Rouge, were present, both of whom addressed an immense audience, "for God, and Home, and Native Land." Mrs. Goodale is a splendid platform speaker. Though a little nervous, she seems to feel the importance of her work, and certainly performs it well. Her liege lord sustained his reputation as a lecturer.

Results.—In less than one week plans were laid to route whiskey out of Minden. On Monday evening a mass meeting was held at the Court House, at which the friends of local option fully organized, and are now prepared for work. Hon. J. J. Carter, a former member of the legislature from this parish, and Mr. J. C. Reynolds, a young lawyer of our town, made speeches that would tell on any stage.

Speaking of the Educational Association I forgot to mention, not for distinction, but for merits sake, the address of Col. Boyd, Col. Nicholson, of the State University and Agricultural and Mechanical College, at Baton Rouge. The reputation of Col. Nicholson as a mathematician is cosmopolitan, and his fame as a speaker may become as broad.

Col. Boyd's speech, though on the value of industrial education, was one of the finest productions on Christian philosophy that it has been my privilege to listen to.

Judging from the tone of the speeches said here, the cause of education in Louisiana is in safe hands. There was, in all, the profoundest reverence for religion, and in none the slightest thrusts at its holy precepts. Truly, JAP.

East Mississippi Notes.

Mr. Eorton: Thinking that some notes of information from the East, might be of interest to some of the readers of the Advocate, I ask a small space to say a few words. We of Meridian Methodism are moving along rather gently, but we trust hopefully. Our congregations have not been so large, for some months, because of the heat, sickness and the absence from their homes of many of our people. And yet we have good audiences. We have not yet held our Centenary day, but will in October. The good ladies of our church have made some very necessary and comfort-giving repairs on our parsonage during this year. And will, I have no doubt, do still more for the convenience and comfort of the pastor as the old year draws to a close and the new year and new preacher comes in. Meridian continues to grow. The population increases all the while and new houses are in process of construction every day.

The health of Meridian is and has been good for many months past. In fact it is never very unhealthy here. Most, if not all, your readers know that this thriving, growing city is the site of East Mississippi Female College. This institution of learning is the property of the Mississippi Conference M. E. Church, South. The last session which closed about the middle of June last, was a very successful one indeed. Rev. A. D. McVoy was chosen its president in July, one year ago, and after closing up his first session to the satisfaction of all concerned, advertised to open again the fifteenth of September next. He is full of zeal and hope, and with a full and in every way competent faculty expects a large patronage, and confidently promises the best of work during the session now about to open. The one who writes these lines has lived here and been intimately acquainted with the affairs of the college during four years, and does not hesitate to commend East Mississippi Female College to all who have daughters to educate. Especially do we call upon East Mississippians and West Alabamians to consider the great advantages this institution offers to them. It is so easy of access. Five railroads center in Meridian, and double trains on three of these roads daily. The health of the college has been always good. The terms of board and tuition are as low as at other institutions affording the same advantages. Here the daughters of our people may receive a thorough education, without being away from their homes. Let any who desire information about the college address A. D. McVoy, Meridian, Miss. To one and all who are casting about in the minds for a first class religious school for girls and young ladies I heartily recommend East Mississippi Female College.

A. D. McVoy, Meridian, Miss.

Meridian, Miss., August 27, 1884.

"Wood Notes."—A Centenary Offering.

The above is the title of a volume of prose and verse, written by "Invalid," and when published will number about 408 pages, 12 mo., neatly bound in cloth. The manuscript is now at the Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., awaiting the requisite sum for publishing, to be paid in advance, their terms being strictly "cash in advance."

Not having the amount to advance myself, and not wishing to fail in my purpose, that of saving my mother's home and being greatly encouraged to publish my long-delayed "Wood Notes," by those who are willing to subscribe, I will submit the plan suggested by one who is willing to head the list of subscription, by investing $50, to be paid in advance. The entire amount being $900 for 2000 copies. Hundreds have sent their names—as prospective subscribers—without having seen the book; and now if they will forward their names with $1.50—the price per volume—their money will be safe with the publisher, and they will receive a copy of "Wood Notes," after a few days, or weeks' delay. So many have expressed their willingness to pay in advance, if it would be of any assistance in getting it published, that I make this proposal—or rather, that I ask the favor.

The plan of securing the amount in advance by subscription, will prove a safe and profitable investment, as suggested by my friend, who will head the list with $50—each to receive the benefit in proportion to the amount invested.

Who will do likewise? Any amount, from $1.50 to any amount they may be disposed to advance, will enable me to publish the 2,000 copies, provided $900 is paid in advance—say, by the first of October. Address all communications to Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

INVALID.

Revival Correspondence.

We are having some gracious revivals.

D. C. LANGFORD.

LAUDERDALE, Mississippi.

I have not spent the month of October to take the collection for Centenary purposes, and I want to begin at Lexington the first Sunday, and then go all around my work. I have had thirty-three conversions to date, and one more meeting to hold.

T. W. LEWIS.
LEXINGTON, MISS., Aug. 23, 1884.

Last Sunday we closed, at Union Church, near Mt. Pleasant, Miss., a series of meetings which were of great benefit to our community. Result: Eighteen conversions, sixteen additions and a widespread work in the church. We were assisted by Bro. W. P. Barton, T. W. Dye and Ben C. Gray.

D. M. COOKILL.
HUDONVILLE, MISS., Aug. 23, 1884.

Held two meetings to date at Locust Grove. Result: Nine added to the church, five conversions. Church building repaired, painted and whitewashed, giving it an appearance of a new building. At Salem twenty-one added to the church, thirteen conversions. Prayer meetings established; family altars erected; church greatly blessed. More to follow.

R. J. DAVIS.
TRANQUIL, MISS., Aug. 30, 1884.

I closed a meeting of eight days at Indian Creek, twenty miles above Austin, on the third Sunday in August, which resulted in the organization of a church of twenty-two members of good material in a good community where there was no church organization and has been but little preaching by any denomination; but four sermons in ten miles of the place last year.

J. W. HONNELL.
FERRIS POINT, MISS., Sept. 1, 1884.

The Lord is doing great things far us on the Neshoba circuit, whereof we are glad. Have held four protracted meetings, and truly we have been refreshed from the presence of the Lord, resulting in about seventy conversions. We have received into the church seventy-six, baptized sixteen children. Have taken forty subscriptions for the Advocate. Hope to be able to report full collections at Conference of all associations.

JAMES F. ROBINSON.
HEBERT, MISS., Aug. 30, 1884.

We have held three protracted meetings on the DeKalb circuit, resulting in twenty conversions and seventeen accessions. Others to be held in September and October, which, we trust, may prove still more successful. The finances are considerably behind, but crop prospects are good, and we hope to make a good report at Conference yet. I have not made an effort for a Centenary collection yet; am waiting to get the regular collections out of the way. Will do what I can.

D. O. W. ELLIS.
SEPTEMBER 6, 1884.

We closed an interesting meeting at Mohegan Church, which resulted in twenty-six conversions, twenty-five accessions and baptized twenty children. I must say I never saw people so wrought upon by the Spirit. Some would fall as did the Apostle Paul by the wayside and cry for mercy, and received a blessing before they could get to the church. We commenced at Salem, assisted by Rev. H. R. Tucker, of Crawford. Twenty precious souls were brought from darkness to light and fourteen joined the church.

W. T. HANNETT.
SHUCKLALE, MISS., Sept. 5, 1884.

The church is doing very well. While no remarkable change has occurred in the spiritual condition of our members, it is evident that many are making steady progress in the religious life. We have preaching twice every Sunday, and prayer and class meetings once every week. Our services are usually well attended. God is present frequently in our class meetings, and we are filled with exceeding joy. A number of our members read and appreciate the New Orleans Christian Advocate. We all think it the best of the family.

M. C. CALLAWAY.
JACKSON, LA., Aug. 29, 1884.

I closed a fine meeting at Center Point last week: Twenty-one conversions and fifteen additions to the church and the church greatly revived. The people say it was the best meeting held in eight years at that place. There were vows and promises made of faithful hope that will tell far good in the world to come. I am under lasting obligations to Bros. Phillips, Boon and Tucker for their services during this meeting. This is the third revival on the circuit this year. We are praying and looking for a great outpouring of the Spirit at the meeting yet to be held.

Pray for us.
R. H. OACY.
BROOKVILLE, MISS., Aug. 31, 1884.

Our meeting at Newton was blessed with the presence of Christ in the person of the Holy Spirit applying the truth to saint and sinner. A good spirit prevailed from the beginning to the end, and it is hoped remains with us. The meeting was a rich blessing to pastor and people. Good help was rendered by Bros. Burton and Robert Selby. Twelve were added to the church. At the close of this meeting we began our meeting at Hickory with Bro. Irvin Miller as our helper, and good help he was. It is said that the meeting at Hickory surpassed anything ever had there. The people seem to forget all the past, and meet day and night in good congregations. Fifteen were added to the church. May the Lord continue to abide with us, constantly baptizing or purifying our hearts by "the Holy Ghost and with fire." J. W. ELLISON, P. O.

SEPTEMBER 6, 1884.

We have just closed a round of protracted meetings which lasted four weeks. On the fourth Sunday in July we commenced a meeting at Rehoboth Church, eighteen miles west of Hazlehurst, Miss., which resulted in nine accessions and as many conversions. On the first Sunday in August we commenced at Burlington, one mile from the Little J. railroad and about forty miles from Jackson. The meeting resulted in three accessions and the church greatly revived. On the second Sunday we commenced at Sarepta, ten miles east of Martin on the same railroad. This meeting resulted in one conversion and three accessions. The meeting lasted five days, and we then adjourned to meet at Brimley on the third Sunday at eleven A. M. The time came, and we commenced and continued for six days. Results: Nine accessions and five conversions.

V. B. KRIPPER.
MARTIN, MISS., Aug. 24, 1884.

Ten miles east of Waynesboro, in the majestic pine forest of Wayne county stands the little church known as Pleasant Grove—more frequently, in derision, termed, by the ungodly "Green's field." Pleasant Grove is on the Winchester circuit, and Bro. L. J. Jones is the preacher in charge. Here on Saturday, August 24, was begun a protracted meeting which continued five days. Not only Methodists, but Presbyterians and Baptists; not only church members, but those without the fold. One and all seemed to be actuated by a simple impulse, and each with the others in zeal, earnestness and a fixed determination to make the meeting just what it proved to be—a complete and glorious success. At one time, I believe, all the unconverted men, women and children in the house were mourners, and the entire church membership petitioners to the throne of grace for mercy, pardon and blessings, resulting in a glorious revival of religion at Pleasant Grove.

WM. E. LLOYD.
WAYNESBORO, Mississippi.

The China Grove Camp Meeting commenced Friday, August 2, and closed to-day with the following results: Accessions, 150; conversions, 150; it is estimated Centenary collection, $355. These figures will give some idea of the power, full work of grace God has wrought in this meeting. It was blessed from the very beginning with an outpouring of God's spirit, and as it progressed the demonstrations were still more striking and powerful until it seemed at times that the entire congregation was under his influence. The success which has attended the encampment has been marvelous. Six years ago the first meeting was held with many forebodings as to success and under many disadvantages. The attendance was small, and results discouraging. From such an insignificant beginning it has developed into its present proportions. The condition of China Grove circuit, spiritually and financially, is excellent. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Simmons, is much loved and deservedly popular. He has received into the church an profession thus far this year one hundred and fifty members.

S. S. MOORE.
CHINA GROVE, MISS., Sept. 5, 1884.

The good Lord has been graciously blessing us in Dover circuit. I have just closed the third protracted meeting. These meetings have resulted in a gain of about forty members. Quite a large per cent. of these new members are men and women of families. The average age, I would say, is not less than thirty years. At Fletcher Chapel I closed the meeting with twenty-seven penitents at the altar, and at Stone Creek I closed with twenty penitents at the altar. We just begin with earnest work and effective work, as we have to close to go to some other church. Those who are acquainted with the history of these churches say that our meetings this summer are far better than any held here for many years. During these meetings I have baptized twenty-one children, and ruled at Deasonville between three and four hundred dollars to repair the church. My congregations have become very large. They have been improving all during the year, till now the churches are at times too small to hold them. I had valuable help in my meetings from Bros. J. A. Ellis, Howard, P. A. Johnston, T. B. Hillyman, R. T. Davis, I. W. Cooper and E. Newsum.

THOMAS W. ADAMS.
DOVER, MISS., Aug. 29, 1884.

We begun in the Inka station, August 10, a series of meetings, continuing until the nineteenth, when Rev. Sam P. Jones, of Cartersville, Ga., arrived and began preaching for us three times a day in his characteristic style. There being no house in the town large enough to accommodate the people who resorted to the spring lot. The next day a stand was provided in a leafy grove, and there we continued for six days witnessing the greatest displays of Divine power that I ever saw. The air was filled with songs of praise, shouts of joy and cries for mercy, and all that assuaged there (which was not less than two thousand first and last) felt that it was good to be there. After Bro. Jones left we continued for three days. The meeting resulted in one hundred conversions, ranking with six years old to sixty. Among them was the intelligent "skeptic," the universalist, the spiritualist, the drunkard

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1884.

$1,839 80!

Last Sunday was Centenary day at Carrollton, North Mississippi Conference, and a royal, red-letter day it was. We have not seen its parallel in genuine connectional enthusiasm this Centenary year. Everything had been admirably arranged in advance. After a discourse by the editor, in the morning, a collection of $1,655 40 was realized. At the Sunday-school Centenary meeting, in the afternoon, $84 40 was raised, which, with the $100 already secured by the active pastor, Rev. H. E. Smith, makes this handsome sum of $1839 80. Old Carrollton has advanced to the head of the column and bids all North Mississippi look well to her laurels.

$535!

The Centenary collection at China Grove Camp Meeting—Rev. W. W. Simmons, pastor—amounted to $535. Well done for China Grove! But we are not surprised at such a gratifying result.

Centenary collections reported thus far amount to $207,801. The largest individual offering made is $20,000, by Dr. H. F. Johnson, of Brookhaven, Miss.

The following from the classic pen of Rev. W. L. Watkinson, a distinguished Wesleyan preacher, is common history. How is it with you, reader? "Many of God's people think in gold and give in brass; feel in scarlet and act in fustian, purpose in marble and build in brick."

In connection with the Conference course of study in the new Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church there is this official notice: "All candidates for our ministry are earnestly advised to attend, if possible, one or more of the literary and theological institutions of our church before applying to an Annual Conference for admission on trial." That is taking advanced ground; but the times demand it. The same counsel we would give to every young candidate in our Methodism. "If possible," secure some scholastic training before entering the pastoral office.

Mr. Hendricks, the Democratic candidate for the Vice-Presidency of the United States, is waxing warm in his pro-whisky utterances. At Toledo, O., on Thursday last, he denounced most severely prohibition fanaticism and appealed to German voters to support him on that issue. In the first place, we are mortified that the two leading vice-presidential candidates are parading over the country as stump speakers. We had supposed that dignified retirement best becomes candidates for that exalted position. And in the second place, we deplore and condemn the course of Mr. Hendricks in pandering to the bar-room and slum element in order to success. His Toledo speech had the inspiration and odor of a doggerel.

Firmness is commendable, but obstinacy is censurable. The one virtue is a gospel of life to weak brethren, while the other characteristic begets discord and disunion. The brother who resigned from the building committee and quit the church because the steeple was to be eighty-five feet and six and a half inches high, when he wanted it only eighty-five feet, six inches and one barleycorn, prides himself on the grace of stability; but he is really a grievous product of a vicious stubbornness. He would destroy a great enterprise for half a barleycorn. Should he succeed in getting to heaven he will doubtless measure the gates of pearl and walls of jasper and assay the golden streets to be sure John the Divine hadn't deceived him in his description. Such a man never brings peace into the church, and, if possible, would disturb the harmony of a choir of angels. And he is in almost every community. He never fails to "hang a jury," and yet complains that he never saw eleven such stubborn men in his life. The only way to manage such a case is to put him "in a crowd by himself."

Bishop McTyeire's History of Methodism.

This eagerly expected volume has been issued, and is being sent out to subscribers. In the short time allowed us to study its pages we have no hesitancy in pronouncing it a masterpiece—a worthy product of the author's matured and marvelous genius. At home everywhere, and distinguished in every department of service, the Bishop is conspicuous as a writer. He was a typical editor, and wielded a pen that could on occasions flash like a "light sword" or strike with the ponderous blow of a battle-axe. Fond of historical study, and having a ready, acute discernment of its philosophy, he was eminently fitted to write this Centenary volume. And if the celebration of the year accomplishes no more than its production, it is well that the General Conference provided for it by appropriate legislation. The book will meet the largest expectation and occupy an enduring place in our literature. When only a few pages had been read we remarked to a friend at our elbow, "This book will live," and further investigation only confirms that judgment. The author is not a volunteer in the army of historians. He consented to undertake the preparation of the volume at the unanimous and urgent request of the General Centenary Committee. Though cumbered with various responsibilities and "the care of the churches," discharging the duties of his office, he has given Methodism the fruits of a genius that will rank him as a historian with Stevens and Tyerman. This, we are aware, is high praise, but not fulsome—beyond the merits of the work itself. Its character and purpose are best told in the author's own words found in the preface:

Much the larger portion of the volume deals in that wherein all Methodists agree. I have endeavored to give, along with sketches of the chief actors in preparing and carrying forward the great work of God, the truths that were vital to it, and the type of Christian experience developed by it; also the gradual and providential evolution of the system, both in doctrine and polity; so that one who honors the book with a perusal may come to the end, not only with a tolerably clear understanding of the polity and doctrines of Episcopal Methodism, but, what is of infinitely greater importance, he may obtain some personal knowledge of that way of salvation which Wesleyans teach.

He further says: "The reader is advertised that this is not a history of Southern Methodism, but of Methodism from a Southern point of view." Of course latitude and locality affect more or less our observations and the lessons deducible therefrom. On this account it is doubtless true that Methodism in the South has not received full justice from honest and able writers in the North. Now, with the excellent volumes contributed to our general literature by Northern writers and this timely masterpiece from "a Southern point of view," the impartial, unsectional reader will form clear conclusions as to the real truth and philosophy of history. As for myself, we would have preferred that the author make no mention of his latitudinal "point of view," and thereby eliminate geographical prejudice from every reader. His great work should stand on its own merits, without reference to "which side of the Tweed" the writer happened to reside. It is by no means controversial, although treating here and there with controverted questions.

A few extracts from the first page of the initial chapter will indicate the style of the author and sharpen the desire for a full and thorough reading:

The mission of Luther was to reform a corrupted Christianity; that of Wesley, to revive a dying one. Lutheranism dealt more with controversy; Wesleyanism with experience. * * * The way of reform is to begin by finding fault with others. "We begin," they said, "by finding fault with ourselves." * * * Whenever the Lord would do a work in the earth a man is got ready; and the study of that man and of his providential preparation is a fit introduction to the history of the work. St. Paul's truism, "For every house is builded by some man," is not contradicted by what follows—"but he that built all things is God."

In the progress of the work there are practical and philosophical reflections that give the reader views of facts altogether fresh and original. But an exhaustive analysis will not be attempted. The book is a large, handsome octavo of 688 pages, and bound in handsome cloth. The printer excelled himself, and the proof reader's eye seems not to have slumbered or slept on a single line. We predict for the history a rapid sale and a hearty welcome in all American Methodism and beyond the sea. Price in cloth, without engravings, $2; with engravings, $2 50; half Morocco, $3, and full Morocco, $4.

Exterritorial Religion.

The subject of "exterritorial rights" has been up for international discussion time out of mind. Briefly stated, it is the right of a foreigner, in any case of offense, to be tried by the laws of his native country, and not the country where he temporarily resides and where the wrong was committed. Some nations have secured such privileges in their treaty stipulations. In the treaty between Great Britain and Japan this clause occurs: "British subjects who may commit any crime against Japanese subjects, or the subjects or citizens of any other country, shall be tried and punished by the consul, or the public functionary authorized thereto, according to the laws of Great Britain." That such procedure will produce endless confusion and often defeat the ends of justice must be evident to every reader. And with the march of civilization exterritorial rights are being abandoned. It was first demanded for the protection of Europeans resident in uncivilized countries.

But the principle as applied to religious faith and practice must endure. The citizen of Christ's kingdom owes allegiance thereto as much in one country as another. By its laws he is to be tried, whether in America or Corea. In his spiritual relations he knows neither territory nor point of compass. He must live as becometh a fellow-citizen of the saints everywhere. The same law will judge, and acquit or condemn him, whether in Christian England or in heathen China—whether at home in the village church or abroad on a summer tour—whether in "country vast or city full." And in this there is a practical lesson of imminent importance. Not a few are disposed to abolish the exterritorial idea of religion and accommodate their consciences to the country or community where they may chance to be. When in Rome they do as the Romans, and feel justified in so doing. And so in a change of residence from the country to the city, or from the quiet home to "a season at the springs." There is a relaxing of old scruples and a conformity to new ways. Tact and taste we always applaud. There are questions of local etiquette and propriety that should be respected, but never at the surrender of religious principle. It is exterritorial both in its verities and imperatives.

This thought will lead to more constant caution. We are easily and often unconsciously affected by our surroundings. An hour in certain company has distilled a drop of poison in the heart. A season from home has radically changed our views on many things; whether for better or worse we need to prayerfully inquire. Now, when we remember that the same God and Father is over us all and ways, and that the principles of his kingdom are the same yesterday, to-day, forever, and everywhere, we will be more careful to keep our hearts with due diligence. There will be no intermission of private prayer and the service of the sanctuary because we are away from home. And no delinquencies and compromises to accommodate ourselves to present associations. How frequently such expressions as this pain the pastor: "I used to take quite an active part in all church enterprises, and really enjoyed religion; but here the people are different, and I feel less disposed." Alas! for the backslidings traceable to local influences. But by that standard they are not to be judged. Religion is exterritorial, and our God will not be slack concerning judgment.

A Day at Grenada—A College and a Call to Duty.

In response to special invitation from Rev. T. J. Newell, President of the Grenada Collegiate Institute, we attended the public opening ceremonies of that institution on Wednesday evening of last week. Leaving 112 Camp St., at 5 P. M. of Tuesday, at the same hour next morning we had reached Grenada and found comfortable quarters in readiness at the Chamberlain House. Under its present excellent management that has become the most popular hotel along the Southern division of the Illinois Central Railway. The morning hours were spent in rest and hard work for the ADVOCATE. What an amazing amount of grist can be prepared for the hopper in well-improved odd half hours! We dined with President Newell in his superb college-building, and noted with pleasure the prosperous opening of this term. Already quite a number of boarders had arrived and others were daily expected. The patronage from abroad will probably exceed last year. In the afternoon Bro. Geo. Lake called with a carriage and gave us a delightful drive. A handsome span of horses we have not seen south of Tennessee, but their royal, elastic steps make one a little nervous. For beauty, blood and movement we admire them, but for the pleasure and sense of security commend us to a good old family horse with a jolt. We enjoyed the opportunity of observing Grenada from every suburban point of view. The recent fire well-nigh destroyed the business portion of the town, but everywhere men were at work removing debris or running up solid walls of masonry. In a little while the burnt district will be rebuilt with more substantial and imposing structures.

At night, in the Methodist Church, the opening exercises of the Collegiate Institute were held. An elaborate programme was contemplated, but for unavoidable reasons it was shortened to an anthem or two, a perspicacious speech by this editor, and a statement by President Newell, after which the Board of Trustees held an important meeting, from which we have great expectations. We have a few words for North Mississippi about that college. It is a magnificent building, roomy, well ventilated, and admirably constructed. Originally it cost $47,500, and is in first-rate repair. The lawn is large and beautiful, and the situation all that could be desired for health and quiet. By the generosity of the citizens of Grenada that property has been purchased and presented to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. There remains only $4,000 to be paid to an individual who has that much claim upon it. That amount ought to be raised and at once in North Mississippi. Centenary offerings for education ought to take that direction until the debt is liquidated. If that splendid property and opportunity pass from the church for the lack of only four thousand dollars, it will be an impeachment of our loyalty and liberality. As the North Mississippi Conference owns no other college property, as we are informed, this should be the beneficiary of our Centenary spirit, and placed beyond the possibility of alienation. Bros. Thames and Newell are in the field, and we commend their cause as worthy of cordial, liberal support.

Centenary at Carrollton.

For some weeks we had an engagement to spend Sunday last at Carrollton, Miss.—an appointed Centenary day. Leaving home on the afternoon of Friday, we ran up to Winona, where we found Bro. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, at the depot to extend a welcome. After a pleasant night at the hotel, only disturbed by the voluble small talk of some Young America outside playing the gallant to "a girl of the period," we started next morning for the ancient shire-town of the good old county of Carroll. That namesound pleasantly in these ears, for it brings back the delightful memories of our novitiate ministry on the Black Hawk circuit. The dear friends of good old Methodist type, who gave their boy pastor, not yet in his majority, such a cordial greeting and through the entire year such unvarying support, are bound to us with hooks of steel. They did more for him in the way of Methodist discipline and experience than they received from his feeble expounding, though vigorous pounding (of the pulpit). And that suggests this remark, that young preachers need a good, religious appointment as much as the people need a pastor. Men have been injured, and sometimes fatally, by the character of their first pastorate. Their zeal has been chilled and conceptions of Methodist religion distorted by a cold, unorganized

We reached Carrollton about ten o'clock, and at Sister Bingham's had a real home. What a genuine hospitality is accorded the preacher! And in it what an honoring of his Lord! Bro. Smith, the pastor, returned from a revival meeting, at Greenwood, in the afternoon, and came around to give us a carte blanche to the parsonage and his pastorate. Rev. T. J. Newell, of Grenada, came down to attend the Centenary meeting, and contributed much to the profit and enjoyableness of our visit.

Sunday morning was bright and beautiful, and at an early hour all animals in the neighborhood that hadn't parted the hoof were harnessed to draw devout worshippers to the house of the Lord. The congregation was immense—taxing to fullness the capacious auditorium. Tasteful and deft hands had decorated the room for the Centenary occasion. In the rear of the pulpit there were appropriate inscriptions, with the names of Ashbury and Pierce linked together by a chain of evergreen. On the table in front of the pulpit were a profusion of flowers in vases, between which was a bed of roses, with the figures in evergreen—1784-1884. The singing was joyous in sweet accord with the spirit of the hour. After a discourse by this editor—more noted for its length than its strength—the congregation responded with a collection amounting to $1655 40. One of the touching and teaching incidents of the general offering was a costly gold watch-chain thrown in the basket by the charming, consecrated young wife of the enterprising, devoted young Sunday-school superintendent. It thrilled his heart with joy and sent a quiver of power over the vast congregation. Another was the Rev. T. J. Newell, president of Grenada Collegiate Institute, arising and making his Centenary contribution in his native town and with the friends of his childhood.

The Sunday-school Centenary meeting was held in the afternoon, conducted by the superintendent, Bro. J. R. Bingham. Short talks were made by Capt. Estes, Bro. Newell and the editor, and a collection lifted amounting to $84 40. This, with $100 previously raised by the pastor—the excess of his deacons' clearing—aggregates $1,839 80 from Carrollton thus far. It was a grand day—long to be remembered by this writer. Bro. Smith has favor with his people and is doing a great work. There have been about one hundred conversions on the work and fifty accessions to the church this Conference year. The church in Carrollton is well organized; with a fine Sunday-school, a well-attended class meeting and an interesting weekly prayer meeting.

With memories of a most enjoyable visit we write these lines, on Monday morning, at 112 Camp street.

Funeral of Bishop Pierce.

The Rev. G. G. Smith, of the North Georgia Conference, contributes to the Nashville Christian Advocate an interesting account of the funeral service at Sparta, where our senior Bishop was laid to rest. The sermon of Dr. Haygood, to which reference is made, has been published, and is worthy of the distinguished author and his glorified friend. We reproduce the following from Bro. Smith's letter:

Delegations came from Atlanta, Augusta, Macon, Warrenton, and from all other parts of the State. Trinity Church, Atlanta, sent a Bible made of tube-roses and jessamines, a beautiful white dove surmounting it. There was another of the same kind sent from Augusta.

The funeral-services were held in the spacious court-house. The village was draped in mourning—every hammer still, every store closed. The people of the county, black and white, thronged the streets. The large auditorium of the court-house was crowded with hearers. The services were opened with reading the 103d Psalm by Dr. Key, and a lesson from the New Testament by Dr. Mann; reading the hymn, "Servant of God, well done," by Bro. Breedlove, an old pastor of the Bishop's family. Dr. Potter led in a most touching and beautiful prayer, and then Dr. Haygood rose and announced his text. Immediately in front of the speaker was the family of the Bishop. He has but one son, Lovick Pierce, Jr., and three daughters—Ella Turner, Claudia Middlebrooks, and Ann Harley. His grandchildren are numerous, and were here; and one of the most touching sights was the pale, sad face of the dear woman who for fifty years had been the joy of his life. The colored people crowded into every vacant space, and the old family servants were present to pay their last tribute.

With such an audience before him, it was not probable that Dr. Haygood should be other than deeply affected. He knew how Bishop Pierce loved him, and I hazard nothing in saying that the dear Bishop was dearer to the preacher than any other man in the world. There was something beautiful in his taking as a motto for a biographical sketch a text Bishop Pierce had often preached from: "No man liveth to himself—living glorifying we are the Lord's." The sermon was a masterpiece of his kind.

After Dr. Haygood's sermon the report of the Nashville meeting was read, and Dr. McFerrin rose to speak. Forty-four years ago John McFerrin, from Tennessee, and George Pierce, from Georgia, both young men, met in the General Conference at Baltimore. They were both young, not thirty years old, they had much in common, and they became intimate at once. For near fifty years they had been bosom friends, and now the old Tennesseean, stretched from the grave's mouth, came to drop a tear on his old friend's grave. His heart was full. He spoke with difficulty, for his voice was husky and his eyes tearful. It was a beautiful tribute to a friendship of nearly fifty years. He wound up by saying, as the tears gushed from his eyes, "Farewell, Bro. Pierce, we will meet again before long on the plains of glory."

In a "talking letter," from Saratoga, to the Southern Christian Advocate Dr. John E. Edwards makes mention of meeting Dr. Joseph Cross, once a Methodist preacher, but now an Episcopal clergyman. The following paragraph has pleasing reference to our honored predecessor:

Speaking of our Southern Bishops, he spoke in exalted terms of Bishops Wightman and Paine; and then said that he had the honor of receiving one of our new Bishops (Bishop Parker) twice into the Methodist Church. First, in Binghamton, N. Y., where he professed conversion as a boy in 1839; and, in the second instance, at Carondelet Street Church, in New Orleans, in the winter of 1840-7.

Vanderbilt University has made the best opening of its history.

—The Cumberland Presbyterian Church has 122,240 members—an increase of nearly 10,000 last year.

—The Baltimore Episcopal Methodist reports Bishop Wilson as having been quite sick for some days. We pray for his speedy recovery.

—President A. B. Jones, of Huntville Female College writes: "The college opened with a larger number of boarding and day pupils than at any time in its history."

—"Kitchen Cabinet" is the name Bishop Granbery gives to a company of preachers at Conference off to themselves making the appointments. So says the Colorado Methodist.

—President Harrison, of the Southern University in this city, has returned from his summer vacation in Missouri ready for good work. We acknowledge the pleasure of a call on Monday.

—Bishop Parker left on Wednesday of last week for Missouri. He purpose spending the Sabbath at Hannibal and presiding this week over the Missouri Conference. The Bishop is emphatically a man of our work.

—Bishop McTyeire is presiding this week over the Kentucky Conference in place of Bishop Wilson who is quite ill. Bishop Hargrove presides over the Indian Mission Conference—one of Bishop Pierce's Conferences.

—Bro. Thos. H. Early, of Lynchburg, Va., a son of Bishop Early, has been on a visit to New Orleans, and honored the ADVOCATE sanctuary with a call on Monday. He has the Methodist fire and orthodoxy of his glorified father.

—We commence this week the publication of a serial, "Dodie Gee—A Story of Adventure," by our versatile and scholarly friend and corresponding editor, Rev. T. A. S. Adams. For a long time we have thought he would achieve distinction in that field of literature.

—In the death of Rev. Dr. A. A. Morrison, of Denver, Col., our Southern Methodism loses a great and good man. Most of his active ministry was spent in Kentucky, where he occupied a foremost place. In Colorado he was revered as a saintly man and wise master-builder. He died well and his works do follow him.

—Just before his death, Bishop Pierce requested Dr. Haygood to take up his unfinished work and write the life of his father, Dr. Lovick Pierce. We second Dr. Potter's happy suggestion that Dr. Haygood make it a dual biography—the lives of father and son. One in life, labors, and heroic experience, it is fitting that their histories should be bound in one volume.

—Rev. Samuel Cheate, chief of the Muskogee or Creek Nation, a leading Methodist—died at Okmulgee, Sept. 3. He was expected to meet Bishop Pierce at the Indian Mission Conference, but the good chief and the great Bishop died the same day and met in the general assembly on high. An engraved likeness of this distinguished relation appears in Bishop McTyeire's History of Methodism.

—Rev. E. E. Jenkins, one of the secretaries of the Wesleyan Missionary Society, is to make an official visit to the Wesleyan missions in China and India. Mr. Jenkins was for many years a devoted missionary in India, and has large acquaintance with the difficulties of that work. No doubt his visit will do great good. We had hoped that one of our Bishops would visit our China mission during this quadrennium, but his death has called three of them away; one can hardly be spared from the home work.

—"Children's Centenary Day" will be celebrated in Felicity Street Church in this city, Sunday, Nov. 8, at 6 P. M. The pastor and superintendent of Sunday-school are arranging a programme appropriate to the occasion. There will be Centenary addresses and recitations and songs such as will constitute a celebration worthy of our Centenary year. The friends of "old Felicity" are all (whether far or near) invited to be present, that they may rejoice together over the good work of the past. In the morning of the same day, the pastor will preach the "Centenary sermon."

—After long and honored service as superintendent of the Carondelet Sunday-school, Bro. R. M. Wainwright has resigned. He has done faithful work in that responsible position and retires much to the regret of teachers and pupils. Bro. T. J. Carver, the senior publisher of the ADVOCATE, has been appointed his successor—a fitting and fortunate selection. He will bring long experience, a wise head, and a genial, sunny spirit and countenance into his office. We learn from Dr. Hill, the pastor, that Carondelet Sunday-school and congregation have enjoyed prosperity during the "heated term," and that the outlook for winter work is most reassuring.

"I Will Praise with My Whole Heart."

Half-hearted praise is either craven or more bitterly insulting than blame. Yet in our praises to God how seldom do we with David count our entire spiritual nature! There is more feeble praise than, perhaps, any other part of worship; yet none ought to be more hearty or continuous. We consider the command or benefit to be obtained or the many reasons calling it forth. "Who can offer praise gloriously?"

When David praises God he does a grand thing. For, consider how many things the smallest heart contains. Count the sensibilities, emotions, passions, aspirations, hopes, joys, sorrows, fears, loves, hates, jealousies. What a temple! What a heaven! What a hell! Angels hover near its portals or arch its chambers with their wings; serpents hide under its threshold or crawl into its closets. Many a heart-to-day harbors as vile a nest of devils as were in Mary Magdalen's. They are in some nook, it may be, unknown even to the owner of the heart, for few thoroughly police their own haunts.

David went to the praise of God after rigid self-examination. "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me," David knew his heart—its weak spots, its foul spots, its sore spots. These he sought to set in order; these he made to praise God by constantly growing stronger, purer, healthier. He confessed to weakness, but realized a sense of strength coming. He deplored his fallen nature, but joyously discovered a tendency to purity. He groaned with his disease, but praised God for healing power. How much Christians can make their infirmities praise God if they only will! David also called in his strong points of character to praise. Some of us seek to think, if we are more gifted than others, that we can use the surplus given to our own whims. Hence how often we find our own conduct echoing the world's bold assertion that the man who was constantly praising God was a half idiot!

Perhaps there is needed more concentration as well as consecration in praise than in prayer. Self-examination should be more rigid. How lightly we engage in singing praises, as if we had to do was to get the right time and pitch! If we get the time and pitch of the heart, it is well; but what musician would take a violin all out of tune, with broken or knocked strings, to give us one of the strains of Handel or Ole Bull?

One night I attended prayer meeting, and upon my return, on entering the hall, I came near treading upon a serpent. It had come up through a mouse hole in the milk closet! A mouse hole is not a serious matter, but a snake hole is. And that in the closet! Among the milk jars and pans! Thither go children all hours for a biscuit and butter or cheese or milk. And a snake there! How often my wife puts in her hand, not thinking of snakes! And then the spiritual closet with a hole utilized by snakes! I am going out to the social praise meeting. While I am there from my neglected closet glides the snake, and from a distant sight of God in the meeting I come into close quarters with the devil on returning home.

Three reasons why our praise should never be half-hearted:

1. We never wanted a half-hearted God to bless or help or commune with us. Half praise to us is an insult and often intentional. It kills in the name of appreciation. One often prefers straight-out abuse. He can resent that. But if he winces under half praise, the tormentor is happy; if he recoils, the hypocrite puts on an air of offended friendship. Why should we wish to impose on the divine Being what we so heartily despise when offered to us?

2. All worship has an exponential value. Our character may not be distinguished by many shining traits. Only here and there do we find one a splendid illustration of more than one or two virtues or graces. But if we shine in only one, that one may enter as a factor in the praise which we offer. The praise which we enjoy is that which is heartily returned and reiterated, if only by itself. He who praises heartily has our goal will whether it be in elegant praise or not.

3. We should be hearty in our praise because, while God may know how we feel, he has never told us that he will take anything for done unless it is something beyond our ability. I have no right to take it for granted that God loves me. I have a right to insist upon his assurance by the Holy Spirit. I take nothing for granted in his promises. He has commanded me to test them and know. In his turn, he takes none of my duties for granted. If I feel that I adore, thank and praise, I ought to let him know it. He will neither eavesdrop nor peep into my closets on the sly to see what I have for him. He expects me to show it. So for a higher reason should we do so, for men are influenced by our example. They will be half-hearted if we are. They will naturally rate our expressions as above the actual feeling. If we repress our feelings, they will never know we have any. Besides, praise is a duty urged in the Bible often than prayer. No man can refuse to praise because he does not feel like it any more than he can refuse to pray for the same reason. It is one thing that he can do, and he can do that publicly. He may not be able to preach, exhort, pray or speak in the love-feast; but he can find appropriate expressions of praise. He may not have a due voice; but he can make melody in his heart if he keep it whole.

How much better some people's hearts are, in one sense, than they think! I mean how much finer musical instruments! If they were only kept in tune and practiced upon! When the wondrous harp has all its strings in unison; when the sensibilities, tastes, sentiments, emotions, passions and the diviner powers of the soul, reaching out after the supernatural, longing for symbols to express the ineffable, find themselves now reunited to one another and to their great Author, the first notes of praise are so sweet that the angels perform mute praise to hear, and Deity, stooping, owns in the plaintive wail of the weakest lamb returning to the fold the magic of music which is wanting in seraph symphonies.

T. A. S. A.

What Is the Test of a Powerful Conversion?

A few weeks ago I spent the night with a gentleman of another communion than ours, and he said to me: "I wanted to join the Methodist Church, but they would not take me."

"Well," said I, "that is strange. We take in all who want to flee from the wrath to come and be saved from sin."

He said: "Oh, yes! I know you say that; but the fact is you Methodists always discount a man if he does not go through a sweat—have a powerful conversion or a bright conversion, as you call it. I could not have that. I tried hard to have it. My mind was made up to serve God, to live a Christian life, and that's all there was of it. I could not sweat, could not cry nor shout—could not do anything of that kind. I saw that your people set more store on the outward demonstration than they did on the inward working, or I thought they did. They made a mighty do-over those who had what you call a powerful conversion, and they looked doubtfully on a quiet man like myself. I did not want to join with a people who would distrust me and discredit my religion because it was not the powerful-kind."

This talk set me a-thinking powerfully. Here was a good man; a man of faith and prayer, well reported by his neighbors, having a zeal for God and leading a quiet, uniform, consistent Christian life. He was a man of quiet, modest, retiring manners. He was brought up by religious parents, had been religiously inclined, if not religious, from infancy and childhood. He was a man of good sense, calm, quiet disposition and of inflexible purpose. His character and life made him a man of influence among his neighbors. Since I spent the night with him he got two of his fingers cut off in his mowing machine. When I met him I asked, "Were they shuply cut off or were they powerfully cut off?"

"Well," said he, "it was not so painful as you might think. My careless and the loss of time hurt me worse than anything else. They are gone, and there is no sense in grieving over split milk. I have fingers enough to work with, and I thank God for that."

Now, this man had erroneous views of the conditions of membership in the Methodist Church, and, doubtless, he was predisposed to another communion by his training and early associations, and, perhaps, he was better off, religiously, where he was than he would have been in any other church, and it is likely that he felt into the hands of some Methodist preacher who overestimated feeling and fervor when he should have been more carefully instructed in the kingdom of God. Any or all of these suppositions may or may not be true, and still we may ask, "What is a powerful conversion?"

"By what test do we judge of the powerfulness of conversions?" I do not object to shouting, laughing, crying, handshaking, and other demonstrations of feeling. Not in the least. I rather like these things. They suit the cut and bias of my emotional nature; they are in harmony with my feelings. I indulge in them freely; but they are not the tests of my daily experience of communion with God. I am glad they are not. I am not always in the feeling mood; but, if I know my own heart, I am determined to live and die in the service of my God. This purpose fixed in my soul, and attested by the witness of the Holy Ghost, is the sheet anchor of my confidence and my hope. "A desire to flee from the wrath to come and be saved from sin," and "this desire fixed in the soul," and "manifested by avoiding sin of every kind and by doing good of every possible sort," is after all the only reliable test of religious purpose. This is purpose put to the test. It comes out in experience, in life and in living; it results in the formation of character. This test will answer for the emotional and for the unemotional. If a conversion leads to this kind of living, it is just as powerful as God would have it be. It is the heart, the life—the whole life—that God wants rather than mere spirits of feeling which, in the nature of things, is subject to change. No matter what the state of my feelings may be, my purpose is to glorify God in my body and spirit whether I feel like it or not. Do not some of our people and some of our preachers, both directly and indirectly, magnify unduly mere feeling, outward demonstration—a "sweat"? How am I to know a powerful conversion from one that is not powerful? Will some one tell me?

GILDEROY.

The prohibitory amendment to the State Constitution of Maine was carried by a majority of 50,000 at the recent election. Republicans and Democrats alike gave it cordial support. When prohibition has been so long and fairly tried as in "the old Blue Tree State," the people will never return to the license system again. Partisan papers may sneer and ridicule; but this cause is entrenched in the moral convictions of the nation.

Methodism's Indebtedness to Endowments.

For years to come choice extracts from Bishop McTear's History of Methodism will be published and quoted. A suggestive excerpt on the above we give below. If it should stimulate liberal Centenary offerings anywhere for the endowment of a single college, the volume and the year will be blessed of God. What was secured to the great leaders of the Methodist movement in this way may equip alike many another true evangelist in the years to come. See how the providence of God utilized endowed scholarships in preparing his chosen instruments for the great revival. What a Centenary exhortation! Read the following:

Methodism owes a debt of gratitude to endowed scholarships, fellowships and institutions of learning. Without them Samuel Wesley and his sons, with George Whitefield, must have gone without the educational outfit which, under God, so mightily prepared them for their life-work. John was maintained six years at Charterhouse, and thence sent forward to Oxford upon this foundation. As fellow of Lincoln College, he matured and embodied his post-graduate attainments, and upon this income initiated so as to support his ministry. In the same way Charles, after becoming a "king's scholar," at Westminster, went through that training-school, and afterward graduated at the university. The income of Epworth was utterly unable to bear these charges. The arrangement that made it possible for the elder Wesley and for George Whitefield to get through as "servitors" is part of the same wisdom that lays a "foundation" to bless the ages. Let one think, if he can, of Methodism without these four men; and think of these four men without education.

To Our Agents.

As an inducement for the fall campaign, we make this extraordinary offer for new subscribers to the Advocate, viz: For ten new subscribers, with cash in full for same, we will send a full set (four volumes) of Jamieson, Faussett and Brown's Commentary, bound in half morocco; or for fifteen renewals and new subscribers, we will send the full set, postage prepaid—cash in full to accompany all orders.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the Advocate and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

ORVER & JAMIESON.

Bishop H. H. Kavanaugh.

Several years previous to his death, Bishop Kavanaugh entrusted to Rev. A. H. Redford, D. D., the task of writing his life, and one year ago, while in Florida, renewed the request. The work is just now completed, and the first thousand subscribed for. The work is published in two styles of binding, and sold by subscription only. The advertisement will be found in another column.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the Advocate. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the Advocate.

ORVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

When a man and woman are made one, the question, "Which one?" is a bothersome one until it is settled, as it soon is.

The attention of our readers is called to the advertisement of the house of J. C. Morris, on the fifth page of this paper. Any dealer desiring to purchase wood and willow ware, cordage, paper, etc., will find that their orders for such goods can be filled promptly, carefully and satisfactorily, by this concern. The business is under the personal management of Messrs. E. F. Dyer, E. P. and T. G. Mackie, who are also members of the firm. They solicit from their friends and brethren a liberal portion of their patronage. The house was established in 1834, and is therefore the oldest in its line in the southwest, and fully conversant with the wants of the trade.

A loan without security is a cyclone for a bank.

Let those who doubt what has often been said in reference to the efficacy of the New Life tonic, call at or send to the Depot and get the names and residences of those who have taken them, or who are now taking them.

Favorable weather for bay making—when it rains pickfords.

Her face was young, yet her hair was gray. She tried Parker's Hair Balsam, and now her hair is soft and brown. Only 50c.

Care will kill a cat. The cure must be exercised in taking aim.

The edition of Jamieson, Faussett and Brown's Commentary, issued by Messrs. Jerome B. James & Co., of Toledo, Ohio, and offered as a premium in another column, is really bound in a premium in another column. It gives home instruction given. Every preacher in the parsonage conferences can secure a complete set. See notice.

Why is a tight shoe like a fine summer? Because it makes the corn grow.

SANITARIUM, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate cures. Nose, Throat, Lungs, full idea, 30 p. route, cost free.

If you would be wealthy, get upon a mine. You will soon find you are better off.

Mr. Phillip Werlein, 135 Canal Street, New Orleans, sells pianos and organs at low prices and on easy payments. This house is reliable and fully guaranteed. Chickering, Knabe, and other pianos and organs can be bought for $50 cash and $10 monthly payments. A fine Werlein, either square or upright, is $300—10 per cent off for cash—shipped from factory, New York, direct or from warehouses, New Orleans. Mason & Danila's organs can be had at very low prices; other popular makers also. On organs taken in exchange for new ones, as part payment. An organ can be bought on $5 monthly payments, $5 as first payment. No family should be without music if possible, it is a pleasure which no one should be deprived of. All should sing and be happy.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

Send the Advocate to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with a steel rail; has adopted the standard gauge and a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, accommodations, and accommodating officers.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, please inform us by postal card whether in continue the Advocate or no.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the Advocate.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more beneficial results than any other preparation. It is sold by all druggists and by E. H. TRUAX, New York.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

WOODEN and WILLOW WARE, Cordage, Paper, Tinware, Base Balls, etc., Planks and Bottles, Ink and Chalk, Jammed Ware, Blacking, Brushes, etc., Live and Hoops, Cages, Mirrors, Matches, Oakum and Ostrs., Cotton Cards, Perfumery, Curry Combs, Padlocks, Cutlery and Knives, Fishing Tackle, Scales, Sieves, Furtraces, Trucks, etc., etc.

J. C. MORRIS,

40, 42 and 44 Tchopitonas Street

"PERFECTION"

Glass Fount Student Lamp,

THE NEW HIGH ARM SINGER SEWING MACHINE

IS SUPERIOR TO ALL!

Range of Work, Perfection of Stitch, Ease of Operation, Rapidity, and almost Noiseless.

Call, examine and be convinced. Singer Sewing Machine Co. 150 Canal Street, New Orleans. N. E. RUNDLE, Agent.

CYPRESS LANDS FOR SALE.

One thousand acres cypress timber lands, situated in townships 10 and 11, south range 10 east, south-western land District of Louisiana. For information, apply to N. O. Christian Advocate, 112 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

NO MORE NAUSEOUS DOSES.

It has been reserved to our swamps to furnish materials for the greatest cough and choking stop extant for all throat and lung complaints—the New Life Remedy. Contains no poison, and is delicious. Home references by thousands. Life Tonic, infallible for chills. Home Depot, 151 Julia St., N. O.

EDUCATIONAL.

LaGrange Female College, LAGRANGE, TENN. LaGrange is located on the Memphis & Charleston Railroad, forty-nine miles from Memphis, and three miles from Grand Junction, the intersection of the Chicago & New Orleans Railroad.

It is noted for health, fine scenery and good church privileges. LaGrange Female College was organized in 1855, and has educated a large number of pupils, who are her worthy representatives in Mississippi, Tennessee, Arkansas and Texas. Fall session opens Sept. 1. Faculty complete and experienced. Charges moderate. Address JAS. A. HEARD, Pres.

Southern Teachers' Agency.

881-18 Teachers to secure desirable positions. Give full information to Principals, Presidents and Trustees of schools and colleges, secure competent teachers to fill all classes of positions. Also recruits and sends school and college property. For circulars, stamps for reply and address Southern Teachers' Agency, or L. C. DICKEY, A. M., Manager, Birmingham, Ala.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

Located at Verona, Lee County, Miss. Directly on the Mobile & Ohio Railroad. Founded in 1870, and has been in successful operation since. Fifteen annual sessions begin September 1, 1884. Buildings and grounds ample and in good repair. Site beautiful and airy. Location healthful.

Board, lights and fuel, per month, $9. Washing, extra. Tuition, per month, from $2 to $5. For further information apply after August 20 to REV. W. E. BALLARD, President, Verona, Miss.

ASHEVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE,

IN THE "LAND OF THE SKY," ASHEVILLE, N. C.

The fall session opens September 10th. Faculty large and experienced. Course thorough. Musical and literary societies. Location celebrated for healthfulness. Charges low. Send for Catalogue. Address, REV. JAMES ATKINS, Jr.

WHITWORTH FEMALE COLLEGE,

BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

REV. H. F. JOHNSON, D. D., PRES. Faculty, 16 20. Pupils, 250-300. Boarding Pupils, 150-191. Music Pupils—Vocal and instrumental—60-200. Planes, 30.

Tuition in Literary Course and Board, 1 yr., $150-160; 3 yrs., $382; 4 yrs., $470.

LOCATION HEALTHFUL.

Instruction in literature, music, art, etc., thorough and practical. Send for a Catalogue.

Alabama Conference Female College.

Tuskegee, Ala.

Full and able Faculty. Number of pupils during the past year, 151. Standard of scholarship high. Advantages in Music and Art unsurpassed. Expenses very moderate for the advantages afforded. For full information send for catalogue. JOHN MASSEY, President, Tuskegee, Ala.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

FACULTY: F. M. GRACE, D. D., President. E. C. GRACE, A. M., Professor.

TEACHERS: MISS A. H. WILLIAMS, MISS ELLA POSTER, MISS ELLA SMITH, MISS EMMA RUTHERFORD, MISS R. J. HARR, Music. MISS R. M. DILLAKE, Music. MISS BELLE PRINNINGTON, Art. MISS K. L. HAYLOW, Government and Principal. MISS FLORENCE BARKLEY, Assistant.

FALL TERM OPENS SEPT. 10, 1884.

RATES: $170, $220 and $250 per session of 16 weeks. The thirtieth year begins under most favorable auspices. For Catalogue, address F. M. GRACE, President.

Collegiate Institute

HATON ROUGE, LA.

30th Session, BEGINNING OCTOBER 1, 1884.

This is a select Family Boarding School for BOYS, limited in number, where they are prepared for the best colleges, or for the professions or professional pursuits of life. The personal care of the Principal is given to the health, morals and manners of his pupils. The health record of the school is unrivaled.

For particulars and circular apply to W. H. M. MAMMOTH, Principal, or J. B. MAMMOTH, A. M., Assistant.

Louisiana State University

AND—

Agricultural and Mechanical College,

HATON ROUGE, LA.

Session Opens October 5th, and Closes July, 4th 1885.

For further information, address D. F. ROYD, President.

English and Classical School for Boys,

71 Prytain Street, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

NEXT SESSION BEGINS OCT. 1, 1884.

A few Boarding Pupils can be accommodated, and to them will be secured all the educational advantages afforded by frequent visits to the World's Great Exposition. For terms or other information address J. W. DYCK, Principal.

HIWASSEE COLLEGE.

FOUNDED 1819.

In the country, seven miles from Sweetwater Depot, East Tennessee.

Delicious butter and milk fresh from the cold spring house. Quiet retreat. Moral place. Moderate charges. Thorough work. Wide patronage. Possibilities, Hiwassee College, Tennessee. Mail daily, except Sunday.

J. H. BRUNNER, President.

Kavanaugh College.

A high grade Male and Female College, situated on the Healthy Pine Ridge of Southern Mississippi, 2 1/2 miles south of Hattiesburg, and 5 miles east of Anguilla.

The First Term Begins Sept. 29, 1884.

Buildings plain, but neat and comfortable. Pure food and healthful. It is to be a college for the masses; where the poor boy and girl may get an education as well as the wealthy; hence, while the grade will be high, the rates will be low.

RATES PER MONTH:

Board, including wash, lights and fuel.....$10 00
Tuition in Classical Department.....3 00
Tuition in Commercial Department.....2 00
Tuition in Primary Department.....1 00
Freshman.....2 00
Music on Piano or Organ.....1 00
Boarding for practical.....1 00
Vocal Music in class.....1 00
Vocal Music in solo singing.....4 00
Penial Drawing, Collegiate Department.....3 00
Penial Drawing, Intermediate Department.....2 00
Crash.....1 00
Oil Painting.....3 00

Boarders must furnish their own bed covering, pillow and褥, towel and soap articles. Exchanges quarterly in advance. The first may be delayed until tuition is ready for shipment. The college may be easily reached from Magnolia.

REV. H. WALTER FEATHERSTON, President.

CENTENARY COLLEGE,

JACKSON, LA.

OPENS First Monday in September, 1884. Ample Faculty. Excellent Preparatory Department. Complete Classical, scientific and business courses. Christian Education a specialty. Morality and Religion made prominent. Prompt attention in sickness. Reasonable and cultured society. Telegraphic connection. Access by Mississippi Valley Railroad. Fortunes of board and tuition sent for Catalogue.

D. M. RUSH, President.

Port Gibson Female College,

PORT GIBSON, MISS.

A prominent and scholarly member of the Mississippi Conference writes: "To no school, North or South, would I rather commit the training of our daughters."

Unsurpassed Facilities for Female Education. Corps of Teachers, full, competent and experienced.

Buildings of brick, large and commodious. Grounds beautiful, ample and splendidly adapted to pleasant and healthful recreation.

Music a specialty. Dress, none but plain allowed.

Terms, no later can be made elsewhere.

For Catalogue address REV. T. C. BRADFORD, President.

Emory & Henry College,

EMORY, VA.

This institution will begin its 4th Annual Session on the fourth day of September, 1884. Patronage is invited on the following grounds:

1. The location of the school is unrivaled for healthfulness and beauty.

2. Its equipments are, all in all, fully equal to those of any other college in our country.

3. The Faculty, recently enlarged, is fully competent to do first-class college work.

4. The terms are clearer than are offered by any other school of similar grade in the South.

5. The character of the work done in the past is the best guarantee for present efficiency. Reference is had to 4,000 young men who have been educated here.

For Catalogue or other information, address Rev. E. E. HUGHES, M. A., Vice-President.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending September 16, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	7 1/16 @
Ordinary	8 1/16 @
Good ordinary	8 1/16 @
Low middling	10 1/16 @
Middling	10 1/16 @
Good middling	10 1/16 @
Middling fair	11 1/16 @
Fair	10 1/16 @
Galveston middling	10 1/16 @
Mobile middling	10 1/16 @
St. Louis middling	10 1/16 @

SUGAR.
Inferior	31
Common	41
Good common	43
Fair	43
Good fair	43
Fully fair	43
Prime	51
Strictly Prime	51
Choice	51
Seconds	51
Yellow clarified	51
Gray clarified	51
Choice white	61
Granulated	71

MOLASSES.
Syrup	—
Fair	—
Prime	—
Choice	—
Fancy	—

RICE.
Choice	—
Prime	—
Good	—
Fair	—
Ordinary	—
Common	—
No. 2	—

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 3/4
Minnesota patents	6 25
Extra fancy	5 62 1/2
Wheat patents	5 75
Choice	3 90
Fancy	4 15

CORN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal	3 75
Corn meal	2 45
Grits	3 40
Hominy	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
CORN:
White	68
Yellow	67
Mixed	67
OATS:
Western	40
Texas rust-proof	—
Texas No. 2	39
BRAN:
at cwt.	80
HAY:
Choice	18 50
Prime	15 00

PROVISIONS.
PORK:
Mess	18 75
Prime mess	16 50
Rumps	16 50
BACON:
Choice breakfast	121
Shoulders	71
Sides, clear	111
Sides, clear rib	111
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	15
DRY SALT MEAT:
Shoulders	71
Sides, clear	101
Sides, clear rib	101

FISH.
MACKEREL:
No. 1, in bbls.	14 25
Half bbls.	7 75
No. 2, in bbls.	13 75
Half bbls.	6 25
No. 3, in bbls.	13 25
Half bbls.	7 00

GROCERIES.
COFFEE:
Rio, choice	91
Cordova, choice	12
Java, choice	22
BUTTER:
Western dairy	18
New York dairy	18
Country	20
LARD:
Choice	8
Choice	50
Fair	25
OLDS:
Coal, cases	18
Coal, bbls	13
Cotton seed	50
Lard	80

VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES:
Western, bulk	6 00
Country	—
POTATOES:
Louisiana	—
Western	1 00
KROUT:
at bbl.	4 50
ONIONS:
at bbl.	1 25

BALING STUFFS.
BAGGING:
12 lb.	101
2 lb.	111
BALING TWINE:
at lb.	13
TIES:
at bundle	1 30

SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	5 00
Young	2 00
Chickens, Southern	3 25
Young	1 75
Turkeys, Southern	9 00
Eggs:
Western	18
Southern	23
WOOL:
Louisiana	171
Burly	73
HIDES:
Greensalted	7
Dry salted	91
STAVES:
Oak, kegs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, casks	50 00
Oak, hogheads	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hogheads	40 00
Barrels	20 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	12 00
Meal	25 00
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	8
Sulphuric acid	8
Bone black	81

How to have a Clear Skin.
When the skin is yellow with bile, or thick and muddy from careless living, less than one bottle of Parker's Tonic will make it look fresh and clear again.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—The majority for Blaine in Maine is about 13,000, and the majority for prohibition about 50,000.

ST. PAUL, Sept. 10.—A special from Clear Lake, Wis., says late yesterday afternoon a cyclonic storm struck this place. The greater portion of the town is in ruins, and three lives were lost.

CHITTEWA FALLS, Wis., Sept. 10.—The storm at this place last night was the worst of the season. The river now is between 16 and 17 feet above low-water mark, and still rising rapidly.

New York, Sept. 11.—James Gordon Bennett, who has just returned from New York, surprises his old friends at the club and Belmont's by answering only with a glass of milk to all their champagne toasts. He swore off from drink before leaving Europe, the pledge to last until next New Year's day.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The annual meeting of the Women's Christian Temperance Union began to-day at the Garfield Memorial Church with rather a slim attendance. Mrs. Clara L. Beach was elected president for the ensuing year.

Eau Claire, Wis., Sept. 11.—Both the Chippewa and Eau Claire rivers began falling at noon, after reaching the unprecedented height of twenty-six feet, three feet higher than the great flood in 1881. Every bridge on the Chippewa is gone out, including the railroad bridges and two wagon bridges. In this city the loss of property is appalling. No satisfactory estimate can be made at this time. In and between Chippewa Falls and Eau Claire the loss will not fall short of $1,500,000, and may greatly exceed that sum. Business houses on all sides of the two rivers were submerged. In this city over 200 houses have been swept away. Only one life has been lost so far as heard from.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Advices from Warsaw state that arrests of nihilists are of daily occurrence. Six persons were arrested Sunday morning. The police issued an order prohibiting within 300 paces of the Czar. Soldiers and gendarmes were ordered to fire at any one who crossed the Czar's route as he entered Warsaw.

NAPLES, Sept. 11.—The situation is slightly improved. King Humbert to-day visited the hospitals, and also the camps of the poorer classes. The municipal authorities, with the approval of the archbishop, prohibited all religious processions. Two hundred volunteers have offered their services for the cholera hospitals. In this city during the twenty-four hours ended at 9 o'clock this evening there have been 906 fresh cases and 329 deaths from cholera. In other parts of the province in the same time there were 19 fresh cases and 13 deaths.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—According to the official statements the total number of forces under the French flag in Tonquin is 19,000. Of these, 4,000 are Europeans and the remainder auxiliary native troops.

ROME, Sept. 14.—From midnight Friday till Sunday afternoon there had been 1200 cholera cases and 687 deaths at Naples. Since the beginning of the outbreak there has been 3297 deaths.

Merchants and grocers, hotel-keepers, colleges, managers of boarding department, and others would do well to address Mrs. P. M. Goodwyn, manufacturer, 179 Girard St., N. O., for price list of Goodwyn's Eureka Yeast Powder, a city positively free from Alum or any other harmful ingredient. It not only invites, but squarely challenges comparison with any and all standard articles in its line.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS
—THE BEST TONIC.
This medicine, combining iron with pure vegetable tonics, quickly and completely cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Impure Blood, Anemia, Chills and Fevers, and all the ailments resulting from Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver.
It is invaluable for Diseases peculiar to Women, and all who lead sedentary lives. It does not irritate the stomach, but produces constipation—other Iron medicines do. It enriches and purifies the blood, stimulates the appetite, aids the assimilation of food, relieves heartburn and belching, and strengthens the muscles and nerves.
For Intermittent Fevers, Lassitude, Lack of Energy, &c., it has no equal.
The genuine has above trade mark and crossed red lines on wrapper. Take no other.
Made only by BROWN'S CHEMICAL CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

A Champion Book FOR BOYS.
"Gilderoy's Stories" is a rollicking, breezy, bright book for boys.
Send seventy-five cents to the author
R. G. PORTER,
Verona, Miss.
By mail, postpaid, only seventy-five cents.

THOS. J. CARVER, W. L. BAKER,
CARVER & BAKER,
Cotton Factors
—AND—
COMMISSION MERCHANTS,
44 Perdido Street,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

MOBILE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Grand Day, at St. Elmo	Oct. 11, 12
St. Francis Street	Oct. 13
Chapel, at T. R. R.	Oct. 13
Lower Street, at St. Elmo	Oct. 13
Toulumville, at Roberts' Chapel	Nov. 1, 2
Franklin Street	Nov. 1, 2
Union Springs circuit, at St. Stephen's	Nov. 1, 2
Walden	Nov. 1, 2
St. Paul's	Nov. 1, 2

EUFULA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Louisville circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 11, 12
Clayton	Oct. 12
Reid circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 12
Henry circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 12
Skipperville circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 12
Col. Hill circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 12
Ozark circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 12
Perote circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 12
Union and Midway, at Tabernacle	Oct. 12
Union circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 12
Union circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 12
Union circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 12

PENSACOLA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Powhatan, at Ryceville	Sept. 20, 21
Milton station	Sept. 20, 21
St. Andrew's	Sept. 20, 21
Stockton, at Rockton	Sept. 20, 21
Perote circuit, at Tabernacle	Sept. 20, 21
Warrington at Warrington	Sept. 20, 21
Douglasville, at Mt. Carmel	Nov. 1, 2
Bay Minette, at Swift's	Nov. 1, 2
Georgetown, at South Butler	Nov. 1, 2
Evergreen, at Fairfield	Nov. 1, 2
Repton circuit, at Tabernacle	Nov. 1, 2
Monterey, at Forest House	Dec. 6, 7

GREENSBORO DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Greensboro station	Sept. 20, 21
Havana circuit, at Carthage	Sept. 20, 21
Greene circuit, at Carthage	Sept. 20, 21
Warrington circuit, at Carthage	Sept. 20, 21
Cuba circuit, at Carthage	Sept. 20, 21
Livingston circuit, at Carthage	Sept. 20, 21
Gainesville circuit, at Carthage	Sept. 20, 21
Butler and Mt. Sterling, at Carthage	Sept. 20, 21
Gaston circuit, at Carthage	Sept. 20, 21
Benjamin and Jefferson	Sept. 20, 21
Portland circuit	Sept. 20, 21
Greensboro circuit	Sept. 20, 21

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MERIDIAN DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Marion, at Marion	Oct. 11, 12
Clarke, at Union	Oct. 11, 12
Winchester, at Union	Oct. 11, 12
Vicksburg circuit, at Union	Oct. 11, 12
Yazoo circuit, at Union	Oct. 11, 12
Yazoo circuit, at Union	Oct. 11, 12
Yazoo circuit, at Union	Oct. 11, 12
Yazoo circuit, at Union	Oct. 11, 12
Yazoo circuit, at Union	Oct. 11, 12
Yazoo circuit, at Union	Oct. 11, 12

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Ellettsville, at Bethel	Sept. 13, 14
Mt. Carmel, at Bethel	Sept. 13, 14
Ocean Springs, at Bethel	Sept. 13, 14
Warrington, at Bethel	Sept. 13, 14
Americus, at Bethel	Sept. 13, 14
Vanclaire, at Bethel	Sept. 13, 14
Poplarville, at Bethel	Sept. 13, 14
Shreveport circuit, at Bethel	Sept. 13, 14
Shreveport circuit, at Bethel	Sept. 13, 14
Shreveport circuit, at Bethel	Sept. 13, 14

JACKSON DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14

BRANDON DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14

VICKSBURG DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Port Gibson station	Sept. 13, 14
Dumfries, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Vicksburg station	Sept. 13, 14
Payette, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Payette, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Payette, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Payette, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Payette, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Payette, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14
Payette, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 13, 14

WOODVILLE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Wilkinson circuit, at Woodville	Oct. 4, 5
Wilkinson circuit, at Woodville	Oct. 4, 5
Wilkinson circuit, at Woodville	Oct. 4, 5
Wilkinson circuit, at Woodville	Oct. 4, 5
Wilkinson circuit, at Woodville	Oct. 4, 5
Wilkinson circuit, at Woodville	Oct. 4, 5
Wilkinson circuit, at Woodville	Oct. 4, 5
Wilkinson circuit, at Woodville	Oct. 4, 5
Wilkinson circuit, at Woodville	Oct. 4, 5
Wilkinson circuit, at Woodville	Oct. 4, 5

SARDIS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
COLUMBUS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Taupo, at Union	Sept. 13, 14
Wet. Point and Thibodaux	Sept. 13, 14
Brookville, at Union	Sept. 13, 14
Brookville, at Union	Sept. 13, 14
Brookville, at Union	Sept. 13, 14
Brookville, at Union	Sept. 13, 14
Brookville, at Union	Sept. 13, 14
Brookville, at Union	Sept. 13, 14
Brookville, at Union	Sept. 13, 14
Brookville, at Union	Sept. 13, 14

GRENADA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Grenada station	Sept. 6, 7
Water Valley, Wood Street	Sept. 6, 7
Grenada circuit	Sept. 6, 7
Charleston circuit	Sept. 6, 7
Paula circuit	Sept. 6, 7
Coffeeville circuit	Sept. 6, 7
Wesley Chapel	Sept. 6, 7
Oxford circuit	Sept. 6, 7
Oxford circuit	Sept. 6, 7
Oxford circuit	Sept. 6, 7
Oxford circuit	Sept. 6, 7

SARDIS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7
Senatobia circuit, at Senatobia	Sept. 6, 7

GREENVILLE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Greenville	Sept. 11
Cherry Hill	Sept. 11
Cherry Hill	Sept. 11
Cherry Hill	Sept. 11
Cherry Hill	Sept. 11
Cherry Hill	Sept. 11
Cherry Hill	Sept. 11
Cherry Hill	Sept. 11
Cherry Hill	Sept. 11
Cherry Hill	Sept. 11

WINONA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Keweenaw and Duluth	Sept. 6, 7
Lexington	Sept. 6, 7
Winona	Sept. 6, 7
Winona	Sept. 6, 7
Winona	Sept. 6, 7
Winona	Sept. 6, 7
Winona	Sept. 6, 7
Winona	Sept. 6, 7
Winona	Sept. 6, 7
Winona	Sept. 6, 7

HOLLY SPRINGS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
New Salem circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30, 31
Holly Springs circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30, 31
Holly Springs circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30, 31
Holly Springs circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30, 31
Holly Springs circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30, 31
Holly Springs circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30, 31
Holly Springs circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30, 31
Holly Springs circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30, 31
Holly Springs circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30, 31
Holly Springs circuit, at Center Hill	Aug. 30, 31

||
||
||

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 39.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1469.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

PRINTED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

AS B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

WEBSTER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Single copies, 10 cents.

Advertisements, 10 cents per line.

Foreign postage, 50 cents per annum.

Postage paid at New Orleans, La.

Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Act of October 3, 1879, authorized on September 15, 1884.

Postmaster: This publication is entered as second class matter, October 3, 1879, under No. 100,000, and is authorized to mail at that rate of postage.

Postpaid.

Third class matter, 10 cents per annum.

Fourth class matter, 5 cents per annum.

Fifth class matter, 2 cents per annum.

Sixth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Seventh class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Eighth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Ninth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Tenth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Eleventh class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twelfth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirteenth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fourteenth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fifteenth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Sixteenth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Seventeenth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Eighteenth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Nineteenth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twentieth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twenty-first class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twenty-second class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twenty-third class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twenty-fourth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twenty-fifth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twenty-sixth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twenty-seventh class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twenty-eighth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Twenty-ninth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirtieth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirty-first class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirty-second class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirty-third class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirty-fourth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirty-fifth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirty-sixth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirty-seventh class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirty-eighth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Thirty-ninth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fortieth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Forty-first class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Forty-second class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Forty-third class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Forty-fourth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Forty-fifth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Forty-sixth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Forty-seventh class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Forty-eighth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Forty-ninth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fiftieth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fifty-first class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fifty-second class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fifty-third class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fifty-fourth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fifty-fifth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fifty-sixth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fifty-seventh class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fifty-eighth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Fifty-ninth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Sixtieth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Sixty-first class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Sixty-second class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Sixty-third class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Sixty-fourth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Sixty-fifth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Sixty-sixth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Sixty-seventh class matter, 1 cent per annum.

Sixty-eighth class matter, 1 cent per annum.

the neck, and when the head of the culprit is placed into it the whole frame is nailed together. It is impossible for a man with one of these yokes on to feed himself, for he can not get his hand to his mouth. Some one must feed him.

Our first Sabbath in this great idolatrous, wicked land of China, can never be forgotten by us. Feelings of sincere gratitude filled our hearts, and we praised God that he had so kindly cared for us all along our perilous journey, delivering us from all danger and bringing us in safety to the shores of China. The day was spent in reading God's word and praising his holy name. His word was precious to us that holy Sabbath, and we felt we could forever praise the Lord for all the benefits we had received. We were assured that the "goodness and mercy of the Lord had followed us all our days."

Attended our native church in one corner of the mission compound, and heard our native preacher, Bro. Li, preach from these words, "Come unto me all ye that are heavy laden and I will give you rest." I could not understand one word he said, but I was deeply interested to see him so earnest and zealous in preaching to his heathen fellow-countrymen who were present. The number to hear him was quite small. Many passed by, others would call in for a minute or two, while others remained until the close of the discourse. Some had vegetables for sale, others had chickens, and some, too, would smoke their pipes until told not to do so. Quite a number laughed and talked and gazed at us, evidently not listening to the preacher's words. When I looked out upon the people, the day did not seem to me like the Sabbath and a day of rest. Chinese were busily engaged at their work, shops open, men carrying heavy burdens, the wealthy riding in their chairs, and altogether it seemed like a week-day. It was a sad sight to us, and we realized the fact more than ever before that we were among a heathen people who knew nothing of the true God and his holy Sabbath. Our hearts went out in pity for them, and earnest prayers for their conversion, and I longed to have my tongue unloosed that I might tell them Jesus loved them and died on the cross to redeem them and give them eternal life. Many of these poor people who listened to the preacher looked as though they had no thought above eating and drinking.

Canonading was going on all Sabbath day between the imperial troops and the insurgents. There were ten thousand imperial troops encamped around the city, and there were five or six hundred insurgent troops in the city. During the day and night cannon balls came whistling through the air, and especially at night they came over the mission home, making our nights exceedingly uncomfortable, for we did not know what moment one might be thrown into the house. These guns were evidently aimed at foreigners' dwellings, for they had not forgotten the battle of "Muddy Flat." I will here give an account of that battle:

"Storming of the entrenched imperialist camp by the British and Americans at Shanghai, Tuesday, April 4, 1854. In consequence of an attack made by imperialist soldiers on the foreign settlement April 3, the evacuation of all the camps were demanded by the British consul on Tuesday, April 4. The representatives of France and America agreed with the British consul as to the absolute necessity, with a view to the safety of the foreign community, of enforcing the demand. Accordingly the imperial authorities were informed that, failing the abandonment of the camps by four P. M., the naval forces of Great Britain and the United States would proceed to occupy them by force of arms.

"At half-past two P. M. the men were landed from two British men-of-war and from the United States sloop Plymouth. They were drawn up in front of the English Church until a few minutes before three o'clock, when no pacific communication having been received the columns moved forward, accompanied by the Shanghai volunteers to take up their positions. A halt was made half way up the rising course, while the officers went forward to reconnoitre. On their return the order was given to advance. The Americans, under Capt. Kelly, accompanied by Mr. Murphy, United States consul, and several volunteers, took the left branch of the ground with three guns. The British, under Capt. O'Callaghan and Keane, accompanied by the British consul and Mr. Wade, who commanded the volunteers, took the right with one field piece. There was a further halt at the end of the course, during which an evasive communication was received from the Tootai of the city. He was the presiding officer of the native city. No sign of a move being apparent in the camps, and the imperialists having already opened fire upon the American column, the order to engage was given. Shells were thrown into the camps from the field piece under Lieut. Montgomery with great precision and effect, while the main body of the British naval forces, in conjunction with the volunteers, moved on to occupy them. To effect this a detour had to be made beyond the riding course, as the bridge which formerly led across the Yang-Kyung-ling had been previously broken down. The creek was crossed at the wooden bridge to the westward of Paddy Bird Grove. Six marines and six volunteers were stationed at this point to protect the rear of the attacking party. On crossing the bridge the regular forces under Capt. O'Callaghan and Keane advanced to the southeastward, while the volunteers under Mr. Wade advanced to the south, so as to cover the flank of the main attack.

"The shelling had now begun to take effect, and numbers began to retreat from the west side of the camps. As the men advanced upon the north front of the most northerly camps, numbers of soldiers were visible behind the embankments. On their rear approach, and as they were concentrating upon a gateway leading into the camps, before which a wooden board had been erected, a cannon was discharged, which killed one seaman of the encounter and wounded several others. The men went bravely forward and the volunteers advanced to the right. A volley of musketry was fired by the imperialists, on which they had evidently relied, but the ditch was crossed and the camp taken. At this time one of the volunteers was dangerously wounded by a musket shot through the head. The imperialists now retreated rapidly towards their camp on the Soehow Creek. The camps were soon set on fire, and as there was a fresh breeze blowing the flames spread rapidly. The order to retire was now given—two wounded Chinese found in the camp were removed to a place of safety, and the troops defiled towards the north along the banks of the creek. The Americans in the meantime had done their part well and bravely, but with considerable casualties. They were unable to get into the camps in consequence of being unprovided with the means of crossing the creek, and after their occupation by the British they retired to defend the rear, towards the Soehow Creek, where the imperialists were reassembling. Two war-junks lying in the creek fired two broadsides. The shots were not badly aimed, but they fortunately took no effect.

"The return was accomplished without further incident, the advancing bodies of soldiers having been effectually checked by the fire at the field pieces. The rear guard left at the wooden bridge was compelled to retire upon the guns, as the numbers of the enemy approaching were too large and the fire too hot."

"The affair did not occupy two hours of active fighting, and the object was satisfactorily accomplished before six P. M. The conduct of the troops was exemplary throughout, and reflected great credit upon the commanding officers. We noticed great coolness on the part of Lieut. Dew, of the encounter, who was the first man in the camp. The volunteers also remained very cool under fire, and altogether the imperialists received a lesson which will give greater security for our lives and property than we have had for some time past.

Yours in Christian Fellowship,
J. W. LAMBUTH.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, July 23, 1884.

Our Dead.

One more of our great and good men has passed away! Two of our beloved Bishops in one year! But still, as it was said in the days of our fathers, "they die well." If the providence of God has favored our beloved Methodism in other respects it has certainly been no less propitious in providing for us our chief overseers. All of them were of spotless character through life, wise in counsel and their example worthy of universal emulation. Perhaps it would not be amiss to repeat just here the remark of an eminent Methodist lady, now in heaven, no doubt. She was interviewed by an Episcopal Bishop and urged to come back to "the church." By way of impressing her with the invalidity of our episcopacy, he asked her: "Mrs. D., who made your Bishops?" She replied: "God made our Bishops, and that's the reason why there are no Onderdonks among them." There "ended the first lesson" in proselytizing in that case. Any one familiar with the history of the Episcopal Church in the United States will see the point. I have seen and known personally, and at times had the privilege of intimate and official connection and communion with all our Bishops, from Bishop Soule down to the present time, except Wilson, Hargrave and Granberry. I have met Bishop Wilson and heard him preach before he was made Bishop. Soule, Andrew, Paine, Early, Wightman, Capers, Doggett, Marvin, Kavanaugh—and now George F. Pierce are gone! How the church mourns for those lamented dead! Still "the work goes on." As in time past, if our people are faithful God will provide leaders for our Israel. The mantle of these Ephraims will rest upon Ephraims, who will as faithfully and acceptably serve the church, no doubt. While it may appear to some in these degenerate times that our ministry is in some instances wanting in the fiery zeal and earnestness of the former generation, and the fruits of their labor are not so abundant, I am sure no one can say that the Bishops are not still a self-denying, laborious set of men "abounding in the work of the Lord." With the travel and labor requisite to attend the Annual and District Conferences of our church, certainly our episcopacy is no sinecure. There are few men equal to the task. I am persuaded that some of our Bishops have been overworked. The zeal of God's house has often taken them. The dead are enshrined in our memory. Let us pray for the living ones and confidently trust that God will raise up holy men to fill the vacant places.

MARTIN PARSONS, Sept. 10, 1884.

Provoking Unto Love.

BY REV. J. B. A. ARRENS, D. D.

Oh, the rarity! Inciting to love, awakening, encouraging, cherishing love, how seldom! Some boys find delight in setting dogs on each other. They delight in canine enmity. So some men, and women too, find pleasure by instilling a spirit of distrust, inducing to acrimonious opposition, inciting to hate. Many are but firebrands swung by some demon's hand, all around kindling the flames of ill-will and enmity. Hypocritically fault finding, chronically censorious, backbiting and slanderous, retelling among their associates all current depreciatory remarks, they succeed in turning brother against brother and begetting unrest and asperity. They are apostles of hate.

The world is full of cess pools from which emanate miasmas of enmity. These pools must be filled, not fed, must be filled and converted into fruitful gardens, where the flowers of paradise luxuriously grow. Thorns and briars, wounding the feeling of our associates, must be removed. Peacemakers are called the children of God. Bringing men, whose hearts have been estranged in love together, is an employment of which angels might be justly proud.

Men are unhappy. They seem merry, but are miserable. They seem cheerful, but are nevertheless filled with gloom and darkness. Men hide their tears and suppress their sighs. They affect peace when there is no peace. What can give relief to the suffering thousands? We have homes for destitute widows, asylums for the orphan and infirm, hospitals for the sick. Where is the panacea for the broken-hearted? Where is the refuge for the poor nursing of the storm? Love is the refuge. Love, the catholic for all human woes. Restore men to love. Induce them to love. Loving and being loved bids farewell to all our fears and wipes our weeping eyes.

Harvard, Penobscot and other philanthropists have done much for the human family. We can do as much, if not more, by provoking unto love. Large pecuniary gifts may not be at our disposal, we may not be able to build hospitals and endow colleges, yet may the least among us become a great benefactor to our race by provoking unto love. He who sows most the sacred seeds of love, affectionately watering the tender plants with tears of sympathy, who induces to love by loving, lives a life akin to that in heaven. He who loves most and most induces others "to love, lives most."

All love love; all praise love; but only few are unselfishly loved; but few unselfishly love; fewer still heed St. Paul's injunction to provoke unto love. A brother, now in heaven, formerly a member of a church of which we were pastor, during winter sent to the desolate homes of the poor in his church a necessary supply of wood and coal. We visited one of the recipients of these benefactions. The brother wanted to know the name of his benefactor. Not being able to give it, he mentioned in rapid succession more than twelve names, all members of the church. One of these, doubtless, he thought, was the kind donor. We advised to love all twelve, even the whole membership, for it was possible, he had not yet thought of the right person. He did so, and he was the happiest church member we ever met with. That sainted donor knew how to provoke unto love.

Soon after removal to our present home, last spring, we were one morning after family prayers not a little surprised to find on our gallery two beautiful flower pots with fragrant flowers in full bloom. Who brought them? Who had thought of giving us pleasure by this delicate token of kindest regard? No one could tell us. Even now we know it not. But we were provoked, constrained to love all whom we knew in the third district, since, presumably, one of them had been the benefactor.

We knew a preacher who could not endure when the hearts of brethren were estranged. He visited them alternately and by leading the conversation induced each to say something undoubtedly praiseworthy of the supposed enemy. In turn he would inform the parties what he had heard. Often he was met with the remark: "That is impossible. That person is my enemy." But the preacher insisted that he had heard with his own ears what he had communicated. Usually it was not long until the supposed enemies met and after explanation became friends.

Endowment of Whitworth College.

I have talked but little on this subject, but have thought much. A plan for an endowment was once proposed and advocated, I think, by Bro. J. M. Weems at one of our District Conferences, but it was afterwards opposed by a prominent member of the Board of Trustees upon the ground that all of our college buildings were of wood. Said he: "Put up a brick building and then endow." Since then two large brick buildings have been built. The last one is now receiving the finishing touches. A stranger, who went through it a few days ago, said that it is the best arranged school building he ever saw—better than any at our State University. Now, that we have the brick buildings, shall the college be endowed? Who says nay? Who says Amen?

A few days ago two brethren, Rev. Joseph Nicholson, of McComb, and our pastor, Bro. Charles F. Smith, after some conversation on the subject, said they would give their notes for one hundred dollars each, payable in ten equal annual installments without interest. The writer suggested that this may be the beginning of an endowment fund that will grow to a hundred thousand dollars. Why not? Let the friends of the college say, Amen!

I have made up my mind to enter upon this work heartily as the next thing to be done in the development of Whitworth.

A circular will be issued soon setting forth the plan fully, circulated widely and will call for contributions. The plan is practical, will not be burdensome to any, unless to myself, and ought to accomplish the object in view. I shall be glad to have suggestions from any one as to best methods to secure success. May God bless the enterprise and lift upon us the light of his countenance, Amen!

H. P. JOHNSON.

ROCKHAVEN, MISS., Sept. 20, 1884.

"A Centenary Thank Offering from Every Member."

What now remains is to give the people a chance to make their thank offering. Our Centenary plans, carefully based as they were upon those so successfully worked in England in 1833 and in America in 1863, need for their full success the giving the people a chance. The press of the church has done noble service in keeping the Centenary of American Methodism before the public, and has received strong commendations from leading minds of other churches. Our methods are being held up by the press of the Methodist Episcopal Church to excite like enthusiasm among their people. While our papers have not found a place in every home as they should, and other ideals of the year are not realized, as perfect ideals never are, yet, by the help of circular letters sent to the pastors for distribution in every household of the church, and by Centenary services held in every church, the people have been informed as to the nature of our Centenary celebration, and have been making ready for their thank offering.

The year has been one of great advance in every interest of the church—more conversions, more new churches, more parsonages, more missionary money, more for church extension, more for education than in any former year of our history. This is as it should be. Our growing needs require it all. Our increased opportunities demand that we preach the gospel to more souls and lead more to Christ than ever. At no time since the fall Conference of 1883 but what some section of the church has been visited by the outpouring of the Holy Ghost. A people thus blessed will not fail to make a Centenary thank offering. It is the experience of many a pastor this year that his people never gave so cheerfully to any cause. In various instances the aged have laid their thank offering upon the pulpit before the Centenary services began; unable for months to attend other services they have come with glad hearts to this. As a rule the changes which have given most to local Centenary objects have given most to national objects.

Let every pastor in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, give his people a chance, following up the public thank offering by private opportunities, giving those whose names are not on the cards taken up at the public services, and the result will be a cause for universal thanksgiving. Let us have faith in our people, and above all, faith in the church, which has been so signally crowned with God's blessing for a hundred years.

Anxious hearts in other lands are awaiting the results of the year. Our great connections have been shown their faith in the church, which must not be disappointed. "A Centenary thank offering from every member," each church seeking to realize an average of at least two dollars per member, and the great result will be reached.

E. R. HENDRIX,

Chairman Centenary Com.

—Man's extremity is God's opportunity. Therefore wait upon God.

—Prize the privilege of learning God's word; and hear with meekness, prayer and attention.

—Hope is like the wing of an angel, soaring up to heaven and bearing our prayers to the throne of God.—Jeremy Taylor.

—The fortunate man is he who, born poor or nobody, works gradually up to wealth and consideration, and having got them, dies before he finds they were not worth so much trouble.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Rev. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. I. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1884.

$225.

We spent last Sunday evening in Canton, the home of our boyhood, and had the pleasure of participating in a Centenary meeting. A discourse was delivered, but no collection taken. Bro. Singleton, the pastor, reported, however, that $225 had been contributed as a Centenary offering from his charge, and that other amounts would follow.

$320.50.

Last Thursday night a Centenary meeting was held at Clinton, Miss., Rev. D. P. Bradford, pastor. There was a large congregation, a discourse by the editor, and a generous offering of $290.50, which with the amount already raised by the pastor aggregated $320.50. Bro. Bradford expects the Centenary contributions from his charge to reach seven or eight hundred dollars.

"Pope's Theology" was up for discussion in the Cincinnati Conference, and, after a long debate, a resolution was passed requesting the Bishops to eliminate it from the course of study. All agreed that it was an able work, but not a reliable text-book. It had much good in it, but some admixture of dead lies. Methodists are jealous of their doctrinal integrity.

The shooting affair on the Illinois Central train, near Jackson, Miss., last week, suggests the importance of prohibiting pistol as well as liquor selling in the States. Conductor McShane, one of the most affable and gentlemanly of men, came near losing his life in an effort to protect the passengers on his train. This thought has occurred to us, and we give it to our future legislators without charge—train conductors and street car drivers should be made police officers, fully empowered, under bond and penalty, to enforce the criminal laws of the States. They could then not simply enforce a hoodlum to cease his rowdiness, but arrest him and imprison him at the nearest station. This would be a protection to passengers and new into decency many a vicious young outlaw.

"He could lay aside the pageant of his thoughts for the pomp of his position." Thus a writer in Harper's Magazine, for October, refers to Lord Bacon and his fall. And that is the history of many a man in official life. Intoxicated with the sham and show of power, he subordinates to its maintenance his great gifts of intellect and grace of heart. And their fall is just as sure, though not as ignominious, as England's greatest philosopher and jurist. He did not see, as our author further observes, that "the real grandeur of his office was in its purity, not its pomp; and it was in trying to maintain its pomp instead of its purity that he fell." If every citizen in official life could appreciate that distinction, the present presidential campaign, in spirit and methods, would never be repeated.

Those were noble words uttered by Mrs. Wesley when her consent was asked for John and Charles to accompany Gen. Oglethorpe to Georgia as missionaries to the Indians. Though a widow far advanced in years, and dependent upon them largely for support and protection, she thankfully consented, and added: "If I had twenty sons, I should rejoice that they were all so employed, though I should never see them more." Grand words they, and only worthy of the patriarch of Methodism. They breathe the Christy spirit of a true, intelligent consecration. She felt honored above women that God should choose her to bear and train for himself sons to become missionary heralds of salvation. Hers was not the pride of the mother of the Gracchi, but the rejoicings of Hannah, the Judean matron, whose son was counted worthy to be a priest and judge in Israel. Better be the mother of a Christian hero who will shine as the stars forever and ever, than of a worldly demi-god, flattered and applauded for awhile, but whose memory will rot. Those parents should rejoice rather than repine whose son or daughter is called to the foreign mission field.

Andrew's Zeal and Example.

Among the first disciples of John the Baptist and the first trophy of our Lord's ministry was Andrew, the brother of Simon Peter. Prepared by the testimony and teaching of the Baptist, Andrew followed Jesus as soon as he appeared. Catching at once the grandeur of his spirit and imbued with his life, with determined fidelity Andrew linked his own destiny with his newly recognized and loved Redeemer. So enraptured at having found his Lord, and rejoicing in his marvelous wisdom and love, he at once sought for Simon Peter to relate the glad tidings. And the record states, "he brought him to Jesus." This was the natural, necessary, unrestrained impulse of his inner spirit. And so is the religion of Christ. It is essentially diffusive; it requires effort to confine it. When our Lord touched and healed the leper he charged him to tell no man, but he couldn't keep it. He went abroad spreading the fame and power of his divine Restorer. A knowledge of Christ is opposed to monopoly. The man who spiritually discerns and loves Jesus is anxious that others shall know him and love him, and feel his magic power. He would not, like the pitiless miser, hoard his precious treasure and keep it from the knowledge of others, but scatter it with lavish, loving hand for the enrichment and happiness of the world.

In the spirit and conduct of Andrew we have exemplified the aim of all Christian effort. To bring men to Jesus is the Christian's high calling and highest joy. Nothing so thrills his soul with hope and happiness as the sight of others brought to Christ, and especially through his agency. To win men away from sin and to the Lord is his great concern. To achieve this, if need be, he would sacrifice much of time, comfort and effort. To it every care and interest are subservient. And this indicates the single purpose of preaching. It is not to entertain, but to convict and comfort. It is not to discuss science, expound philosophy or formulate ecclesiastical dicta, but to declare a broad, unselfish, world-encompassing evangelism. In all preaching the cross must be conspicuous, so that sinners can but see it. Time is too short, the soul of too much value, the heart too deceitful and our enemies too subtle and powerful for him who stands in Christ's stead to spend opportunity and talent in vain speculation. Jesus must be the trunk-thought of every sermon and the inspiration of every prayer.

Again, we find in the zeal and conduct of Andrew the idea of the church. The church was established that by organized and concentrated effort the work of bringing men to Jesus might be facilitated and more surely accomplished. This idea is fundamental in God's church—the organization and direction of Christian impulse as illustrated in Andrew. It is a confederation of believers for mutual aid in advancing the Savior's mission on earth. Order, laws, government are necessary prudential arrangements for the more efficient operation and direction of this divine purpose. Evangelical churches, then, are not organized to defend or disseminate peculiar dogmas of non-essential value, but to associate and confederate for victory over sin and for saving the lost. There may develop distinctive denominational features of doctrine and polity; but the primal, divine idea of the church is to save men—to bring them to Jesus. A church founded on and sustained by the propagation of a proscriptive dogma has misconceived the spirit of Christianity. The dissemination of a set of theological opinions is not the true idea of church association.

Montana Conference.

This body met in Stevensville, Montana, August 21, Bishop J. C. Granbery presiding. Two were admitted on trial and one, Rev. R. D. Wordley, received by transfer. We have seen no statistical report; but a correspondent of the Nashville Advocate says, "There was an increase in every department of church work." Dr. Morton, our church extension secretary, and Rev. Richard Boyce, of England, were present and added much to the interest of the session. The Conference was a revival occasion, there being a number of conversions and nine accessions to the church. Rev. T. W. Flowers is supernumerary. The following are the appointments.

HELENA DISTRICT.—L. B. Stedder, P. E. Helena and Fairview, to be supplied; Townsend and Radersburg, E. Lee; Bozeman, to be supplied; Bozeman circuit, to be supplied; Butte, to be supplied by R. Brynes; Willow Creek, J. L. M. Smith; Boulder and Whitehall, J. B. Whitford; Anaconda and Deer Lodge, E. J. Stanley; Stevensville, R. D. Wordley.

Editorial Correspondence.

AN EVENING AT CLINTON.

In response to a kind invitation from Pastor Bradford we ran down to Clinton, last Thursday afternoon, to attend a Centenary service. A good meeting had been in progress during the week, resulting in several accessions to the church. The congregation was large and listened patiently to a lengthy discussion of Methodism. An appeal for Centenary contributions resulted in an offering of $200.50. Other amounts had been given previously, aggregating $350.50. Fifteen dollars had been given for the school in Rio de Janeiro. We feel quite sure that Bro. Bradford's pastorate will rank among the foremost in Centenary liberality and loyalty.

We were glad to hear from him that several revival meetings had been conducted on his work, resulting most graciously. He purposes the organization of a new church at one point where a successful series of meetings were held recently. With thanks to Bro. Rice and family for hospitality and many friends for a cordial welcome and generous hearing, we left by the ten P. M. train to meet an engagement, the next day, at Brookhaven.

A JOINT DISCUSSION AT BROOKHAVEN.

In response to urgent appeal we spent Friday last in Brookhaven, and participated in a joint discussion on the subject of prohibition. Leaving Clinton at ten P. M., close connection was made at Jackson with the south-bound train of the Illinois Central, and at one A. M. we were at Brookhaven. Our special friend, Mr. B. T. Hobbs, editor of the Brookhaven Leader, was at the depot to bid us welcome and light our pathway to the hospitable home of Dr. H. F. Johnson. Dr. Johnson and family have all returned from the mountains of North Carolina in fine health and readiness for a prosperous term at Whitworth College. We were shown through the new college building on Friday morning, and found it magnificent in proportions and most admirably adapted to its intended uses. Indeed, we scarcely see how any improvement could be made. The session opens this week, and all indications point to the largest attendance of the college's entire history.

About ten o'clock we rode out to the picnic grounds. The barbecue was given by the anti-prohibitionists; but all were invited and consent was given to a division of time in the discussion. Col. W. L. Nugent, of Jackson, one of the most distinguished lawyers in the State, and known throughout the whole connection as a royal Methodist, had been invited to hold up the prohibition banner on the occasion; but a press of legal business prevented his attendance, and this editor appeared as his substitute. The anti-imperialist from Grenada the Hon. J. J. Williams, a prominent member of the last Legislature, to defend their cause. Other speakers were Rev. J. H. Gambrell for prohibition—a veteran in the cause—and Capt. J. A. Hoskins against—both residents of Brookhaven. The audience was large and the order perfect. For four hours the vast throng gave patient attention to the discussion. We were desirous of hearing one plausible argument against the doctrine of legal prohibition, and gave eager attention to the champions of free whisky. But nothing approaching it fell from the lips of either speaker. On the other hand, however, doctrines were announced that, if dominant, would undermine the moral fabric of society and disrupt the kingdom of Heaven. As to the results of the day, we have no hesitancy in saying our cause was triumphant. The friends of reform were jubilant, while the anti-manifested bitter disappointment. They may go picknicking again, but will probably never have another joint discussion.

And here let it be said, Prohibition has nothing to lose, but everything to gain, by public discussion. The people only need light and the cause needs agitation. We have all the argument; our enemies have none. And then ours is the cause of humanity, morality, religion, good government, social order and national prosperity. Every advocate has the consciousness of right on his side, and in that feels bold and secure.

"Three armed is he who hath his quarrel just; And he but naked, though locked up in steel, Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted."

AN EVENING AT CANTON.

On Sunday afternoon, after attending the mission Sunday-school and preaching to a good congregation in West Jackson, we ran up to Canton to take part in a Centenary meeting. Reaching there at seven o'clock, accompanied by our gifted young collaborator, Rev. A. F. Watkins, after a hasty tea with relatives beloved, we were ready for the appointed service at half-past seven P. M. Quite a good congregation filled the church and gave respectful heed to the address delivered. We were glad to learn from Bro. Singleton that his pastorate is enjoying great prosperity. The late revival meeting in the community has given new vigor and spirit to his people. After a joyful handshaking with multitudes of dear friends and kindred, at half-past nine we boarded the Illinois Central, and at half-past seven, on Monday morning, walked into the office at 112 Camp street.

Religious Papers—"Suffering Humanity."

Our confrere of the Baptist Record sketches a picture of ill-fated journalistic enterprises all too true. In this age, characterized by a mania for journalism in Church and State, his words of caution need to be heeded. We have heard it said that there are two things in which money will be so readily lost and from which a man will more reluctantly withdraw, than a newspaper and a sawmill. The fascination is so irresistible, and the recompense of reward so inviting, yet so illusive, that they prefer poverty with a newspaper to plenty in another vocation. So much for the impeccability of those engaged in journalism.

Now a word to those who should support newspapers. In nothing is the Church so delinquent to-day. This we say, because the secular press is becoming more and more a potent factor in the civilization. Our people read, and if not furnished with wholesome reading, they will feed upon the impure and poisonous. Secular papers do not supply the demand of the Church. A Christian is not apt to grow in grace on our morning metropolitans, or our rural weeklies. His faith in Christ and his conquest of the world will not be much strengthened by reading daily records of crime that fill the prominent columns. We must read of gospel achievement—how our Lord is administering the affairs of this world in the interest of human redemption—or we will lose faith in God and hope for the race. Much in every way, both in personal experience and church enterprise, depends upon the liberal maintenance of the religious press. We therefore appeal to pastors and laymen, the intelligent discerners of the logic of events and the claims of duty, to aid us in giving wider circulation to this journal. As it already blesses thousands may it be a benediction to tens of thousands.

And for all who imagine that an Advocate is a gold-mine we reproduce the following from the Baptist Record:

There is nothing known among Christian men which will often deceive the elect than newspapers. Figures, we are told, will not lie, and in the utmost confidence in their veracity, a brother, with a desire to serve the public, sits down to calculate. "Let's see, there are so many thousands of Baptists, and that means so many families. One in five will take a paper, in the sure, but to make it safer, we will put it one in ten. That will be so many subscribers at $2.00 a year that will be so much money. The expenses can't be over so much. Here it is; there is money, usefulness and glory in it. He gets a few hundred dollars some way and buys an outfit; his friends tell him it must certainly go. They like it. One brother writes that he could not possibly do without it; another that it is the best paper he ever saw; still another affirms that the editor was raised up for just such a work. It comes on the public as a pleasant surprise. Subscriptions come in pretty freely. The editor is encouraged.

Three years have passed away. The editor has learned a thing or two. One while figures, while not his suppositions upon which figures are made, will be prodigious. The one in ten does not come forward with the cash for the paper. He is amazed and grieved that so many brethren will take a little, dirty, secular paper, or a great secular weekly, but have no interest in a religious paper. He finds that worldliness is uppermost with church members. Many who took the new paper will not renew. Paper bills accumulate and printers are urgent, his soul is vexed, and the words of Paul come to him with a new meaning. "You did run well, what doth hinder?" Pressed with difficulties on all sides, his very life becomes a burden. If he goes into the field to drum up subscribers, he goes wrong in the office; if he devotes himself to office work, the money fails to come in. Oppressed with cares, the paper loses all its brightness, if it ever had any. The brethren note the decline, and lose interest. So things go from bad to worse, till the last dollar is put in the enterprise, and often, all his credit too. He comes out with a great deal of experience and no money. There are a good many brethren in this broad land, who can testify that this is not a fancy picture. This is written in the interest of suffering humanity.

In the North-Western Christian Advocate (Chicago) we find this pleasant personal:

Rev. David Morton, secretary of the Church Extension Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, preached in Langley Avenue Methodist Church, Chicago, September 14, greatly interesting and edifying the congregation.

Job xix, 26.

Job says: "Though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." Some preachers and many people read and quote that passage this way: "Though after my skin worms destroy this body." Some nervous people are greatly annoyed at the thought of having worms in their skin, called "skin-worms," that are to eat them up after they are dead. It is "my skin" and "this body" that are destroyed by worms. They are not "my worms" nor "my skin-worms."

After all, I may be cremated or petrified so the worms can not eat me. It matters not whether I am burnt up, or turned to rock, or destroyed by worms—"I shall see God;" and this is the great point in this Scripture. It does not teach that the body and skin are to be destroyed by worms, for this is only a form of expression for the destruction of the body to set in a strong light the fact that "we shall see God." "Though after my skin worms destroy the body, yet in my flesh shall I see God." The margin reads: "After I shall awake, though this body be destroyed, yet out of my flesh shall I see God." The assurance of seeing God completely offsets the thought or fear of this body being destroyed.

HILDEROY.

MR. EDITOR: My venerable brother, J. G. Jones, takes me to account upon my statement that the Baptist Church is numerically the strongest in the State of Mississippi. He styles my pen "facile." But, hoping that he does not mean to say that I write too hastily to be accurate, I will repeat the statement that, numerically, the Baptist Church is the largest in Mississippi. I turn to the minutes of the Southern Baptist Convention for 1884. Therein I find the white membership put down at 61,624, and the colored at 67,069—total, 128,693. Now, Bro. Jones, you will have to get up the statistics for all the Methodists to get within 10,000 of that.

T. A. S. A.

The generation of evokers so accurately described by the Scientific Californian doesn't seem to diminish rapidly. They are in the church and industriously act the part of Pauline thorn in the flesh. Possibly but for them we would be exalted above measure—life would be too peaceful. Read and see if you recall the original of this picture:

There is a certain class of people who are never happy except when they are predicting that the country is going to the dogs. They are always filled with gloomy forebodings about the future.

If there is a strike in a town in Connecticut, they feel certain that the country is to be turned into a commune and the streets are to run with blood.

They take a positive delight in predicting late frosts, and they regard the grasshopper and cotton-worm as friends and brethren.

It rarely ever happens that any of their predictions come to pass, but that does not discourage them in the least. They keep on, hoping for something worse to turn up in the future.

Rev. D. C. Browne, of Sedalia, Mo., formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, thus writes in a private note to the editor. His old friends will be gratified at such marked success.

The Advocate was never better in its history; so say the old subscribers. We are fast closing our second year at Sedalia. In the two years there have been 200 conversions and 275 additions to our church. An old debt of $1,000 paid off, and our congregation raised from 40 or 50 souls to 400. The salary of the pastor has been brought up from $350 to $1,100, and all the collections ordered by the Conference raised two hundred percent, and paid in full. We expect to build a handsome and commodious church edifice next year.

These words from the venerable Emperor William, of Germany, delivered at a recent anniversary of a religious institution, we find in the Independent. They deserve to be written in gold.

The foundation and the rock to which I and we all must cling is the undeviled faith, as this is taught us in the Bible. Do not join that vast crowd which either neglects entirely the Bible as the sole source of truth or, at best, misinterprets it to suit its own ideas. If there is anything that can give security in the present world of action, it is this only foundation, which is laid in Christ Jesus. May this day be a blessed one to all of you, that it may increase in you the knowledge of God, and of his only begotten son, Jesus Christ.

The North-Western Christian Advocate thus concludes an admirable tribute to Bishop Pierce:

As an orator Bishop Pierce had few peers on the American continent. His celebrated Bible speech in New York was pronounced by Macaulay the finest specimen of English that he had seen from any American author or speaker. Before vast camp meeting assemblies he was the equal of Chalmers or Whitefield.

An exchange says: "No liquor been sold in one of the wealth and most prosperous counties in Texas, and, consequently, the empty." Mark that word "empty." It is the reason and inspiration of prohibition enthusiasm.

The liquor dealers report barrels less of liquor sold in Kansas last year than the year before in Nebraska, under high license, 4,000 barrels more than the year before. And yet pro-whisky advocates tell us "prohibition does not inhibit."

Under the title of "Battle Leaders of the Civil War," the Century Magazine will begin in November a series of separate papers of distinguished writers. The last Shiloh and Vicksburg will be written by Gen. U. S. Grant. Beauregard will write of the Bull Run; Gen. McClellan of the passage of the forts below Orleans by Admiral Porter, etc.

It will be remembered by readers that reference was some time ago to the fact that Rev. Bishop Thompson, of the Diocese of Mississippi, had declared against what he denominated "anxious-bench religion." It is significant in view of that remonstrance that some of his recently published sermons have been up to the "anxious-bench" at a Methodist meeting, asking spiritual instruction, and acknowledging that they know nothing of experimental religion. A religious man without an experience is not a saint; and alas! for the soul that is without such a refuge.

The secret of the great success of the Centenary day, at Carrollton, reported last week, was the preparation for the occasion, and Sunday-school superintendents had the fire in their bones and thoroughly informed their constituents. The ladies beautifully decorated the church, in order to which they read up and study appropriate scriptures. The Sunday-school well drilled and carried out the program handsomely. Under tuition and circumstances, occasion could but be a success. Other pastors and churches caught the suggestion. A Centenary prepared and provided to be a benediction.

A correspondent of the New Christian Advocate, writing of the Cincinnati Conference, reports an innovation upon the old tradition of ordination services on Sunday. They are not sure but it is the better. He says:

At the earnest suggestion of Merrill there were no ordination services on Sunday, but on Sabbath afternoon.

The ordinations of both men and elders took place Sabbath afternoon at an ordination service. This means the solemn ceremony made to stand out with being a routine instead of being the tired end of a long, hot day. It was in every way a great improvement.

The following is reported of the striking sayings of Rev. Jones, the evangelist. A picture, but true.

What would you think of a man who had thirty babies, the thirty years old and the year at the breast; none of them grown up since they were born; if they had, it was like a woman when first hatched, on the crib, and four on her lap at the time she smelt! She is puffed! But this is the condition many preachers in this country or a hundred members of all their babies—not one of them take care of himself.

The Texas Christian Advocate with the issue of September entered upon its thirty-first year. John makes it the occasion of something about its history, growth of Texas Methodist public morals. It is a capital anniversary number; 1,262 conversions and 1,114 accessions are reported and issue. He concludes an anniversary editorial as follows:

Texas Methodism during this period has made wonderful advance, no period has its moral and spiritual triumphs been so wonderful as this centennial of American Methodism.

Bro. Nobard, presiding elder of St. Joseph district, suggests in District Advocate that it would well to have a report of the tribulations by church members before the church, so that they be known who give and how. Many sensible men are of the opinion. To give in order to get, because men will never do a great deal without a Western Methodist.

Just that thing has been done each monthly church conference the Methodist Church in Jackson, Miss., for the past eleven years. With what result, her financial reports will significantly show.

e
a or

7

=
=
9.

M, pal
4. ble
e
M. ays,
the pur-ale pe-rd.
I. N.
M., ty egc, 08 nt
S, 41. l, and even-achile ation
pal,
E.
Depot,
e cold

Malls
shent.
C. anted in age 1884. st Fare for the y set an killeth

... 410 00
... 3 00
... 2 00
... 2 00
... 4 00
... 1 60
... 1 00
... 4 00
... 1 00
... 00
... 2 00
... 4 00
covering,
t may be Magpolla,
N. adient.
lege,
arleton and three son of the nd church b organized of audle,
Mississippi,
complete and RD, Pres.

Quarterly Conferences.

LABAMA CONFERENCE

y, at St. Elmo..... na Street.....
t, at Chironelle.....
ut, at Kaiser Hill.....
ille, at Roperia' Chapel.....
Street.....
on clinton.....
lugs elcrint, at St. Stephen's.....

J. N. KEE

AULA DIST.—FOURTH H

circuit, at Tabeinacle..... rent, at Harris.....
rent, at Clopion.....
et. and als. at Skipperville.....
circuit, at Columbia.....
ent, at Daleville (Thursday).....
uit, at Center.....
rent, at Aberfoyl (Thursday).....
Midway, at Ken.....
circuit, at Anthony Chapel.....
circuit.....
ent and Malone at Malone.....

H. CRUQUET

MACOLA DIST.—FOURTH

at Hydenville.....
ation.....
at Ashbury.....

at Stockton..... station.....
 at Warrington.....
 the at Mt. Carmel.....
 tette, at Swift.....
 a, at South Butler..... at Gravelly.....
 en, at Fairfield..... at Irish Creek.....
 lile, at Puyerville.....
 y, at Forest Home.....
 J. S. FR
 SNORO DIST.—FOURTH
 or station.....
 circuit, at Carliage.....
 circuit, at Sardis.....
 en circuit, at Newberne.....
 circuit, at York.....

and Enlow, at Entw..... circull, at Beluou.....
 le circull, at Calneville.....
 circull, at Brightwater..... and M. Sterling, at M. Sterling..... circull, at Shaon.....
 ls and Jefferson.....
 a circull.....
 bro circull.....

 J. BAN.....
 LOUISIANA CONFERE.....

 OMER DIST.—FOURTH I.....
 circull, at Evergen..... circull, ni Camp Ground..... field circull, at Harmony Ch.....
 lle, at Smyrna.....

elcruit, at Ringgold..... and Mt. Zion, at Muden clercit, at Pine Grove.....
ville-cleruit, at Shiloh.....
Village, at Pine Grove..... ad A'zouva.....
rult.....

A. A. CO.

ANDRIA DIST.—FOURTH

liver, at Wilson's..... and Troy, at Vidalia..... at Sardis.....
sen and Big Cane, at Evergreen Hill.....
na, at Hickory Ginza.....

and Montgomery, at Ebenezer.....
Bouff, at Lecompte.....
Centerville.....
Cheney, at Chisol.....
Creek circuit, at Spring Creek.....
d, at Atlanta.....
ola circuit, at Columbia.....

N. R. CO

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

OKLAHOMA DIST.—FOUR

ab City & Magnolia, at Magnolia S..... ence, at Tahalla..... and Beaurgard.....
avel.....
d, at Bethel.....
and Pleasant Ridge.....

Wine, at Rehnboth.....	1
Upland, at Rehnboth.....	1
and Rogue Chitto, at Adams.....	1
ut, at Sandbult.....	1
at Hethesda.....	1
at Springs.....	1
Ridge, at Oak Hill.....	1
	J. A. B
RIDIAN DIST.—FOURTH
1, at Marlon.....	1
at Union.....	1
ester, at Heltron.....	1
ehoro, at Waynesboro.....	1
at Shalton.....	1
arg and Hiedelburg, at Philadel.....	1
sville, at Sandersville.....	1
at Hopewell.....	1
stine (Monday).....	1

b, at Piquette's Rest.....
 b, at Pleasant Hill.....
 dale, at Landerdale.....
 dale.....
 JAS. A. G.
 SANDRE DIST.--FOURTH
 dale, at Bethel.....
 dale, at Bethel.....
 Springs, at Hamilton..... dington, at Palmer Camp Ground.....
 ons, at Salem.....
 out, at Pig Point..... ave, at Poplarville..... ville, at Newberryville..... linton, at Mt. Hermon.....
 Grove, at Sardinia..... dington, at Pearllington..... olunt station, at Moss Point.....

Jackson, at Hattiesburg.....
 H. S. 1
 JACKSON DIST.—FOURTH
 n, at Mt. Pleasant..... n, at Camden.....
 n.....
 n.....
 n, at Wesley Chapel..... n, at Mt. Carmel.....
 n, at Fletcher Chapel.....
 n, at Beutou.....
 n.....
 n, at Clifton.....
 Creek, at Silver City.....
 City.....
 JOHN

[illegible][illegible]

ngston, Live Oak.....
 Felclana, (Saturday)..... ton, at Clifton.....
 Local preachers are requested ports prepared.

CENTENARY NOTICE.—To the preachers in charge in the bounds of Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference: Dear brethren, let us not forget our Centenary work, and especially the motto: "collection from every congregation." The opportunity of a hundred years is at hand. Let us hurry to it. Give every member of the church an opportunity of making a thank offering. Let us not fail in this matter. For, if we do, with Bishop Keener in the chair, we may expect to be called to account for it when we go on to Aberdeen in November.

T. C. WIEN,
Chairman Dist. Centenary Com.

The presiding elders of the North Mississippi Conference will please send me promptly the names in full, of the several delegates elect to the annual Conference, and of their alternates.

BYHALIA, Mississippi.
JNO. RANFROT

CAMP MEETING.

The eleventh annual camp meeting for the De Kalb circuit will begin on Friday night before the second Sunday in October next. Preachers coming by rail will be met at Scooba, on Friday morning, with conveyance. Must be notified a few days in advance of the meeting, that I may know what sort and what amount of conveyance to provide.

D. G. W. ELLIS, P.

The New Prospect Camp Meeting will commence on Friday night before the fourth Sunday in October. Preachers will be met with conveyances from Ocean Springs on the arrival of the morning train from New Orleans on Friday, October 24. Material brethren are invited to come and help us.

A. P. COX, P.

There will be a camp meeting at Andrew Cla

Camp Ground, eight miles east of DeSoto, on morning Friday night before the first Sunday October, on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers generally invited, and will be held at DeSoto, Sa-day morning with conference. Ministers' families invited.

There will be a camp meeting at Union C.
Ground, twelve miles east of DeSoto, Friday morning before the third Sunday in October, on the self-sustaining plan. Ministers are requested to attend. By notifying me at Shiloh, Miss., I will make

The Oak Ridge Camp Meeting, three miles northeast of Vernon, La., will begin on Friday night before the first Sunday in October. Ministers cordially invited, and all are assured of a hearty welcome.

J. L. P. SIEFFERT, P.

The Bentah Camp Meeting, on same circuit,

The annual meeting for Shiloh Camp Ground, Shiloh circuit, Mississippi Conference, situated six miles south-east of Brandon, and six miles south-west of Natchez, will be held at the latter place on Friday before the first Sabbath of October.

The Benlah Camp Meeting is five miles from thaville Station, and Bethel is seven miles from Parice Station. Conveyance can be had from either place if notice is given in time.

R. PARKS

Palatine Station, on V. & M. R. R., will commence on Thursday evening, October 9, and continue the following Tuesday, October 14, 1884.
Laters coming by rail will be met at Palatine Station, V. & M. R. R., on Friday morning, conveyed to camp ground. Mr. Edllor, we expect you to be on that occasion.

R. A. SUDLEY, P.

The annual meeting for the Palmer Camp will commence on October 3, 1884, and continue

iii. Wednesday, morning, following. This ground is beautifully located on or near a head creek, with its never failing crystal water, meeting of the committee, on the first Saturday.

July, was well attended; all the official-looking persons were present, and the meeting was attended to. Several new tents are expected built and considerable improvements laid out done on the public part of the ground, which make considerable more accommodation for people that may attend. Preachers and people are generally invited to come and help.

13 certainly are earnestly invited to come and assist 14 with this glorious work of the Lord. The 15 (can before) propose taking care of the people
16 of charge. Nothing sold on the ground during 17 meeting except horse feed, unless some tenters
18 run short of provisions, and that the probability 19 get in the neighborhood nearer than from home.
20 N. B.—All preachers coming by rail will 21 give notice to the secretary, at Stonewall, Miss.
22 In due time, so that arrangements can be made for 23 advance from Mississippi City to camp grounds.

This camp ground is about fifteen miles north of Mississippi City. Come every lady, and let us sleep together. SAMUEL WALKER, Sec. of
G. W. WALKER, President.

PIERSON LESSOR TO & PIERSON
FURNISHING GOODS
 STREET, New Orleans.
 Business Suits, $12 to Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.

 ductions made to them.
 n, and goods sent O. O. D.

IMPROVED

—AND CONDENSED

SERS,

"GNOLIA" GIN.
ed Gin made. DOES NOT BR will it choke under the severest ectly and produces a Superior SA no use it to bring in any market imul more than when [same.cott

Address
TT GIN C.
Louisiana.

TARRH

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kind, and can not be sold in conjunction with the multitude of low test, short weight and phosphate powders. Sold only in cans.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., New York.

BROWN'S

IRON

On Every Bottle

TRADE MARK

QUALITY
P
PURITY
NOT QUANTITY

BITTERS

— THE —
BEST TONIC.

This medicine, combining iron with pure vegetable tonics, quickly and completely cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weakness, Impure Blood, Malaria, Chills and Fever.

and Neuraalgia.
It is no trifling remedy for Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver.
It is invaluable for Diseases peculiar to Women, and all who lead solitary lives.
It does not purge the bowels, cause headache,
produce constipation—other Iron Medicines do.
It enriches and purifies the blood, stimulates the appetite, aids the assimilation of food, keeps the heart and the circulation, and strengthens the muscles and nerves.
For Intermittent Fevers, Lassitude, Lack of Energy, &c., it has no equal.
The Gentian has above twenty marks crossed red lines on wrapper. Take no other.
Made only by DR. J. C. PORTER, C. BALTIMORE, MD.

A Champion Book FOR BOYS.

"Gilderoy's Stories" is a rollicking, breezy, bright book for boys.
Send seventy-five cents to the author,
R. G. PORTER,
Verona,
N. J.
By mail, postpaid, only seventy-five cents.

THOS. J. CARVER, W. L. BAKER

CARVER & BAKER
Cotton Factors
—AND—
COMMISSION MERCHANTS
44 Perdido Street,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

39	J. A. B. JONES, P. D.
MERIDIAN DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Marion, at Marion	Oct. 11
Clermont, at Clermont	18
Winchester, at Hethers	25
Wynnesboro, at Wynnesboro	25
Smiths, at Smiths	Nov. 8
Vassarburg and Hiedelburg, at Philadelphia	15
Southernville, at Southernville	15
Camden, at Camden	22
Enterprise (Monday)	22
Lebanon, at Lebanon	29
Nichols, at Pike's Rest	29
Dekalb, at Pleasant Hill	Dec. 6
Lebanon, at Lebanon	13
Meridian	13
38	JAS. A. GODFREY, P.
SEASHORE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Ellisville, at Bethel	Sept. 20
St. Charles, at Bethel	27
Ocean Springs, at Handerburg	27
Whittington, at Palmer Camp Ground	Oct. 4
St. Charles, at Bethel	11
Scranton, at Pig Point	18
Yaucauca, at Low Prospect	18
Ellisville, at Bethel	Nov. 1
Franklin, at Mt. Hermon	8
China Grove, at North	15
Peartington, at Peartington	22
Moss Point station, at Moss Point	29
Ellisville, at Bethel	Dec. 6
Hattiesburg, at Hattiesburg	13
38	M. S. RAYNER, P.
JACKSON DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Sharon, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 24
Sharon, at Sharon	31
Camden, at Camden	Oct. 11
Camden	18
Camden	25

Tranquil, at Mt. Carmel.....	Nov.
Dover, at Fletcher Chapel.....
London, at London.....
Edward, at Edward.....
Toumout, at Toumout.....
Yazoo City, at Yazoo City.....	Dec.
Yazoo City.....
37	JOHN A. ELLIS.

BRANDON DIST.—FOURTH ROUND

Shiloh, at Shiloh.....	Oct. 1
Brandon, at Brandon.....
Marvin, at Marvin.....
Faithful, at Faithful.....	Nov.
Pauline, at Pauline Hill.....
Raleigh.....
Decatur.....
Cherokee.....
Walnut Grove, at Walnut Grove.....
Cherokee.....
Trenton.....
Strong River.....	Dec.
Forest and Morion.....
Newlin, at Hickory.....
38	F. M. WILLIAMS, P.

VICKSBURG DIST.—FOURTH ROUND

Pont Gibson station.....	Sept.
Dennisville, at Mizpah.....
Vicksburg station.....
Rocky Springs, at Rocky Springs.....	Oct.
Rocky Springs, at Rocky Springs.....
Vickland and Saddleford, at Vickland.....
Rolling Fork, at Rolling Fork.....	Nov.
Rolling Fork, at Rolling Fork.....
Meadville, at Meadville.....
Knightsburg, at Washington.....
Knightsburg, at Mt. Carmel.....
Onyiah, at Ulick.....
Natcher, at West Branch.....	Dec.

Knoxville, at Mt. Carmel.....
85 C. G. ANDREWS, P.
WOODVILLE DIST.—FOURTH ROUTE
Wilkinson circuit, at Midway.....Oct.
Woodville station, at Woodville.....
North Wilkinson circuit, at Mt. Carmel.....
Bayou Sara circuit, at Collier.....
Jackson station, at Jackson.....Nov.
Arlite circuit, at Arlite.....
St. Helena circuit, at Greensburg.....
Arlite circuit.....
Folkins and Fort Hudson, at Folkins (Sat.).....
East Inlet House, at Deer Ford (Sunday).....
Livingston, Live Oak.....Dec.
East Feliciana, (Saturday).....
Clinton, at Clinton.....
Local preachers are requested to have w studies prepared.
81 D. A. LITTLE, F.

WM. H. PIERSON
SUCCESSOR TO
WHEELER & PIERSON
CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,
Nos. 13 & 15 CAMP STREET, New Orleans.
Black Cloth Suits, $30 to 40. // Business Suits, $12 to 15.

6 Shirts for $9 Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.
 Orders from Cherigmen solicited, and liberal reduction made to them.
 Notes for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent O. O. D.

GULLETT'S IMPROVED

A

C

WELLS IMPROVED
TRADE MARK

THE "MAGNOLIA" GIN.

The most highly Improved Gin made. DOES NOT BREAK THE ROLL, in ginning, nor will it choke under the severest to Goss Ears, cleans the seed perfectly and produces a Superior Seed.

Chris Eisele claims the seed probably will produce a sorghum grain of lint. Claimed by those who use it to bring in any market of eighth to one-half cent per pound more than when same cotton ginned by other gins.

For further information, address

GULLETT GIN Co.
Amite, Louisiana

CHILD'S CATARRH

Treatment For

And Diseases of
HEAD, THROAT & L.
Can be taken of those intermediate water and the property of the
for cat. mites, tetanus
REV. T. P. CHILDS, 22

WHOLE NO. 1470.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

male | JUDGE JAMES WHITE
Treasurer.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
GOD'S VOICES.

BY THOMAS DUNNIE MARSHALL.

A blossom lay drooping 'neath the moon's dim light,
A fey light came kissing its wan lips fair,
For all the winds blowing it lifts not its head;
In the dust, low bending, no fragrance 'twill shed.
A cloudlet came wafting o'er the sky's blue deeps,
With sailing of silver, as softly it weeps,
Its tear drops so cooling to the flower's parched throat—
Lo! wavelets of odors from its chalice up float.
Like the wind to the flower a kiss of life,
That maketh no perfume from the closed chalice burst.
Men's voices are coming to hearts that are broken,
They heed not, they hear not, of hope no sign, no token.
As the cloudlet bestowing the waters of life,
God's voice is ringing thro' the world's wild strife,
Sweet courage instilling in heart and in breast,
And giving the weary the blessing of rest.

The Status of Infants.—Third Paper.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

"We are accounted righteous before God, only for the merit of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, by faith only; Wherefore that we are justified by faith only is a most wholesome doctrine and very full of comfort." Art. IX.

"The offering of Christ once made, is that perfect redemption, propitiation and satisfaction for all the sins of the whole world, both original and actual; and there is none other satisfaction for sin but that alone." Art. XX.

Here is an affirmation that there is no justification with faith, and at the same time that there has been a "perfect redemption, propitiation and satisfaction for all the sins of the whole world;" yet, if we accept the words of Art. XX, in the light of Art. IX, the difficulty vanishes. For redemption could not be from something into which we had not fallen, as "actual" sin, and hence, while "actual" sins are pardoned "by faith" only.

Here are two classes of sins from which men are saved, viz: Original and Actual. From the latter they are saved "only for the merit of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, by faith;" but from the former, if saved at all, it is without faith, and "only for the merit of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ."

Some writers have suggested that may be infants can exercise faith, but as against this, it is enough to say may, but they cannot exercise faith.

It is very certain if they are born guilty, there is no other way to be saved than by faith—either their own faith, or the faith of some other intelligent being.

It is very certain that our Church, in the belief of its members, holds that infants are saved.

Then, if infants are saved without faith, and adults are saved by faith, the means of salvation from original sin differ from the means of salvation from actual sin. Wherein does this difference exist? We answer: In the personal use of means, for the pardon of personal sins, and the federal use of means for the pardon of federal sins.

The Pauline writings abound with what seems to be allusions to this difference. Hence we read:

"As in Adam all die, even so in Christ Jesus shall all be made alive." "If by the offence of one, many be dead, even so by the obedience of one, shall many be made righteous." "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, even we have believed in Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law."

These quotations might be continued, but this is enough to show justification from original sin through the merit of Christ, and without faith; and justification from actual sin, through the merit of Christ by faith.

Let us see if the Church has ever so believed and taught this doctrine. Gregory held that all men did not need redemption. From this it is clear that he did not discriminate between redemption and atonement. Augustine held that all needed redemption, but all did not need atonement. The outcome of this, however, as held by these fathers, is Pelagianism. This we judge, because these fathers mentioned some who are good enough "without it"—meaning without atonement. This could not be, if by the fall "man is inclined to evil and only evil continually;" for however free he might be from guilt when born, the hereditary tendencies to sin, would, without "preventive grace," soon overwhelm him in guilt. The main point, however, is clear—the distinction by Augustine between redemption and atonement. Numbers, in course of time, overruled, and this distinction was lost, and all—infants as well as adults—were "reckoned under" guilt, as well as "under sin."

Out of this arose a question. If infants are guilty, and the condition is faith, how then are they to be justified?

Nothing was more natural in the state of society at that time, than to look to baptism as a means of justification; and so the doctrine of baptismal regeneration began to be taught.

Tertullian, who had adopted the doctrine of predestination, at once began to oppose the baptism of infants, on the ground that "some of them were predestinated to eternal death, and baptism for such was useless; and as we could not determine which were the reprobates, the whole thing was useless."

This redemption, it is admitted, places infants on a saleable grounds, which admission is fatal to the argument. For, suppose I deny it, and assume that though Christ died for all, yet none can be saved without faith, and as faith so far involves intellectual perception, as to place the exercise of it beyond the possibility of infants, they are not, therefore, in a saleable state. The only reply that I see, is that of Dr. Ralston, which saves them in their guilt, or justifies them in some unusual way, viz: "Infants are not required to believe."

We have defined justification to mean that act of God by which a man is freed from guilt, and salvation, as that moral state in which a man is prepared for heaven. Of infants, our Lord said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." If a man cannot get to heaven without justification, then the "kingdom of heaven" is peopled with "the spirits of just men, made perfect;" and an unjustified person could not be like them—"of such."

Still, the question remains, how are they justified? We answer through the merit of Christ, "who died, the just for the unjust."

Man was doomed to hell because he was guilty. He was exposed to the forfeiture of heaven—the law had cursed, and the wrath of God had doomed him. But Jesus, "his own self, bore our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness; by whose stripes we were healed." This is that "redemption once made" by which man was bought back to God, and saved from hell.

Dr. Ralston has a good deal to say about an Imaginary Saviour, for an Imaginary person, from an Imaginary sin.

But, if Jesus was a real redeemer, he redeemed a real race, from real sins and the spiritual consequences of them. The fall of man was a fact, the curse was a fact, the redemption was a fact, and these facts are not changed in the matter of redemption, any more than in the matter of the fall, by the requital taking place before the birth.

If all died in Adam, the death came as a fact before the birth; and if all were made alive in Christ, they were made alive in fact before their birth; We see no impropriety in affirming of the acts of the second Adam, all that may be affirmed of the first Adam, at least in so far as the outreaching of those acts may be concerned.

If the act of Adam could make a soul guilty without its assent, the act of Christ could justify it in the same way; and so it is said, "as in Adam all die, even so in Christ Jesus, shall all be made alive."

Universalism has taken this broad ground on which the guilt of Adam's sin is taken away, and on this ground claim unconditional pardon of actual transgressions.

In original sin, man has had no personal volition, and from the effects of it he has been redeemed without any act of his own. Whether, if he live, he will obtain forgiveness of his actual sins, through faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, is another question.

However much human nature may be depraved, and however far it may be "gone from original righteousness, and inclined to evil and only evil continually," Christ has healed man's wounds, bourn his sins, carried his griefs, redeemed him from hell, and so justified him, that dying in infancy he may and will be saved.

MIDDELS, LA.

"Lord, What Wilt Thou Have me to Do?"

We suppose that every human being has a mission or special work in life. People will readily allow that certain prominent characters, of the past or the present, were or are persons with a mission in life. They will quickly agree with you that such as Paul, Luther, Calvin and Wesley—such as Peter the Hermit, Napoleon the Great, Washington, Stonewall Jackson and Robert E. Lee—were all men of destiny; and that each was actuated and led on to grand deeds by some moving, controlling life-purpose and mission.

It is not difficult to discern in certain men or women the marks of destiny, as we behold them possessed of an activity of nature, a genius for great deeds, a sublime energy of soul, a terrible fixedness and intensity of purpose, absorbing and controlling their entire being and carrying them on and on, irresistibly over all difficulties to the accomplishment of some grand object of their life. Among the young about us there are those, whom in our thoughts of them we place high in fame, position and power in the not distant future—indeed, we secretly have a doubt of their success in life. We clearly perceive their mission is to rise above the level of their birth and present surroundings and to make a stir in the world. However, while we can thus in individual cases discern the presence and movements of a future greatness, yet, as we look out upon and among the great mass of our fellow-creatures, we wonder why and to what purpose they live. Filled with lust and pride and folly—born in sin, and living and rioting in sin—laying all the precious moments of their lives under tribute to their appetites for gain or pleasure—they live the gay butterflies of a day or the dray-horses of a sordid life. What multitudes of men there are with no thought above a potato, with no aim higher than the piling of dollar upon dollar, or with the sole ambition of spending their years on earth in the role of the brainless fop and pattern of elegant nothingness. What multitudes of women find their chief delight in the giddy whirl and maze of fashionable life. And, then, what other multitudes, both men and women, make of life nothing but a constant round of eating, drinking and sleeping. These last, no less than the others of whom we have been speaking, are far, very far from realizing the true purpose of life. The fact about this matter of working our life's work is simply this: whoever has not, as did Saul, asked the question—"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?"—has failed to come into the spirit of his life and is not in the way of answering the grand purpose of his creation. And, yet, this is the state of the great bulk of mankind; never having asked of God the meaning of their existence, many of them are idly drifting along, merely existing, vegetating, just living; while many more are serving the god of this world with might and main—all of them going, without thought, post haste, from the cradle to the grave, and after, to make fuel for the everlasting burnings.

Man's mission at the start was to live unto God, in a state of acceptance, perfection and happiness and hence in the enjoyment of God's presence, favor and constant communion. Through the wiles of God's end man's arch-enemy, the devil, man fell altogether short of his high destiny. The original mission of man thus failed, and, since then, it has become his mission to so act and live as to be rid of the guilt, power and pollution of sin, to become reconciled to his offended God and, by the help of his all-sufficient grace, to make his way to heaven. Thus, then, does life become fearfully sublime in view of the work each man has to do; and, if with us, the lesson of our existence be not studied and thoroughly mastered, it were better that we had never been born. To suppose that some of us were created expressly "to die the death that never, never dies," to live on earth awhile and then to be shut up in hell for all eternity, were to suppose that God is a tyrant and without reason. No, no—God never pre-determined damnation to any man; but God created man at the first to glorify his Creator and, after he fell, God provided a Saviour for him; and so, God has done all that he can to bring man back to the high destiny for which he was originally designed. In Ezekiel we read: "Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God: and not that he should return from his ways, and live?" "For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord: wherefore turn yourselves, and live ye." "Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel?" Paul, writing to Timothy and speaking of "God our Saviour," says: "Who will have all men to be saved, and to come unto the knowledge of the truth." Peter declares of God that he "is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." Mark you, God has given his Son to be our Mighty to save and in and through that Son, and any and all, may be saved—but God never forces salvation on his creature—man. He has made man a free moral agent and can only save him on the line of the nature he has given him. Hence, any man can destroy himself in spite of all that God has done or can do for him. Wherefore, when we come to consider that we have every one been created for glory and yet that the attaining thereto is, in an important sense, lodged in our hands, life of necessity becomes full of significance and deepest meaning and it becomes our prime duty so to live as to attain the mission of our life. It is duty that renders life sublime; and we may every one learn our duty by asking of God: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" The answer is, given in these words: "Love God and thy fellow-man." Loving God supremely and our neighbor, i. e. every man, as ourself, we shall find, that, called to work in the vineyard of the Lord, we each and all, other than the grand mission of our own soul's salvation, have a special work to do, an individual mission to fulfill. It follows, too, that, if this special mission be neglected, we shall surely fail to accomplish the grand mission of our own salvation, for this latter very much depends upon and is vitally wrapped up in the fulfillment of the former. A tree is known by its fruit, and our faith is known by our works; and, though we are saved by faith, yet, if we have no works, neither have we faith. We shall not be saved unless we are doing for God. The life of him who fills the measure of his mission or intention is a pre-eminently a life of doing—it is not, it cannot be, a mere negation but it must be a positive, real life of activity and work. The very first question asked by every truly converted soul is that of Saul—"What wilt thou have me to do?" Note the particularity, the personality of this question—me, not another man—my work, what is it? Brother, sister, did ever you ask this question of your Lord? Depend upon it, you have a mission—a special work there is for every one of God's children. Have you been to God to find out yours? Have you yet discovered what the Lord would have you to do? If not, it will help you to find out your work, if you will observe your position in life, your environment. Who are you? With whom do you come in contact? Have you somewhat of natural ability and what of your education? Are there others depending upon you? Have you influence over any one in your neighborhood or in your acquaintance? Is there an unconverted soul in your house, or next door, or anywhere about you? Have you anything at all of mind, or holy or heart that can be of service to God? Have you an hour, a week that you can employ for him in distributing tracts, visiting the sick, hunting up Sunday-school scholars, fresh ones, or old ones who are staying away? Are you a born nurse, one of the tender, low-voiced, loving, thoroughly sympathetic attendants that do more for a patient than doctors and medicine? Are you handy with the needle or sewing machine? Can you not, then, sew up garments for these people and children to wear who say they have no clothes fit to go to church or Sunday-school in? Are not some of you, young men who are thrown amongst the godless all the week in business? Have you not then the opportunity, given you of God, to invite all such to the Sunday services, and to the prayer and class-meetings? Are not some of your employers with unsaved clerks? Surely you have a chance to speak a word for Jesus and, it may be, turn the current of a young life to the glory of God? Oh, yes, God has given every one of you capacity and opportunity for work in his vineyard; and, if you will but consider where in life your lot has been cast, if you will but look around you; you will find plenty, plenty to do for your blessed Master. Not only by observing our position in life, our environment, but by listening to the voice of God, we may ascertain our mission. We ought to ask of God in prayer, that He may open up our way and show us the work he would have us to do. God is every day opening doors of opportunity to his children and He expects them to enter and do his will. Moved by his Spirit, his children are frequently impressed that He would have them to do this, that or the other thing for his glory and the well-being of their fellows. Not always do they listen to the voice of God and seek to do his bidding—rather are they mindful of the dictates of human wisdom and the movings of their own timid hearts. Though feeling that they ought to speak the word or do the deed that the spirit has impressed upon them as God's will in the matter, they yet delay their obedience or daily refuse. Thus it is, that many a door of blessed opportunity that God has opened for them, has been shut in God's face by his children. Is it any wonder that so many are found spiritually lean and empty-handed from fruit unto the glory of God? True it is, I am sure, if we look about us for work for God and ask God in prayer to show it to us, honestly intending to obey the movings of God's Spirit thereto, that we shall find head and heart and all there is of us fully engaged in the divine service. And our special work, God-given, we can do. Why? God does not require impossibilities of us, and he is pledged to give us the needful strength. Each one looking about us and asking of God the question—"Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Let us find our work and throw our whole man into it.

September 18, 1884.

A Defective Brotherhood.

MR. EDITOR: It seems to me that the organization of a Brotherhood in all of the annual conferences would be a good thing. But the brotherhood that does not provide for its superannuated members is as defective as the discipline. I take it for granted that all itinerant preachers are dependent on their charges for a support. When no longer able to work—impelled by age or disease to superannuation—there is no provision made for their support for twelve months. Here is room for the thoughtful. Think of it brethren, especially those who are opposed to the Brotherhood. O. M. LIVERMAN.

The Sabbath and the Exposition.

(Preamble and resolutions passed by the Delhi District Conference, in session at Lake Providence, La., relative to the New Orleans Exposition, beginning December 1, 1881.)

INASMUCH as we know the observance of the Sabbath is a divine requirement, and that the degree of its observance marks the progress of true enlightenment and also the state of public morals, and that the non-observance of the Sabbath in Louisiana in the past has been immensely detrimental to the pecuniary, social, moral and religious interest of the State, and especially of the city of New Orleans; INASMUCH as by the act of the general government and the several States of the Union and corporations and many individuals it has grown to such magnitude as to be called the World's Exposition; And, INASMUCH as the enlightened sentiment of the Christian world is opposed to the desecration of the Sabbath, and that all other States of the Union have a Sabbath law requiring the suspension of business on that day; And, INASMUCH as the opening of the Exposition on the Sabbath would be highly repulsive to the moral sense of the State and countries whose co-operation we have solicited; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Delhi District Conference, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in conference assembled, that we petition the Board of Managers of said Exposition to close their gates on each Sabbath during its continuance.

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the prompt and bold manner in which the editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE has opposed the opening of the gates of the Exposition on said days.

Resolved, That the above preamble and resolutions be published in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Times-Democrat and Piousness of New Orleans, La.

Revival Correspondence.

We are having a glorious meeting at Shuqualak; nine conversions up to last night, fifteen at the altar and the entire town interested. Will continue for some time yet.

J. M. BOON.

MACON, MISS., Sept. 19, 1884.

There have been six hundred conversions in the Corinth district, North Mississippi Conference, up to date, and the work progressing with unabated interest in many portions of our field. Sam P. Jones has visited two of our charges, and accomplished great good.

AMOS KENDALL.

CORINTH, MISS., Sept. 19, 1884.

Our meeting in Clinton resulted in thirteen accessions. We also organized a church at Ratliff Chapel yesterday evening with sixteen new members. Among the number was one family consisting of husband, wife and four children. We expect many others to go with us before the end of the year.

D. P. BRADFORD.

BOLTON, MISS., Sept. 22, 1884.

We have just closed the protracted meetings for the Hillsboro circuit, and the good Lord has abundantly blessed our labors. There have been about one hundred souls converted during the meetings. Backsliders reclaimed and lukewarm Christians stirred up. There have been eighty members added to the church. We think the work is in a good condition.

J. C. LONG, P. C.

HILLSBORO, MISS., Sept. 22, 1884.

I am just in from a seven weeks' round of protracted meetings. My last was at Greenbrier, where we had a glorious meeting; sixteen accessions to our church, some backsliders reclaimed and the church wonderfully revived. It is a notable fact out of something more than one hundred conversions last year and this on this circuit every one of them have joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. I feel very grateful to God for his special favors. My health is very good indeed.

W. S. KILPATRICK.

SMITHVILLE, Sept. 6, 1884.

The great revival in Corinth began July 24 and closed special meetings August 17 with one hundred and fifty conversions and seventy-three have joined our church. Perhaps others will join. All the churches here united with us, and we have never seen such results in one meeting. The good work goes on in all our services. More people pray in public and in their families than we ever saw. Col. W. M. Lucas among the accessions to our church; so his wife and son, thank the Lord! Our town is almost entirely saved. Come to see us and pray for us.

J. A. BOWEN.

CORINTH, Sept. 17, 1884.

I believe our pastor, Rev. Robert S. Isbell, is too modest to report his success of the last few weeks in protracted meetings, conducted principally by his wife, with some help from Bro. Sawyer, of Bastrop, and Bro. Madison, L. P., of Schumacher. He has had two good meetings—one in Schumacher, with twelve accessions, several of them old-time sinners, and one at Bartholomew, with, I believe, sixteen accessions to our church. His soul is in his work, and the Lord has blessed him and us. An old resident, I may say I have never seen such an awakening in my time as was during these seven days. The church was filled day and night. Many were made happy on the occasion, and many old Christians strengthened.

H. B. BARNES, JR., Sept. 17, 1884.

Since I last wrote you affairs at Wesley Chapel have been moving on as usual, except the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society is manifesting renewed interest and zeal. Yesterday the society had a fine meeting and were entertained by an able and instructive address from Bro. Black. Three active and five honorary members were gained. Another item was the sociable given by the ladies connected with the chapel aided by a few of the members of the Jefferson Street Church, and which netted more than $10, to be used in improving our lighting apparatus and making some other improvements. No one will complain of invidious distinctions if mention be made, in this connection, of Mrs. Lizzie P. Davis, Mrs. C. C. Anderson and Mrs. Eva O. Rife, who were faithful workers. Our assessments are nearly all met in full. Now members are received almost every week, but unfortunately we are compelled to dispose of some unworthy members.

T. L. MELLER.

MADISON, MISS., Sept. 18, 1884.

We have just closed a meeting at Grand Cane, which was protracted for five consecutive days. Dr. Grace, Dr. Evans, Van Volkenburg and R. Parvin were with us and did faithful service. The church was much revived, and there was an apparent awakening among the irreligious, and penitents were at the altar from time to time. Nine persons were received into the church by letter. From long experience and close observation we are thoroughly convinced that about seventy, say twenty-five or thirty minutes long, with varied altar exercises, appropriate songs, prayers and exhortations would be a far more successful way of conducting a revival meeting. Under long sermons and services the meeting will flag. Dr. Grace's single daughter is very ill, and fears are entertained that she will not recover. The drought is still upon us, and with other losses a failure in the sweet potato and turnip

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HUMPHREY.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1884.

$374 50!

The editor spent last Sunday at Forest and Morton—two stations ten miles apart, on the Vicksburg and Meridian railroad, between Jackson and Meridian. The two churches form one pastorate in charge of Rev. A. B. Nicolson. The Centenary collection at Forest, in the morning, amounted to $200; at Morton, in the evening, to $104 50—which, with $70 previously raised at Forest, aggregates $374 50.

Centenary thank offerings reported thus far amount to $214,489.

This is the great revival year of Southern Methodism. Our exchanges teem with glorious news from every section of the church. The song of the harvest is being sung from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"Let the echo fly
The spacious earth around."

The pastor who is ready with an apology for the illiberality of his people will be sure to report a very small Centenary offering. Avarice seizes the faintest suggestion with which to save the conscience, and if it is furnished by his spiritual guide, "then," as Paul said of the doctrine of no-resurrection, "is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." The church liable and needs appeal—not apology.

Judge McConnell, the temperance judge of Tennessee, whom we had the pleasure of hearing last year on the Mountaineer platform, in a recent charge to a grand jury took occasion to contrast the criminal docket now and several years ago under license. Then every court presented a number of cases; now there is not a single felony on the docket. Prohibition does prohibit with such a judge on the bench.

We notice in the Vicksburg Post that Maj. Edwards, the general manager of the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas railroad (the Mississippi Valley), has announced that no more Sunday excursions will be run on his road. This is a manly, timely and Christian order. We hope the entire management will give him hearty support in enforcing it. The excursion run some weeks ago, on Sunday, from Baton Rouge to Vicksburg, with base ball, billiard, brass band and bar-room accompaniments, was a gross violation of the statutes of Mississippi, and we trust will not be repeated. The Vicksburg Post thinks this action "is going to raise a howl in the Crescent City." Well, let the howlers howl. But we doubt not the road will prosper, the traveling public approve and the cause of morality and good government rejoice. It is all a mistake that Sabbath desecration in excursion frolics is needful to railway prosperity. We applaud the course of General Manager Edwards, and in so doing represent the Christian conscience and true patriotism of the great section traversed by his road, and from which it derives support.

With the approach of winter and the Exposition we are having an immigration of tramps and lazaroni into New Orleans. These are especially annoying and burdensome to pastors and official members of churches. Every day they come with pitiful stories of hunger, nakedness and sickness which have been told a thousand times with slight variation. To refuse them seems almost cruel; but to assist is a certain premium on pauperism. With our organization, the "Conference of Charities," which we hope will soon resume active operations, all personal appeals for aid should be promptly rejected. It is mispent charity and mistaken kindness to bestow gratuities upon such characters. One of the greatest philanthropists of the world, whose large gifts to the poor reached up into the hundred thousands, thanked the Lord that he had never given a street beggar a penny. And another practical suggestion we offer to our readers in city and country: Never give a tramp or mendicant the name of a pastor or church member. He is sure to call and state that you sent him, with assurance that his case was worthy and that assistance would certainly be rendered. We have known brethren embarrassed and bereaved of reluctant cash by such indiscretion.

Rawhide Christians.

Travelling through the hill-parishes of North Louisiana, some weeks ago, en route to a District Conference, the accommodating and locally well-informed Jehu who held the reins and guided our team proved to be a valuable companion. His observations on the people, soil, climate, products, methods of cultivation, etc., gave us a clear and evidently correct idea of that populous and most prosperous section of the "Creole State." Referring to a fine corn crop, grown on unusually red soil, our brother said: "That's rawhide land, and, if worked right, it never fails to bring fine corn." In reply to interrogatories, as to why the soil was so designated, he explained as follows: "You see it is a tough, compact soil that bakes very hard in the sun. It requires a good deal of rain to soften it, and unless worked at once it can't be cultivated at all. When hard it will resist the sharpest plow; but when softened by a shower it works nicely for a few days and produces finely." And when we looked at the drooping, well-filled ears, and two on a stalk, it was evident that the shrewd farmer had discovered the secret of tilling "rawhide land." So that crop was the result of cunning cultivation rather than productiveness of soil—the when and how to plow and hoe! A like study of soil and plant would multiply our Southern harvests in every latitude.

But the descriptive term awoke spiritual suggestions, and, according to the homiletical habit of the pulpit, we began to trace certain parallels. It occurred to us that many Christians were found in the church here and there who strikingly resembled that red soil. They have a rawhide toughness and productiveness about them that responds to cultivation and yields a harvest only under certain conditions. Unless approached at the right time, in a specific way, by a special person and with a single class of arguments and influences, they are unyielding and useless in church work. And he is the wise pastor who, like the observant and industrious farmer, discerns the rawhide character of his parishioner and cultivates him according to "times and seasons." There are doubtless many members of the church, barren and unfruitful—valueless except as ciphers to swell statistics—who might be yielding sixty-fold unto the Lord, if properly understood and diligently tilled.

This "rawhide" Christian is found in many an official board. He can only be worked after a shower—either a shower of grace in a revival or a shower of tears in some great sorrow. Both make him malleable and pliable, and, taken in hand at once, he will render any amount of wholesome fruit and service. But let the season pass unimproved—let the long, dry days and the vertical sun come—and he is baked too hard for any pastoral ploughshare to turn a furrow. He objects to every plan proposed, every scheme devised, every suggestion made, and resists every call for labor and appeal for aid. Preaching falls upon him with only a sound and never makes a surface impression. A superficial student of religious character would think him unfit for church membership, a grievance and a nuisance save as a test of patience. But not so. He has elements of large usefulness—capacity for mighty achievements. Softened by Divine refreshings and cultivated while the shower is still falling, and he responds with sheaves that make the angels rejoice. This revival season is the auspicious time for breaking up all the "rawhide land" in the church. Now you can sink the colter to any depth; after awhile it will scarcely scrape the baked surface. But if well worked in the season of copious rains, it can stand the severest drought. A harvest is sure however fierce the brazen sky.

This "rawhide" character is also seen in the ministry. He works better at one time than another. At protracted and camp meetings he preaches with power, and is in constant demand for such occasions. He needs a perpetual revival to disclose his rare capacity. In the hard, dull routine work of the pastorate he has neither fitness nor fondness. And, unless he can preserve the glow and moisture of one revival period to another, he bears little fruit. He becomes first discouraged, and then disgruntled. His appointment was unwelcome, the people unappreciative, the church was dead, the stewards were indifferent and his health was not good. He seriously considers the propriety of locating or even of surrendering his credentials. But a prudent presiding elder will away with every such intimation. He discovers the difficulty and will easily remove it. Argument, appeal, reproof then are worse than vain. He gets him into a good Pentecostal meeting, and when the fallow is mellowed by the shower the timely furrow is turned. The brother only needed careful training at a specific time and a certain character of appointment. Men have been lost to a successful and happy ministry because of neglect or unskilled coquet at the opportune time.

Again, this "rawhide" element is more or less developed in every character. A successful pastor, therefore, studies as intently the character of his members as the seismologist has to preach. Indeed, the one is necessary to the success of the other. When the early or latter rain has fallen upon a certain heart then a suitable message is delivered—"food convenient" is prepared. Honored and happy is the Lord's husbandman who understands the soil and seasons as well as the seed he has to sow.

Romish Losses.

The Romish Church is sustaining serious loss every year in America. Large gains are claimed, and occasionally Protestants get nervous over their rapid growth; but, as a matter of fact, their profit and loss account is enormous. When we consider the vast immigration to our shores from Romish countries and communities, the increase of the church is significantly small. The figures on this subject are a revelation, as any one may see who will read Dr. Dorchester's "Problem of Religious Progress." One Archbishop in Ireland plead with the faithful not to come to America, for it was "the sepulchre of the church." These Romish immigrants soon become assimilated with our republican and Protestant institutions, and turn away from the priestly hierarchy. We knew an elegant Catholic lady, devoted to her church in America as in France, whose entire family of six children and numerous grandchildren became Protestants, and nearly all of them Methodists of the finest type. These instances are found in every community. The number of converts to Rome is very small; so small, indeed, that when a school-girl does go over it is sufficiently noticeable to become a sensation. And this statement is abundantly sustained by Romish testimony. The last admission we have seen is an extract from the American Catholic Quarterly Review. Speaking of the Roman Catholic immigrants to this country, it says:

The Italians show very little love of the (Roman Catholic) faith, and very little knowledge of it. Far different from the humble Irish, who, years ago, laboring on the great public works, always welcomed a priest and helped to erect churches as they moved along, the Italians neither frequent the churches nor accessible to them nor exert themselves to erect others where they can hear the words of truth in their own tongue. The Italian churches are few compared to the Italian body, and they are not maintained exclusively by them. In many cities there are quarters occupied by Italians who seem to have lost all religion; so that when zealous priests, speaking their language, give missions in order to revive their faith, they find but a score of listeners, the very women having apparently lost all attachment to religion. Those coming to us from Spanish America are very numerous; but Spanish churches, except in the old Mexican provinces now annexed to this country, are almost unknown; and yet few, comparatively, of this body are seen in the Catholic Churches where the sermons are in English.

A Centenary Inksland.

At the recent session of the Wesleyan Conference, at Burslem, England, an inkstand was presented to the president as a memorial of the Centenary of the "Deed of Declaration." As the legal existence of Methodism in England began with the signing of that "deed," it is a striking coincidence that organic American Methodism is the same age as its mother. Read the following account of the interesting episode excerpted from the London Methodist:

In the open session of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference, England, on Tuesday, July 22, Mr. J. S. Jones, on behalf of the Macclesfield District, presented the Conference with a memorial in the shape of a beautiful silver inkstand. He said: "On February 28, 1784, the 'Deed of Declaration' was signed by Mr. Wesley, which for the first time defined and specified what the Conference of the people called Methodists is; and from that day until now the Conference has existed under a legal form. What would have become of Methodism if that deed had not been drawn up it is impossible to say; but in this district we thank God that Mr. Wesley was providentially led to sign that document—that the Conference was then legally defined. This Conference is a Centenary Conference—reckoning that as its natal day—and I have now, in the name of the brethren of this district, to ask the Conference to accept of a silver inkstand, which is to be laid hereafter on the president's table from year to year, and in the meanwhile to be entrusted to the custody of the president for the time being. This inkstand is a beautiful work of art, made by a first-class house in Birmingham. Upon it you will find the figure of John Wesley—a medallion taken of John Wesley by Mr. Turner. In this neighborhood, and believed to be one of the best things of the kind in the kingdom. On the obverse side—as we could not get a medallion of Charles Wesley—there is an engraved portrait of the poet of Methodism. We have been anxious to avoid all symbolism to which any objection might be made; but there are here two symbols which will not be objected to by any Methodist in the land. The inkstand is surmounted by the figure of the globe, and underneath that is the motto: 'The world is my parish.' This globe, therefore, is symbolical of the sphere in which Methodism thinks it its duty to work. The only other symbol is the figure of an open Bible, underneath which are the words: 'A man of one book.' This symbolizes what is the standard of our faith—the written word of God. I will only now read the inscription, and ask the Conference to accept of this gift: 'From the Wesleyan Methodists of the Macclesfield District to the Wesleyan Methodist Conference, on the occasion of its assembling at Burslem, July 22, 1884, in memory of the completion of the first hundred years of its existence, and the Centenary of its Deed of Declaration.'

The meeting of the Evangelical Alliance, in Copenhagen, proved to be a great and glorious success. It will be remembered by our readers that Stockholm was selected as the place of meeting, but on account of the narrow, touchy bigotry of the State Church a change of place was necessary. After some delay the invitation to Copenhagen was accepted and arrangements made for the session. The attendance of delegates was not large because of the embarrassment stated above; but the proceedings were marked by singular evangelical earnestness and scholarly ability. The king and queen of Denmark, their son, the king of Greece (on a visit to his parents), the crown prince and crown princess of Denmark and many court officials attended the popular evening meetings. Addresses were delivered in French, German and English, and interpreted to the audience. Prof. Christlieb, of Germany, Dr. Schaaf, of New York, and Rev. William Arthur, of England, the distinguished Wesleyan Methodist, were among the most noted delegates in attendance. The next session will be held either in London or in Edinburgh. The Alliance pronounced vigorously against the opium traffic and passed the following resolution:

The Evangelical Alliance, while reserving its opinion regarding the methods adopted by the Salvation Army in promoting their evangelistic work, protest against the violations of religious liberty which have taken place on the occasion of certain meetings of the Salvation Army in Switzerland.

The War between France and China.

MR. EDITOR: No doubt you see the telegrams from China, and know that for weeks we have been on the verge of war between France and China. One day everything bids fair for peace, and on the next our hopes would be overthrown and war seemed inevitable. The port of Foochow has been in a great state of excitement for nearly four weeks, and everyone expecting an immediate attack from the French. We have had a great deal of excitement here, and on several occasions we have expected the forts at Woosung would be taken by the French. The delay of the French has given the Chinese an opportunity to prepare for war all along the coast, from Tientsin in the north to Canton in the south. The natives have fled from Foochow in great numbers, and almost all foreigners, especially the ladies, have had to leave, for notice was given that the forts and the arsenal might be attacked by the French at any moment. We have some of the ladies of the Methodist Mission with us, while others have gone to Amoy, and some to Hong Kong. Trade has been greatly interfered with, and the missionary work at Foochow almost entirely at a standstill. Trade in Shanghai is at a standstill, and no doubt many houses will fall unless affairs change for the better. Our missionary work is interfered with to some extent—especially our night preaching. There is a good deal of excitement among the people in Shanghai; but, I am glad to say, they are quiet in the interior towns.

To-day we hear war is declared by the French against the Chinese, and we hear also that the Chinese have declared war against the French. It is also reported that the French have retaken Kelung, on the island of Formosa, and that they have also attacked and captured the Pescadore Islands, between Foochow and the island of Formosa. It seems the Chinese have determined not to pay any indemnity, but to resist the aggression of the French. The French have been very overbearing in their conduct toward the Chinese, and have ignored the rights of the Chinese in their own waters and in their own territory without an open declaration of war. The tide of public opinion is turning somewhat in favor of the Chinese. The Chinese have certainly been very patient and forbearing, and have not desired war. What the result will be we can not tell. Foochow is still threatened with a number of men-of-war. Amoy is also threatened. There are three French men-of-war at Woosung, twelve miles from Shanghai, watching the forts and the movements of Chinese gunboats. It is said that the French, at Foochow, were for ten days and nights at their guns ready for an attack; but, so far as we have heard, there has been none yet. It is certainly a very unpleasant state of affairs for both foreigners and Chinese. Our trust is in God, who will bring good out of all this trouble. He will hear the prayers of his people, and will be with them in trouble. Pray for us and for the church in China.

Your brother in Christ,
J. W. LAMMUTH,
SHANGHAI, CHINA, AUG. 19, 1884.

—Rev. G. M. Roper, of Pensacola, Fla., reports a Centenary collection in his charge of $521 25.

—Bishop Keener announces the change of the North Alabama Conference session to November 19.

—Dr. W. M. Rush, one of the veterans and strong men of the Missouri Conference is in feeble health, and purposes making a visit to California.

—During the present century 100,000,000 copies of the Bible have been printed in 236 different languages, and yet the supply falls short of the demand.

—A Methodist Tract Society has been organized at Augusta, Ga., with Rev. C. A. Evans as President, and Rev. W. A. Caudler, secretary. A good move.

—Sunday, September 21, ultimo, was observed in the English Wesleyan Church, by appointment of the President, as a day of Special Harvest Thanksgiving.

—The Rev. Peter Akers, D. D., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, preached his annual sermon in Jacksonville, Ill., September 7. He has entered upon his ninety-fifth year.

—Just as we go to press intelligence is received of the death of Rev. W. E. Doty, a superannuated member of the Louisiana Conference. The sad event occurred at Murfreesboro, Tenn., September 23.

—Dr. Sullins, President of Emory and Henry College, is doing yeoman service in securing an endowment for that honored and historic institution. He secured $1,100 on a recent trip into North Carolina.

—Mrs. Fannie S. Koger, wife of our heroic young missionary in Brazil, will sail on Nov. 4, on the steamship Advance, from Newport News, Va., for Rio de Janeiro. May favoring winds fill the sails of her good ship and prosper her missionary journey.

—The queen of Sweden has sent to England a donation of $10,000 to the fund for translating, printing and distributing Gospel tracts among the children of different lands, and has accepted ten thousand Swedish leaflets for distribution among the children of Stockholm.

—The Union Theological Seminary, of New York, began its forty-ninth year, last week, in the new magnificent buildings erected in Park avenue, on the crest of Lenox Hill. The buildings cost $725,000. It has a productive endowment of $1,910,000. About 150 students were present at the opening.

—The Rev. A. R. Rayven has sold the Southern Methodist Herald to the publishers of the Raleigh Christian Advocate. And so the roses fall. Bro. Rayven made a capital editor, but the field in North Carolina is overcrowded. Fewer papers well supported will better subserve the interests of Christ's kingdom.

—A "Prayer Cure Hospital" has been recently opened at Erie, Pa. It is said that the first patients were "a blind lady from Ashabula, O., who expected to recover her sight by prayer; a Painesville (Ohio) preacher, suffering from softening of the brain; a Corry clergyman, dying of consumption; a scrofulous lady from Meadville, and an Erie dyspeptic."

—The question of changing the "episcopal residences" is agitating somewhat our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This has been occasioned by the death of Bishop Simpson, and the probability of some one having to move to Philadelphia. The West fears she will have to be bereaved and enters timely protest.

—As a system of ministerial supply, all ecclesiastical history has no equal of the Methodist itinerancy. Every preacher has a place and every church a pastor. And that fact often recurs when we read such statements as this from the Tennessee Baptist, that there are 681 ordained Baptist preachers in that State who are without pastorates.

—Our Northern Methodist brethren have organized a new Conference on the Pacific coast, called the "Puget Sound." It was set apart from the Oregon Conference, and starts out with 1,400 members and probationers, 27 effective preachers, 5 supplies and 2 supernumeraries. Bishops Foss and Fowler have both been laboring in that field.

—The Marquis of Ripon has been succeeded by Lord Dufferin as Viceroy of India. We are entirely content with this change because the most conspicuous feature of Ripon's administration was the subordination of official patronage and power to the advancement of Romanism. For Earl Dufferin we have had great admiration since his brilliant career as Governor-General of Canada.

—That is a capital idea of the French Protestant Bible Society. It presents a copy of the New Testament to every new Protestant communicant, and a Bible to every new married couple. France needs nothing so much as the word of God, circulated and read among the masses. It would accomplish the overthrow of Imperial Romanism, and give stability and perpetuity to their republic.

—Rev. Dr. Ward, of the New York Independent, sailed recently in the "Britannic," on his way to the valley of the Euphrates, to conduct the researches on the site of Babylon, provided for by the munificent gift to the American Oriental Society by Miss Caroline Wolfe. Dr. Ward is a distinguished Oriental scholar and eminently fitted for the difficult enterprise.

—One of the most distinguished members and, possibly, the best speaker present at the recent meeting, in Montreal, of the British Association for the Advancement of Science was a Methodist—the Rev. W. H. Dallinger, LL.D., F. R. S., F. L. S., president of Wesley College, Sheffield, England. We have read much from his pen during the past ten years, and have learned to regard him as a scientific authority.

—Chancellor Sims, of the Syracuse University, New York, presided at the great demonstration in that city last week in honor of Mr. Blaine, candidate for the presidency. Dr. Sims is a distinguished Methodist preacher, and at the late General Conference received a large vote for the episcopacy. So honored among his brethren we regret that he consented to preside at a political meeting. We have nothing to say as to his party predilections or how he shall vote, but as a gospel minister he was out of place in that chair.

—We published last week an article from Dr. H. F. Johnson, on the "Endowment of Whitworth College." It is a worthy enterprise, and we doubt not but the plan suggested will realize a handsome amount for the institution. Colleges prosper and then wane because entirely dependent upon the accidents and uncertainties of annual patronage. Whitworth has had a remarkable history under the presidency of Dr. Johnson, and we hope his further efforts will give it a permanent foundation worthy of his name and the church he loves and serves.

—President Arthur has appointed Walter Q. Gresham, secretary of the treasury, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Secretary Folger. As postmaster general, Judge Gresham has made an enduring reputation as an able, fearless, industrious and impartial officer. His war on the lotteries was worthy of his good Presbyterian religion. If he will carry the same spirit of reform into his place of larger responsibility, the country will be made to rejoice. The promotion of such men is a tribute to Christian virtue.

—The presiding elders in our patronizing Conferences have begun the "fourth round." That is the time, as Post Oak circuit says, that "rises men's souls." The eighth question must be answered in view of the report at Conference and the revelations of "that day." Local preachers and church trustees are to present written reports, and on that every presiding elder should insist. What loss of property we have sustained because of the negligence of trustees! And what loss of power, because of the indolence of local preachers!

—Ex-Rev. O. B. Frothingham has an article in the current number of the North American Review, on "The Philosophy of Conversion." After a patient reading of it to the last sentence, we felt about him as was said of a certain American statesman that in spiritual knowledge "his mind is a vast, howling wilderness." Just what he does believe on the subject of conversion we are unable to discover. As to any experience of it, he evidently knows nothing. The philosophy of conversion is an attractive title, and we at once singled out the article for careful reading. But really has conversion any philosophy?

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending September 30, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	7 1/2
Ordinary	8 1/2
Good ordinary	9 1/2
Low middling	10 1/2
Middling	11 1/2
Good middling	12 1/2
Fair	13 1/2
Galveston middling	14 1/2
Mobile middling	15 1/2
St. Louis middling	16 1/2

SUGAR.
Inferior	3 1/2
Common	4 1/2
Good common	5 1/2
Good fair	6 1/2
Fully fair	7 1/2
Prime	8 1/2
Choice	9 1/2
Seconds	10 1/2
Yellow clarified	11 1/2
Gray clarified	12 1/2
Choice whites	13 1/2
Granulated	14 1/2

MOLASSES.
Strap	1 1/2
Prime	2 1/2
Choice	3 1/2
Fancy	4 1/2

RICE.
Choice	5 1/2
Prime	6 1/2
Good	7 1/2
Fair	8 1/2
Ordinary	9 1/2
Common	10 1/2
No. 2	11 1/2

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 3/4
Minnesota patents	6 1/2
Extra heavy	6 3/4
Winter wheat patents	7 1/2
Choice	8 1/2
Fancy	9 1/2

CORN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal	3 7/8
Corn meal	2 1/2
Grits	3 1/2
Hominy	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
CORN:
White	66
Yellow	67
Mixed	68
OATS:
Western	39
Texas first-proof	40
Texas No. 2	37
BRAN:
Choice	85
Hay:
Choice	19 00
Prime	18 00

PROVISIONS.
PORK:
Mess.	17 75
Prime mess.	18 50
Rumps	16 50
BACON:
Choice breakfast	12
Shoulders	7 1/2
Sides, clear	11 1/2
Sides, clear rib	11 1/2
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	14 1/2
Dry-salt meat:
Shoulders	7 1/2
Sides, clear	11 1/2
Sides, clear rib	11 1/2

FISH.
MACKEREL:
No. 1, in hbls.	14 25
Half hbls.	7 75
No. 2, in hbls.	13 75
Half hbls.	6 25
No. 3, in hbls., large	13 25
Half hbls.	7 00

GROCERIES.
COFFEE:
Rio, choice	94
Cardon, choice	12
Java, choice	22
BUTTER:
Western dairy	18
New York dairy	19
Country	20
LARD:
Choice	84
Fair	25
Oil:
Coal, cases	18
Coal, bbls	13
Coal, sack	50
Lard	80

VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES:
Western, bulk	10 00
Country	11 00
POTATOES:
Landmark	1 75
Knott	5 00
ONIONS:
Choice	1 25

BAILING STUFFS.
HAY:
No. 1	10 1/2
No. 2	11 1/2
BALING TWINE:
No. 1	13
No. 2	1 30

SUNDRIES.
CHICKENS, Western	5 00
Young	2 00
Chickens, South'n	3 25
Young	2 00
Turkeys, Southern	9 00
Eggs:
Western	19
Southern	23
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	18
Barry	17 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	8 1/2
Staves:
Oak, kegs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, casks	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
Hoop poles:
Hoghead	40 00
Barrels	20 00
Hall barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	23 00
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3
Sulphuric acid	2 1/2
Bone black	3 1/2

In the Practice of Medicine.
 "For coughs and liver troubles, dyspepsia and rheumatism, Parker's Tonic is the best remedy I know of," writes Dr. W. Haddock, of Pine Hill, Ala.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

VIENNA, Sept. 23.—By direction of Major J. M. Edwards, general manager of the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas Railroad, no more trains will be run for Sunday excursion over the road. New Orleans, the Southern terminus of the road, will be affected by this new departure.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 24.—The will of Clara W. West gives to the Old Men's Home, in this city, $50,000, to the Widows' Home, the Children's Home, the Cincinnati Orphan Asylum, the German Protestant Orphan Asylum, and the Catholic Orphan Asylum, Cincinnati, $10,000 each; to the Sisters of the Good Shepherd and the Little Sisters of the Poor, $5,000 each. The bulk of the estate is divided among the children of his late wife and sister.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Sept. 24.—Quite a valuable discovery has been made two and a half miles southeast of Fort Deposit, on the Mobile and Montgomery Railroad. Mr. G. D. Fitzhugh, a civil and mining engineer at Birmingham, returned to-day from examining and testing some iron ore lumps found in that locality. He found quite a quantity of ore, resembling the fibrous brown hematite or needle ore, similar to that found in the Murphree Valley, near Birmingham. The specimen in his possession contains 40 per cent. of iron. The ore extends over several miles of that territory. Its depth has not yet been ascertained.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The Chinese government has applied, through Minister Young, for 3000 square feet for its exhibit at the World's Exposition at New Orleans.

DALLAS, Sept. 25.—At 4 o'clock this morning the kitchen of the Commercial Hotel, 21st street, caught fire. The Northern Methodist Church, adjoining, and two small residences on the other side were totally destroyed. There were forty guests in the hotel, all of whom escaped with their lives, but many lost in whole or in part their clothing. The church, known as the Methodist Tabernacle, cost $7000, and only had a $2000 policy.

DEWEY, Sept. 26.—Miss C. J. Walton, a wealthy young lady, of New York City, perished in a fire which broke out Tuesday night while descending Long's Peak. Miss Walton had been spending the season at Colorado Springs, visiting Pike's Peak and other points of interest.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Sept. 27.—A fire occurred this morning about 2:30 o'clock in the Episcopal school building, on the north side of Church Street. This building and the two adjacent ones were totally destroyed. One of the adjoining buildings was the Presbyterian parsonage, occupied at the time of the fire by Rev. J. S. Parks, who also suffered the loss of his personal effects, furniture, clothing, etc.

DAYTON, Sept. 27.—A windstorm of unusual violence swept across the country twenty-five miles north of Dayton Saturday. There was a cloud burst giving a fall of five inches of rain in three-quarters of an hour. The water poured down the valley like a tidal wave, raising the Miami river at Dayton five feet in a short time. Four houses at St. Paris were damaged by lightning. Sixty houses in a row in houses were unroofed. North of Mechanicsburg houses and barns were blown down.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 28.—The cattle breeders of Kentucky having sent a committee to ask Gov. Knott to call an extra session of the Legislature to take action looking to the stamping out of the cattle disease, now known as the horn or Frisbie & Lake, yesterday received the committee report to the effect that the Governor declined to call the Legislature. Frisbie & Lake had agreed to destroy their herd upon receiving payment, and they had been appraised at $25,000. The breeders asked to try and raise $15,000, to offer for the destruction of the herd, and if refused, to take such legal measures as could be employed to stamp out the disease.

LONDON, Sept. 28.—The British gunboat Wasp was wrecked off Tory Island, on the northwest coast of Ireland, today. Fifty persons were drowned. The Wasp had a registered tonnage of 465 tons and carried four guns. Only six persons were saved.

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 28.—Three Pullman and the private car of Chief Engineer H. H. H. of the Great Trunk Express for Montreal and Boston, left the track near Pickering Station last night, owing to a broken frog, and went over an embankment twenty-five feet high. At the time of the accident it was very dark and the rain was pouring in torrents. The passengers collected together and the roll was called; when it was found that about a dozen were injured, but not seriously. How all escaped is a mystery. One of the coaches was smashed into kindling wood.

Line in Baking Powders.
 Prof. R. A. Whitman, M. D., Medical University, Buffalo, N. Y., who is the highest authority, says that "Calcium Tartrate (improperly called Tartaric Acid)" advertised as the basis of Baking Powders is derived from the waste of the grape and is a constituent of the grape and other fruits, and is absolutely harmless.

From the Reverend Clergy.
 Among the many ministers of the gospel, who have been helped by Brown's Iron Bitters, the Rev. E. A. Sprigg, Corydon, Iowa, says, "I used it for general ill-health and found it a great help." Rev. J. S. McCarty, Port Stevens, Dakota, says, "I suffered from several dyspepsia and increased my weight twenty-five pounds." The Rev. Mr. Olney, New Bern, N. C., says he has taken it, and considers it one of the best medicines known. The Rev. Mr. Whitney, Hingham, Wis., says, "After a long sickness from lung fever, I used Brown's Iron Bitters and gained strength." So throughout the States with hundreds and hundreds of other clergymen.

Merchants and grocers, hotel-keepers, colleges, managers of boarding department, and others would do well to address Mrs. P. M. Goodwyn, manufacturer, 179 Grand St., N. O., for price list of Goodwyn's Eureka Yeast Powder, a superior home product of the Crescent City. Positively free from Alum or any other harmful ingredient. It not only invigorates, but squarely challenges comparison with any and all standard articles in its line.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

CENTRAL DISTRICT.—To the preachers in charge in the bounds of Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference: Dear brethren, let us not forget our Centenary work, and especially the motto: "A collection from every congregation." The opportunity of a hundred years is at hand. Let us improve it. Give every member of the church an opportunity of making a thank offering. Let us not fail in this matter. For, if we do, with Bishop Keener in the chair, we may expect to be called to account for it, when we go up to Aberdeen in November.

T. C. WIFE,
 Chairman Dist. Centenary Com.

THE PRELUDING OFFERS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE WILL PLEASE SEND ME PROMPTLY THE NAMES IN FULL OF THE SEVERAL DELEGATES ELECT TO THE CENTENARY CONFERENCE, AND OF THEIR ALTERNATES.

BYRONIA, Mississippi. J. M. BANCROFT

CAMP MEETINGS.
 The eleventh annual camp meeting for the DeKalb circuit will begin on Friday night in the second Sunday in October next. Preachers coming by rail will be met at Seale, on Friday morning, with conveyance. Must be notified a few days in advance of the meeting, that I may know what sort and what amount of conveyance to provide.

H. D. W. ELLIS, P. O.

THE NEW PROSPECT CAMP MEETING WILL COMMENCE ON FRIDAY NIGHT BEFORE THE FOURTH SUNDAY IN OCTOBER. PREACHERS WILL BE MET WITH CONVEYANCES AT OCEAN SPRINGS ON THE ARRIVAL OF THE MORNING TRAIN FROM NEW ORLEANS ON FRIDAY, OCTOBER 24. MINISTERIAL BROTHERS ARE INVITED TO COME AND HELP US.

A. P. CULP, P. O.

THERE WILL BE A CAMP MEETING AT A. DREW CHAPEL CAMP GROUND, ELITE MILLS EAST OF DEBOTO, COMMENCING FRIDAY NIGHT BEFORE THE FIRST SUNDAY IN OCTOBER, ON THE SELF-SUSTAINING PLAN. MINISTERS ARE GENERALLY INVITED, AND WILL BE MET AT DEBOTO, SATURDAY MORNING WITH CONVEYANCES. MINISTERS' FAMILIES ARE INVITED.

THERE WILL BE A CAMP MEETING AT UNION CAMP GROUND, TWELVE MILES EAST OF DEBOTO, FRIDAY NIGHT BEFORE THE FIRST SUNDAY IN OCTOBER, ON THE SELF-SUSTAINING PLAN. MINISTERS ARE REQUESTED TO ARRIVE BY NOTIFYING ME AT SHALATA, MISS., I WILL MAKE ARRANGEMENTS FOR THEM TO COME OUT.

J. C. HOGAN, P. O.

THE OAK RIDGE CAMP MEETING, THREE MILES SOUTHWEST OF VERNON, LA., WILL BEGIN ON FRIDAY NIGHT BEFORE THE FIRST SUNDAY IN OCTOBER. MINISTERS ARE cordially invited, and all are assured of a hearty welcome.

J. L. P. SHEPARD, P. O.

THE BUSH CAMP MEETING, ON SAME CIRCUIT, WILL COMMENCE ON FRIDAY BEFORE THE FIRST SABBATH IN OCTOBER.

THE BUSH CAMP MEETING IS FIVE MILES FROM MARLBOROUGH STATION, AND BELIEVE IS SEVEN MILES FROM PATRICK STATION. CONVEYANCE CAN BE HAD FROM EACH PLACE IF NOTICE IS GIVEN IN TIME.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SHILOH CAMP GROUND, ON SHILOH CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, SITUATED TEN MILES SOUTHWEST OF BRANDON, AND SIX MILES SOUTH OF TOLAHATCHIE STATION, ON V. & M. R. L., WILL COMMENCE ON THURSDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 9, 1884. MINISTERS COMING BY RAIL WILL BE MET AT TOLAHATCHIE STATION, V. & M. R. L., ON FRIDAY MORNING, AND CONVEYED TO CAMP GROUND. MR. EDITOR, WE SHALL EXPECT YOU WITH US ON THAT OCCASION.

R. A. SHIRLEY, P. O.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Champion Book FOR BOYS.
 "Gilderoy's Stories" is a rollicking, breezy, bright book for boys.

Send seventy-five cents to the author
R. G. PORTER,
 Verona, Miss.

By mail, postpaid, only seventy-five cents.

THE NEW HIGH ARM SINGER SEWING MACHINE
 IS SUPERIOR TO ALL!
 Range of Work, Perfection of Stitch, Ease of Operation,
 Rapidity, and almost Noiseless.

Call, examine and be convinced.
 Agents, at the corner of Second and Third Streets, New Orleans, La., for Catalogue and Price List, McColl's Bazar, Patrons. Catalogue free.

The Singer Manufacturing Co.

165 CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

ASHEVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE,

IN THE "LAND OF THE SKY,"

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

"The fall session opens September 16th. Faculty large and experienced. Course thorough. Modern advantages first rate. The place beautiful. The location excellent for study. Charges low. Send for Catalogue. Address—

REV. JAMES ATKINS, JR.,

The E. A. Seminary

This school, for boys and girls, is located at Arcadia, near the Parish, La., a town on the railroad that joins Monroe and Shreveport.

The course of study is thorough and practical. The discipline is rigid, with mildness.

For circulars, address

R. A. SMITH, Principal.

Alabama Conference Female College,

Tuskegee, Ala.

FULL and able Faculty. Number of pupils during the past year, 181. Standard of Scholarship high. Advantages in Music and Art unsurpassed. Expenses very moderate for the advantages afforded. For full information send for catalogue.

JOHN MASSEY, President.

Port Gibson Female College,

PORT GIBSON, MISS.

A prominent and scholarly member of the Mississippi Conference writes: "To no school North or South, would I rather commit the training of our daughters."

Unsurpassed Facilities for Female Education. Corps of Teachers; full, competent and experienced.

Buildings of Brick, large and commodious. Grounds beautiful, ample and splendidly adapted to pleasant and healthful recreation.

Dress, none but plain allowed.

Terms, no better can be made elsewhere.

For Catalogue address

REV. T. C. BRADFORD, President.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

MOBILE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Grand Bay, at St. Elmo	Oct. 1, 12
Franklin Street	13
Henry Street	14
Imley Street, at Kasper Hill	15
Toulminville, at Kasper Hill	16
Washington Street	17
Washington Street	18
Washington Street	19
Washington Street	20
Washington Street	21
Washington Street	22
Washington Street	23
Washington Street	24
Washington Street	25
Washington Street	26
Washington Street	27
Washington Street	28
Washington Street	29
Washington Street	30
Washington Street	31

ETUFAULA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Louisville circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 11, 12
Clinton circuit, at Tabernacle	13
Henry circuit, at Clinton	14
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	15
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	16
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	17
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	18
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	19
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	20
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	21
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	22
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	23
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	24
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	25
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	26
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	27
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	28
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	29
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	30
Clinton circuit, at Clinton	31

PENSACOLA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Pensacola circuit, at Pensacola	Sept. 29, 30
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	1
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	2
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	3
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	4
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	5
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	6
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	7
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	8
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	9
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	10
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	11
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	12
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	13
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	14
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	15
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	16
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	17
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	18
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	19
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	20
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	21
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	22
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	23
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	24
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	25
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	26
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	27
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	28
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	29
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	30
St. Andrew circuit, at Pensacola	31

GREENSHORE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

at Ashtabula	Sept. 29, 30
at Ashtabula	1
at Ashtabula	2
at Ashtabula	3
at Ashtabula	4
at Ashtabula	5
at Ashtabula	6
at Ashtabula	7
at Ashtabula	8
at Ashtabula	9
at Ashtabula	10
at Ashtabula	11
at Ashtabula	12
at Ashtabula	13
at Ashtabula	14
at Ashtabula	15
at Ashtabula	16
at Ashtabula	17
at Ashtabula	18
at Ashtabula	19
at Ashtabula	20
at Ashtabula	21
at Ashtabula	22
at Ashtabula

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 41.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1471.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

MAILED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

W. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

BARBER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Advertisers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

REV. F. L. R. HILL.

REV. C. W. CARTER, D. D.

REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. JAMES A. GONFART.

REV. W. L. O. HUNTER, D. D.

REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.

REV. W. P. HARTON.

REV. J. D. CAMERON.

WALKING WITH JESUS.

BY L. F. BAKER.

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

For the touch of his plumed hand

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1884.

My neighbor's faults I love
And yet
My own delinquency
Folget.

I have a standard high,
You see,
The dust of the day
I'm in.

I'm my own worst enemy,
My sight
Another's fault can find
At night.

Oh! that I had the grace
Within
My heart for love—no place
For sin.

"Reminiscences"

BY REV. J. J. HARRIS.

SINGLE-VISUAL "CIRCUIT" CONFERENCE.

I returned to Natchez as stated in my last, by the same perilous route that I traveled across the Mississippi river, and met my presiding elder, (Bro. Drake,) at the house of Bro. Spear. I have already stated, the peculiarly embarrassing circumstances under which I was compelled again to avail myself of the noble, Christian hospitality of this dear good brother. Now, I propose to give the sequel to my trying experience already detailed.

Every one who can remember B. M. Drake's ready to testify that he was one of the most lovable among men. Kind and tender hearted. If by mistake or in any way he might have been the cause or instrument of affliction to the humblest brother, he was always ready to heal the wound. He had already learned of my difficulties, and knowing that as my presiding elder, he was largely responsible for the disposition that had been made of me at Conference, when I told him my tribulation—assured me, and I have always believed him to be sincere, that my appointment was the result of misapprehension of the situation, and he proposed to do all his power to relieve me.

I had determined to make my way back into the country to a point where I could obtain employment of some kind to support my family for the year. Bro. Drake was unwilling for me to undertake any secular business, yet hesitated to offer me the only appointment at his command, lest I might feel humiliated by such an offer. At length he said to me that at the recent Conference he had received a communication, numerous signed by planters living along the Bayou Pierre in Claiborne county, from the neighborhood of Port Gibson to the eastern border of the county, requesting him to secure for them a missionary to their negroes; provided: such missionary could come with his endorsement as a "safe, prudent, reliable and experienced man." They regarded this work as a very delicate one. It was the first experiment in that region—they were not willing to accept a young and inexperienced man. Up to this time, young, single men, had for the most part been assigned to this work, and it was difficult to find others who could be spared from organized circuits and stations; indeed men with families could not go into this field at that early period. Bro. Drake saw no chance to comply with the request made of him at Conference, in view of the conditions. "Now," said he, "Bro. Harris I feel Providence has opened the way for me and I think for you also, and if you will accept this appointment I will give you a letter of introduction and my most hearty endorsement to that people. I feel sure that they will receive you, treat you kindly, and support you liberally." Oh! how I wish I had that letter now! Among the jewels I have in memory's casket it would be one of rarest value. In my wanderings I have lost it. It breathed such sentiment of brotherly love and confidence in me (unworthy) as at once ensured for me hearty welcome. This missionary field lay in my contemplated route back into the country and I agreed to report myself to the people, if acceptable to undertake the work; otherwise to hunt some other quarters for the year. That letter was addressed to such men as Benj. G. Humphreys, D. G. Humphreys, Geo. Wilson Humphreys, Abram Bridges, W. H. Martin, Jonathan McCaleb, Fletcher Creighton, Daniel Willis, and that most illustrious of all the assiduous women of the period—Mrs. Sallie Barnes. Could a preacher and his family have fallen into better hands? I am sure I never had such ample provision for the comfort and convenience of my family as was made for us that year. I was kindly received by the people and the field so enlarged upon my hands that it was impossible to supply the demand. I preached to the negroes and catechized them on the plantations and in churches, morning, noon or night, week days as well as Sundays. I had the pleasure of sojourning the first two or three weeks under the roof of that precious good woman, Sallie Barnes—and then a short time with my dearly beloved Bro. G. W. Humphreys, while my home for the year was being made ready. Then I was inducted into a large and comfortable house, amply furnished—a splendid servant secured—cow to milk—a fine orchard, garden spot, the cow-crib filled, the larder well supplied at the beginning. Kept so during the year. I do not think I was required to pay for a bushel of corn, a pound of fodder, nor any other article in the way of living furnished me by my patrons, but each paid me in money what he had promised, in support of the mission, and complimented me with the rest. How different, then, and now! Then indeed did I feel that God had given me fathers and mothers many, for all I had left to follow Christ. The Humphreys family, too many of them still live, for any Methodist preacher who has shared their friendship to speak all his heart must feel of gratitude, for their lavish kindness, lost he would seek to the "fruits that follow fasting." Notwithstanding it cannot be amply to acknowledge the uniform sympathy and kindness of those who have gone to their reward. A noble man has seldom lived than Benj. G. Humphreys; the soul of civility and honor, the example of every virtue; what a privilege to have enjoyed the confidence and friendship of such a man! D. G. Humphreys, his other brother, though not then a member of the Church, was always the friend of Methodist preachers. His wife—"Aunt Polly," as we used to call her; Oh how like a mother she was to my wife and little ones; day or night responding to any call made upon her kindness. With all this comforts we had that year we had severe sickness at times. That dear good woman came and ministered with her own hands to the comfort of my wife and children. "Will" and his now sainted wife "Bailna" I never shall forget. Daniel Willis lately gone home! Who that ever knew him can fail in his heart to honor him! Abram Bridges too was a near neighbor and good friend to me. Fletcher Creighton, the model steward class leader, and undivided friend of the Church will live in the memory of all who ever knew him. He was an Irishman by birth—a finely educated man, and was a school master by profession. He was getting old when I knew him in 1816. He had received his earliest religious training among the Wesleyans in the "old country."

If I am not mistaken he had seen and heard, Wesley, Whitefield, Adam Clark and other great lights of Methodism before he came to America. He was thoroughly conversant with the history, doctrines and usages of the Church—a living encyclopedia on all these subjects. Like a great many others Bro. Creighton was prodigal while after he set out in the world for himself. God anointed him by his Spirit and brought him back; he was soundly converted and was loved and honored by all who knew him. By marriage he became connected with the Truly family on the one side, and to the extensive and influential McCaleb family on the other. His wife was the grandmother of that distinguished citizen of Claiborne county, Hon. J. McC. Martin. Such was the universal esteem in which he was held by this extensive family, that after the death his wife had dissolved all the ties that bound him to them, nevertheless, he always had a home with any and every member of this family; was loved and honored by them all. While they were pronounced Episcopalians; and he as stern a Methodist, they all bore testimony to his faultless piety. He has gone home.

MARVIN PARSONAGE, Sept. 10, 1884.

"Tithes."

MR. EDITOR: In the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE I read of many from the different fields of labor, who have generously responded to the call of this Centenary year, which ought to be a source of the deepest gratitude to God, and rejoicing to all who are zealous for the prosperity of our beloved Zion. Yet while we are glad over the great things the Lord has done for us, are we not saddened to know that there are still a large number of professing Christians, who give nothing to help on the good work? Doubtless those who have "willing minds" lack the means, while many who are able, when solicited for contributions raise that never failing plea that "charity begins at home;" so it does, but let it not be kept too closely confined at home lest the millions of heathens who sit in darkness perish for want of spiritual food. Again we frequently see this passage quoted to countenance their worldly propensities, "but if any provide not for his own, he is worse than an infidel." We admit all this is Bible language, but have we any right to pervert this passage, or any other for our own gratification? God commands us to use self-denial, and be temperate in all things, in order that we may be able to "sow besides all waters" to "give," "do good," and be "ready to distribute," for "with such sacrifices he is well pleased." What caused the terrible calamities to befall the children of Israel? Was not one of the sins that of withholding "tithes?" "The first of the first fruits, had been commanded to be brought into the house of the Lord, for the "tenth" was his, but when they disobeyed, they were "cursed with a curse." Listen what God tells them, "ye have robbed me, even this whole nation" and they ask "wherein have we robbed thee?" and the answer comes "in tithes and offerings." Is not this robbery applicable to many of the present generation? Note the disasters which followed their disobedience and selfishness, but let us turn to the bright side of the picture and view the gracious promises, and blessings that were given, and bestowed on those who obeyed and gave a "tenth of all their increase to the Lord. Now which will you choose? Methinks I hear some one say, "Oh! that was the old law, Christ coming changed it." Christ came "not to destroy, but to fulfill" it, as he himself gave "tribute" and commanded us to obey the laws of our land by supporting its institutions. Then how much more meet it is that we who sit under the sound of the gospel should be co-workers with him in spreading the glad tidings by rendering back a "tenth" to the author of our spiritual, and temporal blessings. Yes this law still holds good to all true believers, else St. Paul would have never told us "upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." We could cite many passages to prove this, but deem it needless to those who are already so conversant with Scripture, but the love of Christ constraineth us to speak to all who still cling so tenaciously to their pet theory that "charity begins at home" and Oh my friends, we beseech you to turn earnestly, and prayerfully to the Bible for proof whereof we write, asking God to enlighten your understanding on the grace of giving, for these things are only "spiritually discerned." Many of you who want give, and don't give save up your money, that ye may give gifts, and make feast unto your friends, spend in attending balls, theatres, circuses, pleasure-excursions, races, card playing, lotteries, gambling, and yet have nothing to give to the Lord, who daily bestow on you all you enjoy, and some of you claim to be church members too. Oh! will not ye who spend your money so lavishly for the goods that perish in the using, ponder seriously over this matter and turn unto the Lord with thy "tenth?"—Just one dime, when the Lord leaves you ninety cents out of every dollar given. Are you not making a mockery of prayer, when you pray "thy kingdom come," etc, and keep your pocket-books tightly closed? Let not your lips utter the words, when your hearts are far off, and your hearts inactive. Forget not in your prosperity, who it was that brought you out of bondage, and let not your heart grow cold, proud, careless and selfish saying in your hearts it is "the might of my hand which has gotten me this wealth" and I have the right to dispose of it in any manner I wish, but thou art mistaken, for it is "God that giveth the power to get wealth," not that you may spend on yourselves alone, but that you may "sow bountifully," and "abound in every good work." Ah! the sin of withholding "tithes," have brought drought, war, famine, fire, epidemics and floods which have devastated portions of our beautiful land that the Lord wills should blossom as the rose. If you liberally, and cheerfully donate unto the Lord's cause, will he not faithfully fulfill his promise by "increasing the fruits of your righteousness, minister bread for your food," and multiply your seed soon? If you believe God's words, then give, give, give! Oh! let every man, woman and child willingly, come up to the help of the Lord this Centenary year, not hoarding over the progress our beloved Methodism has made over other denominations, but in humility and thanksgiving let us "honor the Lord, with the first fruits of our increase," by bringing all our "tithes" into the treasury of the Lord, that our "barns may be filled with plenty," and we be "blessed in all our works, and all that we puttest our hands unto." ETTA.

September 9th, 1884.

Methodist Episcopal.

CHURCH THEORY, VERSUS CHURCH PRACTICE—DR. ABBEY, VERSUS DR. GALLOWAY.

Believing a discrepancy existed between the theory of the Church, that Bishops are not a third order in the ministry, but simply as officers, and the practice of ordaining them, by which they are manifestly constituted a third order; I took occasion from an editorial comment in the ADVOCATE, on some proposed modification of their Episcopacy by the late Northern General Conference, to submit to the readers of the ADVOCATE an enquiry, which I hope, will in some way, lead to a proper adjustment, or a better understanding of the questions. The following is the enquiry:

AN ENQUIRY.

A LIMITED EPISCOACY.

A Judge Sibley, of Ohio, introduced a resolution fixing the Bishops' term of office at twelve years. In such a venture the learned Judge is liable to be in a crowd by himself.

The above paragraph in last week's ADVOCATE, found in an editorial notice of the Northern Methodist General Conference, at Philadelphia, opens up a question entitled to more than a passing notice. Will you, Mr. Editor, or some contributor, enlighten the readers of the ADVOCATE on the points involved by satisfactory answers to the following questions:

1. Are we not taught by our church standards that there are but two Scriptural orders of ministers, deacons and elders or presbyters?

2. Does not the same authority inform us that the M. E. Church, South, Bishops are not considered superior in orders to elders or presbyters, but simply as officers of the same grade in the ministry, delegated, for governmental purposes, to certain duties?

3. If the ordination of an elder or presbyter put him in orders, and this order be the highest known to the New Testament, whence the necessity of additional ordination, implying as it does, additional orders, when none is intended, when conferring upon an elder or presbyter the office of Bishop?

4. If, then, Bishops are not a third order, and have no more scriptural power and prerogatives than elders or presbyters, why are they conventionally conferred upon them, why may not the term of their offices be limited?

These questions have been honored by a notice from Dr. C. B. Galloway, the accomplished editor of the ADVOCATE, and that astute thinker, Dr. R. Abbey, to each of whom I am indebted for that courtesy. Dr. Galloway says:

To the questions we reply as follows:

1. Our standards recognize only two orders, deacons and presbyters.
2. Most assuredly.
3. There is no additional ordination.

4. That is simply a question of ecclesiastical statesmanship. Under our present constitution it cannot be done. Whether the constitution should be amended so that point is not likely to be a living issue in our Methodism during the next hundred years.

If Dr. Galloway's views be correct, his three answer, "Bishops are not ordained" relieves the subject of all difficulty, and conforms the practice of the Church to the theory, that we have but two orders of ministers. It follows, then, that the misconception of those who erroneously thought Bishops were ordained, and to a third order, has alone occasioned all the perplexity by which this subject has been so long encumbered. Being one of this number, yet as the Doctor has given us no authority for his decision, as highly as I esteem his opinion, I may be pardoned for withholding my assent thereto, without further examination. As he takes the negative, and is content with a simple denial of the fact I have assumed, that Bishops are ordained, leaving me the burden of proof. I modestly affirm the proposition. As my space is limited, my reasoning must be brief.

I offer these arguments for my position:

1. We have in the Church a formula for the ordination of two orders of ministers, deacons and elders, and a person properly set apart by the use of this formula, is said to be ordained.

2. The formula prescribed, and used, in the consecration of a Bishop, is substantially the same as that used in the ordination of elders. If in the one instance, the elder be ordained by the use of the formula, it devolves upon Dr. Galloway to show why it is not ordination in the case of the Bishop.

3. It is true that the formula for the setting apart of a Bishop, is the lead lines of the chapter and pages, called "CONSECRATION OF A BISHOP," but technically, ordination and consecration are synonymous. Webster defines "Ordination." 2. In the Episcopal Church the act of conferring holy orders—sacred powers: called also consecration. In the consecration of a Bishop it becomes necessary for him to answer questions: at this point the formula enjoins the following on the officiating Bishop. "Then the Bishop shall say to him that is to be ordained, etc." Here the ritual uses the word ordain interchangeably with consecration, and demonstrates the ordination of a Bishop.

With this reply to Dr. Galloway, I submit the point at issue between us.

To Dr. Abbey, I would say, that the difference between a presiding elder and a Bishop, illustrates my view of the difference between office and orders, the presiding elder, already in orders, is simply appointed to an office; while in addition to the Bishop's appointment or election, himself also, already in orders, he must be ordained to the position. Having mislaid the ADVOCATE containing his first notice of my article, and being pressed with other duties, I have been prevented from gratifying my desire to answer him. His second article headed: "Order and office. Two orders or three," brings up the matter afresh, and leads me to a view of Dr. Galloway's position, that "Bishops are not ordained." I might not, perhaps, endorse all that Dr. Abbey has written in that paper, but as we are in evident accord in the belief that we have three orders in the Methodist ministry, I should be glad to hear further from him on the subject. ALONZO.

September 16, 1884.

The Robble Jones' Missionary Society.

MR. EDITOR: At a regular meeting of the Robble Jones' Missionary Society yesterday, I was requested by the society to give a brief sketch of yesterday's success to you. But with your consent I will transcend the limits of the request, and give, as a preamble, the organization and progress of the society.

On the 18th of March, 1883, this society was organized with a membership of thirty-three, which increased during the year to fifty-nine. Many times was the light almost gone, but the fuel from God's hands and mouth was inexhaustible, and to-day its bright rays penetrate space and are helping to illuminate heathendom. This society was named in honor of Robble Jones, who was accidentally killed by gunshot, during the Christmas of 1882. Out of his holiday money he reserved fifty cents for the missionary cause. This fifty cents is held by the society as an inviolable fund forever to stay in the treasury, distinguished by a mark. It is kept in remembrance of him and as an incentive to others.

The society collected and paid to the cause of missions about forty dollars last year. Now with yesterday's works. To commence with it was our children's Centenary day, and as a natural consequence, a day of blessings and spiritual feasting was anticipated. The responsive part of the Centenary services being over, T. A. Hollman, made some very impressive remarks on the progress of Methodism. After a few minutes intermission Bro. Howard preached to the children (and we were all children) from the text—Children, obey your parents, etc. I have no words to portray the beautiful truths that fell from his lips, but perhaps in eternity while culling some of the sweets of heaven, on eternal melodies they will be wafted to the shores of heaven in audible tones. Or, in making a geological survey of the home of the soul, we may find, where some power of electricity has indelibly stamped the same words to be read throughout eternity. Suffice it to say, that all present seemed to recognize the fact that God was present, and I heard one of our best men say, that "if such sermons didn't stick, that our preachers may just as well quit preaching. After preaching, the Centenary collection was taken, which amounted to five dollars and twenty cents.

Immediately after dinner was over the society convened. Prayer by Rev. P. Howard. Roll called and seven names added to our membership, while I made us number sixty-seven. According to previous appointment Mrs. T. P. Lee read a beautiful and instructive essay on the subject of missions, which stirred the seemingly withering hearts from their lethargic state, and brought to the front, persons who had previously been indifferent. Tears from their hidden fountains gushed forth, unforbidden, and bathed the cheeks furrowed by time and cares, as well as those of smoother and brighter form. It was a grand literary feast indeed, and as the sweet strains of the melodious truths came from their prolific store, they fell upon the ears of the congregation as lullabies from an angelic orchestra, and immediately an echo—the jingle of dollars and dimes were heard throughout the house, which resulted in a collection, as a Centenary offering, twenty-five dollars and fifty cents. Ten of which was directed to be sent to Mexico, ten to Brazil, three dollars and eighty-five cents to the Anglo-Chinese University, and the balance to go into the funds of the society.

Many times have we seen collections taken, but to look upon God's little lambs, across whose breast the towering surges of sin had not rolled, and for whom time's fearful realities had failed to hatch out any of the incubent miseries of a wicked life, walking up the aisle of God's house with their pennies was a sight undisciplined by anything the human eye has ever witnessed, for we could but think, that—"Oft such is the kingdom of heaven!" Though their tongues were mute, their faces spoke volumes, which made us feel we were nearing the shores of the beautiful Eden. The society then elected two children to read some appropriate pieces at the next meeting. After which it adjourned.

A. K. HARRIS, Secretary.

Phoenix, Miss., Sept. 25, 1884.

Cleanwater Dispensation.

Much has been said and written about Christian dispensation as distinguished from the Mosaic. A careful study of the Scriptures, the Old Testament, will enable us to see closely all the difference. The principles in religion, however, are the same, while in some instances the type is entirely left off, as it should be after the antitype is reached, while others are only modified.

It is a noted fact that the Mosaic dispensation was typical. Also that blood was an essential feature in all their forms of worship. To be brief, St. Paul declares this fact: Whereupon neither the first testament was dedicated without blood. For when Moses had spoken every precept to all the people according to the law, he took the blood of calves and of goats with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and the people, etc. Heb. ix, 18, 19. Blood and water composed the preparation for the synchthonal purification.

The law for cleansing the leprosy required the blood of an innocent bird mingled with clear running water from the brook, which made a preparation for synchthonal purification or baptism to be sprinkled by the minister. Lev. xiv. The person was required after this synchthonal purification or baptism to go and wash himself and put on clean clothes before appearing in worship.

The priestly consecration or baptism, which was a synchthonal washing, symbolizing the washing of regeneration by the Holy Ghost, which was essential to a divinely anointed ministry, by the baptism of the Holy Ghost, seems to be without blood as it was prophetic of the Holy Ghost baptism which was promised by God, as the great necessity of the people and the ministry. The promise of Holy Ghost baptism or purification—a real spiritual cleansing had been set forth in type, beyond all doubt—"but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye heard of me." Acts i-4. The prophet Isaiah had foretold of Christ, that he would sprinkle many nations, lili, 15. And Ezekiel foretold that "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, etc.—Ezek. xxxvi, 25. From these Scriptures it is evident that God prepared for the Christian dispensation in the law and the prophets, the basis or foundation for the spiritual dispensation which would obviate the difficulty of introducing new things by direct or new inspiration. Nothing would be received that was not endorsed by the Scriptures. By referring to the xlii Chap. of Daniel 10-12, we see an important fact will be seen.

With the beginning of John's ministry, the daily sacrifice is taken away, which appeared to be a great violation. This was, however, in accordance with divine authority as recorded by Daniel. "And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand and two hundred and ninety-ninety days."—Three years, six months and nine days. Or, the time from the beginning of John's ministry to the crucifixion of Christ—"the desolation set up."—Blessed be that watchful, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and fifty and thirty days"—three years and eight months. This reaches to the pentecost. This is regarded as the blessed period, because of the pentecostal baptism, the baptism of the Holy Ghost, the thing foretold by John in his clean water baptism. With him the bloody or sacrificial worship ceases. Worship shall no longer be confined to Jerusalem, as our Lord said to the women of Samaria, nor to the temple. Daniel says, "Mary shall be purified." This is unmistakable evidence that purification and baptism are synonymous, meaning a symbolical washing. This shows beyond all doubt that John's ministry was the beginning of clean water baptism—blood was no longer to be used. "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you." Those who want more information on this subject, read: "Lost Key Found." Apply to Nashville, Southern Methodist Publishing House, or to myself at Newton, Newton county, Miss. J. W. ELLISON.

Revival Correspondence.

I closed a meeting at Bethlehem Church, on Benek circuit, last Monday night, resulting in seventy conversions, or more, and seventy-five accessions to the church, and the church wonderfully revived. I also closed a good meeting at Cross Roads Church a few weeks since, resulting in twenty-five conversions.

R. C. GALLOWAY, Editor.

ATLANTA, MISS., Sept. 25, 1884.

Our meeting at Shuqualak closed Wednesday night last. Result: Every church member in the place—Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, etc.—revived and made happy in the Saviour's love; nineteen conversions and twelve accessions to our church, and many penitents left at the altar. Bros. S. D. Long, B. F. Phillips, W. T. Barnett and E. H. Casey assisted in the meeting. Bro. Stone, of the Baptist Church, also rendered valuable help. J. M. BOON.

MACON, MISS., Sept. 25, 1884.

Twenty accessions on the Benton and Midway charges. Good congregation and appreciation of the gospel. Paragon repaired. Two churches nicely repaired and Bowman's Chapel about complete—over $800 expended. Methodism in Yazoo county waking up. About 1,000 members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Yazoo county; six pastors; sixteen churches—and several other preaching places. May God give us pure gospel power! INMAN W. COOPER.

SEPTEMBER 23, 1884.

God hath visited his people in Hazlehurst. Our pastor, Rev. H. D. Howell, commenced our meeting on the evening instant, and is still going on. Between Sabbath he has had highly appreciative and useful assistance from Bros. J. T. Nicholson, W. B. Lewis and J. L. Hays, but these brethren having to supply their own churches on the Sabbath could only be with him about three days in the middle of the week. He has often been left alone for days together, but has been wonderfully borne up under heavy labor. Up to this date we have had thirty-eight professions and thirty-five accessions, and we are encouraged to expect more of each. Blessed be our faithful, constant-keeping God! Our pastor certainly had many things to discourage him, but his trust was in him from whom he held his commission to preach a saving gospel, and his faith never seemed at fault. J. A. JONES.

HAZLEHURST, MISS., Sept. 25, 1884.

I can truly say that the Lord is doing great things for us on the Floyd and Floyd circuit, for which I am devoutly thankful and take courage. All collections ordered by Conference have been taken in full, in cash and on paper, and mostly on paper. The people here, so far as I am advised, have done but little more than make promises, the presiding elder and preachers in charge have received very little of it.

Our woman's missionary societies are raising more money than is being raised for any other purpose. The great things mentioned at the last convention of this communication are to be written apart of which is as follows: Bro. W. H. per, of Mississippi, assisted me in meeting here of three weeks' duration. Result: Many professed conversions, nine accessions and the church seemed greatly revived. The same brother added me in a meeting at Floyd, which lasted one week. Result: Several conversions, six accessions and the church seemed greatly revived also.

Our third quarterly meeting embraced the second Sabbath in September. Bro. Randle, our laborious and efficient presiding elder, was with us Saturday and Sunday. The meeting continued until Thursday night, with Bro. Helmeau, of the Winnsboro circuit, and Tharp, Baptist. They remained with me and did faithful good service for the Master. Result: Twenty-five conversions, twenty-eight accessions, backsliders reclaimed, (and there were many of them,) and the church was greatly revived. We had a meeting time. Pray for us.

J. M. McKEN.

Breast, La., Sept. 24, 1884.

We have just closed an interesting and profitable meeting in Greenwood. Many were converted, several backsliders reclaimed and all Christians were greatly revived. Nineteen joined our church and two the Presbyterian church. The skepticism which has for years been the curse of this town and community was shaken to its very foundation, and those who before were always ready to ridicule Christianity are now unquenchable themselves in its defense. If we can only keep our holy religion to the front, through the faithful lives and holy zeal of those who profess it, there is, beyond doubt, a brighter day ahead for this people. The writer was assisted by Bro. E. H. Smith, of Carrollton, La., the pastor of the Presbyterian church at this place, and Bro. J. F. Evans, of Black Hawk.

This town is the seat of justice for the county. It has a population of about 500 blacks and whites. For years there has been but one church building in the place, the joint property of the Methodists and Presbyterians. Our Presbyterian brethren have been much of the time without a pastor. As a consequence, what little has been done for the spiritual good of this people has been done by the Methodist church. This is a large county, but the population is about three-fourths colored—we have about three thousand white people. There are but three church buildings for white people in the county, with the exception of this town. Here the Presbyterians expect to have one sermon per month. My labors, and a portion of the labors of Bro. Nicholson, who is now supplying the Minter City circuit, give the people all the religious services they have. The Methodist church is the only denomination that has been able to reach this section with any permanent effect. Others have tried, but for want of efficient system, their efforts have been abortive. If the people of this section are ever saved the Methodist church will have to be the instrument to do it.

This section is immensely rich in soil, and with slight cultivation will yield bountifully. If we can only be protected from the disasters of the seasons the time will come when we shall have the "golden spot" of Mississippi. The Methodist church is on the ground, and others soon willing that she shall have undisputed sway; it behooves her to hold on and cultivate well. The white population here will excel the aggregated population of any section of country I have ever seen in point of education and general intelligence, but the circumstances have been favorable to piety. They have come here to accumulate fortunes. Many have been brought up under Episcopal, Presbyterian and Baptist influences, and their churches have not followed them. We should have men here of intelligence and experience, as well as piety, to represent our church. Who would command the respect of this heterogeneous population.

From some cause the practice of our church has been to send young inexperienced preachers here. This policy has been bad both for the church and the preachers. Many of the preachers who have labored in all this "delta" country have not even been acquainted with the theories of Methodist economy much less the practices. This I say from experience. For nine years this writer has labored among this people almost entirely isolated from the whole church, never seeing a preacher of any denomination, except his presiding elder once or twice, for an entire year. The effect of such a situation is more easily imagined than told.

Q. A. PATS.

To the Members of the Mess Point Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

BY MRS. L. CRARY SAILER.

DEAR SISTERS: You have met to transact the business of the society. Some of you, perhaps, thought it was a task to break off the thread of your own duties and come here just to bring your dues, your report, or read a item of news, a poem, or this poor little talk on paper. Some one may think, "If I could write like Mrs. Sailer I would not mind it, for then it would be a pleasure." Another might think or say, "If I could only speak, or pray, or sing like this, that or the other person, oh, how well I could get along! All this is sheer subterfuge. You can not be anybody but your own self. God has given us all a gift, at least one talent to improve. If we do that, and do it well, we will have the approval of our blessed Master. My good mother used to sing a simple song, beginning with:

"Sometimes I go to meeting, and wish I'd staid at home, Sometimes I find a watching, and then I'm glad I come!"

So, perhaps, you may find a blessing today. The Lord has showers of blessings for us if we will only look up to the heavens and ments in his hands." Then he will use us for his own glory. These hands belong to God, let them write words that will cheer some poor tired soul. Let my feet walk in the paths of peace. Let my ears hear "what the spirit saith to the churches." Let my tongue and lips speak the truth and praise, his holy name. Let my "heart burn within me" when Jesus walks beside me. If we would see Jesus we must see him in little things.

One might by much grace tide over some great trouble and go down under some trifling trial because we do not think it worth while to ask his help in those same little every-day vexations. Let us ask him to help us have missionary zeal to do this work. He has said, "Ask, and ye shall receive." And what he has said he will never unsay. We are to ask as a child asks a parent, expecting to receive.

I hope that no one will be offended at anything I have written. I thought I would write as I would talk if I could be with you. That is impossible for me at present. So I must content myself with writing, and, perhaps, do more good than if I could be with you. To me it would be a privilege and a pleasure to take an active part in the good work in which you are engaged, and I marvel much that all the sisters of the church do not rise up in their power and might and carry on this grand work until every one was in the vineyard working with all her might. If we enjoy religion we wish others to partake of our joy, and this is the true missionary spirit, to love to help others for Jesus sake. May God bless and help you all in your effort to serve him in truth and in spirit to-day and as long as you live.

DODIE GEE.

A Story of Adventure.

BY LEE T. A. S. ADAMS.

CHAPTER IV.

Ordinarily, autumn is the best time of the year for traveling in the South. Roads are dry, streams at low water and Indian summer hatching. This year, however, the wet season began before November, and Gee, instead of finding fordable streams, often found them spread over the swamps. He was thus forced either to wait for them to run down, to attempt perilous crossing or to go far out of his way. At best he went slowly. Dodie's chills returned every other day. He himself had contracted a distressing cough. Food was precarious and ammunition failing. Every shot was counted, and to miss his aim was a real calamity. For two weeks he had been in Cherokee Territory. He had climbed mountains and crossed rivers, until the course of the streams, he thought, ought to be changing toward the Atlantic. But there were no signs of such. The rains had been almost continuous and were cold and sleety.

One drizzly morning, about the middle of November, he saw a large stag standing at about seventy-five yards' distance. It was his last food. He aimed, fired, missed! The stag bounded away, and he broke his gun against the nearest tree and wept in despair. Then picking up the fragments of his gun he said, ruefully: "God forgive me! I've destroyed my best friend!"

After half an hour he went to the summit of the hill, as he said, to take a view of the promised land which he should never see. The prospect opened grandly, yet dimly. Mountains stretched away to Southwest and Northeast. Southeastward opened a valley which widened between the mountain ridges, until all was lost in the laden clouds and driving sleet and snow.

Gee was a poet, and the scene aroused his lagging energies. Snatching Dodie up, he strode like a giant down the mountain into the valley.

About noon he reached a river swollen to a torrent. Without delay he set to work constructing a raft. He first threw a light log into the water and anchored it with a grape vine. Then he lashed another to that; and so on till he had made a raft sufficient to float him and all his chattels. He arranged a place for fire and a rude booth for Dodie and himself. Then lighting his pipe-knife and preparing a supply of fuel, although night was now setting in, he pushed out upon the unknown flood.

He clasped Dodie to his breast, praying: "O God, save this child! I ask nothing for myself or sake. Only for her and her poor mother! God forgive my sins to both and let me die!"

Then rising to his feet he gave a yell that rang loud and clear above moaning winds and gurgling waves, and in merry frenzy sang this boatman's song:

"Heigho! On the river
Gaily let us float along!
How the bottom, row forever
As they sing their song."

Little Dodie looked up into her father's face and called him to see the "boofal wiyer," then hummed her own little song and said her "Naw I lay me down to sleep!"

Go became delirious. The raft drove on at the mercy of the flood, the pine-knife blazing a weird witchery over the scene. Gusts of wind drove the flames and smoke hither and thither, first over the father tossing with fever, and then over the pale, beautiful face of the sleeping child. Owls hooted near or hooted from the cypress tops. The birches dropped their long sprays clad in ice till they dangled like prisms around a chandelier. The pines sighed in the winds and the splash of the waves made music worthy of the occasion and scene.

Gee turned and clasped Dodie in his arms. He stroked her pale forehead and kissed her. "We'll make the landing directly, sweet! Wait till papa gets a drink of water!"

Letting Dodie loose, he crawled to the edge of the raft. The raft was driving under the top of a tree that had fallen across the stream. Gee was struck by a projecting arm of the tree and dragged into the water. Thrown against the main body he struggled to the top and clambered over the trunk to the bank of the stream.

He saw the raft a hundred yards away and tried to run after it. He tripped and fell. Stunned, he lay motionless until the raft, passing a bend, headed back, null again the great shadows of the trees swept before him and seemed to tap black and red wings on the clouds. Then he reached out his arms and cried, "Come on!"

"Ben, for God's sake, what's that?" cried a trapper to his companion as they were sitting by a log fire on the river bank. "If that's a Jack-o-lantern it's a nearer kin to the devil than I ever thought."

"Get your gun ready! A light! Into the boat! It's a raft and God knows what it means! Hullo there!"

"Papa! papa!" cried Dodie, "don't leave me! Take me, papa! take me, too!" "Good Lord, Johnny," cried Ben Towers, "it's a child!"

John McDade and Ben Towers pushed out for the raft and soon unloaded it of its precious freight which they brought to land. The raft went blazing on down the winter-swollen stream. Dodie next morning was installed as the queen of the trappers' hut, which stood upon the hill overlooking the Savannah river. They never forgot the spot where the midnight raft came rushing like the demon of the river, nor the sweet prize which they snatched from its storm-swept decks.

The end.

"IT HAS MADE A NEW MAN OF HIM."

So writes the wife of the Rev. Dr. Staples, of New Canaan, Conn., in a communication to the Methodist Protestant, Baltimore, Md., Mrs. Staples says:

"My husband has for the last year and a half been afflicted with that troublesome disease Malaria, attended also with Catarrh, which was rapidly growing upon him. He was at first confined to his bed, and I felt that he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inhaling Compound Oxygen, and put himself fully under the treatment at my earnest request, the week before 'Conference,' and it was astonishing to us, as it was to his friends, that he thought a week or two previous he would not be able to attend. He commenced inh

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. HENNING.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1884.

$400!

Bro. L. Z. Gowers writes from Bayou Barbery, La., that his church at that place, on September 25, made a Centenary offering of $400 in a new church dedicated that day by the presiding elder, Rev. D. A. Little.

$136!

At the "Colony," not far from Monroe, on last Sunday, Rev. William Hart held an interesting Centenary service and lifted a collection amounting to $130. The pastor's sermon on the occasion was spoken of in terms of high praise.

$300!

Rev. T. J. Newell, of Grenada, North Mississippi Conference, thus closes a private note to the editor: "Bro. Thames, our presiding elder, secured a Centenary offering of $100 at one church on the district last Sunday, and I raised $200 at another."

$320!

The editor spent last Sunday at Monroe, North Louisiana, Rev. B. F. White, pastor, attending a Centenary meeting. There was a fair congregation and a collection of $300, which, with $20 raised in the Sunday-school previously, makes $320 from Monroe. Bro. White thinks the offerings will be largely increased.

When the Marquis of Lorne, the son-in-law of Queen Victoria, returned to England from Canada, he was asked how prohibition of the liquor traffic affected general prosperity. He replied: "It was admirably. It makes all the difference between savagery and civilization." As the Governor-General of Canada he had good opportunity to study this question in its commercial aspects, and his opinion is worthy of respect.

Chaplain McCabe, Assistant Missionary Secretary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, returned last week from an European tour. He crossed the Atlantic on "the good ship Alaska" in six days and twenty-two hours. He prophesies that an engine will soon be made that will hurl a great ship across the Atlantic in three days. No doubt it will be done. Even now distance is almost annihilated. Years ago three months on the ocean was a prosperous voyage, that can now be made in seven days. Travelers are scarcely out of sight of land before they begin to count the hours when the watchman will shout "Land ahead!" on the other side.

The conduct of King Humbert of Italy, visiting the cholera district in Naples, and the hospital wards filled with the sick and the dying, has called forth many tributes to his courage, generosity and manly sympathy. The priest who accompanied him fell a victim to the plague. The King's heroism will no doubt command the homage of his subjects. At the very hour when the monarch of Italy was thus visiting the suffering slums of Naples, the Czar of Russia was attending a magnificent display of royalty at Warsaw, guarded and watched by hundreds of well-armed soldiers.

According to the Boston Traveler the "Hub" has taken the initiative in arresting the redemption of the Dark Continent. On August 23 the largest shipment of New England rum that ever left Boston harbor—500,000 gallons—was sent to Africa. Alas! for the grasping greed—indicated, "enterprise"—that will make haste to be rich without regard to the means employed! We learn from the Gospel in All Lands that the African Trading Company, of the Zambesi and the Shire, will not allow liquor to go on their ships. If a like Christian conscience could control all trading companies, the great evil against the monster evil of the age would never have to be fought in Africa. It is the influence of the so-called Christian merchants that makes the path of the missionary so weary and thorny.

"Bondsmen for the Church."

When the four Indian chiefs made a pilgrimage from beyond the Rocky Mountains, of three thousand miles, to St. Louis to ask for missionaries to be sent to their tribe (the Flatheads) their appeal was published in all the religious papers. Dr. Withur Fisk, then president of the Wesleyan University, read it, and his heart was stirred to the very depths. He published a call to the church that rang like a trumpet through our Zion. It thrilled a young man then laboring among the Indians in Canada, and he offered himself for the dangerous enterprise; but there was no money in the treasury. Dr. Fisk at once wrote to him, saying: "Money will be forthcoming. I will be bondsman for the church." The enthusiasm of the zealous doctor became contagious, and in a little while abundant means were freely offered to send out two laborers at once and a strong band of recruits shortly after.

"But it is not the mission to the Flatheads, but the expression and principle of Dr. Fisk, we wish to consider. Those words could only have been uttered by one who had a comprehensive grasp of the relations, obligations and possibilities of Christian sonship. Feeling it to be the divine duty of the church to send the gospel abroad—not to dery the lamp of life to any benighted heathen, and especially those who were 'watching for the morning'—he was ready to pledge his own word and purse to obey a call so manifestly of God.

A bondsman, in a legal sense, is "a surety; one who is bound, or who gives security, for another." If the principal fail to meet the obligation, he binds himself to make it good. He underwrites for the integrity and ability of his friend and pledges his own fortune to secure the creditor against possible loss. And in signing such an obligation the bondsman proclaims his perfect confidence in the honesty and success of his friend. So in declaring, "I will be bondsman for the church," Dr. Fisk announced his absolute faith in her readiness and ability to respond to an unmistakable call from Heaven. When the case was so remarkable, the Macedonian appeal so loud and clear, brought by four weary sons of the forest over three thousand miles on foot—two of them dying at the end of the journey—he could not doubt but that God's people would eagerly seize such a blessed opportunity. In this there could be no mistake. If Christ's constraining love had yet dominance in the hearts of his disciples, they would send the gospel to these beggared souls, and by the swiftest and most daring messenger. Hence, in the grandeur of his mighty faith and seraphic zeal, the old doctor said: Go, and go quickly; the money will be forthcoming; God's church will respond to God's call; I will be her bondsman. And he had no fear that the surety would ever suffer—that he would encounter bankruptcy by endorsing for the church. Nor did he. And the history of that enterprise is enough to venerate the faith and cheer the hopes of every missionary pessimist in all our Zion.

Then, again, these words indicate the doctor's sense of intimate and responsible identification with the church. He was not a mere appendage, but an integral and honored part of the Lord's body. He was, therefore, responsible for the church—her zeal, her purity, her enterprise, her achievements. And so great was this sense of responsibility, that in advance of any other voice he offered to become the church's bondsman in obeying the command of God. Would that every member had such a sensitive regard for church relation, such a perfect identification with her spirit and life! This consciousness of responsibility in each would soon make possible the glorious sunburst of the millennium.

We should all be "bondsmen for the church." God has no bank account but ours. And his friends are they of his own household. He has promised to his Son the heathen for an inheritance and the uttermost part of the earth for a possession. And we must endorse that promise. We are the sureties on that bond. And how perfectly safe the endorsement! Panic and financial revolutions may come, but that paper will never go to protest. Brethren, let us count it all joy that we may become "bondsmen for the church."

The utterance of that eminent scientist, who is also a preacher, before the British Association at Montreal, ought to shake into silence certain noisy advocates of evolution. He said: "It can not be said that nature, which requires mind to interpret and perceive its beauties, did not require mind to produce it." Until that paradox is proven we will hold on to the Bible statement.

"Each One Counts Two."

This is an old and suggestive saying. A distinguished politician quoted it with fine effect, last week, when assured of support by a certain delegation. They represented a large constituency, and their pledge of fidelity gave the candidate great confidence and courage. We read his felicitous remarks in reply, with the expression quoted above, feeling how much more apt its application to morals than politics to spiritual workers than party strikers. It contains a lesson and an exhortation—a lesson of solemn emphasis and an appeal of imperial tone.

Man is everywhere representative of more than himself. He represents no cause alone. In each enunciation of a principle he is both a voice and an echo. He utters his own and another's convictions. They may be original in conception and suggestion, but at once become the purpose and property of others. So it is true in every cause and condition that "each one counts two." No man liveth unto himself and no man dieth unto himself. Others are affected by him in some important and specific degree.

This thought ought to strengthen the faith of the church. What mighty displays of Pentecostal power have been witnessed this year! In-gatherings have been counted by scores and hundreds. Every day brings joyful tidings from some field where a great victory has not been achieved in years. The Lord's hosts have been recruited from the ranks of old and young, who are ready and eager for service. The valley that Ezekiel saw covered with bleaching bones now glitters with the blades and trembles with the tread of "an exceeding great army." If, then, it be true that "each one counts two," that each trophy is prophecy and promise of another; that each convert will secure another; that every An-reu will bring his brother, Simon Peter, to Jesus, how inspiring is the prospect to-day! It is thus that the church and each individual Christian becomes "more than a conqueror." He not only conquers a passion, but makes it a messenger of life; he not only wins a sinner, but wheels him into ranks and makes him valiant to the pulling down of strongholds.

This, in an eminent degree, should inspire confidence in mission work abroad. Though progress seems slow and often discouraging, we should remember that "each one counts two." The winning of one heathen away from his idols is only securing a multiplier whose multiplicity is the exhaustless grace of God. It is the entrance of light that will give abundant life. One idolater converted to Christ is the pledge of another, and he of another, and so on until a nation in darkness is luminous with a mid-day splendor that will never know an evening twilight. Our faith in foreign missions must not be gauged by statistical exhibits. Figures tell the truth, but not the whole truth. They coldly represent what has been done, but do not indicate the influences and possibilities wrapped up in a converted soul. Each one is an incarnation of power ordained to divine achievement. A heathen mother who loves Jesus has led her whole family to his name and honor his name. A little child consciously folded in the arms of Christ's love has been a commissioned angel to carry glad tidings of great joy to a large household.

In his rather remarkable volume, entitled "My Missionary Apprenticeship," just issued from the press, Dr. J. M. Thoburn thus refers to the first trophy of his ministry as a missionary at Nyeet Tal, India:

"I had been more than two years at work before the baptism of this first convert, and the occasion was to me an era in a lifetime. * * * The baptism of a single youth was in itself an important event, but as a token from above it was a sign of encouragement. It told of better things and brighter days, and assured me that in God's own time the little one would become a thousand, and the small one a strong nation."

But this ideal is not always realized. Every professed is not a real worshiper; every enlisted is not a loyal, courageous soldier. If "each one counts two," he must come with clear convictions, intense desire and fixed determination. If he loves God supremely and fears sin continually, others will be won to Christ by his life and influence. But, if his confession is a mere conventionality or compromise, instead of counting two for religion he may count ten against it. And this discloses the solemn responsibility of every advocate of any cause. He stands not alone; but in his avowal, whether honest or insincere, he affects the destiny of at least one other. There is but one place of perfect segregation where we can not aid or be assisted, can not influence or be affected—and that is the bar of Infinite Judgment. And on that day the character and measure of our influence here will determine the decision of the Infinite Judge.

But the fact that "each one counts two" is not only the promise of increase here, but of reward hereafter. For every soul won there is accumulated recompense—another star added to an unnumbered crown. The seals to our ministry will determine the glory of our heaven—the splendor of our coronation.

A Sabbath and Two Centenaries.

The editor spent Sunday, September 23, at Forest and Morton, two stations, ten miles apart, on the Vicksburg and Meridian railroad. Rev. A. B. Nickols, pastor of Forest some weeks the appointment had been made, and a pleasant occasion was anticipated. Forest was reached about the "high noon" of Saturday night, and a comfortable home was found at the Womack House, kept by those genial and hospitable Methodists who take pleasure in entertaining the Lord's ministers. At that house, the next morning, we had the rare good fortune of meeting an old and honored friend, Col. O. R. Singleton, the venerable and able representative in Congress from that district. In Sunday-school, class and prayer meeting we have often sat under his instruction. At three-score and ten he has the same sunny, genial countenance, as of other days, and talks even more lovingly and tenderly of his Savior. Though his membership is elsewhere, he was the first to respond with a Centenary offering that day. We had a fair congregation, a timely discourse (with an accent on the final syllable) and a collection of $200. The good ladies of the church had already raised about seventy dollars, which aggregates a respectable amount for a Centenary beginning.

After a sumptuous dinner and refreshing, much needed rest at Bro. Wooten's, where we always find a Methodist welcome, the pastor and his visiting brother boarded a freight train for Morton, ten miles distant, reaching there about five o'clock. Tea and two hours at Bro. Nickols's "hired house," and we met another congregation. Our brethren at Morton have a neat, substantial, well-located and constructed church, though not as yet quite finished. They deserve all praise for that enterprise, and no doubt this year will see it completed. Two years ago, while attending a District Conference there, we ascended a rugged hill and worshipped in the lower story of a school-building and masonic hall. Now we have a house set apart from "all unholy or common uses" to which, to meet the King in his beauty. What an educating and spiritual factor is a handsome, well-kept and furnished church! When the walls of that beautiful little temple are plastered the chandeliers will give more light. The Centenary collection amounted to $104.50—not so much as was anticipated, but we hope was but the initial movement of larger things. The two churches of Forest and Morton, which form one pastorate, have sufficient wealth and social influence to rank with the strongest stations in the Conference. The strategic position we hold will ensure greatly to the development of Methodism throughout a vast area with a little development on certain lines of work.

After a few hours' rest at Bro. Bond's we took passage on a late train and reached Jackson in time to miss connection for New Orleans. But, on account of extra diligence in furnishing "copy," the ADVOCATE suffered no delay by the editor speeding a restful Monday at home.

Centenary at Monroe.

In response to an earnest invitation from Rev. B. F. White, our pastor at Monroe, we spent last Sunday in that old metropolis of North Louisiana. A mass meeting of the Delhi district was to have been held under the presidency of Presiding Elder Randle, and in the interest of the Centenary movement. This necessitated our going over on Friday; but on arrival at Monroe we learned with regret that the district gathering had been recalled and that only a local meeting would be held. Having made two other trips over the V. S. and P. from Vicksburg within the past two months, we spent little time in observing the country. Attention was attracted to three things: the parched condition of the crops from excessive drought, the roadbed over which we were running at a good speed, and the fact that all the gentlemen on the train and at the stations were discussing excitedly a little Congressional contest in that district between rival Democratic aspirants. We could but think if the church would become only half so much concerned for Zion, that earth and heaven would rejoice.

the country prosper and politics be purer and more patriotic.

The day passed rapidly and profitably as we pored over the pages of a delightful little volume from the pen of Dr. Wise, entitled, "Missionary Heroes and Heroines." How our own zeal and faith were abashed as we read the thrilling stories of self-sacrifice, adventure and heroism in the lives of Methodist missionaries in all the fields to which they have gone. The names of Melville Cox, George Percy, William Molster, Jason Lee, Nathaniel Turner, Thomas H. Bunby, Walter Lawry, Dr. Coke, Dr. Butler, George Warren, Barnabas Shaw, and others, and of "devout women, not a few," will long live in memory, as the synonyms of all that is heroic and apostolic in faith and achievement. Blessed day of communion with the brave sons of God, who counted not their life dear that they might finish their course with joy!

We were met at the depot by Bro. White and conveyed to the Ouachita House, kept by that veteran Methodist worthy, Bro. D. B. Trousdale. Active, loyal, liberal for years, he is now in feeble health, and friends fear his days of labor are nearly ended. There was service at night in the beautiful new church, built during Bro. White's pastorate, when this editor delivered a short exhortation.

On Sunday afternoon President D. M. Rush, of Centenary College, arrived, expecting, like myself, to participate in a district mass meeting. He brought cheering reports of the opening of the college. The membership of the higher classes is larger than for years, improvements on the buildings are going forward, the railroad is completed which brings the institution into ready communication with the world, nearly ten thousand dollars as an endowment has been raised, and the general outlook is hopeful.

Sunday was a bright, beautiful day, and the congregation considered quite good for the place. As best he could the editor discoursed on the historical development of Methodism, and secured contributions to the amount of $300. Some of the brethren there were disappointed that the amount was not much larger. In the afternoon a children's Centenary meeting was held, with short addresses by President Rush, of Centenary College, and the editor. The attendance was large, the singing quite inspiring, and the occasion most pleasant except the oversight of no collection. At night President Rush preached an able sermon, and it left a profound impression. On Monday, at noon, we started homeward by way of Vicksburg.

Observations in Georgia.

Georgians are chiefly agriculturists, though railroads, manufactures, stock raising, merchandising, mining and a variety of other industries furnish profitable employment to many of the citizens of this great State. It is impossible for an observer not to see that vast quantities of land in many parts of the State have been exhausted by long cultivation. Due regard has not been paid to resting the land or reviving it by fertilizers. Thousands of acres here, and in Alabama and in Mississippi as well, have been starved well nigh to death by cotton seed oil mills and other land robbing agencies. The system of taking off all that can be gotten and returning nothing must be abandoned or land owners must grow poorer and poorer with their lands every year. To impoverish the land is but to diminish the fixed capital of the country from year to year. It has, furthermore, been discovered by experience that many fertilizers—great quantities of which have been used in Georgia—have about the same effect on land that alcoholic drinks do upon the human body: they stimulate without strengthening and intensify present action at the expense of future power. Cotton seed and barn-yard manures never have this effect, and certain recently discovered commercial fertilizers are free from this objection.

Much good hill-land has been washed away and much more seriously damaged by bad systems of drainage. The latest idea on this point is that hillside ditches and seed rows should have no fall whatever, but should be run as nearly on a level as possible; so that the water may not be accumulated anywhere, where, and thereby be prevented from washing away the soil. Of course, water washes land only by being accumulated. I could but be amused while tracing the course of a few streamlets which had crossed the cotton rows in a field which had been much disposed to wash. The water first rose one way and then another, and, finally, not knowing which way to go, it concluded not to go any way above ground and sank into the earth.

The railroads of Georgia were never in better condition. They show no signs of oppression or retrogression because of the judicious system of supervision which has been in operation in this State for half a dozen years. The tracks and cars and all their accompaniments are being constantly improved. I noticed a track that is ballasted, graveled and smoothed until it is as beautiful as the walks of a city flower yard—nothing being visible but the two lines of steel rail. It is a railroad in Georgia that has for several years employed the excellent plan of announcing the stations by a printed card. On that card the cry of the brakeman may wake sleepers or rouse persons who can not read to ask, "What did you say the name of this station is?" But to persons awake and able to read the brakeman's call of stations is on that road superfluous. On this same road there is also conspicuously posted in each passenger car a statement of the time of its arrival at its terminal city, and likewise the times of departure of the several daily trains leaving that city. Here is railroad wisdom and kindness. For polite attention to passengers and for arrangements for the comfort and convenience of all—especially of ladies—the managers of the central depot at Atlanta deserve honorable mention. On another road in this State I saw, I suppose, the politest of conductors. He lifted his cap in every instance when receiving a ticket from a lady, and did the same on returning it to her. Many of the railways in this State have been fenced with planks or wires; but these barriers are not kept up. The wires are in many places broken or hanging loosely to the posts. A train on which I was traveling killed five fine cows in an instant, with but a slight jolt to the train, and only about three minutes' detention. Those cattle should have been in their owner's pasture; but there was not a stock law in that county.

Stock raising is greatly increasing in many parts of the State, and especially in those counties where the stock law prevails. Herds of fine Jersey cows are held in high appreciation by their owners. The owner of one of these herds will not more surely know the number, names and ages of his children than of his Jersey calves. No Jewish genealogical record was ever more carefully kept than the pedigrees of these cattle. I was invited to attend, in company with my brother, a six o'clock morning milking—at which the skillful milkwoman in a few minutes drew more than two gallons each from two Jersey cows, leaving full share to the calves. Jersey cows are surpassingly beautiful and gentle when kindly cared for.

Factories in Georgia, as elsewhere, are not just now prospering. All enterprises, as all men, must have their times of depression. The northern part of the State is well suited for grain, grapes and apples. The wheat crop this year was not good, and the oat crop almost a failure. Corn will be in good supply. Mining for iron, gold, silver, copper, nickel, asbestos and other valuable contents of the earth is carried on more or less extensively in the upper parts of the State. Cotton in the middle and southern portions has been greatly damaged by drought. The plant is small, bolls are few and opening prematurely. Not half a crop will be made in many places. The fruit crop of this year is not the best, though I have seen some fine specimens. A gentleman sent me ten peaches that weighed nearly six pounds each, and a neighbor of my brother made 125 gallons of elder from twenty apple trees which are over sixty years old.

The temperance reform steadily gains ground in every part of the State. An intelligent citizen of Atlanta stated that he thought no license could be obtained to sell whisky in that city if a majority of the voters' petition was requisite therefor.

The religiousness of the people of this State is among their most striking characteristics. Christianity, and especially Methodism, is strong and progressive in Georgia. Wherever there is preaching there is a large congregation. Almost all the leading men are professors of Christianity. Atlanta, for instance, has twenty-six Methodist Churches, and the corner-stone of the twenty-seventh was laid a few days ago. "I am often asked by Georgians: 'How do the people in Mississippi get along?' 'Can't a man make a living easier out there than he can here?' My answer is: 'The Mississippi lands are probably richer than the average Georgia lands; but the average Georgian is as well, or better, off than the average Mississippian. The Georgian has to work harder, learns to save more, and owes less, and lives better than the average Mississippian. Poor men are not rich in either State, and the majority are poor. But on the general question it may be said that a moderately poor soil tends to develop a hardier and more thrifty race. Men in a poor country necessarily learn more economy and self-reliance, which are virtues lying at the foundation not only of fortune-making, but of strong character. There is more in the man than in the land.

Just Providence with equal hand
The universal globe both planned;
Success flows not in ruinous tide,
'Tis as the ship or farm is sown.

W. L. C. N.

—It was Taylor, son of Bishop William Taylor, is preparing himself for publication work, and will accompany his father to the "Dark Continent."

—It is estimated that the New York Herald "ages" each week a thousand miles of white paper, five feet wide. A long story made short.

—President T. C. Bradford, of Port Gibson Female College, writes us as follows: "We have had a splendid opening—nearly double the number of boarding pupils for any year since the war."

—The English Methodists are pushing their mission work in London with renewed vigor. A fund of $100,000 has been raised for carrying the gospel to the most abandoned districts of the world's metropolis.

—A writer in the Central Baptist puts the case rather strongly, but truly, as follows: "It is just a modest way a man has of saying, 'I am a God,' when he says, 'I am an infidel,' for he means that he is a God to himself."

—A Wesleyan Orphanage has been established in Boston. There are indications of large donations that will thoroughly equip and endow it. One of the first applicants is the grandson of an esteemed and honored Methodist minister.

—According to a correspondent of the Biblical Recorder, there is a statue of the devil in the Cathedral of Pisa, which represents him "with the body of a serpent coiled around the apple tree, and having the head of a woman with bangs."

—The Voice, is a new paper projected by Funk & Wagnalls, of New York, and devoted to the cause of prohibition. The initial number bristles with points and is prophetic of a brilliant journalistic career. We welcome it to our table.

—Rev. J. S. Oakley, the accomplished pastor of our church at St. Armand, is just able to occupy his pulpit again after six weeks of material fever. We note with joy his recovery.

—The press dispatches report a great revival in Waco, Tex. Rev. Sam Jones, the Georgia evangelist, is there, and also a division of the Salvation Army. Four meetings a day are held in the Methodist Church, the first at "day-break," attended by a vast throng. There have been many conversions and additions to the several churches.

—The last news from Bishop Wilson was altogether encouraging. His recovery and return to labor will be hailed with joy by the great church he serves so well. Beloved as a Christian brother and reverend as a chief pastor, he is honored as perhaps the prince of pulpit orators in our Southern Methodism.

—The Rev. Dr. W. H. Olin, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been nominated for the New York Legislature from Broome county. Dr. Olin was a member of the last Legislature and rendered valuable service in the cause of prohibition, but testily we wish he would stick to the "leaves of Israel." He can be a more potent factor for good outside of political or civil position.

—The Christian Index has the following: "Dr. Nathaniel W. Taylor used to say to his theological classes: 'Young gentlemen, follow truth, though it leads you over Niagara.' Well! it would lead them into the water, and through it into the Baptist ranks." Just so, but the only persons we ever heard of going over Niagara were venturesome boys or foolish cranks. Truth will never lead a man over Niagara or down into the water, albeit that is the way "into the Baptist ranks." It is either sentiment or superstition.

—"The Lost Key Found," is the title of a very thoughtful and readable pamphlet, by Rev. J. W. Ellison, of the Mississippi Conference, on the "mode and nature of baptism." After an interested examination of his argument, we have no hesitancy in pronouncing it an important contribution to the voluminous literature on that subject. There are some features in this pamphlet original and forcible, not found in other writings. And any writer who can say a new thing and true thing on the subject of baptism should be read.

—We learn from our British neighbor, The Morning Star, that the Spanish clergy have started a monster demonstration in every church throughout the country in favor of the temporal power of the Pope. A very silly thing to do, for the restoration of the Pope's temporal power is as improbable as the return of the dark ages. This is the latter half of the nineteenth century, a fact that some ignorant, superstitious Romanists never seem to understand. The "thunder of the Vatican" that once made knees tremble is now as harmless as, and less annoying than, a boy's brass horn.

—Prof. R. W. Jones, of the University of Mississippi, has been elected president of the State Industrial Female College, located at Columbus. He and Rev. T. A. S. Adams, of the Board of Trustees, have gone North to visit similar institutions. We hope to have something from them for the Advocate columns.

—The Rev. R. J. Harp, of Mansfield, La., was in the city several days last week and honored the Advocate sanctum with a call. He reported the country contiguous to Mansfield as having suffered greatly from the continuous drought. In consequence Mansfield Female College did not open quite equal to expectation, but pupils are coming in, and the patronage already exceeds the average of last term.

—Hon. Edward J. Gay, an old and honored citizen of Louisiana, and a liberal, loyal Methodist of long standing, has been nominated for Congress in the third district of this State. Without respect to party lines, he is receiving cordial support. The elevation of such an able, pure and upright gentleman to our national legislature would be an honor to the State and a return to the old paths of our constitutional fathers.

—In his History of Methodism, Bishop McTearle thus graphically describes the Achilles of our South-west at the General Conference of 1844: "In the great debate of 1844, Dr. Winans, of Mississippi, was the first speaker on the Southern side; a striking figure—tall and raw-boned. The veins of his stringy neck might be seen swollen with earnestness, for he spoke in Italian and wore no cravat. His limp shirt-collar lay around. His clothes were baggy, and his shoes tied with strings; but his eye was bloodshot with intensity, and his head a magnificent dome of thought."

—We notice in the appointments of the St. Louis Conference, that Bishop Harrower has transferred the Rev. Dr. Felix B. Hill from the Louisiana Conference and stationed him at First Church, St. Louis. For four years he has served with great acceptability and success Carondelet Street Church in this city, the cathedral of South-western Methodism, and his departure will occasion sincere sorrow. In the pulpit and in the home circle, he has been alike popular and influential. His ministry through life has been singularly successful. As the pastor of a large city church, with its varied and numerous responsibilities, he has exceptional gifts. Firm yet excelling, resolute yet respectful, determined but not dogmatic, he is a superb organizer and trainer of a large congregation. He leads and directs, making others do the work most congenial to their gifts and graces. Dr. Hill has rendered valuable service to this Advocate as Chairman of its Publishing Committee, and was ever watchful of its interests. At a pivotal period of its history he proved a friend indeed, giving the paper cordial and constant support under both administrations. Together with all New Orleans Methodism we regret his removal, and commend him and his charming family to the love and Christian fellowship of our brethren in the "Future Great" city.

Books and Periodicals.

THE GRACE OF GIVING. By Rev. B. W. Baker. Nashville, Tenn.: Southern Methodist Publishing Co.

THIS is a capital Catechetical tract, suggestive, instructive, and in every way helpful. Price 60 cts. per dozen. Five cents per copy.

OLIVER'S HANDY BOOK. New York: J. S. Olin & Co., 31 Bow Street. Price 25 cts.

THIS is a compendium of vast and valuable information. It contains statistical tables of practical use for every department of life. Send for a copy.

ANNA SHUTTON'S POEMS. New York: T. Y. Crowell & Co. $1.25.

THIS is a volume of religious poetry from a well known and venerated poet. They cover the whole range of a varied religious experience, and we doubt not will prove an example of help and comfort to many readers. The author beautifully says: "Written, as they have been, in the quietude of the soul, and in the confidence of the heart, they are intended to be read to others and will be sung by others in distant lands." We have read a number of them with much satisfaction and profit.

CLARKE'S COMMENTARY. A new edition, condensed and supplemented from the best modern sources. By H. Clarke, D.D. New York: Phillips & Son.

THIS is the second volume of this great work containing the Epistles and has not received. From a somewhat careful examination we are ready to cordially recommend its wide circulation. While the general text of Dr. Clarke's original work is retained, the editor has made considerable and important modifications. Dr. Clarke was a biblical scholar and exegete was far in advance of his age, but the advances of biblical science, especially in his chosen field, rendered a modern edition of his wonderful commentary necessary. This editor has built the results of later scholarship "into the structure of the original." The reader will find the preface and introduction to the several epistles very valuable. They present concisely and suggestively the literary history and the occasion of the writing of each epistle. In the entire volume the reader will find the results, rather than the tedious processes of inquiry. Dr. Clarke has spent the energies of his life, then, in this work, and the results are of great value. It is sold for $1.00 in cloth; $1.00 in sheep. Those possessing an old edition of Clarke's Commentary would do well to purchase this.

—The Palpit Treasury, for October, is equal to any former issue in matter and appearance. The portrait of Dr. Terhune and the view of his church are excellent. The sermons by Dr. Terhune, Canon Liddell, Mrs. McLaren, Pryor, Surra and others are worthy of their great names. Canon Liddell's sermon on Balaam—or Gifts Without Grace, will command special attention. All the departments are richly filled. This is one of the very best illustrated periodicals published. New York: E. B. Treat, 757 Broadway. Single copy, 25 cts. Yearly in advance, $3.50. Clergymen, $2.00.

To Our Agents.

As an inducement for the fall campaign, we make this extraordinary offer for new subscribers to the Advocate, viz: For ten new subscribers, with cash in full for same, we will send a full set (four volumes) of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary, bound in half morocco; or for fifteen renewals and new subscribers, we will send the full set, postage prepaid—cash in full and names all at one time to accompany orders.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the Advocate. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the Advocate.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

Two soldiers lay beneath their blankets, looking up at the stars. "For Jack," "What made you go into the army, Tom?" "Well," replied Tom, "I had no wife and I loved war, Jack, so I went. What made you go?" "Well," replied Jack, "I had a wife, and I loved peace, Tom, so I went."

The New Law. Remedy is as harmless to an infant as its mother's milk.

A new song is called "Will thou, O Will thou?" It is supposed to be dedicated to a collar and a pair of cuffs.

The edition of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary, bound by Messrs. J. Carver & Co. of London, Ohio, an off-set of a premium in another column, is nearly bound in half-morocco. It is a fine home-bound volume. Every pastor in the patronizing conference can secure a complete set. See notice.

An Irish magistrate asked a prisoner if he was married. "No," replied the man. "Then," replied the magistrate, "you are a single man."

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans, sells pianos and organs at low prices and on easy payments. This house is reliable and fully guarantees satisfaction. Chickering, Muntz, Wicks and other pianos can be bought for $20 cash and $1 monthly payments. A fine Werlein, upright square grand is $125 to rent out for four weeks. New, second-hand, Steinway & Hamilton's grand can be had for very low prices; other popular makes also. Or exchange piano in exchange for new ones, as part pay. American can be bought on $5 monthly payments, $5 as first payment. No family should be without music if possible. It is a pleasure when no one should be deprived of. All should sing and be happy.

"How do you know when a cyclone is coming?" asked a stranger of a Western man. "Oh! we get wind of it," was the reply.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

Send the Advocate to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, secure connections, and accommodating officers.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the Advocate or not.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the Advocate.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY. Approved by the Academy of Medicine, New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, pleasant and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more beneficial results to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. D. THURMAN, New York.

NO MORE NAUSEOUS DOSES. It has been reserved for our country to turn out materials for the greatest cough and breathing ailment for all times and for lung complaints. The New Law Remedy. Contains no poison, and is delicious. Liquid references by thousands. Life tonic, infallible for colds. House Depot, 151 Julia St., N. O.

EDUCATIONAL.

Mansfield Female College.

FACULTY: F. M. ORRICK, D. D., President, E. E. GRACE, A. M., Professor, TEACHERS: MISS A. R. WILLIAMS, MISS ELLA FOSTER, MISS ELLA SMITH, MISS EMMA SUTHERLIN, MISS R. J. H. R. P. Music, MISS R. J. H. P. Music, MISS DELLE PENNINGTON, ART, MISS R. J. H. P. Music, MISS FLORENCE BARLOW, Assistant.

FALL TERM OPENS SEPT. 10, 1884.

RATES: $10, $20 and $30 per session of 38 weeks. The thirty-six week session is most favorable. For Catalogue address F. M. ORRICK, President.

Collegiate Institute

—AT— HATON HOUSE, LA.

30th SESSION, BEGINNING OCTOBER 1, 1884.

This is a select Family Boarding School for BOYS limited in number, where they are prepared for the best colleges, or for the business or professional pursuits of life. The personal care of the Principal is given to the health, morals and progress of his pupils. The health record of the school is unrivaled. For particulars and circular apply to W. H. N. MAGUIRE, Principal, or J. H. MAGUIRE, A. M., Assistant.

English and Classical School for Boys,

74 Prytania Street, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

NEXT SESSION BEGINS OCT. 1, 1884.

A few Boarding Pupils can be accommodated, and to them will be given the educational advantages of the English and Classical School. For particulars apply to T. W. DICKER, Principal.

HIWASSEE COLLEGE.

FOUNDED 1810.

In the country, seven miles from Sweetwater Depot, East Tennessee.

Delicious butter and milk fresh from the cold spring house. Quiet retreat. Moral place. Moderate charges. Thorough work. Whole patronage. For circulars, address T. W. DICKER, Principal.

Kavanaugh College.

A High Grade Male and Female College, Situated in the healthy pine region of Virginia, 18 miles from the city of Washington, 10 miles from the city of Annapolis.

The First Term Begins Sept. 29, 1884.

Buildings plain, but neat and comfortable. Fare good and board good. It is to be a college for the masses; where the poor boy and girl can get an education as well as the wealthy; hence, while the grade will be high, the rates will be low.

RATES PER MONTH: Board, including room, fuel and fuel, $10.00 Tuition in Collegiate Department, $3.00 Tuition in Preparatory Department, $2.00 Tuition in Normal Department, $1.00 Tuition in Commercial Department, $1.00 Tuition in Music Department, $1.00 Tuition in Art Department, $1.00 Tuition in Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Literature Department, $1.00 Tuition in History Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geography Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mathematics Department, $1.00 Tuition in Natural Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Physical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Social Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Political Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Legal Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Medical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Theological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Philosophical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Cosmological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Astronomical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Botanical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Zoological Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Mineralogical Science Department, $1.00 Tuition in Geological Science Department, Quarterly Conferences.

DOMESTIC.

DOMESTIC.

annual season to-day

Hotel. Mr. Curry

following distribution:

Alaska, $5000; Ariz.

5,145; Mississippi,

ca, $11075; South Carolina, $8400; Ky., 7000.

§(1200; West Vir

$341,000. The report

mentally healthy man

4. Cornish schools and operators. The il-

PLATTSBURG DISTRICT.—M. B. Chapman, P. E. Plattsburg station, D. O. Howell; Osborne circuit, L. B. Mackintosh; Cameron, W. E. Donkey; village circuit, to be supplied; Platt City circuit, T. M. Rucker; Weston, to be supplied; Hardin circuit, Ben Kay; Richmond, J. W. Ramsey; Millerville, W. M. Walnwright; Edison circuit, G. Tanquary; Kungen circuit, J. L. McFerrit; Holt circuit, L. Winstead; Lawson and Lathrop, V. Blakey; Liberty and Missouri C. J. S. Frazier.

ST. JOSEPH DISTRICT. — J. P. Nolan,
P. T. St. Joseph, Francis S. Steel,
G. L. Miller, Joseph, J. Lind,
C. I. Vannover; St. Joseph, Ter-Street, Robert White; St. Joseph, Ter-cult, R. W. Housion; Forest City,
B. Parrnell; Craig Creek, B. M. St.
well; Hamburg, W. O. Medley; Ma-ville, R. H. Cooper; Barnard, R.
Jónes; Savannah, D. F. Bone; Eli-
th, C. Biden; Dearborn, P. T. Lep-
Ma, C.ville, to be amplified.

BAYVIEW.—M. R. Carroll, Schmitt, H.
Baxley, J.; Baldwin, Carroll, B. F., H.
Jamey, W.; N. S. Harding; Albany circuit.
J. O. Hunt; Johnson's; Albany circuit.
J. A. Hunt; Johnson's; Albany circuit.
Pope; Spring Hill, to be supplied.
Grant City. E. M. Cooper; Lorraine
B. Lahor; Lineville circuit.
Pope; Breckinridge circuit, J.
Kirtland; Princeton, to be supplied.
King City mission, to be supplied.

MAISON DISTRICT.—M. R. Jones; P.
Maison station, W. A. Hanna; Spelling
J. O. Edmonson; Clarence, B.

Johnston, J. E. McKees; Queen C.
Kirkland, J. E. McKees; Queen C.
L. H. Baker; Monmouth, J. A.
Eaton, Edith; N. E. McKees; S.
L. H. Baker; N. E. McKees; S.
W. Owen; McKees, J. T. Kinsley;
to be appointed; McKees, A. M.
Browning mission, J. H. Hubbard.

HANNAH DISTRICT—W. T. B.
igg, P. E. Hannah, Park Church.
K. Miller; Hannah, Arch Street.
M. Whitman; Hedgesburg church, J.
T. Todd; Mount Olive church, J. C.
Cox; Palmyra, W. A. Farwell; C.

rite City circuit, A. S. Back; Sher-ville circuit, J. M. O'Brien; Hum-well circuit, H. W. James; Monte-circuit, W. B. Beegle; Kahoka, J.
 McDonald; Colony circuit, H.
 Craig; Labelle circuit, J. D. Sm-Pantin circuit, P. G. Nichols; Nov-circuit, P. L. Davis.

St. Louis Conference.

APPOINTMENTS.

ST. LOUIS DISTRICT.—T. M. Fin-

P. E. L. Gentry, W. V. Tudor;
Johns, J. W. Laws; First Chu-
Felix R. Hill; Chouteau Avenue be supplied (by J. D. Vencil); C.
Avenue, C. O. Jones; St. Paul's, W.
Mays; Carondelet, C. E. W. S.
Marvin Chapel, E. M. Bouda; E.
to be supplied (by C. W. Turk-Bridgton, C. M. Hensley; Kirkwood,
J. E. Godbey; Mt. Zion and Clay to be supplied; Bellefontaine, B.
Thrower; Plattin and De Soto, S.
Emory and W. S. Tyler; Cathedral
Pot-ot, O. Boggea; Ironside, J.

CHARLESTON DISTRICT.—Irma Hicks, P. E. Charleston, J. W. Jones; Charleston client, to be appointed (by A. G. Horton); Stokston and Grand, A. T. Tidwell; Cape Girardeau, J. L. Batten, J. C. Alexander, sumnerary; Benion, W. P. Gibson; Lanesville, J. A. Russell; Oak Ridge, H. A. Smith; Fredericktown, W.

Hogan; Farmington, J. W. Redin; Cross Plains, to be applied (by E. Parks); Farmington, S. C. G. H. H. S. Wet, superintendence; grand, J. Garlon; New Madrid, Edl; New Madrid circuit, to be applied (by A. J. Workman); Hayes; Richmond; Jackson, to be applied.

POPULAR BLUFF DISTRICT. — II.
Hinesworth, P. E. Popular Bluff, I. M. Chubb; Grand Prairie, to be applied (by Z. W. Richardson); Clark; F. Lant; Pickett, E. M. Cunt; Bloomfield, G. H. Adams; Dand;

J. K. Mathews; West Plains, A. Green; West Plains circuit, C. E. Vinney; Eminence, J. A. Jenkins; Nevada, to be supplied; Williams, W. C. Enches; S. Franko, to be supplied (by J. R. Morris); Piedmont, S. Truitt; Bellevue, B. E. H. Wall; J. C. Williams, supernumerary; A. circuit, R. Wadon; Arcadia, J. Worsnop; Current River, J. H. Co.

SALLEM DISTRICT.—L. F. Aspley, Salem and Lake Springs, J. P. Hunt, Salem circuit, L. M. Perkins; Lodi, D. F. Renfro; Houston, H. H. De

S. JAMES, V. J. MILLER, RUTH CROFT,
A. H. ROGERS, CHAS. J. W. PEACOCK,
Chair, S. H. RENDRO, S. CLEVELAND,
YOUNG, FENNELL, D. J. MARQUA,
CLAYTON, SUPERINTENDENT; MEREDITH,
J. R. EGGLETON; WASHINGTON,
W. NOLLE; MANCHESTER, S. A. M.
LABADIE, W. H. BLASICK.

RECEIVED BY TRANSFER.—B.
THORNTON, ARKANSAS CONFERENCE;
W. BLASICK, MEMPHIS CONFERENCE;
R. HULL, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE, and
P. HATHORN, WHITE RIVER CONFERENCE.

TRANSFERRED.—JOSEPHUS STEIN

Address all mail matter to NEW LEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Orleans.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The eleventh annual camp meeting for the circuit will begin on Friday night in the Sunday in October next. Preachers calling

The New Prospect Camp Meeting will convene on Friday night before the fourth of July. Teachers will be met with convocations on the arrival of the morning from New Orleans on Friday, October 24. Sister brethren are invited to come and help.

A. P. C.

The annual meeting of the Shiloh Camp Girls' Shiloh circuit, Middle-Tennessee Conference, at the Shiloh camp, near Brandon, was held at the Shiloh station, on V. & M. R. R., with the attendance on Thursday evening, October 9, 1888, of 100 persons. The meeting was held at the Shiloh station, V. & M. R. R., on Friday morning, October 10, 1888, at 10 o'clock. The meeting was held at the Shiloh station, V. & M. R. R., on Friday morning, October 10, 1888, at 10 o'clock. The meeting was held at the Shiloh station, V. & M. R. R., on Friday morning, October 10, 1888, at 10 o'clock.

conveyed to camp ground. Mr. Editor, expect you with us on that occasion.

R. A. SINKLEY

WILKINSON circuit, at Midway	Oct. 4
Windsorville circuit, at Windsorville	11
North W. Kilson circuit, at Mt. Airy (Sat)	18
Tarboro circuit, at Tarboro	Nov. 1
W. H. H. circuit, at W. H. H.	8
Am. City circuit, at Am. City	15
Re. Hele circuit, at Greenbush	22
Am. City circuit, at Am. City	29
W. H. H. circuit, at W. H. H.	Dec. 6
Livingston, Live Oak	13
Livingston, Live Oak	20
Livingston, Live Oak	27
Livingston, Live Oak	34
Livingston, Live Oak	41
Livingston, Live Oak	48
Livingston, Live Oak	55
Livingston, Live Oak	62
Livingston, Live Oak	69
Livingston, Live Oak	76
Livingston, Live Oak	83
Livingston, Live Oak	90
Livingston, Live Oak	97
Livingston, Live Oak	104
Livingston, Live Oak	111
Livingston, Live Oak	118
Livingston, Live Oak	125
Livingston, Live Oak	132
Livingston, Live Oak	139
Livingston, Live Oak	146
Livingston, Live Oak	153
Livingston, Live Oak	160
Livingston, Live Oak	167
Livingston, Live Oak	174
Livingston, Live Oak	181
Livingston, Live Oak	188
Livingston, Live Oak	195
Livingston, Live Oak	202
Livingston, Live Oak	209
Livingston, Live Oak	216
Livingston, Live Oak	223
Livingston, Live Oak	230
Livingston, Live Oak	237
Livingston, Live Oak	244
Livingston, Live Oak	251
Livingston, Live Oak	258
Livingston, Live Oak	265
Livingston, Live Oak	272
Livingston, Live Oak	279
Livingston, Live Oak	286
Livingston, Live Oak	293
Livingston, Live Oak	300
Livingston, Live Oak	307
Livingston, Live Oak	314
Livingston, Live Oak	321
Livingston, Live Oak	328
Livingston, Live Oak	335
Livingston, Live Oak	342
Livingston, Live Oak	349
Livingston, Live Oak	356
Livingston, Live Oak	363
Livingston, Live Oak	370
Livingston, Live Oak	377
Livingston, Live Oak	384
Livingston, Live Oak	391
Livingston, Live Oak	398
Livingston, Live Oak	405
Livingston, Live Oak	412
Livingston, Live Oak	419
Livingston, Live Oak	426
Livingston, Live Oak	433
Livingston, Live Oak	440
Livingston, Live Oak	447
Livingston, Live Oak	454
Livingston, Live Oak	461
Livingston, Live Oak	468
Livingston, Live Oak	475
Livingston, Live Oak	482
Livingston, Live Oak	489
Livingston, Live Oak	496
Livingston, Live Oak	503
Livingston, Live Oak	510
Livingston, Live Oak	517
Livingston, Live Oak	524
Livingston, Live Oak	531
Livingston, Live Oak	538
Livingston, Live Oak	545
Livingston, Live Oak	552
Livingston, Live Oak	559
Livingston, Live Oak	566
Livingston, Live Oak	573
Livingston, Live Oak	580
Livingston, Live Oak	587
Livingston, Live Oak	594
Livingston, Live Oak	601
Livingston, Live Oak	608
Livingston, Live Oak	615
Livingston, Live Oak	622
Livingston, Live Oak	629
Livingston, Live Oak	636
Livingston, Live Oak	643
Livingston, Live Oak	650
Livingston, Live Oak	657
Livingston, Live Oak	664
Livingston, Live Oak	671
Livingston, Live Oak	678
Livingston, Live Oak	685
Livingston, Live Oak	692
Livingston, Live Oak	699
Livingston, Live Oak	706
Livingston, Live Oak	713
Livingston, Live Oak	720
Livingston, Live Oak	727
Livingston, Live Oak	734
Livingston, Live Oak	741
Livingston, Live Oak	748
Livingston, Live Oak	755
Livingston, Live Oak	762
Livingston, Live Oak	769
Livingston, Live Oak	776
Livingston, Live Oak	783
Livingston, Live Oak	790
Livingston, Live Oak	797
Livingston, Live Oak	804
Livingston, Live Oak	811
Livingston, Live Oak	818
Livingston, Live Oak	825
Livingston, Live Oak	832
Livingston, Live Oak	839
Livingston, Live Oak	846
Livingston, Live Oak	853
Livingston, Live Oak	860
Livingston, Live Oak	867
Livingston, Live Oak	874
Livingston, Live Oak	881
Livingston, Live Oak	888
Livingston, Live Oak	895
Livingston, Live Oak	902
Livingston, Live Oak	909
Livingston, Live Oak	916
Livingston, Live Oak	923
Livingston, Live Oak	930
Livingston, Live Oak	937
Livingston, Live Oak	944
Livingston, Live Oak	951
Livingston, Live Oak	958</

HARDY DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Remick and Stalton	Sept. 6	10
Harland and Davis	Sept. 10	10
Herrmann and C. J. Walter	Sept. 10	10
Narmon and Embold	Sept. 10	27
Scmidt and Christ	Oct. 4	10
Hari Lake and Lovelaw	Oct. 4	19
Harmon and Embold	Oct. 4	19
Duckham and Christ	Oct. 4	29
Mount Vernon and Bird	Nov. 1	10
Longburg and Cole	Nov. 1	15
Harmon and Embold	Nov. 1	15
Batesville and Westley	Nov. 1	21
31	C. N. FEARY, P.

COLUMBUS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Timber, at Silver	Sept. 6	10
West Point and Cross	Sept. 6	21
Rockville, at Cross Point	Sept. 6	21

Lathrop, at Erie
Saukville station, at Shawano	Oct.
Columbia school, at St. Francis Cotton at Appleton
Chestnut, at Whitefish
Norfolk, at Rice
Lewisville, at Ladysmith
Mechan shop	Nov.
Stoughton, at Milwaukee
Hudson
Shawano
Saukville station

36 T. C. WIER, P.

ORENADA DIST.—FOURTH BOARD.

Grounds drill	Sept.
Wagon road, at Shawano
Ground school
Chesham street
Park circuit

Colwellville church		Oct.
Nesles Chapel
St. Paul's church
Goodwill church
Trinity school
Township church		Nov.
St. John's church
Barnes church
The Town church
First church
Calvary church

31

A. M. THAMES, P.

GREENVILLE DIST., FOURTH POU.
Greenville	Aug.
Chickadee	Satd.
St. James' church
Christ Church
Faint's Popl.
Golden Hill
Columbia chch.	Oct.

Howle
Hollins	Nov.
Holmes
Polzin
John's Bayou
35	JOHN W. PRICE, P.
WISCONSIN DIST.—FOURTH ROUND
Knechtken and Durant	Sept.
Hickman
Lehmann
Reitzel
Minter City	Cet.
Greenwood
Capitola
Black Hawk
Whitney	Nov.
Whitman and Valden
Waukegan
Island Lake

[illegible]

AFTEREEN (10T.)—FIFTH BOY
Sharon church	Aug
Abies church
Union church
Union church	Sept.
Dunston church
Dunston church
Elmore church
Elmore church	Oct.
Boston Vista church
Southworth church (Thursday)
Portland church
Quakam church
Pittman church	Nov.
Portland church
Albion church
Verona and Ingham (Thursday)
Pacific circuit

31

R. H. PORTER, P.

CORINTH DIST.—FORTH REPORT.

Luka Stolin	Sept
Beulah (at) Beulah, at Rio 2
Corinth, south
Corinth, south, at Box 2 (Chapel)
Johnston, Maclure	Oct.
Kresend, at New 10
Marshall (Hanson)
Reiley and Blue Mountain
New Albany
Reidway	Nov
Blue Lake (Third day)
Blue Spring
Blue circuit.
31	AMOR REBELL.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

CENTURY SERVICE.—To the graduates in

[illegible]

Cumference, and of their alternate.

HYDRIA Mic. Islip. 430, NASH

—O—EN—

A. BALI

74 Canal, St. 95, 25 Common Street, N

IMPORTERS AND DEALERS

HAR

CUTLERY, GUNS, PISTOLS, ETC.

Steel Barb Fence Wire

A GENTS FOR:- E. & J. Brady's American
Coke & H. Ironing & S. W. Coal
Cincinnati: Milvate Steel Works, Putzle and Ball Copper, Pittsburgh, Pa.

D. H. K.

155 CA

15 Bourbon Street, -

NEW

Keep at all times a most comp

DRY
As the Stock is replenished by Advantageous to C
Samples Sent Throughout the
The BONNET and DRESS
SKI

THE CENTENNIAL DAILY PAPER
The Epistolary Notice of the English
DAILY PAPER
DURING THE SESSON OF 1854
The Centennial Conference
To be held at the City of New York, December 31st, 1854.
There will be eight issues of the paper, and it is certainly the best of the paper, and it is The Essays Read.
The Speeches Delivered.
And of
Discussions on the Same.
It will be mailed to the country of the day, and Seasons it receives Price 40 Cts. (not to be sent to subscribers, who their names and money before the 1st of Dec., when the paper will be sent to the country of the stamp duty. The service to the country and public body. Admission 35 Cts.

Rev. Wm. R. Bayle,
BALTIMORE.

BON 91.

THOS. J. CARVER,
W. L. BAKER.

CARVER & BAKER
Cotton Factors
—AND—
COMMISSION MERCHANTS
44 Perdido Street,
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

A Champion Book
FOR BOYS.
"Gilderoy's Stories" is a rollicking, breezy, bright book for boys.
Send seventy-five cents to the author.
R. G. PORTER,
Verona, N. J.
By mail, postpaid, only seventy-five cents.

BROWN'S

IRON

QUALITY
P
PURITY
NOT QUANTITY

Trade Mark

On Every Bottling

BITTERS

THE BEST TONIC.

This medicine, containing Iron with Vegetable Tonics, quickly and completely cures Anemia, Indigestion, Atrophic Gastritis, Dropsy, Neuritis, Catarrh of the Uterus, Leucorrhoea, and all the Diseases of the Blood, and of the Nervous System.

It is an infallible remedy for Diseases of the Blood and the Nervous System.

It is valuable for Diseases peculiar to Women, and all who tend to debility from loss of blood, or from any other cause, and for the production of constipation—after Menstruation.

It enriches and purifies the blood, stimulates the appetite, aids the assimilation of food, gives freshness and vigor, and restores the muscles and nerves.

For Intermittent Fevers, Lassa-fèvre, Malaria, and all the Fevers of the Tropics.

25c The genuine has above trade mark, crossed red lines on wrapper. Trade name, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Made only by DR. J. C. WILKINS & CO., HARTFORD, CONN.

INSIDE (822—0—)

WIN & C
Electric—AND—77 and 79 Front Street, New York
IN FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC WARE,
NAILS, SHEET AND BOLT COPPER
and Agricultural Implements
Grand Nails and Spikes; Wirepaul Blue Co. W. L.
Philadelphia; Quinn Valley Steel and Iron S.
Meikle's Chilled Blaws; Park, Scott & Co's

OLMES.

AL STREET,
- 15 Dauphine Str
RELEANS.
Established in 1842.
Assortment of European and Domestic GOODS
Weekly arrivals. Purchasers will and Examine the Goods.
Country, and Orders Promptly Executed
Selling Departments are placed in m
ST. MARCO.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1884.

IN FELLOWSHIP OF SERVICE.

BY MARIANNE TARNUM.

We work together, if far apart;
Loyal and strong is each servant's heart;
One is our Master, Christ the Lord,
And we catch the sound of his guiding word,
And onward go where he shows the way
Till we stand with him in the perfect day.

The work we do is not quite the same,
Some are heralds the news is claim;
Some are working among the vine,
Some in the fields where the hot sun shines,
And some work quietly in the gloom
Of a shady place or a narrow room.

Some are singing the Master's praise,
Some are clearing the dusty ways,
Some are teaching the young with care,
Some are spending the day in prayer;
We are all working with voice or pen,
The young and the old, the women and men.

For how shall the servants of Christ be still
When his kingdom is hindered by force of ill?
His will being done, the world would be Happy and prosperous, good and free,
Shall we not labor until we win
The whole glad world for our dear Son?

We work together, if far apart;
Hands in unison, heart in heart;
We work as having one common aim,
We work as hearing the same good name;
We dare not fail, but will persevere
The work of the Master, with him in view.

Brothers and sisters, I send you greeting!
Not yet is the time of our happy meeting,
But progress is made; it is now the noon,
And the sweet rest-hour will be coming soon.
I hear your voices sometimes in song,
And all our work will be done ere long.

Retrospective.

FOURTEENTH PAPER.

During my absence on my Northern tour my appointments were filled by my presiding elder and the local preachers on the circuit. There were fifteen regular appointments, with occasional preaching in destitute neighborhoods. At that time our people would attend, week-day appointments, superceding the necessity of whitening down good paying circuits to a point below ministerial support. A travelling preacher should have enough to do to keep constantly employed a ready hand, a willing heart and a protective mind for the Master whom he serves.

"No room for mirth or lifting here,
For worldly hope or worldly fear,
If life so soon is gone."

I had Bro. Bannoy Lewis for my colleague this year—1884. We seldom met. I do not recollect of ever hearing him preach. He was a portly man; would have levelled the scales at two hundred pounds; was agreeable in manners; had a clever wife, but no children. I have lost sight of the good brother. I think he located; as I have failed to see his name in the published minutes of the Mississippi Conference. I could hear of his preaching from a text of but one word; but that was a comprehensive term—none more so in the Bible. He surprised some of his hearers by telling them that the word, "eternity" (his text), occurred but once in the Bible, as doubtless many supposed that a word so frequently used in the pulpit and in our theological works could be found on almost every page of the inspired writings; but not so. My own mind has been puzzled when thinking of terms we so frequently use. In that poem, written by Montgomery, on "The Issues of Life and Death" we have stanza which has caused me to ponder over its comprehensive meaning:

"Beyond this vale of years
There is a life above,
Unmeasured by the flight of years;
And all that life is love."

"Unmeasured by the flight of years!" How incomprehensible the thought! And this is eternally "Immensity," "Infinity" and "eternity" are terms past the comprehension of finite minds. We may try to imagine an ocean without a shore; in depth, without a bottom—boundless, fathomless! We may think of space without limit—of world's more distant that the most remote star that sparkles at midnight hour, and twice ten thousand times as far before, reaching the borders of God's universe. We may give wings to our imagination and fly with the speed of thought, without diverging from a straight line for years which no mathematician can compute, without severely gaining a view of the immeasurable space. So it is, we think of eternity, speak of eternity, read of eternity, while the term is often used in our literature, incorporated in our prayers and songs of praise—indeed, the term is used as though it was but a common word in our language—without the thought being suggested that the word is so full of meaning, embracing such a world of thought, that the inspired writers have not deemed it proper to use it but once in penning the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments. The bold prophet, Isaiah, forms an exception to all the rest. To enforce truth which he had delivered he says: "For thus saith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity!" Nowhere else can the term be found in the sacred canon. My quondam colleague and brother, for aught I know to the contrary, may now have a practical understanding of what he theorized in his preaching. If so, we can but hope that he has entered upon a blissful eternity.

At one time during the year I remember to have indulged in gloomy feelings; did not see as much fruit of my labors as I desired; had no special displays of Divine power in the awakening of sinners and the conversion of penitents. I thought I might be occupying the place of another who might be instrumental in the hands of God in accomplishing more for the Master. I indulged the thought of retiring from the itinerancy at the close of the Conference year and take a place in the local ranks, where I could be more with my family and better enjoy domestic life. In short, the retrospect clouded my future hopes. About this time I preached at a place where a wealthy, pious widowed sister of the Baptist Church was a regular attendant and a liberal supporter of the ministry. At the close of the service I accepted from her an invitation to dine and to preach to her servants. After dinner we engaged in religious conversation. I told her I was much discouraged; thought I was doing little, if any, good, and had serious notions of locating to give place to others more efficient. She expressed astonishment. Said she: "This must be a suggestion from the evil one. I know you are doing good and have no reason to despair. I have been greatly benefited by your ministry." Then she referred to a sermon I had preached which afforded her comfort, told me to go on in the good work and the Lord would continue to bless my ministry. This was a word of encouragement at a time I needed it. I thought of the many times the Lord had blessed me, the cordial reception I had met with since parting with my home and friends in Madison county while engaged in the Master's work, and was enabled to renew my covenant and take the advice of this good Baptist sister.

In a ministry of thirty-six years since then, as I have often traveled over the mountains and through the fertile valleys of Texas, I have often thought of this mother in Israel. I presume she has long since gone to her reward, where in the near future hope to meet her again. DANIEL MOREH,
MARSHALL, TEXAS.

Reciprocal Obligations.

MR. EDITOR: A short time since the writer chanced to meet with Bro. "Layman," and not exactly under a sprouting bush, but among the whispering pines, we proceeded to investigate, each the other, as to the position we occupied concerning "pastoral methods," etc., and, furthermore, to discuss the relations of pastor and people. From this conversation we give you some thoughts as they suggested themselves to us as we thus stood and talked.

First, it was suggested that the preacher's duties call him necessarily into the "highways and hedges," that he must seek the sick to comfort them, visit the feeble-minded to encourage them, hunt the poor that he may help to relieve their necessities and preach in some way to them, and be diligent in finding the stranger in the community and extending to him the earnest invitation to the church of God; that as our Master set up no office or fixed place of meeting men or of having the suffering brought to him, but himself "went about doing good," so must we, his chosen ministers, not expect to accomplish the work assigned us by simple office work—reading, prayer and preparation of sermons. To all of this we agreed; for surely many a preacher has found how unsatisfactory has been the work—nay, more, how dead has grown the church—under the administration of such preachers. It is easier for a good pastor, though not so fine a preacher, to follow an "office" man than to encase one who has kept up all these points. The reasons are obvious. As interest begets interest, and sympathy begets sympathy, so the man who seeks to know his people at their homes, and works to advance their spiritual interests otherwise than simply giving to them Sabbath after Sabbath the results of a week's work in a grand sermon, succeeds better in winning their love and appreciation of his work.

But then, we asked, what about those members who never encourage the pastor by their presence in the congregation, and, if ever, only once in every four or six months? They demand the pastor's presence as often, or, perhaps, oftener, than others. What is to do? And right here, Mr. Editor, let me say to your readers that at this point many complain very unjustly of the pastor when by their actions they have given him little encouragement to repeat his visits. Preachers are men as others, and it is natural that they should visit those at their homes more often who show their appreciation of his visits by returning them at church. He is more ready to talk to the man, young or old, at his place of business whom he sees in his congregation on the Sabbath. Holy things to dogs and pearls before swine will suggest themselves, and he can not make them down.

Now, as we thus talked, the subject of ministerial support was reached and discussed. That a preacher should suffer lack of support for Christ's sake without murmuring was agreed to be Pauline and right in a certain sense. Bro. "Layman" very justly entered an objection to our preachers seeking other fields of support than that of the ministry. He also agreed that the churches should support their pastors liberally. But what do we find to be the facts in the case? Why, sir, almighty that it is astounding that men of intelligence and pride will submit year after year to the poor, miserable salaries that many of our pastors receive for honest labor. It is enough to crush the spirit and independence out of any set of men in the world except true men of God—Methodist preachers. Why, sir, about eight years ago I knew a church to demand a certain kind of pastor and promise a certain salary. The presiding elder complied with their wishes as nearly as possible. They professed to be pleased. The young itinerant, loyal to his promises, took up wife and babe to make his home on what was known as a hard swamp appointment. When the first District Conference met and the salary was assessed, to the astonishment of the elder the salary was just three-fourths of that promised, and the end of the year found that three-fourths nearly one-fourth short. One brother had bought an additional tract of land and, therefore, reduced his assessment from $100 to $30; and, save one man, all the others did likewise—reduced. They had ascertained by some means that the preacher had a home and something outside of his salary. By this course of reduction, and watching the preacher's outside means rather than considering their own obligations to God and his servant, many a faithful man of God has been forced to spend his private means and come down to a life of severe denial among a people who profess to love God supremely. I do not hold the steward as responsible in every instance; but, sir, from the experience of the writer—having in the course of twelve years been paid in full once—I have learned that the most uncertain calculation that I can make is as to a preacher's salary, and that, as I look at the minutes of our Conference, these deficiencies are largely the rule. Now, is it to be condemned in even a preacher, if he finds his family's necessities are exceeding his probable receipts, to engage in something else? Certainly not, Bro. "Layman," he is in circumstances beyond his control. He would gladly give his life to his work; but stern necessity is upon him. Let brethren lay by them in store as God has prospered and let our pastors be men of one work is the wish, no doubt, of every honest, earnest soul.

Fraternally,
T. B. H.
YAZOO CITY, MISS., Oct. 2, 1884.

From a Woman about Woman's Work.

MR. EDITOR: I have been reading Dr. Lipscomb's "Studies in the Forty Days," and for the time being I felt transported beside the pellucid waters of the Lake of Galilee. All through the glowing pages I have seen glimmerings of the same light which scintillated from his burning brain and illumined soul amid the commonplace realities of college recitation. My later readings of "Paradise Lost" have been sublimated by the recollection of his wonderful interpretations of the poet before "the seigneur," and, as I have read page after page of the "Studies," with the echoes of memory resounding in the "chapels and cathedrals of my brain," again I seemed to hear the deep cadences of the sub-bass voice as they rolled deep toned in "Chapel service" through the meters of the twenty-third Psalm, "The Lord is my Shepherd," etc., arousing strains of sweet music in my girl-heart never to be silenced. Ah! the book is a grand book worthy of the head and heart of the grand man who wrote it. I turn from it with a sense of deep humility, asking my own heart, What must I do for my risen Lord? And in response there comes this Pentecostal promise—"I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh," followed by an echo from the rocky slopes around the Sea of Tiberias, Pasu oves meos.

Can it be that the glorified Son of Man apostles to each one of us in these same words, To Peter in thunder tones thrice told, and to his humblest disciples with, perchance, one lamb in keeping in soft accents of love? I think I have heard the whispered injunction, and thus it comes when my devout Christian sisterhood, in convention assembled, assigned me a work to do in God's vineyard, although a field untrod, I have not dared lay aside the duty. I am the very humblest of instruments; but I remember that God wants an emptied vessel through which to pour his great Spirit. I am nought only as I am led or driven. I, therefore, appeal to all the church to aid me by prayers, advice and suggestions.

To the dear sisters of the Woman's Missionary Society I would say: I shall esteem it a great favor to hear from one and all in the interest of this cause. God bless you, everyone, and strengthen your hearts in the noble work and purpose of our organization! Let every light, however small, be trimmed and burning:

"If once all the lamps that are lighted
Should vividly blaze in a line,
Wide over the land and the ocean
What a gleam of glory would shine!
How all the dark places would brighten!
And the stars would roll up and away!
How the earth would laugh in her gladness
To hail the millennial day!"

Next July, when we go up to our State Conference, at Minden, let every auxiliary send a delegate with a good report. At the same time and place we hope to have a visitation from our dear mother in Israel, Mrs. Hayes, and many other elect sisters, and we will enjoy a feast of spiritual comforts. I take this opportunity to say to the sisters generally that any information necessary in the organization of auxiliary societies will be cordially furnished by your president or your corresponding secretary, Mrs. Eunice B. Foster, Shreveport, La.

Of the ministers of the Conference I beg leave to make a request, viz: That they will form as many auxiliaries as possible within their works, instructing the officers thereof to write to me or Mrs. Foster—thereby putting us in direct communication with parties whom we could never reach otherwise. I hope this is not asking too much. Although not in the specified work of the preacher in charge, still it is for the Master, and surely you will not refuse this initiatory step in the extension of our work. Our State is far behind in our Conference reports; but if the noble Christian women of Louisiana will arouse themselves and be willing to adopt our motto, "She hath done what she could," it will not be long before we will carry up rich golden sheaves to gladden the Lord of the harvest. In Christian love and sympathy, Your sister, MRS. E. C. FULLILOVE,

Pres. La. Conf. W. M. Society.
KATZIE, LA., Sept. 29, 1884.

From Marvin Circuit.

I regret, Mr. Editor, that I have nothing new or specially encouraging to offer, still I want the "world and the rest of mankind" to know that we still live. It has been a hard year with us in this East Mississippi country. The very short crop of last year affected us very seriously. The preacher has felt the pressure sensibly, and every interest of the church has suffered. I serve a kind, clever people, to some of whom I shall always feel specially indebted. The heavy expense incurred by a long move—all the way from Texas—and the stringency of the times have made it hard for me to live. And if my people pay me all they promised there will be but little margin left after supporting my family for the year.

The centennial has not been kindred to a flame, notwithstanding I have done some faithful blowing. Until recently, I have done but little in the way of Conference collections. I hope now, that cotton is getting into market, our people will feel like responding to these calls. The Conference year is rapidly drawing to a close. What we do must be done quickly. This has been a year of domestic affliction to me. I have been called to mourn the loss of two grown children within less than a year, and at this writing a dear little grandson lingers between life and death. But all this I have looked for, and thank God he has spared so many of my loved ones and spared them so long. We have some improvement in the church, spiritually. Several have been converted and added to the church during the year. There has been nothing like a general revival in any of the churches in this region.

Recently our Baptist brethren held a meeting of the "Strong River Association" at a central point on my circuit. Expectation was high that we might have a revival during this meeting, but there were no demonstrations of spiritual interest. The preaching for the most part was pointed, earnest, faithful. I enjoyed it, and so did all who went to worship. Great prominence was given in all the sermons I heard to heartfelt experimental Christianity, including the direct witness of the Spirit. No mooted point was raised as between us and them. In but one instance that I heard of was the subject of Baptism mentioned and then but incidentally. I was pleased to see our Baptist brethren take the high ground they did on this occasion in behalf of prohibition. They claim to have over 3,000 members in the bounds of the "Strong River Association," and they are determined to make every church in the association a prohibition society. Under the head of "Gospel Order," in their printed minutes, they have the following:

8. This association will not fellowship with any church which permits its members to sign "whisky petitions" for the purpose of granting a "license" to retail vicious and spirituous liquors, but will expel all such churches as being guilty of gross and immoral conduct.

And the association seemed fully determined to execute the rule. This has been a trying year. God speed these brethren in this effort to suppress the whisky traffic. I got one "new wrinkle" from the association. They have discovered the "unholy link" in Baptist succession that was attempted to be supplied by Roger Williams and Ezekiel Holman. They now repudiate those men, and say they were not Baptists, and that one Clark was the founder of the Baptist Church in the United States. Well, their own historians are responsible if there is any mistake about this matter. I have no quarrel with them about so small a matter. But I confess I do not need up to this new discovery. What next I can not divine. The Baptist brethren are pushing their educational enterprises with commendable zeal, and there is much interest manifested among them in behalf of missions and Sunday-schools. It seemed a little strange to me, however, that from Memphis to New Orleans they have not a self-sustaining church along the river front. Greenville, Vicksburg, Natchez, Baton Rouge and New Orleans, all missionary ground, so far as the Baptist Church is concerned. Some years ago, if I am not mistaken, they had two parsonages in the city of Natchez, and they have fine church buildings in Vicksburg and New Orleans. But they are doing good. God bless them.

H. J. H.
MARVIN PARSONAGE.
* Since writing the above, news came to me that my little grandson is dead.

Revival Correspondence.

God has been with us in power and great glory in the Aberdeen district. Every charge has had good meetings. More than six hundred conversions and large accessions to the church. Crops, both cotton and corn, short. Money scarce—scarcer than for seventeen years past. Collections far behind yet. Much talk, centennial; but not gifts of any consequence.

GILDERBY.

I have just closed ten weeks' work in protracted meetings, have preached one hundred times in ten weeks, and had over one hundred converts. While my health has been feeble it has been a happy summer, because of the continued presence of the Lord. We have had eighty-six accessions to the church, and doubtless others will come in before the close of the year. Thirty infants have been baptized; many others to be dedicated. Bless the Lord for his rich manifestations.

O. H. HODGE.

WALTHAM, MISS., Oct. 3, 1884.

Our membership at Johnston station has been wonderfully refreshed by the presence of the Lord during a three days' meeting held there recently. While the Spirit was with the church in power, souls were converted and rejoiced with the church, telling of the unspeakable grace they had found in Christ Jesus. Johnston station is a small place, but the Lord magnifies it by his presence with his children. Seven conversions and two additions to the church. Bro. Hanna, Dr. Germany and son, Robert Germany, local preachers, were with us, working for the Lord earnestly.

WM. B. HINES.

SEMIT, MISS., Oct. 1, 1884.

I love to tell good news about our meeting just closed at Cherry Hill. We have had a glorious revival. The church is truly alive, teaching transgresses the ways of righteousness. Twenty-three have professed religion and joined the church. There is joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth. How much joy is there over twenty-three! Bro. J. W. Price, the presiding elder, was with us, and preached to great acceptability in demonstration of the spirit and of power. Bro. W. W. Dorman, of Clarksdale station, was with us and did valuable service.

J. H. SMITH, P. C.

DEBIL, MISS., Sept. 27, 1884.

We have just closed a meeting here of three weeks' continuance. The presence and power of God was manifested in the conviction and conversion of sinners. Many church members were greatly blessed, being renewed in the spirit of their minds. Forty-two souls professed saving faith in Christ, and forty were added to the church. Among the converts were twenty-two Sunday-school scholars. We closed last night with seven mourners at the altar. We were assisted by Bros. J. G. Jones, J. D. Hayes, W. B. Lewis and J. T. Nicholson. The Master knows their work, and their record is on high. We feel devoutly thankful to God for his mercies and blessings.

H. D. HOWELL.

HAZLEHURST, MISS., Oct. 3, 1884.

At three P. M. last Saturday, September 27, the corner-stone of the new Methodist Church was laid. Everything was done according to the form in our Discipline. Rev. R. S. Ishell reading the prayer and Rev. Robert Randle, our presiding elder, reading the Scripture and laying the stone. Bro. Randle's address, though brief, was in perfect keeping with the occasion, was well conceived and admirably delivered. Some new subscriptions were received, and now even the heretofore timid and doubting are inclined to believe the church will be built. The people are fully in the mind to build, and we hope to get the work completed before December 15. It is a Centennial Church, and, if within the possibilities, it must be dedicated to God during the Centennial year.

BASTROP, LA., Sept. 29, 1884.

We have just closed our round of protracted meetings on the Shingalak circuit with wonderful success. The holy fire broke out at every appointment throughout the circuit and burned to the consumption of sin. We closed on last Sunday night at Macedonia, the last meeting to be held on the work during the present year, which resulted in a glorious revival in the church, the conversion of twenty-one souls and twenty accessions to our church. We have had in all one hundred conversions and one hundred additions to the Methodist Church, and a revival which has surpassed any on the work for years. We have baptized twenty-seven infants. The people are greatly encouraged, and have more hope of building up this circuit than for years before, and say they are going to support their preacher. We are doing all we can to bring up all the collections ordered by the Annual Conference, and pray that the people may see the importance of meeting all these claims in full in order to a first-class circuit. We now have in course of erection one new church, which we hope to have finished by the close of this Conference year.

W. T. HARNETT.

OCTOBER 2, 1884.

I have been thinking some time that I would give you a few items of interest from this portion of the Mississippi Conference—Warren circuit, a charge to which I have been assigned for three years. This charge, as you are aware, is commensurate with Warren county, and your "silent friend," the only living white preacher of any denomination outside of Vicksburg, residing in the county. Hence we have a field amply large, if it could be properly utilized, to display our generalship in the manifestation of our itinerant polity, the grandest system ever put on foot for preaching and spreading the gospel.

But, alas! our locomotive power is not adequate to the task, and I find it extremely difficult to partially discharge the duties of an itinerant Methodist preacher in a field so large and laborious, and yet, with all the disadvantages with which we are surrounded, our beloved Methodism is still on the upward grade, and that grand old ante-bellum type of Methodist manhood and womanhood, which was so emphatic in her past career still characterizes her history and progress.

Our noble women deserve special mention. Like the good women of old, "who wore last at the press and first at the sepulchre of the risen Saviour," so our good women are first and last in all the good enterprises of the church of God.

Our protracted meeting season is over. I closed my last on Tuesday after the third Sabbath in last month. At this place, Oak Ridge, we have just passed through a glorious revival—a tidal wave having swept over the entire community. The meeting commenced on September 7, and continued up to September 16. I have never seen a congregation so thoroughly alive to the interests of the church, and so perfectly untiring in its devotion and attendance upon the ordinances of God's house.

From beginning to end we had a crowded house, and we found it difficult to know where or how to close. From Monday until the following Monday our altar was crowded with penitents, anxiously inquiring the way of life, and during this time many testified to the truth of God's power to save. Thirty-six accessions, about twenty conversions and the church greatly enlarged and wonderfully revived, were the visible fruits at this meeting.

W. W. HUNST.

OAK RIDGE, Oct. 2, 1884.

Worthy of Centenary Liberty.

MR. EDITOR: It is our duty to make our thank-offering this centennial year, and our privilege to indicate the purpose for which we give. With all deference to the opinions of others, I desire to say that I do not believe I can make a more acceptable offering than to give my pittance to the support of worn-out preachers and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers in the Mississippi Conference, and I intend to do so.

I do not wish it understood that I am not in favor of other interests of the church. Far from it. But in this centennial year I think it meet and proper to show a special regard for those old soldiers of the cross who have "fought a good fight and kept the faith," and the widows and orphans of those who have gone before; and I would not be surprised, if a little more attention was paid to "the Greeks at our door," that the church would not be the loser.

A LAYMAN.

"The Lost Key Found"—Dr. Marshall's Endorsement.

VICKSBURG, MISS., Sept. 25, 1884.

Prof. J. W. ELLIOTT, ESTEEMED BROTHER: Your most little eighth page pamphlet, "The Lost Key Found," on scriptural baptism came duly to hand, for which I send you a thousand thanks. I have read it with much edification. It presents the subject in a strong, novel and unanswerable position. Immersion is not found in the Bible. The idea of immersing a man in the Holy Ghost as if he were like a river, a pool or baptistry, and raising him up and out of the Divine Spirit as a man is raised out of the water, is transcendental absurdity. The book says: "I will pour out of my Spirit," and, "Ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you;" and, "Until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high;" and also last, "Having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this which you now see and hear."

How any man not preoccupied by a traditional sentiment can permit the notion of immersion to enter his mind after once (without prejudice) looking at such truths and facts as you have adduced is one of the hard things for my comprehension. As a traditional sentiment I see how it prevails. A loving daughter saw her dear mother go down into and under the water, and come up as the air was charmed with the voice of the multitude singing, "How happy are they who their Savior obey," and her heart was deeply touched with the sight, the

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

P. WERLEIN,
135 CANAL STREET,
NEW ORLEANS.

Advertisement for P. Werlein, a musical instrument dealer in New Orleans. The illustration shows a building facade with a sign that reads "P. WERLEIN" and "135 CANAL STREET". The sign also features the text "THE BEST FOR THIS CLIMATE" and "MADE IN FRANCE". The building is flanked by two large, ornate columns. The overall style is that of a vintage woodcut or engraving.

PIANOS! PIANOS!

PIANUS! PIANUS!

ORGANS! ORGANS! ORGANS!

— THE —

BEST HOUSE

— IN THE —

SOUTH.

—

Send for Catalogues.

—

Music and Everything Musical.

NEW and fresh Music builds up and in-gates new life in a Sunday-School.
The best Music Book published in

Love and Praise

Published by ROGERS & SPENCE, NEW YORK, INC.

New Songs of Love and Praise.
New Songs of Hope and Trust.

—

Beautiful Hymns, Inspiring Music, Chorus Sets taken from the most valuable productions of the best of poets, and others. With new lyrics and in-

ble | W. LUDDEN AND GED. O. ROBINSON

125 Copies, Words and Music, at 50c. - 37
75 Copies, Words only, at 10c.

100 SONG BOOKS FOR $1

Music edition 35c, each; 45 in per doz. Postage Words edition 25c, each; 45 in per doz. Postage 25c. A special price. Some editions include a piano for 2 voices. Specimen pages free. Put in the names and names of cities. In ordering, say how many you want. Address the Publisher.

LUDDEN & BATE
Southern Music House,
SAVANNAH, GA.

A GREAT MUSICAL MARVEL
SHONNGER'S
Embellished Grand
First Class 7' 6" Square
Bright Rosewood Frame with a Chime of 36 Bell Patented 1870

Warranted 10 Years.

Send for Catalogue, Price and full Information to

B. SHONNGER PIANO!
NEW HAVEN, CONN. U. S.

WOODEN and WILLOW WARE
Cordage, Paper, Tinware

2 75
$ 2 75
2 75
4 00
2 75

reduction
I receive s in the others, advocate.

Base Balls, etc.,
Bath Brick,
Blank Books,
Blackening,
Bouges,
Cages,
Coffee-Mills,
Corks,
Cotton Cards,
Curry-Cumabs,
Cutlery and Saws,
Fishing Tackle,
Furnaces,

Masking,
Ink and Chalk,
Japanned Ware,
Lanquas, etc.,
Live and Soap,
Matches,
Mirrors,
Oakum and Oil,
Perfumery,
Paillocks,
Scales,
Sieves,
Tacks, etc., etc.

J. C. MORRIS
40, -42 and 44 Tchoupitoulas

"PERFECTION"
Glass Fountain Student Lamp

[Pat. Nov. 22,
1880.]

Containing a wick
Acting valve and Heating filter, thing needed to run
Absolutely Perfect
No running over or
No smoking
Ask for the Perfection Glass
STUDENT LAMP
Manufactured and
at wholesale only
Manhattan Branch
First Ave. and 6th
Send for Illustrated
planetary Circular

Don
and B3
Pair up.
PETS,
ee.
AN locally,
to $30-
CO.,
EW YORK.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1884.

Centenary offerings thus far reported exceed a quarter of a million dollars. The resolved two millions will certainly be raised. Every pastor and church member should be a grateful contributor.

The eloping mania which seems just now alarmingly prevalent in the North is the painful product of a false and frivolous domestic life together with a vicious literature that colors and glorifies clandestine marriages and a heroic love that defies and eludes parental tyranny. The yellow-back novel is chargeable with these disgraceful marital exploits.

Our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church are beginning to stir up a genuine Centennial enthusiasm. Their strongest and most popular preachers are announced to take part in meetings here and there. Centenary appeals are ringing out over the church for liberal offerings to Christian education especially, and in a little while we shall look for history to repeat itself.

The Bishop of Liebfeld has issued a special pastoral to his clergy with regard to the employment of lay preachers in his diocese. He urges the importance of lay preachers as necessary to reach the masses. Why was not such apostolic procedure practiced in the days of the Wesleys? Then it was gross heresy, and episcopal anathemas were hurled at the poor Methodist evangelists with a vigor and virulence that would have frightened less courageous and conscientious men. So the years are endorsing and applauding the great Methodist movement. Even "the Church" has learned a lesson or two.

In an editorial reference to the leading article in the current number of the North American Review, on "Moral Character in Politics," by Dr. Julius H. Seelye, president of Amherst College, the North-Western Christian Advocate speaks of him as the author of "Ecce Homo." We are surprised that our wide-awake Chicago confere should not so soundly. The author of "Ecce Homo" is J. R. Seelye, M. A., Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge. He never was president of Amherst College, never wrote an article for the North American Review and, so far as we know, was never in the United States.

In his editorial correspondence from the South-west Missouri Conference Dr. McNally made this remarkable statement: "There are six or seven circuits in the bounds of the Conference, each having from seven to ten preaching-places, and not a single church-house in any of them. And, further, there are in the Conference circuits thirteen circuits, and only one church among them all." For so old a State and a well-organized Methodism this is an alarming report. Surely there is work for the Church Extension Society in that region. Our cause can not long prosper without houses of our own set apart from "all unholiness or common uses."

The telegraphic correspondent of the Times-Democrat, at Waco, Texas, characterized the great revival, under the leadership of Rev. Sam Jones, as an "unprecedented religious ebullition" and a "religious furor of an abnormal character." We are surprised that so prominent and high-toned a journal as the Times-Democrat would admit to its columns such reflections upon a Christian people and community. A telegraphic correspondent should report news, not notations—facts, not opinions. He is doubtless the sapient critic who telegraphed the same paper, last year, that Henry Ward Beecher was "a third-rate orator," and that there were forty men in Texas more eloquent on the platform. If his fondness for expressing foolish opinions can not be restrained, we advise our neighbor to secure another correspondent. A large and influential congregation of Christians should not be anathematized in a great journal by some small critic who may not be capable of a discriminative judgment. It is the paper in which it is published that gives the statement any weight. Surely our neighbor is not ready to lend its columns to the ridicule of a wonderful religious revival.

Some Centenary Facts and Suggestions.

For three months this editor, while doing full office work, has been in the field assisting brethren in their Centenary services. We have traveled from four hundred to a thousand miles per week, and had the pleasure of addressing congregations, large and small, liberal and "slow of speech," but in no pastoral charge have we lifted a collection of less than two hundred and fifty dollars. The amounts have ranged from that sum to nineteen hundred. Meeting thus with preachers of varied thought and zeal, and congregations of different spirit and enterprise, we have noted many developments of this Centenary idea. Ecclesiastically speaking, to some it is a savor of life unto life, and to others almost of death unto death. The one class, informed as to the heroic history of their church and the grandeur of its achievements, the majestic speed of whose march has no parallel in all times, apostolic, patristic or modern, become enthusiastic at the very thought of celebrating a great epoch in its annals. They esteem it a privilege and pleasure to make a specific thank-offering to God for his signal mercies of a hundred years to their beloved church. The other class, uninformed in the history of Methodism, having only a local knowledge and impression of her spirit and conquests, almost resent the Centenary idea. Connectional loyalty and enthusiasm they consider the merest folly. Beyond the narrow, low horizon of their own neighborhoods they can not look. From them we get feeble or silent response to Centenary appeals.

Nor are the preachers of one mind on this subject. Some rejoice in it; others conservatively approve; others doubt the utility; some "fear the results," and a very small class "take no stock in it." Those intelligently alive to the idea consider this year our Southern Methodism's grand opportunity. The occasion is furnished to arouse our people to action along some neglected lines, inspire them with new hope and make them forget the desolations of war. It is high time for us to cease mourning over the losses and crosses of that great civil strife, and look with heroic purpose into the opening and inviolable future. And to this end much depends upon the pastor. "Like priest, like people." They will catch his spirit and emulate his example. He should wear a cheerful countenance and carry a sunbeam into every home and pulpit. And here we want to repeat and emphasize a recent editorial note in these columns, as it has been widely republished and cordially endorsed: "The pastor who is ready with an apology for the illiberality of his people will be sure to report a very small Centenary offering. Almost everything depends upon the pastor. If he has missionary zeal, he will bring up good reports to the Board of Missions. And so in every department to which special attention is given. Centenary offerings, therefore, will engage the pastor as well as the people."

Another fact is noticeable and an occasion for all joy—the revival spirit abroad in the church. Our exchanges are full to the brim of good news from every section of our great Connection. From the Atlantic seaboard to the peaceful shores of the Pacific our leaders are shouting to the battle, and conversions are counted by the thousands. The inspiring watchword of Charles Garrett, ex-president of the Wesleyan Conference, "A revival in every circuit," has echoed like a trumpet through the church. Though a Conference here and there may show small increase or a slight decrease, the general church will make large and gratifying gains. In this fact we rejoice. The power that attended the ministry of our fathers is still resident and regnant in the pulpit.

We have also noted a growing and more intelligent denominational loyalty. With increased information there is stronger attachment to the distinctive and differentiating features of our Methodism. Centenary discourses will develop this church life, intensify zeal and go far toward a skillful mobilizing of all the vast forces and resources of our Connection. They will veritate denominational convictions and give wise direction to spiritual impulse.

Now a few words by way of modest suggestion: First to pastors. The year is far spent. Presiding elders are on the fourth round, and soon we will go up to Annual Conference. What we do must be done quickly. See to it, dear brethren, that every member, and every pupil in the Sunday-school, has an opportunity to make a Centenary offering.

Carefully plan and prepare for your Centenary meetings. Don't let the day arrive without the people thoroughly understanding the purpose of the appointment and the expectations of the occasion. And let not all Centenary liberality be expended on local objects. We will deconnectionalize the movement thereby and lose much of its blessing to the church. Our great connectional Boards have relied much on this Centenary year. If largely localized, they will suffer embarrassment.

Second to church members. Let every Methodist lay by a special Centenary offering. The church has done much for you. Her arms have sustained you and her benedictions have followed you. A monumental offering, in recognition of these blessings, is the demand of true gratitude. And do not give all this to some local object—painting a fence or remodeling a house or hanging a gate or purchasing a stove. Let it go mostly into the connectional treasury for enterprises away from home.

Old Methodist Fires.

From the account given of the great revival at Newnan, Ga., in an Atlanta, Ga., paper, there must have been displayed the fire and power of the early days. What marvelous things were wrought by the simple preaching of the word about the beginning of this century! Conversions occurred during the delivery of the sermon, while convicted sinners fell prostrate and cried aloud for salvation. Such physical demonstration we may never again witness; but the same spiritual power should be manifest and in like manner attend the pulpit message. The following incidents are well calculated to arouse faith and heart with zeal who are at ease in Zion: "The great religious revival here (Newnan, Ga.) has stirred the hearts of the people to a depth never before reached in the history of the county. Each day the people from town and country crowd the spacious arbor which has been erected in the heart of the city, and openly proclaim the glory of God and confess the Savior. So profound is this feeling that the grand jury devoted space in their general presentments to thanking God for the great revival of religion among us and praising him for his signal blessing. After the grand jury was dismissed the members returned to their room, invited Judge S. W. Harris to meet with them, and there held a prayer meeting that Heaven was proud of. Judge Harris asked for prayer, and the twenty-one Christian members pledged themselves to remember him at the throne of mercy, and knelt and offered prayer for him. The two members of the grand jury who were not converts left determined to unite with the church and consecrate their lives to God. No man ever did a greater and grander work than Rev. Sam. Jones is doing here."

Our neighbor, the South-Western Christian Advocate, is commendably jealous in favor of Bishop Mallahan making New Orleans his episcopal residence. That is all right. Let him come to the Crescent City. It will be an agreeable and helpful change from "the Hub," both to him and the cause. But the course he shall pursue in his domestic and social life is hardly a legitimate theme for journalistic mention. Whether or not he will receive negroes "openly at his home and board" is his own matter. As a life-long friend of the colored people, desirous of their Christian education and elevation, and with only words of approval for every step of their progress and for the provisions made for them by friends in the North or South, we regret this unwise thirsting to the front of the social equality question. That matter each individual has a right to determine for himself without suggestion or interference from anybody. Here is what the South-Western has to say:

The negroes at the General Conference accepted Mallahan as a compromise for a negro Bishop. There are about 3,000 negro Methodists of our church in this city, and about 12,000 followers out of a total population of 60,000, or members and followers equal to one-fourth of the entire population. There are about thirty-five white members of our church here; so it is easy to see that our resident Bishop will be largely the property of the negroes when he is at home. Like Drs. Newman and Harzert and their wives the negroes of New Orleans will expect Gilbert Haven's successor to receive them openly at his home and board. Nor will they be disappointed. Of course they would not expect this from others; but they do from William F. Mallahan, because he is a self-confessed believer in the righteousness, propriety and expediency of such a course.

The Kentucky Conference had a loss of 873 members during the past year. The cause of that decrease should command anxious and prayerful inquiry. Wonder if there is not an excess of theological hairsplitting among the blue-grass brethren? Too much "eputing" is not helpful to evangelism.

Romish Losses Again.

In a recent issue we had something to say on this subject, quoting a significant admission by a distinguished Roman Catholic authority. Our papal neighbor, the Morning Star, refers to the article and grossly misrepresents it. By way of introduction to the extract published from the American Catholic Quarterly Review, we referred to a lady member of that church whose six children and numerous grandchildren all became staunch Protestants. Now, the Star says, we based our claim to Romish losses on that little "bit of experience," and ignored the damaging admission of the American Catholic Quarterly Review. The fairness of such journalism can only be discerned and approved by a Jesuitical conscience. The Star knew we based the statement on other testimony, but feared to give such wholesome truth to its deluded readers. That's the old Romish dodge and dogma. The people must be kept in ignorance or they can not be duped and manipulated. The Star thus concludes a ridiculous defense:

But even at seven millions, what consolation can the ADVOCATE find in the comparative figures? The French lady had six children; the Catholic Church has gained seven, if not ten, millions.

So, according to our Romish luminary, since the beginning of this century the Methodist Church has gained one family and the Romanists "seven, if not ten, millions." Wonder if there is one of the faithful so densely ignorant as not to resent such trifling! A Jesuitical conscience is proverbial for elasticity; but this feat is too shameless for successful deception.

A word as to Romish statistics. They count "our Catholic population," and not simply bona fide communicants. There are thousands who swell statistics and Romish pretensions who never go to mass and abhor the confessional. Still they are counted or, rather, estimated, for they have no accurate system for gathering reliable figures. They are a part of the "seven, if not ten, millions." Rather a wide margin for a guess—just three millions. Figures can not be relied upon that vary three millions in ten. Such an accountant would hardly get a position even in the office of the Morning Star, unless it be that of editorial writer. Now, if our cotemporary wants a fair discussion of this question, and is not afraid to turn on the light, he will in the next issue reproduce our extract from the American Catholic Quarterly Review. And when that is done we invite his attention to the following comparative statement compiled by a careful and trustworthy statistician. Please, neighbor, don't keep the veil of ignorance forever over the eyes of your people. Are you afraid of the truth? Then why suppress the admission of an able and more candid Catholic journal? Would it be asking too much for you to read, mark and inwardly digest (however disagreeable) these telling figures?

There are quite a number of excellent people who live in constant fear that this country is in terrible danger from the attacks of infidelity on the one hand, or Roman Catholicism on the other. It would repay them, and, perhaps, calm their nerves, to compare recently collected statistics as to religious progress and development. In the year 1800 the total population of the United States was 3,935,925. Of these there were Protestants, 1,277,052; Roman Catholics, 100,000; unclassified, 3,028,873. In 1850 out of a total population of 23,191,870, there were Protestants, 12,723,153; Roman Catholics, 1,614,000; unclassified, 8,854,718. In 1870, out of a population of 38,538,371, the Protestants numbered 24,041,486; Roman Catholics, 4,000,000; not classified, 9,916,885. And in the year 1880, out of a total population which had swelled to 50,152,869, there were 30,011,914 Protestants, 6,307,000 Roman Catholics; not classified, 7,758,952. Taking the percentage to the population the figures are:

	Protestants.	Rom. Cath.	Unclass'd.
1800,	32.4	2.5	65.1
1850,	54.7	7.0	38.3
1870,	62.4	10.4	27.2
1880,	60.0	12.6	27.4

The most devout and earnest Protestant will find little ground for alarm in these figures.

In a reference to Bishop McFetters' History of Methodism, the Richmond Christian Advocate pays this glowing tribute to the Bishop as a typical editor and masterly writer:

The book is not beyond what we counted on. All along we have believed, and so said, there was a blunder in New Orleans in turning that pen into a gavel. As in the tales of the Sultaness, Scheherazade, there was a genie in the ink-bottle the General Conference sealed up. The words are full of "Bishop timber," but search is in vain for like tallest pine for the "mast of some great admiral" of the church press. Never did a Krupp and iron sit so turret to the shore, and set it up as a pile-driver "to fix the appointments of the preachers." Now, that it has been taken out of its routine and dusty groove as a steel nail, and swung again to a port-hole, its old superiority in the true field of its great and giant powers is seen of all men.

—Bishop Parker reached home on Friday, last, for a few days' rest after attending his Annual Conference in Missouri.

—Centenary offerings secured, this year, in the St. Louis Conference are something over $40,000.

—The last Nashville Advocate reports Centenary (thank-offerings thus far to the amount of $261,705).

—Bishop William Taylor has gone to California to pay his family a farewell visit before sailing for Africa.

—Bishop Wilson is reported out of danger; for which cheerful tidings thousands will give praise to the Most High.

—Prof. Henry Tutwiler, a distinguished Methodist educator of Alabama, died at Green Springs, in that State, September 24.

—It is announced that the revision of the Old Testament is now ready for the press, but will not be out before the first of May.

—Dr. Kelley says the Western Conference has paid up its missionary assessments in full, with a good increase in membership.

—Francis Scott Key, author of "Star Spangled Banner," is to have a $60,000 monument erected in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco.

—Dr. J. B. Walker, presiding elder of the New Orleans district, is supplying the Carondelet Street pulpit, since the transfer of Dr. Hill to St. Louis.

—The Anglo-Chinese University has been finished, and is filled with students—more than twenty of whom are applicants for church membership.

—Dr. John Massey, writing from Tuskegee, Ala., says: "The Alabama Conference Female College has just had its most prosperous opening since the war."

—Bishop McFetters announces the postponement of the North-west Texas Conference one day—from Wednesday, November 5, to Thursday, November 6.

—Our late confere of the Western Christian Advocate, Rev. Dr. Francis H. Hoyt, has re-entered the pastoral service. At the recent session of the North Ohio Conference he was appointed presiding elder of the Cleveland district.

—Rev. Dr. D. D. Whedon, the venerable ex-editor of the Northern Methodist Quarterly Review, whose death has been expected any day for months, is improving and may be able yet to do much literary work.

—A Jewish Rabbi is reported as saying that "Unitarianism is culture with a slight flavor of Christianity." The learned Israelite ought to know, for Reformed Judaism and Unitarianism are at one, with a manifest tendency to infidelity.

—The prohibitionists of Louisiana have published a full electoral ticket. We have not favored making this a presidential question, but have no doubt, on account of the drift from the old parties, that the ticket will command considerable support.

—Mrs. Patterson, the heroic wife of Dr. W. M. Patterson, our missionary in Mexico, and her three children, have returned to her father's home in Memphis, Tenn., for a season of rest and recuperation. Her health has not been good for some months.

—Rev. T. B. White, of Albany, Oregon, writes as he expects to attend the Centenary Conference, at Baltimore; visit the Exposition, in New Orleans; his relatives in Louisiana and the Annual Conference, at Minden. A warm welcome awaits him from friends, relatives and Conference comrades.

—The venerable Dr. J. M. Trimble, of the Ohio Conference, attended the recent session of the Cincinnati Conference, and, on being introduced by Bishop Merrill, said: "I licensed your Bishop to preach and introduced him into the Conference, and I may say I have had him under my wing ever since. I helped make him editor and I helped make him Bishop."

—We had the pleasure of spending an afternoon at Brookhaven, last week, and of looking in upon Whitworth College. The opening excels any year of its remarkably successful history. There are over 120 in the boarding department thus far and an enrolled attendance of more than 200. In a week or two the new college building will be formally opened. Dr. Johnson and his corps of co-laborers have their hands and hearts full of work.

—The New York Episcopal Convention took high ground on the conduct of church fairs, and condemned in strong terms the sale of various articles "by disposing of chances" to different individuals. A lay brother objected to such deliverance as extra-legislative; but Bishop Potter put the motion, and it was carried by a large majority. If church lotteries could be suppressed, we might hope to see the death of such a giant iniquity as the Louisiana Lottery.

—The Unitarians of the United States have just held their biennial convention at Saratoga. The sessions were held in the Methodist Church—strange to say. We do not believe that the church should be tendered to those who deny the cardinal doctrine of evangelical Christianity. The New York Observer explains it on the ground of the church's financial weakness and its desire to gather in a little rent-money. Alas! it even that be so.

—We have seen a circular list of Democratic appointments for public speaking in the third congressional district in this State. Three of these appointments are on the Sabbath. For the honor of American citizenship and the integrity of a Christian conscience we hope Mr. Gay, the congressional nominee, will not be seen on the platform on the Sabbath day. If so, he may be assured that some votes will be very properly withheld from him.

—The late N. S. Elliston, of Versailles, Ky., left by bequest to the church property amounting to $1,500, to be appropriated as follows: $300 to send the Nashville Advocate to indigent persons, and the remainder to be divided equally between the missionary, church extension and educational funds. Joshua Mitchell, of Hannibal, Mo., bequeathed $1,000 to the widows and orphans' fund of the Missouri Conference, and $500 to missions, to be appropriated as the General Conference may direct.

—A correspondent sends to a London paper the following account of a remarkable avary connected with a provincial church: "Some years ago, at Faversham, in Kent, the Congregational Church was located in Partridge lane. The minister's name was Rook; his deacons were Cuckoo and Sparrow; a Sunday-school teacher was Martin; one of the wardens of the parish church was Goldfinch; the headmaster of the public school was Robin; his assistant was Drake; a leading townsman was Crow, and a police officer was Fowler."

—The Holston Methodist says that "Methodism took the country and Presbyterianism took the towns in this section; but now the country people are filling up the towns and carrying their Methodism with them." Just so. And the church that reaches the poorer and middle classes of one generation will command the wealth and influence of the next. Methodism is marvelously flexible in its adaptability to city and country, to station and crowd, and to rich and poor. Its achievements of a hundred years authenticate its Divine commission.

—The Alabama Advocate reports the new Methodist Church at Birmingham as completed at a cost of about twenty-two or twenty-five thousand dollars. Dr. McFerrin will dedicate it on the eighteenth instant. A second church at South Birmingham is also under contract and will be ready for occupancy next year. And another, one and a half miles north of the city, has been erected. Presiding Elder Wilson, of that district, will report at Conference eighteen new churches built this Centenary year. He is a veritable incarnation of the church extension idea.

—Some persons with more presumption than perception call Methodists "common people." And some weak little souls in the church are affected by it and seek another communion in order to get into society. For all such an exchange thus refers to the lay delegation at the Louisville Conference. "Among the number were the present lieutenant-governor of the State, an ex-United States Senator, a State Senator, and several men prominent as jurists, bankers and business men." And why not? We give the people a pure gospel, and, of course, the church embraces all classes without a special mission to either.

—We spent an afternoon hour recently at the Exposition grounds, and noted the marvelous progress made on the buildings since our visit a few weeks before. The main building, which covers over thirty-two acres, is about finished and will very soon be ready for exhibitors. The horticultural hall—a beautiful piece of architecture—has been completed and the keys turned over. The United States building is going up like magic, while the grounds are being laid off in walks, artificial lakes, etc. It is a stupendous enterprise; but under the wise administration of its Director General everything has moved forward with all possible dispatch. The buildings will all be in readiness by the first of December, and the early visitors will get the full worth of their money.

MISCELLANEOUS

COTTON.

Dr. W. Haddock, of Pine Hill, A.

J. C. BROSAN

NEW ORLEANS

and good man, C. C. D.

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 43.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1473.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Single copies, 10 cents.

Advertisements, 10 cents per line.

For the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FRANK B. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GOSFORD,
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. R. GALLOWAY, D. D.,
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THE SILENCE OF LIFE.

By MARIANNE TADINISCH.
Neither a song nor a sigh,
Neither laughter nor tears;
Calmy the days do by
And make, ere we know, the years.
How shall we count the time
That has nothing to mark its flight,
That is not sad or sublime,
That is scarcely dark or light?
What are the years that thus
Silently steal away?
What can they do for us
That a word should bid them stay?
Oh, better than strife or strife,
Better than strife or strife,
Better than pain and joy,
Sometimes is the shade and hush.
For the weary amid the fight,
And the weak amid the strong,
Is good to come from the light
And away from the gladdest song.
For the silence means the rest,
And the quiet means the prayer;
And the weary and oppressed
May cast away their care.
And live at the feet of God
In the peace and repose till at length,
As flowers spring up from the sod,
To the soul come joy and strength.

Letter from China.

(Continued.)
MR. EDITOR: For some days after returning from the city to our mission home I applied myself to the study of this difficult language. I found that Chinese characters have a multiplicity of sound and meaning, which made it exceedingly difficult to remember them from one day to another. I began the study of the colloquial language of this part of the Kiang-su Province. I found it to be totally different in sound from the written or printed language. The character in which the books are written have sounds peculiar to themselves, and so different from the spoken language as to render it unintelligible both to the common people and to the learned in China when read aloud, unless seen. The character must be seen to be understood, even to the learned. To read a Chinese book in classical style to a Chinese audience would be almost as unintelligible as if Greek were read to them. My teacher was exceedingly patient in giving me instruction in the language, and would correct my pronunciation many times in the very best mood possible. What I learned one day seemed to have gone from me the next, and this continued for some time. The shape of the characters are in the course of time, photographically impressed upon the mind, and when once thus fixed they can rarely ever be forgotten. This is the case with all Chinese in learning their classics. The text and commentary are committed to memory, which with some it requires twenty years of hard study. With others it requires a life-long study to commit the whole of the classics.

After our arrival in Shanghai we had many missionaries to call on us and welcome us to this field of labor, and we were glad to know there were so many.

lery and the noise of the bells passing near us, we found it impossible to sleep with any degree of comfort. A free fight also occurred among the nations in a tea-shop near by, and their yells were almost unearthly increasing the confusion around us. Their noise and their actions as seen and heard from our room were sufficient proof that we were in a heathen land. I could only look on in perfect wonder and astonishment.

On October 10 a number of officers from the United States "Vandalia" visited the city, and while there they were invited to dine with the chief officers of the insurgents. While they were partaking of the fourteenth course a great noise was heard without, and soon the report of several guns was heard when a ball came near enough to one of the officers of the "Vandalia" to take off a part of one of his epaulets. I did not hear anything further, and can not tell if there was any truth in the report or not. It is quite likely that some of the body-guard of the insurgents were fighting among themselves when guns were fired. We did not feel altogether safe so near the city and between the contending armies, so that we made all haste to complete our mission-house in the American settlement to which we were soon to move. Bro. Cunningham commenced to build this before we arrived. It is at Hong-ker, or "Rainbow Mouth," in the American settlement. It takes its name from a small canal in the neighborhood. There were no roads in the American settlement when we arrived, only narrow paths and very crooked. There were no bridges across the Soochow Creek, (or Woonung Creek, as it is called by the natives,) and we had to cross in ferryboats. Now there are six fine bridges across this stream. When Dr. Taylor and Jenkins arrived they lived in Chinese houses at the east gate of the city. When we arrived there were but two wide streets in the English settlement in Shanghai: the Nankin and the Foochow roads. Chinese houses were built very compact and the streets were exceedingly narrow. The brethren found it very trying for their families to live in Chinese houses; so they bought land and built foreign houses in the settlement as soon as they could. At the time of our arrival we did not feel altogether safe in the mission-house, being so near the city wall.

The men who had taken the city were a lawless band of robbers, and we did not expect any good from them. Bands of outlaws were constantly prowling about the settlement at night, looting and plundering the houses of the natives of everything they could put their hands on, and it was not safe for us to be out at night alone and unprotected. Sometimes they were insurgents from the city; at other times it would be imperial soldiers from their camps.

Not quite a year before we reached Shanghai six insurgents came from the city and began to plunder a boat in the canal near Dr. Taylor's house. As soon as Dr. Taylor heard of it he went out and called on them to desist, but they refused. He began then to pelt them with stones, and though they were all heavily armed they fled across the canal in the opposite direction from where Dr. Taylor was. In order to get to the city they had to cross a small bridge near Dr. Taylor's house, and they must pass immediately by the gate of the mission compound. Dr. Taylor rushed into his study, seized an unloaded pistol and hastened to the gate just as the robbers were passing. He pointed the pistol at them and ordered them to halt. They were all heavily armed. Four of them bolted, but two halted, one of whom raised his sword to strike when Dr. Taylor pointed his unloaded pistol at him and demanded their swords. They gave them up at once, and he took from them their long red sashes and a yellow flag, and after giving them some good advice let them go. Dr. Taylor, thinking they would return with others to molest him, reported to the United States consul and asked for some protection. The consul applied at once to the commanding officer of the United States man-of-war, who sent a strong guard to protect Dr. Taylor and to guard the bridge near his house. For two days no one made their appearance from the city, and on the third day the guard was reduced to two men. In the afternoon of the third day some two thousand insurgent troops came out of the city heavily armed and marched toward Dr. Taylor's house. As soon as he discovered them coming he placed himself in front of the gate and motioned to them to halt. They took no notice of his demand, but came on with beating of gongs and music, while many others waved their flags in defiance. When they had approached within two hundred yards of the mission home, Dr. Taylor called out to his guard of two marines, and with fixed bayonets stationed them in front of the gate immediately in the path the insurgents expected to pass. As soon as they discovered the guard of marines there was an immediate halt. Then the leaders came a little forward and said: "We only wish to cross the bridge on our way to a village two miles distant." Dr. Taylor informed them that he had orders to guard this bridge, to allow no armed forces to cross it, and he intended carrying out these orders. After some further conversation, and finding Dr. Taylor and his guard firm in their determination, they turned off in another direction, crossed the canal, went to the village, and having plundered the homes of the natives they burned the village and returned to the city after dark with torches and beating of gongs. About the time we arrived the imperialists and insurgents were ready for any kind of lawless and barbarous work. The imperialists were daily drawing their lines nearer the city, throwing up breastworks and firing upon the city at all hours. The insurgents were getting desperate, for their supplies of provision were getting less every day and their prospect of escape more hopeless. In less than a week after I had entered the city, it was considered dangerous to attempt to go in, for there was almost continued firing from imperial batteries. But I will tell you more of our situation in my next letter.

Yours in Christian fellowship,
J. W. LAMBETH.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Sept. 1, 1884.

The Love-Feast and Experience Meeting.

MR. EDITOR: No truly converted and well-informed member of our church will deny the Scriptural character and great usefulness of our love-feasts and experience meetings when properly conducted. But I have long thought that they need some revision, especially in the speaking department, to make them as pleasant and profitable as they might be. Some of us—especially we preachers, both itinerant and local—speak too often and too long to allow others to testify what the Lord has done for their souls. Sometimes a layman, with good colloquial gifts, will get the floor, and, with irrelevant thoughts, will consume more time than it would take a dozen warm-hearted Christians simply to tell what the Savior has done for them. And sometimes persons, not remarkable for the depth and uniformity of their piety, or the consistency of their Christian character, will take advantage of our experience meetings on camp meeting occasions, to tell in long drawn and boastful language what they have done, are now doing and intend hereafter to do for the Lord, but have little to say about what the Lord has done for them. Such is the want of confidence in their loyalty to Christ and his cause that their harangues have rather a chilling effect on the meeting. Away back in the dim past, that interesting little man that you younger preachers loved to call Uncle Tommie Owens and this writer incidentally met at a quarterly love-feast held by the presiding elder. The presiding elder and two other preachers consumed all the allotted time in detailing their personal experience. Uncle Tommie said to me—neither of us having spoken—that it only took three preachers to consume all the time the Discipline allots to a love-feast. I have seen the truth of his remark verified, in whole or in part, in many instances. I have no remedies to propose for the evils complained of except the thoughtful exercise of a little common sense. Let the leader of the meeting call to mind the fact that our people understand what a love-feast or experience meeting is intended for, and that he need spend no time in detailing their history or the manner of holding them. Let there be no long lessons read, no long hymns sung, no long prayer and no long exhortation to all on the obligation of speaking. After the speaking begins let there be no singing of a stanza or chorus at the end of each testimony. Let the leader see that he neither sings himself nor permits others to volunteer in throwing in a verse or two here and there. I have often known time enough consumed by this voluntary, and often irrelevant, singing to prevent a dozen or more from speaking. As the preachers are sometimes complained of, especially at the series of experience meetings we have daily at our camp and protracted meetings, for speaking too long and too often, it has been suggested that it might be well to set apart one or two days for them to deliver their testimony and let the remaining days be set apart exclusively for the lay members. Some plan embracing this suggestion may be necessary, but it ought not to be. Our preachers ought to have more prudent magnanimity than to monopolize so much of the time allotted for an experience meeting as to prevent the humblest lay members from testifying to what the Lord has done for their souls. The preachers in charge, by prudent and loving advice, can no doubt, do much in preventing what is annoying and hurtful at our select meetings for Christian testimony. "Let all your things be done with charity."

J. G. JONES.

HAZLECAST, MISS.

The Endowment of Whitworth Female College.

In the ADVOCATE of the 25th ult., Dr. H. F. Johnson outlines a plan for the endowment of Whitworth College. The plan is such as would be expected from its distinguished source—it is feasible. It will meet the wishes and condition of a large number of friends and patrons of the college in Louisiana and Mississippi. The section to which it will immediately appeal is increasing in wealth and population. Many new enterprises have been started and others projected, new commercial avenues opened, an improved system of farming inaugurated, and the general condition of the country is more settled and prosperous than at any period since the war. As the people increase in wealth, there will be a corresponding inclination to encourage and support by patronage and endowment the many excellent schools and colleges in those States. Very few persons as yet are able to give at one time one hundred or one thousand dollars to the endowment of a college, but very many can and, I believe, will give one, of those amounts in ten equal annual installments without interest.

The writer has had the very best opportunities for investigating the working and condition of Whitworth College, and he gives the opinion that no school is more worthy the support of the church. The curriculum is comprehensive and practical, the instruction thorough, the men varied and wholesome, the health carefully guarded, and the boarding department, under the control of its accomplished matron, cheerful and homelike. The teachers are carefully selected, and their work passes under critical review. The practical is emphasized.

Dr. Johnson has added two buildings at a cost of over thirty-five thousand dollars, since he assumed the presidency, and has given them to the church for the use of the college, the last a centennial gift of $20,000. Let the church now respond liberally to the circular which the Doctor will soon issue, and give the college a handsome endowment. The alumnæ could manifest appreciation of alma mater by endowing the president's chair. There are now over two hundred graduates, and ten dollars from each family for ten years would be a good endowment for one chair.

This is written by one who is not in any way connected with the college, but as a professional teacher esteems highly the work done at Whitworth College, and desires to see it become the Wellesly of the South.

W. J. S.

SAN SABA, TEXAS.

Mansfield Female College.

MR. EDITOR: Our work began on September 10, under very depressing conditions. The cotton crop of the surrounding parishes was well nigh destroyed first by flood then by drought. Some of the teachers we had engaged were necessarily released, but we began with a corps of instruction qualified for each and every department, to-wit, a president, a professor and two ladies in the literary department, two excellent music teachers, and an accomplished teacher in art. We have now fifty-six pupils, twenty-seven in music, twelve in art, about twenty in Latin and ten or twelve in French. The entire school receives instruction in vocal music and in writing every day, alternately, and by lectures and experiments in the physical sciences once a week. An excellent moral and religious influence pervades the school, evidenced by the fact that not a single demerit had been recorded at the close of the first month. The death of one of the resident pupils in the full assurance of the Christian faith seems to have made a salutary impression on the minds of all her school-mates. Many of the new pupils are members of the church, and all seem attending to the duties of religion. Thus while desolation and poverty envelope the surrounding country, and the shadow of death has fallen upon the college community, yet the internal spirit and work of the institution is better than last year by many degrees. And now permit me to say a word to the preachers and members of the church in the Louisiana Conference. Brethren, you have here an institution of learning and of religion that you should be proud of. No want of judgment or skill was displayed in the selection of the site, or in the erection and furnishing of the buildings. We have here everything necessary for the thorough education and training of the Methodist girls in Louisiana who can even be induced to leave home in order to obtain a collegiate education. Shall the college be sustained or not? This is a pertinent question. Where shall we go to obtain better facilities? Where can this important work be done with so great economy and benefit to the pupils themselves as within the bounds of our own conference? How can the church afford to let this college languish, which has been so admirably located, so well established, and so wisely administered? It has in its commodious halls, ample room for double or treble its present attendance. It is accessible by railroad to every portion of the State and of Texas. It owes not a dollar in the world and is open and ready to impart its rich instructions to all our daughters. Only the poverty of the surrounding country, now oppressed by financial embarrassment, prevented its having a much larger local patronage. Will not the preachers in other portions of the State, not thus afflicted send up their contingent of pupils to make up the deficiency? We thank brethren, not a few, who have interested themselves and sent us patronage. Will not every preacher try to find at least one more pupil for this college? Our Baptist friends, notwithstanding the hard times, have gathered together more than one hundred boarding pupils, male and female, at their college in Keachie, but a few miles from us, and they are compelled to construct more and larger buildings to accommodate their increasing numbers. Who does not foresee the immense advantage the Baptist churches are to derive from this educated element, soon to be returned, like leaven, to the mass of their membership? Are the Methodist people less able to educate their children than the Baptists? Are they more indifferent to the advantages of church schools and religious education? It is true they have at Keachie as many young men as they have young ladies. But even making allowance for this difference there is no reason why Keachie should so far outnumber Mansfield, when both are in the same parish, and both look to the same field for support.

And what is more they are educating many of the poor. Young men go there and work out their tuition in the college. Collections are taken up for the benefit of young ministers being educated in the college, and soon all the country will feel the effect of this wise benevolence. The college at Mansfield is trying also to extend its benefits to poor young ladies who are ambitious to obtain an education. Several of these received all the advantages of the college course last year to be repaid by their own exertions hereafter. Several others are being educated this year on the same terms. A number of applications are now before us awaiting an answer for help of this kind. Who will add us in this noble undertaking? Brethren, give us the ten thousand dollars promised in the Centennial collection, and we can help one hundred pupils every year sufficiently to enable them to go through the college course. Are our preachers taking up this collection in every place? Are we all alive to its importance? Let the Centennial pass and it will be long before we have such another motive to appeal to. If the Methodists of the Louisiana Conference will raise the sum of ten thousand dollars, the president of the college pledges himself to add five hundred dollars to it of the fruits of his own labor, and for a smaller sum in like proportion.

F. N. GRACK.

OCTOBER 16, 1884.

The Sabbath in Toronto.

The Rev. W. F. Crafts sketches a picture of the Sabbath in Toronto, Canada, that almost makes us envy our brethren of Her Majesty's Dominion. What an honor to New Orleans if she would emulate such an example! But amid this general disregard of the Lord's day, each individual Christian must be persuaded in his own mind and keep a vigilant eye upon his own conduct. Every true Sabbath observer is a protest against, and rebuke to, thoughtless desecration. Read the following:

The only stores open on the Sabbath there are those for selling milk and medicine, and these only an hour or two in the morning and evening; the drug stores not being allowed, as they are in some other places, to do business as universal providers, selling confectionery, cigars, drinks, and knock-knock while even the druggists and milkmen have got most of their day for rest. The telegraph employees have also their Sabbath for home and thought, one man only being kept at the central office for emergencies. Postal employees rest from Saturday at seven o'clock till Monday at six o'clock, during which time, also, the railroads have a rest. There are no Sunday newspapers, no local trains, no theaters, only hotel barbers work and those in the forenoon. The same is true of the boot-blacks. Almost the only difference between the Toronto Sabbath and the ideal Sabbath is the fact that there are three through trains, caused by American competition, and an occasional steamboat excursion, which is promptly punished by the courts. Even the coachmen of the rich generally have the Sabbath for rest, a habit very generally prevailing of walking to the churches, which are attended by nearly all the people, old and young. The people like their quiet, restful Sunday, and if it were put to vote, very few would ask a change, the whole community having adjusted itself to a state of things which allows almost the entire population to spend the Sabbath in rest and get seven days' pay for six days' work rather than the American fashion of doing seven seven days' work for six days' pay."

And if our fellowship below
In Jesus be so sweet,
What heights of rapture shall we know
When round his throne we meet.

—Behind the snowy loaf is the mill-wheel, behind the mill the wheat-field, on the wheat-field falls the sunlight, above is God.—J. L. Russell.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1884.

THE SON OF MAN HATH NOT WHERE TO LAY HIS HEAD.

BY A. A. J.

(Matthew VIII, 20.)

"Not where to lay his head?" For man a home
With vine and fig tree for his sheltering dome;
For him whose hand had earth's foundation laid
And the broad heaven with wondrous skill had made.

Whom inverted angels watched with hovering wings
Ready to serve, while gladly worshiping;
For him who gave the tiny birds their nest,
And the wild bee at its lair, no place of rest.

Empty of riches infinite, his way
Built of the sturdy wind, and waves of sea;
Yet for him all that nature wrought
The ample purpose of his steadfast thought,
While all the cool of night he saw,
To save the lost and magnify God's law.

Well he is called "the Wonderful,"
To hear from him, his creature, scorn and shame;
To find in his own words no place to die
Save a dark cross between the earth and sky.

"Not where to lay his head?" O, soul of mine,
Thine widely wide purpose is the quest divine;
With truth's pure and holy light offering wake,
The cool, vast sea of slumber break.
For the rich perfume of the morning and head,
Nay, more, shall I find thee to his war-age lead,
And give thee place, though of his guests the least.
If thou on earth the homeless Christ wilt seek,
He will wait there before his Father's throne.

—Wachman.

Retrospective.

FIFTEENTH PAPER.

How wonderfully diversified is life's experience! It has its bitter as well as its sweets. If we occasionally have pain, we more frequently have ease. We sometimes sigh for the absence of a desired blessing; but how many do we really enjoy? While a few may look upon us with scorn and contempt, there are far more who meet us with a smile. We may meet with here and there one who persecutes; but there are many, very many, who esteem us more highly than we really deserve. While we meet with some things along life's pilgrimage to discourage us as we journey toward heaven, how much stronger is the attraction to the skies? We have often been in perplexity and distress and indulged fear for our safety, while an unseen hand has guided and made a way for our escape.

One of the hardest cases the writer ever met with was an old man, nearing, as I suppose, his fourscore years, who lived in the bounds of the Wilkinson circuit. It seems that, with or without cause, he had taken a dislike to preachers and doctors. He believed the former were all hypocrites and the latter prostituted their profession by killing off the people at exorbitant charges. All the use he had for the one or the other was to insult or abuse them whenever they came in his way. He had acquired through his long life considerable property, and had grown gray with age and in sin. I was told that I would do well not to come in contact with him—especially if he found out I was a preacher. For a long time I avoided him; but one hot, sultry summer day, after riding several miles, I became very thirsty by the time I reached his residence. I concluded I would just step in and politely ask for a drink of water; then take my leave without engaging in conversation. (He was living with his servants; no white persons about the premises except himself.) He gave me a drink of cool water, for which he received my thanks. I was about taking my leave when he inquired: "Where are you from, sir?" I told him I was from Mr. D.'s that morning. He then inquired: "What is your business in this country?" I concluded not to try to appease him, deny my colors nor flatter him to gain his favor. I told him my business was to preach the gospel. Said he: "Hell is full of your sort, and when you get there you will not get a good breeze nor find as good water as you have here." I told him the place he mentioned I was trying to avoid. Said he: "You will not do, sir. You are going around preaching, but money makes the mare go." I asked him how much money he had given preachers. "Not a cent," said he. "Then," said I, "it is none of your business what others give." I further told him that he must be given to hardness of heart and reproach of mind to believe as he said he did. "You seem to think that all people professing religion are hypocrites. This is not so. There are good people among them. Enjoy for a little while your good water, for, like you we read about, you may call to vain for water to cool your tongue; but it will not be given you." I further told him I feared the devil had a bill of sale of him. Much more was said by him, which is too profane to repeat. Suffice it to say that, after answering him something to his folly, I left him as he was in his own conceit. I said to him that our first interview was not pleasant and I would take my leave. O all the hard cases I have ever met with I chronicle this as the hardest. I forbear giving his name, for, like other hard cases, this man had relatives who ranked among the best citizens of the county, and who heartily disapproved of his course.

In my next I will speak of persons and events I deeply love to cherish in my memory, and then take my leave of Wilkinson circuit and furnish a few dots for Cole's Creek circuit, my next appointment. DANIEL MORSE.

MARSHALL, TEXAS.

A Woman at Work—An Earnest Appeal.

MR. EDITOR: Agreeably to promise, I give you an account of the visit to Rehobeth.

We had a delightful meeting; the missionary spirit quite observable. Bros. Campbell and Skipper secured the names of twenty-one adults for membership, with the promise of more after organization. A threatened rain prevented further proceedings. Bro. Campbell has an appointment for preaching there next Sunday, and will then organize a woman's and juveniles' auxiliary, and get subscribers for the W. M. A.

There are twelve or fifteen young converts in Rehobeth Church who pray in public. One lady of the Sunday-school has her class to meet at her house, at some appointed time during the week, for a prayer meeting, and for her to give assistance in studying the lesson. Nine of the twelve who attend lead in prayer. Some of Bro. Campbell's children are among the number. She has a missionary heart, too. That you would very reasonably infer.

I append some extracts of my appeal: "Hearing of your zeal in church work, am very much encouraged to be with you and open another door of usefulness, which, instead of detracting from work in which you are at present engaged, adds the auspicious cheerfulness, and so beautiful the life that the reflected lustre renders woman just what the Lord wished Christians to be—a bright and shining light—thus evidencing the possession of a Christly spirit—one ever ready to do the Lord's bidding. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven."

"Labor sweetens rest. What a comforting refreshment, spiritually, is ours when on the Lord's day a retrospection of the week previous shows to us that we have labored for the advancement of Christ's kingdom—have worked in some portion of the Lord's vineyard! Surely a sweet rest day! The Divine image, resting within the bosom of the most obscure of our race, needs but a heart overflowing and responsive with the love of God to give life and impulse to its own reflected image, for 'God is love.'"

"Away with that seemingly powerful weapon of the evil one, 'Charity begins at home.' The rays of Divine love speed their flight over limitless space with such rapidity that home is everywhere—not content to stop anywhere, as exemplified by the utterance of John Wesley—'The world is my parish.' That man to whom the entire world should give homage—one of whom the ages to come will unfold increasing appreciation—to him I can not refrain from paying a tribute, particularly at this time, as women was a potent factor in the Lord's hands to train and guide him. Does not the Spirit of God find a kindred spirit, though it be slumbering, in every clime where man is found, which the pulsations of the warm heart of congeniality unearths and causes such an upheaval that ain no longer enslave? But it is made a living spirit, and ready to plume itself for onward flight. What uncaged bird but that wishes to try its pinions!

"It is the large-hearted who undertake foreign work, and unconsciously, as it were, the work of home is then entered into with an enthusiasm and zeal that will be observed by all. No department is neglected. She fills her position in the family, the social circle, the home charities more acceptably, for religion has a wonderful transforming power. Let that woman talk whose tongue is attuned to the praise of God; no discordant notes, but those breathing a sweetness and extracting loving echoes from hearts made congenial by the angelic touch of Christian love."

"Then let us, as women, step higher and keep pace with this aggressive age. Christian woman's power for good is remarkable. Let us enter this work, which I consider more conducive to the highest standard of religion than all else. Broad and expansive as it is, its reflex influence is correspondingly broad and expansive, and gives such an impetus that we never rest still, but always aspire for something nobler and yet beyond, never content with our attainments until the pinnacle is reached and the sweet haven of rest is gained in the 'home beyond.' To fully realize this truth and the great happiness to be derived from it we must try it at least this centennial year, when great efforts are being made in all departments of church work. Look at the call for 'willing hearts' in the preparations for the tabernacle in the wilderness. They had but a scanty store of worldly possessions from which to draw; but note the noble and generous response. More was brought than was needed. The pious women, who made with their own hands curtains for the tabernacle, were as acceptable to God as the gold and silver or precious stones given by the rulers. Just think what the Lord in his goodness has blessed us with! Think of the amount of your indebtedness for the rich legacy—the result of the work of missionaries."

"We read the Bible they went to sow Broadcast a hundred years ago."

"Considering the advantages and numbers of to-day, is not more required of us than those of former times? What are we sowing for others to reap a hundred years from hence? There never was a time more conducive to self-culture and improvement than the present. How unwise in us not to reap all the good! God has committed his word to us, and said: 'Freely ye have received; freely give.'

"Opportunities to do good imply corresponding obligations. It seems the heathen world is in breathless waiting for just one touch of Divine love. In the Bible—that casket of God's own breathing—lies one sparkling gem—Jesus Christ, the Savior of the world.' Shall we be honored as the bearers of that electric, all-inspiring message which shall cause the angels to pause for praise and for rejoicing over not only one sinner that repenteth, but many? 'How beautiful is earth when it can image heaven! When in the quiet hour of loneliness, spent in heart searching and recounting the innumerable benefits you are receiving, does there not arise one gentle, unbidden heart question, What can I do for one who giveth so freely, so lovingly? Heaven answers, Go ye into the world and preach my gospel to every creature.'"

"Just to think of Susannah Wesley's great missionary heart! When her sons, John and Charles, were fired with missionary zeal they approached the highly gifted and accomplished mother for advice. Her reply was: 'Had I twenty sons, I would rejoice that they were so employed, though I should never see them again.' Oh! for many such mothers to train children and yield a like response to the moving of the hearts of daughters and sons! The blessings attending the efforts of Christian women all through the pages of sacred history are evidences of God's approval. If we will pause and consider the responsibility resting upon women, we would be overwhelmed and greatly discouraged but for the assurance, 'Lo! I am with you always.' We know all good cometh from the Giver of every good and perfect gift, and that frail and delicate instrument in the hands of a skillful operator accomplish wonders. Truly wisdom is needful to discriminate amid the multiplicity of cares; but, if we will begin to work with prayerful hearts, we will be guided by him who guides unerringly. Cast thy burdens upon the Lord. The grand maxim of earlier Methodism—'All at it, and always at it'—should be repeated at the present day. There is an imperative call for all. Those overwhelmed with home cares can pray and make some effort, for there are many who have labored quietly and were 'unknown to fame' that are precious jewels in the crown of Jesus." What we have already done reveals openings for more agents."

"How saddening the thought to those of us who are growing old if the better part of our lives have been spent in the service of the evil one! Let us redeem the time allotted to us, and make amends for past neglect by entering into the field of contest with redoubled energy, remembering in Napoleon's contest what grand achievements were won in a very short space of time. When victory was trembling in the balance one grand, solid phalanx moved on, and a nation was born in a day. And when the youthful David, the Lord's trained warrior, with only a moment's warning, moved onward and spread dismay so quickly against such odds in human strength and against an enemy, all paupers with such defensive armor as human ingenuity could devise. When the Lord is ready, the nations waiting, only one touch of the Divine Spirit seems needful to set the world aglow with one broad expanse of heavenly light; and, lo! the banners of Christ's vicarious triumphphant and the world is gained for Christ. 'For the dawn of the dawn is with the wings of invincible things; and the world is awakened.'"

"I have a great admiration for the Memorial Fund. Those who have treasures that belonged to loved ones who are dead feel that they are too sacred to be spent. Here is a place of deposit."

"Hoarded treasures have too much the appearance of idols. They are doing no one any good, and may be the occasion of the Lord's withholding a great deal of good from the possessor. 'Withhold not good from them to whom it is due when it is in the power of thine hand to do it.' They belong to the Lord and should be in his treasury. They are like the buried talent, which the Lord at his coming oust not obtain with usury. 'But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust do corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal; for where your treasure is there will your heart be also.' I heard of one person who said he felt the need of great haste in giving, for fear the Lord would find him with hoarded treasure."

After hearing this read, on one occasion, a lady came up weeping, and said, 'I have at last found a place of deposit for a gold coin in my possession.'
MRS. E. D. JONES, Rec. Sec.
CARLETON, MISS., Oct. 1, 1884.

The Tongue.

Anatomically considered the tongue is a very lubricate and beautifully constructed organ. Being peculiarly composed of erectile tissue and abundantly supplied with nerve it is adapted to the wonderful demands of the physical wants this sense can be so educated and developed as to discriminate between the nicest shades of difference existing in savory particles. But it is with the articulate part of this interesting little organ that we are most concerned. The Apostle James thought it important enough to write a chapter on it for our instruction. (James iii.) As the tongue is capable of doing great good so, also, is it capable of doing great evil. With it God is praised, and with it our neighbor is slandered. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." The art of talking is valued very highly by a great many people, and the fluent talker is much sought after. Some seem to think it a high attainment to be enabled to keep up a continual palaver. Alas! for such they will be held accountable for their words. The Rev. John Newton said, in his memoirs, he never entered a fashionable circle without misgiving, and seldom came out without suffering spiritual loss. It is the Christian's duty to be courteous and pleasant to all, but he that bridleth not his tongue "his man's religion is vain." (James i, 26.)

How often is this unruly member, which was made to praise the great Redeemer's name, engaged in backbiting our neighbor! Speaking vain and idle words instead of "showing out of a good conversation our works with meekness of wisdom." "Behold, how great a matter a little fire kindleth! And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity; so is the tongue among our members that it defileth the whole body and it setteth on fire the course of nature, and it is set on fire of hell." Although all manner of baseness can be tamed the tongue can no man tame. But there is One who is both able and willing to tame this unruly member. He it is who is able to save to the uttermost all who come unto him through Christ our Lord, and out of his abundant goodness and mercy to give unto us new hearts and put a new song in our mouth, even praises to his great name. Paul tells us that we are the temples of God. Wonderful thought! Now, if any man defile this temple, "him will God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, of which temple ye are." How very important, then, that we defile not the temple with the tongue; but strive to keep it pure and fit for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit.
E. A. P.
DECATUR, MISS., Oct. 5, 1884.

The Gift of Song.

The great Creator, in his infinite wisdom, sees fit to endow some of his creatures with talents vastly superior to those of their fellow-men. And it is their solemn duty to cultivate these talents so that they will produce manifold benefits to themselves and the circle of their influence. Not like the foolishly cautious man. Should they hide them in the upkin of reserve, where there is no opportunity of successful development; but they should put them in active operation; that they may be recognized by the surrounding world. Not to hide its light beneath the bushel measure of seclusion, but to let it shine forth in all its brilliancy, that its good effects may be felt wherever it falls on the pathway of man. Let those who have been so fortunately favored by the bestowal of any of the many varieties of talents, so use them that they will contribute to the peaceful happiness and advance every worthy endeavor of mankind in general, and not let them be dormant or wasteful through indolent neglect. Then we will see a new era of reform and prosperity throughout every branch of human society.

Cultivate talents of the intellect that it may be stored with useful knowledge to be imparted for the instruction of the ignorant. Talents of oratory that the erring and doubtful may be persuaded by forcible eloquence to pursue the right course of life. Talents of art that our beautiful world may be tastefully pictured to mankind. Talents of music that the souls of men may be touched by harmonious melodies. And of this last-named talent I wish to speak. God has most assuredly blessed those who have this enchanting gift. Whose soul is filled to overflowing with sweet harmonies. And how soon in life it is developed, even when a little child the music in one's nature is perceptible. As the childish voice hums some readily caught air, or performs on some simple instrument, we can easily recognize the peculiar genius. Instrumental music has, I know, a strong effect upon the human race. But the "gift of song," vocal harmonies, is vastly more effective in its winning persuasion of all. Its great influence on the human soul is shown in many different ways. The plaintive, home-like airs bring forth our domestic attachments, and endear them to our hearts, and, if absent from our loved ones, take us back to scenes that are ever cherished most fondly in our recollections, but it is needless for me to notice this. You all, my readers, know in your heart what "Home, Sweet Home" is. And songs that tell of our tender sentiments for one, who, though absent, is never forgotten. How they effect us! Makes us feel sad, I know; but it has the sweet pleasure of a joyful future meeting mingling with it. You remember the incident of the Crimean War, how, before a disastrous battle, the British soldiers, lying in the trenches, many awaiting death, began to sing of love, not of fame. How the tender feelings drew tears that flowed down the powder-stained cheeks! And that as they sang how:

"Each heart recalled a different name,
But all sang Annie Laurie."

The patriotic tune of a national hymn has power to arouse the mighty efforts of the warrior who is about to enter battle, and from his martial strains he will be fired with enthusiasm that will cause him to accomplish Herculean feats. But the "gift of song" may be exalted to the greatest benefit to mankind when it is raised in anthems of thanksgiving and praise to the great Jehovah. Then the soul's noblest sentiments are aroused. Then we feel most sensibly the merciful providence of the Creator. Then we are cognizant of his infinite majestic power, and we feel like raising our own voice to join the glad hosannas.

There are many, many hearts that have become so hardened by persistent wrong doing that they are steeled against the persuasive influence of the orator's eloquence, or the forcible reasoning of the logician's arguments. Still they are often melted to penitence by the sweet notes of a sacred anthem. We need this heaven-sent gift a great many times as we struggle along our journey of life to cheer us up, for the dark places are so numerous, and our hearts grow very heavy sometimes. We want more sunshine. So you whose voices are attuned to harmonious melodies cultivate and exercise it. Perchance you will bring joyful relief to many a grief-stricken soul. And you may contribute to the happiness of all those with whom you associate. Remember, too,

"Sing while you can, another day
May bring enough of sorrow."

R. F. H.

An Irish Preacher.

MR. EDITOR: About the year 1777 the Methodist preachers, who had been for some time established in Coleraine, North Ireland, visited the parish of Agoston. Of this people Dr. Adam Clarke had never before, except once from a paragraph in a newspaper, where it was remarked as a singular thing and well worthy of notice, that "a Methodist preacher, ministering in the open air to a large congregation, a heavy shower of rain falling, the people began to disperse to seek shelter in their houses, which the preacher observing, told them that rain was one of the chief blessings of God's providence; that without it there could be neither seed time nor harvest, nor indeed any green thing on the face of the earth. 'And will you,' said he, 'fly from the gift of God?' The people felt the reproof, gathered more closely together, and though the rain continued to descend heard patiently and plausibly to the end of the discourse."

One evening after school hours one of Adam Clarke's school fellows surprised him by saying: "Adam, let us go to Borneide; there is a Methodist preacher to be there this evening, and we shall have nice fun." Adam had been taught to hold preaching in reverence, whether he heard it in the church or in the Presbyterian meeting. He went without the slightest expectation of diversion, and many people assembled in a barn. The preacher was a plain serious man, widely different in dress from any clerical gentleman he had ever before seen. His name was John Brettel. Adam was not surprised at his first sentence, which was this: "I see several lads here. I hope they will behave well; if not, they shall be put out of the house." Adam did not remember the text, and the sermon made no particular impression on his mind. After preaching, Mr. Brettel went into the man's house, whose barn he had occupied. Several people followed, among them young Clarke. "He exhorted the people to turn to God with all their hearts and not to defer it." The next week Adam went to hear him again. His text was: "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him and will sup with him, and he with me." (Revelation iii, 20.) He referred to the methods which God used to awaken and alarm impenitent sinners, and the consequences of neglecting these calls—eternal ruin. "But God," said he, "always fires the warning cannon before he discharges the murdering piece." This was the last time he heard Mr. Brettel.

AUNT MARTHA.

Revival Correspondence.

Camp meeting at Coushatta Academy Camp Ground, in Coushatta circuit, resulted in twenty-five accessions, as many conversions and reclamations. The church greatly revived. Time: September 5 to 11.

A. O. COOZEY.

Notwithstanding the long drought and scarcity of everything, our camp meeting at Oak Ridge was a glorious and grand success. I was with Bro. Parish at Athens last week—one of the best meetings of my life. Bro. Parish is happy the Lord has converted his children.

J. L. F. SHEPPARD.

I have finished my round of protracted meetings. The good Lord blessed us in them. Church revived; sinners convicted; mourners converted; several accessions to the church. A renewed interest in Sabbath school cause. Parsonage being repaired. Preliminary efforts made to build a church at Houlika, ten miles north of Houston. I organized a church there this year.

EUGENE JOHNSON.

On September 27 there was commenced at Big Rock Church a protracted meeting, lasting five days, during which time the church membership and the entire community were wonderfully blessed. At almost every service the spirit of God was manifested in convicting and converting power. The loud hallelujahs of reclaimed backsliders were often heard to mingle with those who rejoiced in their first love.

Bro. L. J. Jones, pastor of the church, had to his assistance the Rev. J. C. Brogan, P. F. Sernas, E. C. Sernas and C. W. Moody. The meeting resulted in the conversion of seven teen souls and thirty-five accessions to the church, a majority of which were students of Big Rock Sunday-School. I am requested to announce that the Winchester circuit for the present year has received seventy-nine members to date. Eleven at Bu Katung, fourteen at Enon, nineteen at Pleasant Grove and thirty-five at Big Rock. May all the praise and honor and glory be ascribed to him who has redeemed us and washed us with his own precious blood, and may the celestial fire which has been kindled upon the altars of the hearts of the people continue to burn and spread until the Winchester circuit may become a burning and a shining light in the Meridian district, Mississippi Conference.

H. L. NORTON.

Big Rock, Miss., Oct. 3, 1884.

I have now closed my round of protracted meetings. The time for protracted meetings is very unfavorable, so far as the preacher is concerned. Hot, dry, dusty weather works a great hardship to a public speaker, but so is and we can not change it in this country. The most of the meetings have attended were successful. I have been at Lexington, Tebula, Emory and Greenwood to help Bros. Lewis, Augustus, Brainer and Oak. At Lexington we had a fine meeting. Tebula is rather cold. At Emory, on the Wecler circuit, the good Lord came in mercy and many were made to rejoice. The meeting at Greenwood was quite successful. It is enough to make a preacher's month water to visit the West and Greenwood circuits and see the kindness of the people to their pastors. To hear the wife speak of the thousands and one little acts of kindness from people in and out of the church are evidences of their appreciation of the labors of their pastor, and his wife almost enough to make one wish he were a wife.

Our meetings on the Black Hawk circuit have been marked with some success. We continued forty days, embracing three points. During this time I had ministerial help six days. At Acona we had the most remarkable meeting I have ever seen, which resulted in about fifty conversions. To meeting can not be described. For several days we had no preaching. The success of the meeting was in the consecration of the converts and other to the work of the church. Nearly every man and boy and several of the ladies took part in the prayer meeting. We established three prayer and experienced meetings at different places in the congregation. All were attended and doing well. We have received about forty into church. The most of the conversions on the circuit were persons who had been members of the church for quite a number of years.

BLACK HAWK, MISS., Oct. 8, 1884.
J. F. EVANS.

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of Rev. Geo. Schaeffer.

(Continued.)

December 31, 1847: This is the last day of the year. God has spared my life, and manifold have been the mercies and blessings of which I have been the recipient. I have not the slightest indisposition myself, and the health of my family has been good. We have had peace and plenty. We have enjoyed great religious privileges, and have been personally blessed in my religious feelings, and have seen some happy seasons. Yet after all I feel that I have lost ground in religion. I need a revival of holiness in my own heart. I want more spiritual-mindedness. I am not as zealous for the cause of religion as I should be. I am too much at ease in Zion. My faith is weak. My love is cold. I do not feel sufficiently concerned for sinners. I need a deeper work of grace! Lord, take not thy Holy Spirit from me, leave me not alone. Strengthen me; enlighten me; sanctify me. Oh, for the fullness of the blessing of the gospel! Make me a whole Christian; cleanse me from all sin; let me have the mind of Christ; let me be dead to the world and sin. O Jesus, thou hast redeemed me by thy precious blood! Wash me, and I shall be clean; take up thine abode in my heart, let me realize thy presence continually.

January 3, 1848: I have lived to see the first Sabbath in this new year, and spent it very pleasantly. Had four meetings with the colored people, and spent the night with Bro. James Thompson, in company with Bro. Evans. I hope I will be a better Christian this year, and do more good than last. I wish to live every moment in the spirit of consecration. I have wasted too much time. I must learn to redeem the time more, and be more cross-bearing and self-denying. I am too self-seeking, and too fond of ease and self-indulgence. I am too much disposed to shun the cross, and shrink from duty. I have too much of a pleasing spirit. I want perfect love, perfect humility, perfect peace, perfect faith. I want to be a perfect Christian and to live in the spirit of sanctification.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HONNICUTT.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1884.

$1234!

At Spring Hill, near Grenada, on Saturday last, Rev. J. W. Poston, pastor, we had the pleasure of attending a Centenary meeting on a Quarterly Conference occasion. The collection as reported and explained in another column, amounted to $1234. A royal, red-letter day, for the Grenada circuit.

$550!

The Centenary offering at Grenada, North Mississippi Conference, last Sunday, Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, Jr., pastor, amounted to $550. A seemingly more pleasant collection we have not raised.

$450!

On Sunday night, at Winona, Rev. W. B. Murrah, pastor, there was a Centenary thank-offering of $450. This amount will be increased.

$334!

At Abbeville, North Mississippi Conference, last Sunday, Rev. T. J. Newell secured a Centenary collection of $334. Other amounts will be forthcoming at the next appointment.

$180!

Rev. Thomas J. Newell, of Grenada, Miss., writes as follows, under date of October 13, 1884: "Centenary meeting at Charleston yesterday; collection, $180. After the sermon an elderly Presbyterian arose and stated that he thought Methodism was the greatest religious movement since the years of our Lord, and that he and his wife would make a Centenary offering of $50."

An utterance of the great philosopher, Goethe, deserves to be re-echoed just now. He said: "I will listen to anyone's convictions, but pray keep your doubts to yourself. I have plenty of my own." Doubts have their utility. Mind will stagnate and the soul will starve that accepts everything without question or investigation. But our doubts should never become common property. They are for private use. When made public they are harmful to ourselves and others. John the Baptist set the world a good example as to how we should deal with doubt—go directly to Jesus. When depressed and distressed, in spirit, he summoned two of his disciples and sent them at once to Jesus with this question: "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?" When they returned all disquietude was gone—all spiritual darkness dispelled. When men begin to parade their doubts they are simply flaunting and airing their vanity of opinion. If honest inquirers, they will modestly and earnestly seek the sources of knowledge and truth. Convictions we covet, but doubts we desire not to hear!

Bishop McTear spoke some wise and timely words to the Tennessee Conference on guarding the door to the superannuated and supernumerary relation. There is one other question, however, of more imminent interest—guarding the door of admission into the Conference. Almost everything depends upon that—the character of our pulpit, the progress of our church and the benevolent collections. The support of supernumeraries is meagre because the door of admission is too wide. The true theory is to guard the door and then graduate the pay. No doubt Tennessee needed a little "going over" on the supernumerary relation. That is a land of preacher-farmers and householders. Rather than move to a distant circuit a brother supernumerary. In the North they ask that relation to take an European tour or command leisure for projected literary work. The letter of the law needs rigid interpretation and impartial administration. Whether the "Committee on Conference Relations" will improve on old methods remains to be seen. Thus far the results are not specially reassuring. The technical supernumerary does not belong to a numerous generation.

"American in Voice, Roman in Heart."

These words were uttered by Archbishop Gibbons, of Baltimore, at a banquet in Rome, some months ago, given to the American Bishops. Speaking of himself and his fellow-prelates, he said: "We are American in voice, but Roman in heart." They have, of course, one meaning, and that confirmatory of Protestant opinion everywhere expressed concerning the Romish priesthood. Surely the distinguished Archbishop did not suppose his words would echo across the Atlantic and be published abroad in our papers. He would hardly make such an admission aloud and let it gain currency. We have become accustomed to emphatic denials of what is now so positively affirmed. When charged with adherence to their peculiar tenets and methods, for which they would sacrifice the interests and integrity of the State, they have loudly protested and declared unalterable devotion to the country. Their patriotism is above suspicion, their republicanism beyond question. But the great Primate of the church in America now boldly avows his superior and more sacred allegiance to a system antagonistic to our institutions. Why this change of tone and time? Has the church in this new world grown sufficiently strong in numbers, wealth and influence to put on a bolder front? How much like the history of other days are these words! And if only the power was at command, the cunning hand is ready to pile the fagots and turn the thumb-screw. There is no essential difference in the Church of Rome of to-day and the days of the Inquisition. Her spirit and purposes are the same; but, fortunately, her mighty power has been broken—her once strong arm has been paralyzed.

In the words quoted above Archbishop Gibbons acknowledges a radical hostility between the Romish Church and our American institutions. Protestants have always charged Rome with being an enemy to liberty. It recognizes no government but a monarchy, whose throne and crown are in the Vatican palace. If the Archbishop did not intend to make such an admission, his words have no meaning. Whysay, "We are American in voice, but Roman in heart," if there was not antagonism between them? No, he meant to say, what is a fact, that it is one thing to be an American patriot, with a comprehensive grasp of the idea and undying love for it, and another and very different thing to be a Roman devotee and ecclesiastic. They are the antipodes of each other. Between them there is no sympathy, no comity, no possible reconciliation. A true Romanist—one who accepts fully and intelligently the Romish idea and is filled with its spirit—is an avowed and irreconcilable enemy to American liberty. "Roman in heart"—yes, and with all that these words import. Roman and, therefore, at war with everything un-Roman or anti-Roman. Alas for this country if the Archbishop's followers should become sufficiently numerous to be a dominant power. Then, with such a shibboleth upon their lips, we might expect the bloody days of the Duke of Alba to return.

But the venerable prelate does say he is "American in voice," and in so doing declares boldly his insincerity. While in heart a Roman, loving first of all the Romish idea, he is in voice an American. That is, it is heat for prudential reasons to avow allegiance to American liberty, but really and at heart he despises it and is a Roman. No doubt the Archbishop would deny such an interpretation of his words; but in their last analysis they mean that and only that. So, then, a Romish priest is not a sincere friend of our broad, free republican institutions. But in this play of successful deception they have an illustrious example. Poor old blind Isaac was basely imposed upon by his son, but he had discernment enough of touch and sound to say, "The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau." So these Romans have American voices—they talk glibly and boastfully of our wonderful institutions; but in heart they love a system that, if possible, would compel our subjugation to its imperial sword. A man that believes in the temporal power of a church and the infallibility of its chosen head can only be "American in voice;" he certainly is not at heart. And so widespread and profound is this conviction that no Romanist could be elected President of these United States. We deprecate any ecclesiastical test of a man's fitness for public office; but the facts are stated. The American people are too well versed in Romish history—they know too thoroughly its story of persecution and carnage, its crowning and uncrowning of kings—ever to imperil their liberties in Roman hands.

In view of the fact that a Plenary

Council is to be held soon in Baltimore, presided over by Archbishop Gibbons, for the discussion of many vital questions affecting the people, at large, these words of the venerable Primate are very significant. When that Council shall have spoken on the school question and other issues, the declaration will be more apparent.

At Shiloh Camp Meeting.

In response to urgent invitation we spent a few days at this feast of tabernacles, embracing the second Sabbath in this month. Reaching Pelahatchie about noon, of Friday, we were soon provided with transportation to the camp ground, some six miles distant, and arrived in time to hear the conclusion of the afternoon discourse. Rev. R. A. Shibley, the pastor, gave us the special sort of welcome a preacher does when he is "short of help." Before the dust was sufficiently removed to recover our normal appearance we were appointed to preach at night. That is an ancient and historic encampment. In ante bellum days it was a grand place for the gathering of the people. Multitudes have there been introduced into the kingdom of our Lord, while Christians by scores have commenced a higher life. The congregations were large and attentive, and the preaching was full of unction and power. On Saturday night there were ten or twelve conversions. Bros. F. M. Williams, Heard, McDonald, Nicolson, Miller and a number of local preachers gave the pastor generous assistance and appreciated service. By special invitation this editor delivered a Centenary sermon, on Sunday morning, at ten o'clock, to an immense multitude. The vast crowd on the grounds was variously estimated from twelve hundred to two thousand. Much to our regret and disappointment no collection was taken; but we hope a worthy thank-offering from that excellent people will be reported at Conference.

On Saturday afternoon the Quarterly Conference for that pastorate was held, with Presiding Elder Williams in the chair. There was a large attendance—about the most numerous Quarterly Conference we ever saw. Many things developed furnished thought for profitable study. The eighth question was prominent—this being the fourth quarter. Sunday-schools and other interests were discussed at length. This thought occurred to us: If, with the larger resources of our rural Methodism, we could carry the methods and systems of the towns into the country, our difficulties would be removed. With all the disadvantages of distance, rough roads, toiling teams, etc., our country churches might equal the towns in every department of service.

With special thanks to Bro. McGuffey and family, whose hospitality we enjoyed, and to scores of friends for kindness, with a list of ten subscribers for the ADVOCATE and many kind words we shall long treasure, we (the editor and his wife) left for Jackson, preached again at night and walked into the office at 112 Camp street, on Monday morning, at half-past seven o'clock.

The course of Archdeacon Lightfoot, of the Church of England, is the very exhaustion of ecclesiastical folly. He prohibited an organist from playing in an English parish church because a few days before he had played in a Congregational Church. Wonder if he would admit one of the faithful to the communion after buying a roast of mutton from a butcher not of his faith? We appreciate proprieties, but this Archdeacon is an ecclesiastical dude of the most approved type. He ought to be named Lighthead, as more expressive of his cranial and Christian condition.

The Rev. Alonzo Monk, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., knows the value of a church paper. Without definite knowledge of his pastoral history, we will underwrite for his success. He thus writes to the Arkansas Methodist of his ineffectual effort to shorten the list of Advocates taken:

So, Mr. Editor, I have sometimes tried to give up one or more of my church papers. Have too many. I carefully inspect my list. The Nashville Christian Advocate. No; that is the General Conference organ. St. Louis Advocate. No; can't part with that manly brow. New Orleans Advocate. No; that's my crescent; that comes perfumed with magnolia breezes. Well, the Alabama Advocate. No; that's my Conference paper, and no preacher can do without his Conference paper. There is but one left; that is the Arkansas Methodist. Oh, but that is my baby that I love so well. It comes from home. It is my mother's paper. It tells of the preachers and people I know so well. It is edited by my once presiding elder. It comes sweet and fresh from the "City of Roses." I can not give up my Arkansas Methodist. So, Mr. Editor, though poor and pressed for time to read, I have no paper to spare.

Three Centenaries in Two Days.

On Friday afternoon we left home for Grenada to meet three appointments—on Saturday morning, at Spring Hill, six miles distant from Grenada; on Sunday morning, at Grenada; and Sunday night, at Winona. At the Chamberlain House we found a cordial welcome and comfortable accommodation. The next morning, early, Presiding Elder Thames called, and in a little while our party, consisting of Bros. Thames, Newell and myself, were en route to Spring Hill. What clouds of dust! As thick, though not as deadly, as the sand storms on the desert. We were reminded of a story Bishop Wiley told us last winter. Holding a colored Conference in the South during a rainy season, he was conveyed out to the place of meeting through the mud every day by a loquacious colored brother who remarked sagely, one morning, "Bishop, the mud is very numerous." So with Grenada county dust. Spring Hill is an old church, and with it are associated many thrilling traditions. It was in the early day a stronghold of Methodism, and is yet the Jerusalem Church on the circuit. Near there Judge D. O. Shattuck once lived, and many stories linger of his ministry as a preacher and administrator as a judicial officer. A few yards from the rear of the church is the grave of Rev. Joseph Travis, and in one corner of the building is carefully preserved his old family Bible. A large congregation was present—quite excellent any Saturday meeting we ever attended. A Centenary discourse was accorded respectful attention, and a collection lifted amounting to $204. From another church on the circuit a brother reported $950, in the shape of a handsome new house of worship just dedicated, and from another $80, making an aggregate of $1,234. After a sumptuous "dinner-on-the-ground," the Quarterly Conference was held. That sub-bishop presides and magnifies his office. This work is efficiently served by Bros. Poston and Markham. We listened to their reports with much interest and noted some points for future use.

Returning from Spring Hill in the afternoon, we had a delightful tea at the presiding elder's "hired house," and spent the night with President Newell's large family at the college. This institution is prospering under his administration and promises a grand work for the church. Elaborate preparations were made for the Centenary service under the efficient direction of the pastor and his lady collaborators. It was the regret of all that Bro. Ramsey's severe illness prevented his attendance. He has done a superb work and has the hearts of his people. The decorations were tasteful and most appropriate. The names of Wesley, Asbury and Pierce in evergreen adorned the walls, Bishop Pierce's being draped in mourning. These, with the mottoes in rear of the pulpit and the rich profusion of flowers and evergreens, made the church as fresh and fragrant as the sacrifice of grateful Methodist hearts. The editor discoursed and lifted the collection, assisted by Bro. Thames, amounting to $550. This offering would have been much larger but for a bank failure in the town on Friday before. There was a pall upon the spirits of the entire community. Grenada has been severely tried this year by two bank failures and a destructive fire that swept away the entire business center of the pretty little city. Still the people are heroic, and stately brick buildings are springing phoenix-like from the uncooled ashes. Under these circumstances we consider this a creditable offering from Grenada. After enjoying the charming hospitality of Bro. George Lake and family at their palatial home, and a few short calls on friends, we boarded the south-bound train, at six o'clock, for Winona, to meet another appointment, accompanied by Bros. Thames and Newell.

"Hot boxes" are vexing to passengers and a test of patience to a waiting congregation. Instead of reaching Winona at seven o'clock for the half-past seven service, our train was delayed until eight. Bro. Murrah was on hand to welcome us and hurry our company, together with a good delegation from Duck Hill, off to the church almost at a double-quick. The house was crowded to its utmost capacity, and as we entered our eyes rested upon Wesley's grand watchword in evergreen over the pulpit, "The world is my parish." The congregation listened patiently to a timely discussion by this editor, and then responded with a Centenary offering of $450. Bro. Murrah says the amount will be considerably increased. At twelve o'clock our southward journey was resumed and at eleven o'clock, on Monday, reached 112 Camp street, ready for the demands of the desk.

Death of Rev. A. H. Redford, D. D.

We were shocked to notice in a telegram from Nashville that Rev. Dr. A. H. Redford died at Bowling Green, Ky., on Friday last. He had been ill for some weeks; but the last reports were favorable to his speedy recovery. For many years Dr. Redford was prominent in Kentucky Methodism. Though quite a young man, he was recognized as a leader of our church during the famous border controversies that succeeded this General Conference of 1844. Filling various positions in his Conference with great acceptability, he rapidly rose to distinction, and at the General Conference of 1866, in New Orleans, was elected Book Agent of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Taking charge of the Publishing House after the wreck and waste of war, he had a herculean task before him in reviving its business, restoring its credit and rehabilitating its fallen fortunes. But so marked was his success that he was twice re-elected to the same position—his administration covering a period of twelve years. Bishops, Book Committees and Annual Conferences applauded his career. After the disasters which befell the House he was removed and suffered the entire blame of failure. We have never sympathized with those who impeached his personal integrity and charged upon him the sole cause of failure. We would criticize his business methods and policy, but not assail personal honor. He was over-sanguine in temperament, vivid in his calculations, and had more energy than ability. His last years were shadowed and saddened by loss of position and confidence; but he clung with unrelaxing grasp to the church of his early love and died in the ranks of her itinerant ministry. His last work was to write the life of Bishop Kavanaugh, his boon companion and life-long friend.

Dr. Redford was quite an author, and some of his earlier works had great popularity. He had a sketchy, narrative style, but lacked philosophical insight and the faculty for broad generalization. We have many pleasant memories of our departed brother, and with loving hands place a flower on his grave. A weary heart has found sweet rest—a toiling servant has gone up to his reward.

Notes by the Way.

Permission granted by the editor, I will proceed to observe:

1. The change in the weather. This was sudden and, being a new topic October 9, 1884, there was much attention paid it by all with whom we met. It was settled, however, that fans should disappear and overcoats and shawls take their place. No further use for the advice, "Keep cool," but we kept cooling.

2. Oxford. The university and friends were decidedly pleasant. Two hundred and fifty already matriculated. Resolved that everything is right but the preparatory department; and this not wrongly managed, but an additum non addendum. Preparatory university does not jingle. "Sub-freshman" furnishes the "fresh" the temptation to become as egotistic and idle as a sophomore. But the trouble is more serious when it is demonstrated the general notion of collegiate education is sadly lowered all over the State. The standard of scholarship for admission ought to be raised, not lowered. But this is a debated question, and I drop it.

3. Cotton versus grass. Saw several fields above Oxford where hay had been mown. At ten dollars a ton the hay from an acre will sell for more than the cotton alongside. The cotton grower paid twenty-five dollars per ton for his hay. Do our public schools teach arithmetic? If so, some of our planters ought to go to school long enough to learn "to work a sum" similar to the above.

4. A man in handcuffs came on board. He had borrowed a pair of horses from a neighbor in Alabama and forgotten to return them in time. People will be so impatient. There were "neighbors" enough after the poor man to devour him.

5. A more remarkable occurrence on the train was to find the newsboy selling the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. He said it was selling pretty well. Is it the newsboy or the editor that struck on the new departure? If it was the result of joint cranial friction, we hope religious editors and railroad newsboys will rub heads oftener. But the company of the "ADVOCATE" There were the Dramatic Sportsman, Police Gazette and other such all together. Some good people will think it too bad for the ADVOCATE. But no, I would put it in every bar-room if I could. I would send it to every brother and gambling hell to which a carrier would take it. Why should not the drunkard, the thief and the whore have a chance to read something decent now and then? If we can ride with them in railway trains, our Christian literature certainly goes in the same armful with the blackguardism of the press. Your pate against another newsboy Mr. Editor. There is more in than you think.

6. Talking college with friends brought up facts and fancies that are anent. Some facts for Mississippi to ruminate. 1. Three hundred girls go to schools out of the State, because the schools are better, further from home. People seem to think that so long as they stay Mississippi they will go nowhere. According to their faith so it will be. That may be fancy, but I think fact. 2. Methodism in Mississippi needs a college—not a university of high school, but a college. Who will the people unite on or wake to this fact. Your scribble is not good to cumber Conferences or the Bishops with any resolutions or propositions. But he is going to speak out now and then just to the world know that he keeps thinking. He is aware that even Providence sometimes can help a generation only through a graveyard, that the poor" (reader) "shall hope."

7. Here, disappearing behind a Corinthian pillar, twenty years in wake of war and two months in the of Sam Jones, I look out at the of my native State, wishing soon the clouds may break as the rifted curtains of fog, and her may never shine on scenes of blight again or homes forever dilapidated and fields forever disfigured with brambles, brush and broom.

The Christian Standard suggests new rule for newspaper writers which we commend as worthy of acceptance. When one has written an article, it says: "Then imagine that you are about to telegraph what you have written, and rigidly eliminate every word whose cost would overcome the profit."

The Richmond Christian Advocate has this to say of a little pestiferous generation known as "proselety." Certain ones hinder our work, criticize our methods, belittle our labors, yet are kept alive by the fruits of our success and toil. They creep into our field, root up a growing corn, and in shaking the peater our corn-plot and squeal at the crib-door for any dropped grain. A pleny-woods, razor-back ought to have better manners than that.

Tennessee Conference.

The Nashville Advocate, of last week, devotes much editorial space to an interesting account of the Tennessee Conference. As it is the "Jerusalem Conference," holding session at "headquarters," the end church will approve and applaud such full mention: The sessions were held in McKendree Church presided over by Bishop McTear. The notable features were, first, a farewell meeting for the missionaries to China, on Wednesday night. Addresses were delivered by Laura Haygood, Prof. Bonnell, Dukes and Dr. Haygood. The named closed his remarks with the suggestive words: "If you ask why my sister goes to China as a missionary, I answer, because she had a Methodist father and mother and Methodist grandparents. Let be lonesome when she is gone, but rejoice that she is going." And Fitzgerald aptly adds: "That was tone of all that was said—there no whining about sacrifices, no sentimentalism. It was a sober yet joyous meeting." Just such spirit as ought to characterize occasion! The romance of mission belongs to the past.

The Church Extension Anniversary was admirably managed. There was a recital of facts rather than a repetition of ancient hortatory platitudes. There was an "experience meeting" on the benefits of organization even in this early part of its history. The treasurer's report showed a marked advance over year's receipts.

The Missionary Anniversary a grand occasion—without a collection. A new departure, and doubtless a good one! The speeches were made by Drs. Kelley, Young and McAnally. The treasurer reported receipts for the year amounting over $26,000. "Old Jerusalem" moving to the front, for which will receive universal congratulations.

On Sunday, Bishop McTear coursed pointedly and tersely "Ministerial Responsibility." It was strong meat we judge—good all latitudes and digestions. Dr. Ferrin preached the Conference Centenary sermon in the afternoon and Dr. McAnally, of St. Louis, delivered a large congregation a masterly sermon at night.

The Centenary Committee reported $48,043 50 up to date, and the Statistical Committee a membership of 450—an increase of 566.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TEST YOUR BAKING POWDER TO-DAY!

It is a fact that a cake will not rise unless the baking powder is fresh and pure. It is a fact that a cake will not rise unless the baking powder is fresh and pure. It is a fact that a cake will not rise unless the baking powder is fresh and pure.

THE TEST: Place a can top down on a flat surface until heated. Then remove the cover and shell. A cake will not rise unless the baking powder is fresh and pure.

DR. PRICE'S CREAM BAKING POWDER

DOES NOT CONTAIN AMMONIA. ITS HEALTHFULNESS HAS NEVER BEEN QUESTIONED.

THE TEST OF THE OVEN. PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., DR. PRICE'S SPECIAL FLAVORING EXTRACTS.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

FOR SALE BY CROCCERS. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts. Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems.

Our Young People.

A MITH SONG.

Only a drop in the bucket, But every drop will tell; The bucket would soon be empty Without the drops in the well.

Only a poor little penny; It was all I had to give; But as pennies make the dollar, It may help some cause to live.

A few little bits of ribbon And some toys; they were not new; But they made the sick child happy, Which has made me happy too.

Only some old worn garments; They were all I had to spare; But they'll help to clothe the needy, And the poor are every where.

God loveth the cheerful giver, Though the gift be poor and small; What do his gifts of love and grace, When they never give at all?

Our Children.

DEAR CHILDREN: I have heretofore directed my fatherly talks to "our boys," not that I felt more interest in them than I do in our girls, but because they are exposed to many temptations that girls seldom encounter, and are liable to fall into many evil practices and sins that girls generally escape. I still believe that truly converted and consistently Christian girls and women are the best visible representatives of the inhabitants of heaven which we have on this sin polluted earth, and I pray that their number may be greatly increased. What I may write for the children's department of our good CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE hereafter will be directed to both sexes, because both girls and boys must be truly converted and made pure in heart in order to be children of God; happy and useful on earth, and go safely to heaven when they die. But right here, at the beginning of this new series, you ask me a very important question. "How old most children be before they can be converted and made pure in heart?" In answer to this question I can only give my honest opinion. I believe that children are born in a state of grace through the merits of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, and hence our Savior claims them as his from their birth, and says, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." And when we have our infant children baptized it is a public acknowledgment of the fact that they belong to Christ's spiritual kingdom, and have a right to membership in his militant church and should be so recognized. And if our baptized children could only receive the proper instruction and training from infancy, I see no reason why they may not be true Christians according to their limited knowledge and ability from early childhood. I see no reason why they should first have a bitter experience in this world before they become Christians. I do not think it is the will of our blessed Savior that the devil should get possession of the hearts of his little children and drag them several years, through the polluted sewers of sin before they can be truly born of the Spirit. I shall have something more to say on this subject in my next article. For the present I will give you a few words of encouragement which, perhaps, you need at the present time. God has already sent his awakening Spirit to your young hearts to make you feel the danger of living in sin and the importance of seeking a preparation for heaven at once, and under these awakenings, during our late revivals, you have presented yourselves at the altar to have an interest in the prayers of the church. There you have wept and prayed that God would pardon your sins and make you good Christians. But some wiseacres, both in and out of the church, have said, "What do these little boys and girls know about getting religion? They are too young to know anything about it! They don't know what they are doing." Now, dear children, you know these would be wise folks are mistaken. You do know what you are doing. You are praying that God for Christ's sake would give you the sensible pardon of your sins and create in you a new heart and a right spirit, and if you persevere you will soon know to the exceeding joy of your hearts that your heavenly Father has answered your prayers and given you the assurance that you do know what you are about. But you have also felt a laudable desire to be publicly recognized as members of the church, but these same wiseacres have said, "You are too young to join the church. You don't know what is implied in church membership. You are governed too much by feeling. You ought to wait until you get old enough to know whether you can hold out or not." This obtrusive opinion against your joining the church so young I look upon as dangerously erroneous. I am inclined to say it is a trick of the devil to keep you off the safest ground you can occupy as a candidate for heaven. As to a fear that you will not hold on to the church, so far as my long observation goes, I would rather depend on well instructed, well trained and well governed children to be faithful to their church vows until death than to depend on those who do not enter the church until the middle of life. But I shall have somewhat more to say about these matters hereafter.

J. G. JONES.

HAZLEBURST, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: Although my last letter has not been answered, I will make an attempt to write another. I am a little girl. I live with my parents a mile from the Mississippi Valley railroad. I am sorry to say our school closed the eighth of August. We have preaching three Sabbaths in every month; prayer-meeting every Sunday morning and every Wednesday night. I hope there will be some good done. We have no Sunday-school, but I hope we will have one soon. My father has a large family of eight children, four of whom are married. My grandfather and grandmother are living near us. My grandfather is seventy-seven years old, and my grandmother is seventy-one. They are the oldest people in this community. Now I wish to answer J. Edwin Stewart's question: Noah was the daughter of Zephobah. It is found in Numbers xxxvi, 10, 11. Now I will ask a question: Who was the sixth son of Jacob? I will close with many bright wishes for you, and success for the dear Advocate.

Your little friend,

SALLIE NAYLAND.

HAZLEBURST, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: I want to answer some questions asked by Kate E. Shirley and Carl Roberth. The word "partridge" may be found in 1 Sam. xxv, 20, and Jer. xvii, 11. Judges xi, 30, 31, contains Jephthah's rash vow. If Carl Roberth will read Judges viii, 16, I think he will find the answer to his other question. We have a nice Sabbath-school at the Methodist Church. Rev. C. W. Campbell is our superintendent. Where is "mulberry trees" found in the Bible? Will some girl about fourteen correspond with

HAZLEBURST, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: Not seeing any letters from this place, I thought I would write one. We have a very nice and large church, and have Rev. J. M. Pugh for our pastor. My uncle, Mr. A. Forsyth, is our superintendent. We lost one of our sweet little scholars some weeks since by death, and we miss him very much. His name was Willie Baum. Miss Maggie Ellis, my former teacher, has not been out since her father died, and I miss her pleasant face so much and hope she will soon be able to come back. I will answer Kate C. Jones' question: "Lizara" is found in Leviticus xi, 30. "Turtle" is found in Leviticus xii, 8. "Horses" is found in 11 Kings ii, 11. Now I will ask a question: Where is "brass," "merchants" and "skirts" found in the Bible? Your little friend,

CLARA L. FORSHAY.

AMITE CITY, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: "The Israelites were called Jews after their return from the captivity of Babylon. The Benjamites joined themselves to the tribe of Judah on the revolt of the other ten tribes from the house of David. The tribe of Judah was then much stronger and more numerous than the other tribes, and foreigners had scarcely any knowledge but of this tribe. After the Babylonian captivity, when many individuals of these ten tribes returned with the men of Judah and Benjamin to rebuild Jerusalem, the term Jews included them also, or rather, was then extended to all the descendants of Israel who retained the Jewish religion, whether they belonged to the two or the ten tribes, whether they returned into Judea or not." Christ's sermon on the mount, Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost, Stephen's apology, Paul's celebrated sermon at Athens, found in the New Testament; and Solomon's in the dedication of the temple, in the Old Testament, are the inspired sermons.

Your little friend,

JOHN S. HOOVER.

MYRTLE PLACE, Mississippi.

AN ENGINEER'S STORY.—"Yes, indeed, we have some queer little incidents happen to us," said the engineer, as he puffed his oil-can about and under his machine. "Queer thing happened to me one day about a year ago. I should think I queer for a rough man like me to cry for ten minutes, and I nobody but, either, wouldn't you? Well, I did, and I can almost cry every time I think of it. I was running along one afternoon pretty lively when I approached a little village where the track runs through the streets. I slackened a little, but still kept on my way. Suddenly, about twenty rods ahead of me, a little girl, not more than three years old, tumbled on to the track. You can't even imagine my feelings. There was no way to save her. It was impossible to stop, or even slack much, at that distance, as the train was heavy and the grade descending. In ten seconds it would have been all over; and after reversing and applying the brake, I shut my eyes. I didn't want to see any more. As we slowed down, my fireman stuck his head out of the cab window to see what I'd stopped for, when he laughed and shouted to me, 'Jim, look here!' I looked, and there was a big, black Newfoundland dog holding the little girl in his mouth, leisurely walking toward the house where she evidently belonged. She was kicking and crying, so that I knew she wasn't hurt, and the dog had saved her. My fireman thought it funny, and kept on laughing, but I cried like a woman. I just couldn't help it. I had a little girl of my own at home."—Chicago Herald.

A SAD DEATH.—One Saturday night three little boys, all under 15 years of age, bought half a pint of whisky with some difficulty from a West Virginia saloon-keeper. All three drank of it, but one, the eldest, took the largest share. Another train whistled and the boy drank it all. He endured the most agonizing suffering for one night, and died the next morning. Fathers, brothers, sons, is there no way to avenge these whisky murders, which are the blood of Jerry Porter cries out to you. "Am I not my brother's keeper?" to the extent of voting away these death-traps from the land.—Work.

One may be better than his reputation or his conduct, but never better than his principles.—Latana.

Mr. Editor: I want to answer some questions asked by Kate E. Shirley and Carl Roberth. The word "partridge" may be found in 1 Sam. xxv, 20, and Jer. xvii, 11. Judges xi, 30, 31, contains Jephthah's rash vow. If Carl Roberth will read Judges viii, 16, I think he will find the answer to his other question. We have a nice Sabbath-school at the Methodist Church. Rev. C. W. Campbell is our superintendent. Where is "mulberry trees" found in the Bible? Will some girl about fourteen correspond with

HAZLEBURST, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: Not seeing any letters from this place, I thought I would write one. We have a very nice and large church, and have Rev. J. M. Pugh for our pastor. My uncle, Mr. A. Forsyth, is our superintendent. We lost one of our sweet little scholars some weeks since by death, and we miss him very much. His name was Willie Baum. Miss Maggie Ellis, my former teacher, has not been out since her father died, and I miss her pleasant face so much and hope she will soon be able to come back. I will answer Kate C. Jones' question: "Lizara" is found in Leviticus xi, 30. "Turtle" is found in Leviticus xii, 8. "Horses" is found in 11 Kings ii, 11. Now I will ask a question: Where is "brass," "merchants" and "skirts" found in the Bible? Your little friend,

CLARA L. FORSHAY.

AMITE CITY, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: "The Israelites were called Jews after their return from the captivity of Babylon. The Benjamites joined themselves to the tribe of Judah on the revolt of the other ten tribes from the house of David. The tribe of Judah was then much stronger and more numerous than the other tribes, and foreigners had scarcely any knowledge but of this tribe. After the Babylonian captivity, when many individuals of these ten tribes returned with the men of Judah and Benjamin to rebuild Jerusalem, the term Jews included them also, or rather, was then extended to all the descendants of Israel who retained the Jewish religion, whether they belonged to the two or the ten tribes, whether they returned into Judea or not." Christ's sermon on the mount, Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost, Stephen's apology, Paul's celebrated sermon at Athens, found in the New Testament; and Solomon's in the dedication of the temple, in the Old Testament, are the inspired sermons.

Your little friend,

JOHN S. HOOVER.

MYRTLE PLACE, Mississippi.

AN ENGINEER'S STORY.—"Yes, indeed, we have some queer little incidents happen to us," said the engineer, as he puffed his oil-can about and under his machine. "Queer thing happened to me one day about a year ago. I should think I queer for a rough man like me to cry for ten minutes, and I nobody but, either, wouldn't you? Well, I did, and I can almost cry every time I think of it. I was running along one afternoon pretty lively when I approached a little village where the track runs through the streets. I slackened a little, but still kept on my way. Suddenly, about twenty rods ahead of me, a little girl, not more than three years old, tumbled on to the track. You can't even imagine my feelings. There was no way to save her. It was impossible to stop, or even slack much, at that distance, as the train was heavy and the grade descending. In ten seconds it would have been all over; and after reversing and applying the brake, I shut my eyes. I didn't want to see any more. As we slowed down, my fireman stuck his head out of the cab window to see what I'd stopped for, when he laughed and shouted to me, 'Jim, look here!' I looked, and there was a big, black Newfoundland dog holding the little girl in his mouth, leisurely walking toward the house where she evidently belonged. She was kicking and crying, so that I knew she wasn't hurt, and the dog had saved her. My fireman thought it funny, and kept on laughing, but I cried like a woman. I just couldn't help it. I had a little girl of my own at home."—Chicago Herald.

A SAD DEATH.—One Saturday night three little boys, all under 15 years of age, bought half a pint of whisky with some difficulty from a West Virginia saloon-keeper. All three drank of it, but one, the eldest, took the largest share. Another train whistled and the boy drank it all. He endured the most agonizing suffering for one night, and died the next morning. Fathers, brothers, sons, is there no way to avenge these whisky murders, which are the blood of Jerry Porter cries out to you. "Am I not my brother's keeper?" to the extent of voting away these death-traps from the land.—Work.

One may be better than his reputation or his conduct, but never better than his principles.—Latana.

Mr. Editor: I want to answer some questions asked by Kate E. Shirley and Carl Roberth. The word "partridge" may be found in 1 Sam. xxv, 20, and Jer. xvii, 11. Judges xi, 30, 31, contains Jephthah's rash vow. If Carl Roberth will read Judges viii, 16, I think he will find the answer to his other question. We have a nice Sabbath-school at the Methodist Church. Rev. C. W. Campbell is our superintendent. Where is "mulberry trees" found in the Bible? Will some girl about fourteen correspond with

HAZLEBURST, Mississippi.

Mr. Editor: Not seeing any letters from this place, I thought I would write one. We have a very nice and large church, and have Rev. J. M. Pugh for our pastor. My uncle, Mr. A. Forsyth, is our superintendent. We lost one of our sweet little scholars some weeks since by death, and we miss him very much. His name was Willie Baum. Miss Maggie Ellis, my former teacher, has not been out since her father died, and I miss her pleasant face so much and hope she will soon be able to come back. I will answer Kate C. Jones' question: "Lizara" is found in Leviticus xi, 30. "Turtle" is found in Leviticus xii, 8. "Horses" is found in 11 Kings ii, 11. Now I will ask a question: Where is "brass," "merchants" and "skirts" found in the Bible? Your little friend,

CLARA L. FORSHAY.

AMITE CITY, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: "The Israelites were called Jews after their return from the captivity of Babylon. The Benjamites joined themselves to the tribe of Judah on the revolt of the other ten tribes from the house of David. The tribe of Judah was then much stronger and more numerous than the other tribes, and foreigners had scarcely any knowledge but of this tribe. After the Babylonian captivity, when many individuals of these ten tribes returned with the men of Judah and Benjamin to rebuild Jerusalem, the term Jews included them also, or rather, was then extended to all the descendants of Israel who retained the Jewish religion, whether they belonged to the two or the ten tribes, whether they returned into Judea or not." Christ's sermon on the mount, Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost, Stephen's apology, Paul's celebrated sermon at Athens, found in the New Testament; and Solomon's in the dedication of the temple, in the Old Testament, are the inspired sermons.

Your little friend,

JOHN S. HOOVER.

MYRTLE PLACE, Mississippi.

AN ENGINEER'S STORY.—"Yes, indeed, we have some queer little incidents happen to us," said the engineer, as he puffed his oil-can about and under his machine. "Queer thing happened to me one day about a year ago. I should think I queer for a rough man like me to cry for ten minutes, and I nobody but, either, wouldn't you? Well, I did, and I can almost cry every time I think of it. I was running along one afternoon pretty lively when I approached a little village where the track runs through the streets. I slackened a little, but still kept on my way. Suddenly, about twenty rods ahead of me, a little girl, not more than three years old, tumbled on to the track. You can't even imagine my feelings. There was no way to save her. It was impossible to stop, or even slack much, at that distance, as the train was heavy and the grade descending. In ten seconds it would have been all over; and after reversing and applying the brake, I shut my eyes. I didn't want to see any more. As we slowed down, my fireman stuck his head out of the cab window to see what I'd stopped for, when he laughed and shouted to me, 'Jim, look here!' I looked, and there was a big, black Newfoundland dog holding the little girl in his mouth, leisurely walking toward the house where she evidently belonged. She was kicking and crying, so that I knew she wasn't hurt, and the dog had saved her. My fireman thought it funny, and kept on laughing, but I cried like a woman. I just couldn't help it. I had a little girl of my own at home."—Chicago Herald.

A SAD DEATH.—One Saturday night three little boys, all under 15 years of age, bought half a pint of whisky with some difficulty from a West Virginia saloon-keeper. All three drank of it, but one, the eldest, took the largest share. Another train whistled and the boy drank it all. He endured the most agonizing suffering for one night, and died the next morning. Fathers, brothers, sons, is there no way to avenge these whisky murders, which are the blood of Jerry Porter cries out to you. "Am I not my brother's keeper?" to the extent of voting away these death-traps from the land.—Work.

One may be better than his reputation or his conduct, but never better than his principles.—Latana.

Mr. Editor: I want to answer some questions asked by Kate E. Shirley and Carl Roberth.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending October 21, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	7 1/2
Ordinary	8 1/2
Good ordinary	9 1/2
Low middling	10 1/2
Middling	11 1/2
Good middling	12 1/2
Fair	13 1/2
Good fair	14 1/2
Mobile middling	9 1/2
St. Louis middling	9 1/2

SUGAR.
Inferior	34
Common	42
Good common	43
Fair	44
Good fair	45
Fully fair	46
Primes	47
Strictly Prime	48
Choice	49
Choice Whites, new	50
Yellow clarified	51
Gray clarified	52
Choice whites	53
Granulated	54

MOLASSES.
Syrup	42
Fair	43
Strictly Prime	44
Choice	45
Fancy	46

RICE.
Choice	57
Prime	58
Good	59
Fair	60
Ordinary	61
Common	62
No. 2	63
Rough	64

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	5 3/4
Minnesota patents	6 1/2
Extra fancy	7 1/2
Winter wheat patents	5 1/2
Choice	3 90
Fancy	4 15

CORN PRODUCTS.
Corn meal	3 75
Corn meal	3 10
Grits	4 00
Houlin	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
Corn	67
White	67
Yellow	67
Mixed	67
Oats	38
Western	37
Texas No. 2	37

BACON.
Choice breakfast	12
Shoulders	7 1/2
Sides, clear	11 1/2
Sides, clear rib	11 1/2

HAMS.
Sugar-cured	13 1/2
Dry salt meat	7 1/2
Shoulders	10 1/2
Sides, clear	10 1/2
Sides, clear rib	10 1/2

FISH.
Mackerel	14 25
No. 1, in bbls.	7 75
No. 2, in bbls.	13 75
Half bbls.	6 25
No. 3, in bbls., large	13 25
Half bbls.	7 00

GROCERIES.
Coffee	94
Rio, choice	11 1/2
Cordova, choice	12 1/2
Java, choice	22

BUTTER.
Western dairy	18
New York dairy	18
Country	20

LARD.
Choice	8
Choice	8 1/2
Fair	25

OILS.
Coal, cases	18
Coal, bbls.	13
Cotton seed	50
Lard	80

VEGETABLES.
Cabbages, bulk	6
Country	7
Potatoes	10
Louisiana	10
Western	1 70

KIDNEY.
Onions	5 00
Onions	1 75
Onions	1 75

BALING STUFFS.
Baling	10 1/2
Baling	11 1/2
Baling	11 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	5 50
Young	2 00
Chickens, Southern	3 50
Young	2 00
Turkeys, Southern	9 00

EGGS.
Western	19
Southern	20
Wool	17 1/2
Louisiana	15 1/2
Bury	7 1/2

HIDES.
Good salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
Staves	7 1/2
Oak, kegs	50 00
Oak, barrels	50 00
Oak, casks	50 00
Oak, hogsheads	50 00

FERTILIZERS.
Cotton seed	8 00
Manure	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	2 1/2
Bone black	8 1/2

In the Practice of Medicine.
For coughs and liver troubles, dyspepsia and rheumatism, Parker's Tonic is the best remedy I know of.
Dr. W. Haddock, of Pine Hill, Ala.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—President Arthur arrived here (the afternoon) on the return was to sign Frank Hatton's commission as Postmaster General. On receiving notice of his appointment from the President, Mr. Hatton proceeded to the Postoffice Department. Mr. Hatton took the oath of office, which was administered by James Law, a venerable employe, who has performed the same office for twenty-two postmaster generals, beginning with Postmaster General C. B. Wyckoff, of Kentucky, in 1841.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—At a meeting of the trustees of the College of Physicians and Surgeons this evening, the announcement was officially made that that institution $500,000, and a building fund site, including twenty-nine city lots at Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth streets and Tenth avenue, have been purchased. It is understood building operations will be begun at an early day.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 18.—The Nashville Synod of the Presbyterian Church to-day directed the withdrawal of all candidates from the Columbia Seminary unless the teaching of evolution in every form is stopped.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 18.—Returns by counties complete do not change the pluralities. Unexpectedly the Prohibition and Greenback parties vote in the Democratic and Republican. The Prohibition vote last year was 8362; this year, 1884, the Greenback vote last year was 237; this year it was 3700, showing that there was no coalition, but party lines closely followed. The total Prohibition vote was 12,447, or 113,000 more than Robinson's plurality. The rest of the Republican State ticket has an average majority over all of over 5000. The total vote was 781,373. Last year it was 718,108. In October, 1880, it was 710,180. In November, 1880, it was 724,307.

ATLANTA, N. Y., Oct. 20.—The most destructive fire that ever visited North Carolina broke out in Charlotte at 11 o'clock this morning and burned all the afternoon. The fire crossed the river to East Carthage, totally destroying the factories and buildings on East and Prince's Island. The flames then spread to all the houses on Spring and Main streets. On Charlotte street, Pack's Hotel, the Dispensary, Church and McAdams' buildings, and the Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches were destroyed, and many other buildings are all in ruins. It is estimated 200 houses were destroyed and that the loss will reach $1,000,000. There are not so many persons dwelling left in town to shelter the inhabitants. Carthage was extensively engaged in manufacturing, and all its industries are in ruins.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 20.—Intelligence has been received of a terrible tragedy near Nolichville, thirteen miles from this city. A colored boy, while returning late in the evening from a hunting expedition, passed a cabin near which two colored girls were playing. The girls saw the boy before he saw them, and wishing to frighten him they dropped on their knees and began crawling toward him, making a strange noise. The boy thought he was attacked by ghosts and fired twice, the girls, killing both, one dying instantly.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 20.—The Mississippi State Fair opened here to-day under favorable auspices.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—Postmaster General Hatton and Minister Romero, Mexican Minister, to-day concluded a postal convention providing for the exchange of mail matter between the United States and Mexico at domestic rates of postage.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 20.—The shut down of mills took effect to-day, 10,000 persons are idle.

FOREIGN.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—Gen. De Lisle telegraphed from China of the Upper Loo Chuan River, as follows:

"Col. Donnier, after a brilliant engagement, on Friday carried the heights commanding the fortress of Chu, forming the point d'appui of a large entrenched Chinese camp which was defended by five companies of the 1st French loss was 20 killed, one officer and 90 wounded. Two officers were wounded. The Chinese loss was 3000 killed, including their chief commander. The Chinese invasion of Tonquin has been arrested in the direction of Lang Son."

PARIS, Oct. 17.—The usual mass of requisition for Marie Antoinette, executed on Oct. 16, 1793, at Madame Church was omitted yesterday, though announced in the Royalist papers. It is reported that the service last year was not paid for and no provision was made to pay this year.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—A Foo Chow dispatch says: Another engagement fought on the shore of the Tamsui. Three thousand Chinese were killed. The French loss was trifling.

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—Michipicoten, on the north shore of Lake Superior, is reported to be in possession of a gang of roughs and whisky sellers. Respectable people of the place have received notice to quit the town.

HAVANA, Oct. 18.—During the past week there were six deaths from yellow fever.

ROME, Oct. 18.—In Italy, during the past twenty-four hours, there have been 106 fresh cases of cholera and 102 deaths.

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 18.—The public schools of Portsmouth, Ont., have been closed to prevent the spread of diphtheria. Contagion for three weeks has already occurred, and several persons have been prostrated by the disease.

PAID, Oct. 20.—Gen. De Lisle advises the government that an effective force of 20,000 men is necessary to continue offensive operations and repel the invasion in Tonquin.

CAIRO, Oct. 20.—El Mahdi's followers are dying from drinking from the polluted water pools, and their cattle are dying from fly-bites.

QUEBEC, Oct. 20.—A farmer at St. Jacobin left four children in a house while he went to the field this morning. The eldest, aged eleven years, placed a pan of powder on the stove and a quantity inside the stove. The stove was blown into fragments and the house set on fire. Three of the children were rescued dying; the fourth may recover.

TORONTO, Oct. 20.—Several employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway have been summoned to appear at the police court on the charge of violating the statute against Sunday work, which they did yesterday. The company state the urgent need of repairs to rolling stock forced them to ask the men to spend a portion of yesterday filling cars for active service.

THE QUAKER CHILL CAKE.

Malaria and chills and fever seem to be frightfully on the increase in and around New Orleans. The Quaker Chill Cake is an article that comes to us from the Quaker City, where it has been in use so successfully and where it is recommended so highly that we call the attention of our readers to it. It is said by people who have tried it to be a wonderful and quick cure for the diseases mentioned. It is eaten just the same as a cake for refreshment. The effect is almost immediate. There is no quinine or drugs about it, and it is perfectly safe to any one. Further information can be had by address Groff & Co., 1522 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

Plan of Episcopal Visitations for 1884.

Conference.	Date.	Place.
FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP GRANTLEY.
Deaver	July 21	Denver.
Montana	Aug. 21	Bozeman.
Idaho	Sept. 21	Bozeman.
California	Oct. 21	San Francisco.
Pacific	Nov. 21	San Francisco.
San Francisco	Dec. 21	San Francisco.

SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP M'NEIL.
North Carolina	Nov. 12	Waco.
North Texas	Nov. 12	Waco.
East Texas	Nov. 12	Waco.
German Mission	Nov. 27	Houston.
Texas	Dec. 3	San Antonio.

THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Missouri	Sept. 17	St. Louis.
Southwest Missouri	Oct. 25	St. Louis.
North Carolina	Nov. 20	Wilmington.
Mississippi	Dec. 17	Yazoo City.
Baltimore	March 11	Baltimore.

FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP HARTWELL.
St. Louis	Sept. 24	St. Louis.
West Virginia	Oct. 8	Greenup.
Arkansas	Nov. 13	Van Buren.
New York	Nov. 26	Little Rock.
White River	Nov. 26	Little Rock.
Louisiana	Jan. 8	Minden.

FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP FIERCE.
Indian Mission	Sept. 17	Paul's Valley.
Tennessee	Oct. 8	Nashville.
North Alabama	Nov. 19	Talladega.
South Carolina	Dec. 17	Charleston.
Florida	Jan. 8	Gainesville.

SIXTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KEENER.
Kentucky	Sept. 10	St. Sterling.
Louisiana	Sept. 25	Louisville.
Alabama	Oct. 25	Louisville.
North Georgia	Nov. 20	Savannah.
South Georgia	Dec. 17	Savannah.

SEVENTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KEENER.
Holston	Oct. 22	Bristol.
Virginia	Nov. 12	Lynchburg.
North Mississippi	Nov. 20	Aberdeen.
Memphis	Dec. 8	Memphis.
Alabama	Dec. 17	Opelika.

BISHOP KEENER has charge of the missions in Ohio and Japan.
Bishop Keener has charge of the missions in Mexico.
Bishop Granbery has charge of the missions in Brazil.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

CENTENARY NOTICE.—To the preachers in charge in the bounds of Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference: Dear brethren, let us not forget Centenary work, and especially the motto: "A collection from every congregation." The opportunity of a hundred years is at hand. Let us improve it. Give every member of the church an opportunity of making a thank offering. Let us not fail in this matter. For, if we do, with Bishop Keener in the chair, we may expect to be called to account for it, when we go up to Aberdeen in November.

T. C. WILKINSON, Chairman Dist. Centenary Com.

The presiding elders of the North Mississippi Conference will please send me promptly the names in full of the several delegates elect to the ensuing Conference, and of their alternates.

BYTALLIA, Mississippi. JNO. BANCROFT.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS—THE BEST TONIC.

This medicine, combining iron with pure vegetable tonics, quickly and completely cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weakness, Impure Blood, Malaria, Chills and Fevers, and Neuralgia.

For intercurrent fevers, laminitis, Lack of Energy, &c., it has no equal.

The genuine has above trade mark and made red lines on wrapper. Take no other.

Created by BROWN'S CHOCOLATE CO., BALTIMORE, MD.

NEW JOB OFFICE.

CARVER & JAMIESON,

112 Camp Street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

LETTER, NOTE and BILL HEADS,

VISITING CARDS,

BLANKS!

Blank for Clerks of Court, blanks for Masonic Lodges, blanks for Granges, &c., blanks for Co-operative Stores.

AND

All Kinds of Job Work,

Executed in the best style and prices as low as any city in the North or West.

Send your order to

CARVER & JAMIESON,

112 Camp Street.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

MOBILE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Ormeau Bay, at Elmo	Oct. 11, 12
Chillicothe, at Mobile	13
Chillicothe, at Mobile	13
Chillicothe, at Mobile	13
Chillicothe, at Mobile	13
Chillicothe, at Mobile	13
Chillicothe, at Mobile	13
Chillicothe, at Mobile	13
Chillicothe, at Mobile	13
Chillicothe, at Mobile	13

PENSACOLA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Longville circuit, at Tabernacle	Oct. 11, 12
Chillicothe, at Tabernacle	13
Chillicothe, at Tabernacle	13
Chillicothe, at Tabernacle	13
Chillicothe, at Tabernacle	13
Chillicothe, at Tabernacle	13
Chillicothe, at Tabernacle	13
Chillicothe, at Tabernacle	13
Chillicothe, at Tabernacle	13
Chillicothe, at Tabernacle	13

GREENSBORO DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Greensboro circuit, at Carthage	Sept. 20, 21
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage	22
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage	23
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage	24
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage	25
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage	26
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage	27
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage	28
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage	29
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage	30

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Logansport, at Logansport	Oct. 22
Grand Caillou, at Grand Caillou	23
Saline, at Saline	24
Amite, at Amite	25
Amite, at Amite	26
Amite, at Amite	27
Amite, at Amite	28
Amite, at Amite	29
Amite, at Amite	30
Amite, at Amite	31

NEW ORLEANS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Louisiana Avenue	Oct. 20, 21
Thibodaux	22
Thibodaux	23
Thibodaux	24
Thibodaux	25
Thibodaux	26
Thibodaux	27
Thibodaux	28
Thibodaux	29
Thibodaux	30

DELLI DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Rayville, Little Creek	Oct. 15, 16
Rayville, Little Creek	17
Rayville, Little Creek	18
Rayville, Little Creek	19
Rayville, Little Creek	20
Rayville, Little Creek	21
Rayville, Little Creek	22
Rayville, Little Creek	23
Rayville, Little Creek	24
Rayville, Little Creek	25

OPELOUSAS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Washington and Vermilionville	Oct. 25, 26
Grand Caillou	27
Grand Caillou	28
Grand Caillou	29
Grand Caillou	30
Grand Caillou	31
Grand Caillou	32
Grand Caillou	33
Grand Caillou	34
Grand Caillou	35

ALEXANDRIA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Black River, at Wilson's	Oct. 4, 5
Vidalia and Troy, at Vidalia	11, 12
Castor, at Castor	13
Castor, at Castor	14
Castor, at Castor	15

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 44.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1474.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—113 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Single copies, 10 cents.

Advertisements, 10 cents per line.

Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FRANK R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D.D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KREMER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. C. HUNTER,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D.D.,
REV. W. T. J. BULLIVANT, D.D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

"HE CARET"

BY MARIANNE FARMINGTON.
What can I mean? Is it angel to him
That the night is long and the days are dim
Can he be lonely by the light of dawn
Which soothe the heart and warm the hair
About his throne are eternal calms,
And strong, glad music of happy psalms,
And his untroubled by any strife—
How can he care for my little life?
And yet I want him to care for me
While I live in this world where the sorrows be
When the lights die down from the path I take,
When strength is feeble, and friends forsake,
When love and music that once did live
Have left me to silence and loneliness,
And my life-long struggle to find prayers—
Then my heart cries out for a God who cares,
When shadows hang over the whole day long,
And my spirit is bowed with shame and wrong,
When I am not proud and the deep shadows
Of darkness sin makes my heart afraid,
And the busy world has too much to do
To stay in its course to help me through,
And I long for a Savior—can it be
That the God of the universe cares for me?
Oh, wonderful story of deathless love!
Each child is dear to that heart above,
He fights for me when I am not hurt,
He comforts me in the gloom of night,
He lifts the burden, for he is strong,
He stills the sigh and awakes the song;
The sorrow that bowed me down he leaves,
And loves and pardons because he cares.
Let all who are bowed with heart and pain,
We are not alone in our hour of pain;
Our Father stoops from his throne above
To soothe and cheer us with his love;
He leaves us not when the storm is high,
And we have safety, for he is nigh.
Oh! it is terrible which he doth share,
Oh, rest in peace, for the Lord will care!
—Christian World.

Who Was Melchizedek?

The people are constantly asking me, "Who was Melchizedek?" Where did he live, and when? Melchizedek was the king of Salem and the priest of the Most High God. Where Salem was we do not know, nor do we know whether Salem was a place, or a mere title, meaning "king of peace." Perhaps Melchizedek was the king or ruler of a country or city called Salem, and he was the priest of his people. He was called "the king of peace," and Christ is called "the Prince of Peace." Christ is our king and our priest, and in these respects Melchizedek was a type of Christ. I suppose that Melchizedek, in his day, was opposed to war, and that he promoted and encouraged peace among the kingdoms and kings around him. He was contemporary with Abraham, lived at the same time and in the same part of the world. His home may have been in the city of Salem, afterwards the site of Jebus and Jerusalem. We say may have been because we have no certain or definite information on this part of the subject. The main point is that Melchizedek was not born a priest, did not come of a priestly family. His father was not a priest, nor was his mother of priestly parentage; hence, so far as the priesthood is concerned, "he was without father or mother." There was no beginning of his priesthood in the sense of an established order of priests. Melchizedek had no predecessor and no successor in his priesthood. He was specially called and divinely anointed for a specific work, and in these particulars he is the fittest type of Christ found in the Bible. The Jews, or Hebrews, were great sticklers for the heretical priesthood. They did not, and would not, accept any one as a priest who was not of the tribe of Levi. Christ came of the tribe of Judah. He was not of the right tribe nor of the right family to be accepted as the priest of the Hebrews, who were exceedingly tenacious about "succession," orders, ordinances and the like.

Paul, in his letter to the Hebrews, or Jews, introduces the case of Abraham and Melchizedek, to show that the first Hebrew, the father of the faithful, recognized the priesthood of one who was not in the "succession," not of the tribe of Levi, nor of the family of Aaron. In asking them to recognize and acknowledge Christ as their priest he was only asking them to do what Abraham had done before Levi was born or the Aaronical priesthood was established. The Jews thought their father, Abraham, was the greatest man in the world; but Abraham thought Melchizedek greater than himself because he was divinely called and anointed priest of the Most High God. Anomalous as the claims of Christ might appear they were not wanting in precedent in the history of the Jews—in the word of God.

Paul admits—yes he affirms—that Christ is not of the tribe of Levi, not of a priestly family, not after the order of Aaron, not in the "regular succession;" but he is divinely called and appointed "to be a priest after the order of Melchizedek," to bring in and establish a new, better, everlasting and unchangeable priesthood.

The Levitical priesthood was preparatory—a schoolmaster to bring them to Christ, a finger-board pointing to completeness, fullness and permanency. The priesthood of Christ is not heretical, not Aaronical, but Melchizedekian. As "the king of the Hebrews, or Jews," he came of the right tribe, and he had a birth-right to the throne of David, but as a priest he was specially called and divinely anointed—was confirmed in his priesthood by the oath of God. He is our king and our priest. He needs no successor because he lives forever.

All this hue and cry about orders, ordinations and ordinances is after all only the remains of an effete system of Judaism. It is a new statue on the old pedestal. The foundation is the same. Men hope to attain and obtain perfection by the law, by ceremony, by ritualism, by orders, by imposition of hands and by a succession of baptisms. For the sake of order Methodists conform to order, but they set no soul-saving store by it. If we are divinely called and anointed by the Lord, as was Melchizedek and Christ, we are not concerned about "tactical succession," and "successional baptism." While others are wrangling about priestly paternity and maternity, about the imposition of hands and about the modes and methods of ritualism, our business is to go forth as "flames of fire," fed by the oil of grace and win the world for Christ. Give us the divine anointing and we would not give a fig for a "succession in orders and ordinances," even though they came from the apostles and from our Lord himself.

A divine call to the work, and a divine anointing for it, is worth a million times more than all the ritualistic regulations of all the churches in all the ages of the world. Paul's letter to the ritualistic Hebrews is a centre shot against ritualism in all its forms. The Hebrews had the succession and the orders and the ordinances linked and locked like hooks of steel, but with all these they were slow of heart, blind, deaf, dumb, dead and ready to be plucked up by the roots. And so it will be with us and with any people who attach more importance to the modes and methods of doing things than to the unction of the Holy One.

GILDEROY.

This is from the Methodist Protestant. We met a brother recently who must be blood-kin to that "old farmer."

I heard of an old farmer who had taken a paper for years without making a return. At length a bill was presented to him. He gazed at it in great astonishment, and then indignantly exclaimed: "Look a-here, I've been supportin' this here paper for eight years, and never had nothin' of this kind poked at me before; now you can just scratch my name off your list; I won't support you no longer," and, boiling over with virtuous indignation, he stalked away.

Our First Three Conferences Were neither Informal nor Illegal.

BY REV. J. G. JONES.

Mr. Editor: When I first began to notice such things I found a tradition among the Mississippi preachers that our first three Conferences were informal and illegal, and that the first legal Conference was held in the fall of 1816, at William Foster's, on Pine Ridge, near Natchez. I looked in the General Minutes and found that the Mississippi and Louisiana districts were included in the minutes of the Tennessee Conference in 1813 and 1815, and adopted the vague rumor that our first three Conferences were informal and illegal, and so wrote of them in my little book, published in 1866, entitled, "The Introduction of Protestantism in Mississippi and the Southwest." But when I was requested, by the unanimous vote of our Conference in 1872, to write a "Complete History of Methodism in the Mississippi Conference," I borrowed the written journal of our first Conferences from our secretary, and when I got to 1813 I wrote with that journal constantly before my eyes, and was not a little surprised to find in the journal and other official documents that our first three Conferences were as fully authorized and as formal and legal as any Annual Conference ever held in the absence of a Bishop. I will briefly state the facts in the case: The General Conference in 1812 divided the Western Conference into the Ohio and Tennessee Conferences, and authorized the Bishops, if they thought it best, "to appoint another Annual Conference, in the interval of the General Conference, down the Mississippi," etc. This they determined to do, and early in 1813 Bishop McKendree, with the concurrence of Bishop Asbury, wrote to Samuel Sellers, the presiding elder of the Mississippi district, to convene the preachers of the Mississippi and Louisiana districts at Sprigg Hill, in Jefferson county, November 1, 1813, for the purpose of organizing and holding an Annual Conference to be called the Mississippi Conference, and promising to be there himself. When the Bishops attended the Tennessee Conference, Bishop McKendree was still intent on visiting the Mississippi Conference, but such was the danger of traveling through the intervening Indian nations on account of the Creek war then raging in Alabama that the Tennessee Conference passed a formal resolution requesting him not to risk a journey through the Indian wilderness to Mississippi. He submitted with great reluctance, as he was compelled to do for the same reason in 1814 and 1815, but in accordance with the law of the church, as it was then, he appointed Samuel Sellers each year to preside over the Mississippi Conference, and we had the written journal of two of those Conferences with sundry official documents on file duly written and signed until they were consumed last January by the burning of our secretary's house in Vicksburg. The journals showed that those Conferences were legally held according to the laws of the church and all their transactions in the way of admissions on trial, election to orders, locations, etc., were sanctioned by succeeding Conferences in due course of time. The Conference of 1813 was held at Rev. Newell Vick's, near Spring Hill; the Conference for 1814 at Rev. John Ford's, on Pearl river, and for 1815 at a camp meeting, on Amite river, in Amite county. The fourth Conference, and the first one attended by a Bishop, was held at William Foster's, on Pine Ridge, in 1816. Bishop Roberts got there about the middle of the Conference, but said not a word about organizing or legalizing a new Conference. He took up the business upon which the Conference had just adjourned for dinner and finished it in the usual way. As the minutes of our first three Conferences had to go through Tennessee to reach the editor in New York for publication, William Vinans, at the conclusion of the first Conference, fearing that eleven young preachers might have done something illegal, offered a resolution, which passed, "that we send our journal to the Tennessee Conference for review and confirmation," but there is not one word authorizing the Tennessee Conference to have our two districts incorporated as a part of that Conference, as was done for three years. This was a grave mistake by whomsoever committed and has tended greatly to embarrass the early history of our Conference. But the General Minutes of those days have many deficiencies and mistakes. The age of our Conference dates from November 1, 1813, and has been as formal and legal from that date to the present time as any Conference in America. We have never given our Conference any fictitious name of boasted of its being the "mother of Conferences," but as the first one of the "old guard," I may modestly say that there are twelve Annual Conferences now on territory that first or last has belonged to the old Mississippi Conference, and our preachers are scattered far and wide in other Conferences. I trust a publication will be made at no distant day that will correct all our former errors in regard to our early history. I trust those who write reminiscences of early Methodism in Mississippi will cease to refer to our first three Conferences as informal and illegal, and our fourth Conference held at William Foster's, on Pine Ridge, as our first legal Conference. If the journal of the General Conference of 1812, the official acts of Bishops Asbury and McKendree and the now lost journals of our first Conferences are to be relied on all four were as fully legal as the laws of the church required them to be.

HARRISBURG, MISSISSIPPI.

The Great Revival at Fort Worth.

Mr. Editor: As your columns are always open to the pen of any of your subscribers, and I seldom see anything from Texas, I have several times thought that, perhaps, some of your readers might be glad to hear something of the working and advancement of religion in this great State. When I came here to live, two months ago, I, together with my wife, joined (by letter) the Fourth Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the pastorate of Rev. Horace Bishop, which is the only Southern Methodist Church in this city. The first thing that struck me was the large and devout congregation, the church being then and each Sunday since quite filled, and also the large proportion of hearers were young men, many of whom are members, and the reality and success of the religion that was preached, there having been on each Sunday from two to fourteen accessions. About six weeks ago Bro. Bishop began to hold a protracted meeting at the south side of the city in a large tent, which he kept up with the greatest success for about three weeks, resulting in many genuine conversions and in many accessions to the church; not only to our own, but also to some of other denominations. Some three weeks ago, in continuation of these meetings, he began a protracted service in his own church, which is still going on with unabated vigor and success. He holds a service every morning at half-past nine o'clock, which is always well attended, and such under God's blessing has been the good influence of these morning meetings that many men who are engaged in business leave their business cares for a short time and run in and stop part of the time if they are not able to remain till the close, thus showing to the world the deep interest they take in the work that is going on for Christ. The evening services begin at fifteen minutes past seven o'clock by preaching, and these services are always crowded with eager and attentive listeners. Bro. Bishop presents the gospel to his hearers with a simplicity and with a power that seems to be irresistible, and which, under God's blessing, has the effect, at the close of each sermon, of bringing many penitents to the altar seeking the salvation of their souls, and many others who are unable to overcome a natural diffidence signify their desire for the prayers of the Christian people by kneeling at their seats. God has been very gracious, and more than seventy persons of all ages have come forward and confessed their love for the Savior, and that they have found him precious to their souls, and we have every confidence there will be still further glorious results! Bro. Bishop is a man who is filled with love to his Master; he is a pulpit orator of great power, and commands and compels the undivided attention of his large audiences; he is blessed with indomitable energy and seems to know no fatigue, for in addition to this extra work he in no way neglects his other duties. During these meetings he has been seconded and assisted in his efforts to reclaim perishing sinners by ministers of the Presbyterian and Baptist denominations.

News reaches us from other parts of the State telling of the successful work for Christ going on there also, notably from Waco, where Rev. Sam Jones has been doing good and successful work, until from physical inability he has been obliged to give up and return to his home in Georgia. So let us thank God that this revival is not local only, but that the Holy Spirit is being poured out over the whole State. Prayer can accomplish anything, and let all good Christian people pray that the good work may now go on until this whole State, instead of being as is thought by many, the resort of the lawless and godless of mankind, shall shine forth before the world as a truly Christian State, and pray that our good Bro. Bishop, who began the work here, may be strengthened, physically and spiritually, to continue until he has gained the whole of this city.

PORT WORTH, TEXAS, OCT. 18, 1884.

Quarterly Review of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The October number of this periodical is before me, with a table of contents full of interest to the reader. This number contains eleven articles, besides Library Table and Views and Reviews. The first article on Bishop Pierce, by the editor, is one of great value. Dr. Hinton knew the Bishop, perhaps, as well as any one having had a life-long intimacy with him. He is just enough to his friend to show the points of his character, through which he was sometimes led to misjudge the worth and ability of men. What living man is free in all the faculties of mind and soul from the infirmities of the fall? On the other hand the editor brings out in strong contrast the wonderful power and goodness of the man. There is in the article a very strong and forcible hint to the church concerning the carefulness which ought to be exercised in the election of our Bishops. An improper man in this office would work immense damage to the church. However, the church was, perhaps, never more fortunate in the selection of one of her officers than in this instance. This article deserves a close and careful reading. The editor has brought under contribution to this number of the Review the facile pens of many men who insure delight in reading the whole book. Such men as Dr. J. A. O. Clark, Prof. Long, of the University of Mississippi, Rev. William Tucker, of Ohio, Rev. W. I. Gill, of Massachusetts, Rev. G. G. Smith, of Georgia, with others, insure the readers of the October number a rare, rich treat. The price of the Review has been reduced to $2.50 per year in advance, which brings it in the reach of all. This amount of money can not be better expended than for this well edited periodical.

Z. A. PARKER.

"Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters."

Mr. Editor: Under this heading, in a recent issue of the Advocate, the writer made an appeal for $125 to educate a young lady who felt called to be a missionary in foreign lands and desired to qualify herself for the work. The paper had hardly reached its last subscriber before the mails began to bring responses of contributions varying from three dollars to ten dollars until the amount has already reached sixty dollars. Greatly encouraged by this quick response from the States of Mississippi and Louisiana, and feeling assured that the amount needed will be raised without difficulty, I have decided to notify the young lady that I was ready to receive her, and by November 1 she will enter upon her duties in East Mississippi Female College. Allow me, through your columns, to convey to those already so generously contributing to this worthy object the grateful thanks of this young lady and the heartfelt gratitude of the writer that so many have offered to help him in educating her for this great work. Let others quickly respond and make up the desired amount. If you do not feel able to give five dollars, send one dollar, or let a number unite in giving a certain amount, so that by November 1 I may be able to announce that the amount has been made up.

A. D. HAYOOD.

MEMPHIS, MISS., OCT. 24, 1884.

The Dual Biography.

Mr. Editor: In your kind attention, last week, to the work I have undertaken your statement was a little inaccurate. It was the Monday before his death that Bishop Pierce asked me to complete the biography of his father; two years ago, when it seemed for a few hours that he might die, he intimated a desire that I should undertake the preparation of a biography of himself should it be called for. At the further request of his family, and by competent advice, I have decided to do what I can to place in book form a memorial of these good and great men—father and son, Dr. Lovick and Bishop F. Pierce. It will be difficult to do this work, as neither of them kept journals. The fragments, widely scattered, must be brought together. There is material, rich and varied, if it can be commanded. The main purpose of this note is to ask the help of the many friends of the "Old Doctor" and his eloquent son. There are thousands of letters which would help me; there are illustrative incidents that are invaluable. The letters are in desks, the incidents in the memory of friends. I ask for both—letters and incidents. I will be obliged for any letters, both the Doctor and the Bishop had a trick of saying apt and bright things in unexpected ways. Many times they put in a short, private letter a wise or witty sentence. I ask you to publish this, and will thank any who publish it.

A. D. HAYOOD.

EMORY COLLEGE, OXFORD, O., OCT. 17, 1884.

The three last Lord Chancellors of England have all been Sunday-school teachers.

The one hundredth anniversary of Sir Moses Montefiore, the great Hebrew philanthropist, was celebrated with elaborate demonstration throughout the country on Sunday evening last. In this city the Touro Synagogue was crowded with an enthusiastic audience, citizens of all classes and creeds uniting in the ceremonies. Several of the prominent city clergy were on the platform. Eloquent addresses were delivered by Ernest T. Florence, Esq., and Rev. Dr. Leucht.

Those were grand words of King Humbert, of Italy, uttered in reply to an invitation to attend the races at Pordenone. He was about ready to depart for the choir district in Naples and replied as follows: "At Pordenone they make merry. At Naples they die. I go to Naples, Humbert." They have a kingly grandeur of soul that give brilliancy to his crown and honor to his great name. In the hour of his peoples' trial he turned away from merry making to minister with his own hands to the suffering and dying. On his return from Naples he was given one of the grandest welcomes that ever greeted an earthly potentate. All along the line of travel the eager multitudes crowded around the train and sought to grasp his hand. All of which teaches us that good deeds crown with highest glory, even this earthly life. Humbert, the great king of the Iron Crown, is forgotten in the sovereign of the gentle heart and loving hand.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
THE LAST PLEA.

BY TRANSLATION.

"When he was set down on the judgment seat his wife sent him a look, saying: 'Have thou nothing to do with that just man, for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him.'"
—Matthew xxvii, 19.

Daughter of Rome, what could have been the spell in those moments, those terrible hours, in those cavernous strife (with heaven and hell), to raise thee "among the dead and warring powers?"

To hold thee right on the gorgeous bed—
A white enshrouding of terror loom:
To bid thee slum with such a thrill of dread
The balmy kisses of the orient morn'?

To cloud thy liquid eyes transparent rays
With such a look of agony possessed?
To move thy lips and fix thy far-off gaze,
As holding converse with some invisible guest?

But thine 'twas not to bear a feeble part,
And waste the hour in fruitless dread and pain;
But thine, as nearest, dearest to his heart,
To warn thy careless lord—also! in vain.

Nay, wilt thou say in vain? The soul to abate
From Herod's mockery of the King Divine,
The mind from hasty sentence to refrain,
Perchance thy warning raised—perchance were thine.

But thou that, while the powerful of the land,
The holy, such a wrong empire could see,
Didst nobly dare to lift the opposing hand,
To raise the pleading voice—oh! what of thee?

Didst watch those awful scenes with wondering eyes?
At Calvary's agony didst wildly grieve?
Didst tremble at the blackening earth and skies?
Daughter of guilty Rome, didst thou believe?

And like the watching soldier didst thou say,
"This righteous one! the Son of God was he!"
Or like the dying penitent didst thou pray,
"Lord, in thy kingdom, oh! remember me!"

Ah! who can say. Thy history, noble soul,
Is darkly writ, and God alone doth read;
And here accord us on the immortal scroll
Only the record of this one good deed.

That thou, a woman, delicate and weak,
"The sentence of a guilty world didst break;
And, though of alien race and faith, didst speak
The last—the only plea for Jesus' sake."

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of Rev.
Geo. Shaeffer.

(Continued.)

April, 1848: I was pleased to see an article in the Southern Christian Advocate calling the attention of the religious public to the case of overseers and managers of large plantations and factories. The remarks were just and appropriate, and I hope will not be lost.

I have been laboring the last two years on a colored mission, where I have been much in contact with this class of men, and have had frequent conversations with them upon religious subjects, and can but feel a deep interest in their welfare. I have always found them polite and friendly and quite accessible on the subject of religion.

As the writer of the above article has correctly observed, "they occupy highly responsible stations, having uninterrupted control and influence over a greater number of human beings than, perhaps, any other class of men in these United States," and it would exert a powerful influence upon the interests of colored missions and the destiny of the colored people if the overseers could be brought under the influence of Christian principles and feelings. I feel happy to state that I have seen a number of these men converted since I have been among them, and though they have a trying employment to Christian temper, they make quite exemplary and zealous Christians.

It is a general impression among the irreligious overseers that it is impossible to be a Christian and pursue their calling, and they generally compromise with their consciences by determining to quit the business after awhile and then attend to the subject of religion.

I was much interested in hearing an overseer, who was converted last summer, speaking of his exercises not long since. He said he had firmly thought that it was impossible to be a Christian overseer, but he had now come to the conclusion that religion was the best qualification for that business. His business did not harass him as it had formerly done; everything went on smoothly and pleasantly. He said, formerly, he had to be always studying about his business, and sometimes could not sleep at night because of the anxiety of his mind. Now he scarcely thought of his business at all; he seemed aided in its management, and had no difficulty in determining what was to be done without care or distraction of mind. He has erected a little church on the plantation, and has preaching two or three times in the month to the blacks, who are nearly all religious, and everything moves like clock-work. He has about fifty or sixty hands under him. I knew another overseer who was a professor of religion, but somewhat cold. He concluded last summer that he did not enjoy religion enough, and he went into his gin-house determined to pray till his soul was blessed. The Lord answered his prayers. He was powerfully blessed, and praised God aloud by himself in the gin-house. From that, a grand revival broke out among the blacks, and about thirty grown persons were converted in a few months, and the overseer is their friend and adviser on religious subjects, and does not compromise his authority either. He has good discipline, and is acknowledged to be an excellent overseer. Another was converted last summer who was a very wicked man. He told me that he could scarcely believe he was the same man afterwards. Things that once worried and fretted him dreadfully now had no influence upon him nor disturbed his peace at all.

I hope the time will come when all the overseers will be praying men, and a chapel for the worship of God will be regarded as indispensable on a plantation as a gin-house or corncrib. The colored missions must be the principal agency by which this great work is to be accomplished. These carry the gospel to the families, they introduce our periodicals, tracts and other religious books among them, excite to reflection and conversation on the subject of religion, and bring salvation not only to the slave, but to the overseer and his master. I have heard the pious overseer praying for the convicted servant, and the pious servant praying for awakened and penitent overseers, and it was a sight over which angels might rejoice. I preached one night in a negro house. The overseer, as usual, sitting near my side. We had a refreshing time. The pious negroes were happy, and rejoicing in hope of heaven. I felt happy, and while the negroes were coming to me, taking me by the hand, as is their custom, I felt some one pulling my elbow. I looked round and found it was the overseer happy in God. He extended his hand to me and exclaimed, "Bless God, I feel like I am on my way." I love to witness such scenes; they seem to demonstrate the power of religion more than all the philosophic treatises in the world, and while the Methodist Church gives that attention to her colored missions that their importance demands, it may confidently be said the glory is not departed.

THE DISCOURAGEMENTS OF MISSIONARIES TO THE BLACKS.

I presume all ministers have causes of discouragement, and especially all missionaries. The gospel was planted in sacrifice, self-denial and suffering, and has been propagated in the world at the expense of its propagators, and thus it will be till the last victory is obtained and the last sinner converted. He that enters the Christian ministry as a refuge from toil and labor, or from motives of ease, convenience or self-aggrandizement, has utterly mistaken his calling and proves himself unworthy of the sacred office. I do not presume that the discouragements of a missionary to the blacks are greater than those of others, whose hearts are truly in their work, but as they are somewhat peculiar I will glance at some of them.

The first discouragement I will name is the humble character of the work. The blacks have no power, no patronage, their smiles are not courted, their frown are not dreaded by any. There are no laurels to be gathered among them. Even their religion is considered by many to be of an inferior grade, consisting of animal excitement and hypocrisy. Now for a minister of the gospel to be engaged in preaching to such a class of beings, feeling that himself and his work are alike partakers of degradation, will often prove a temptation to him to feel discouraged. It is true that the great and popular preachers will say it is the most honorable and important field in the Conference; but he discovers very readily that he has but few competitors for his honor, and but few of the great ones have a call to this important and honorable station. It is evident to him that many of them would feel themselves degraded to be placed in his position, and it requires much grace and humility to sustain a man as a missionary to the blacks.

Another discouragement arises out of want of suitable preaching arrangements. If there was a snug chapel erected on each plantation, with seats and pulpit, however rough, it would have an encouraging influence. But to go into a contracted, dirty negro cabin, where there is scarcely room to turn round, partly filled with the beds of negroes and old trumpery, such as old horse collars, broken stools, bread trays and little negroes, and then the house filled with smoke in winter and steam in summer is quite disagreeable.

The stupidity and insensibility of the blacks often discourages the missionary. To find half of his congregation asleep when he reads out his text, and sleeping throughout the sermon, notwithstanding all the hunching and twitching of those who sit beside them, and to see the balance listless and unconcerned, notwithstanding all the warmth, zeal and energy of his sermon is calculated to put his patience and faith to a pretty strong test. After laboring hard all the forenoon in the hot sun, and then to sit perfectly still for an hour, it seems exceedingly difficult to keep them awake. In many places it is manifest that a two-fold awakening must take place before they can be converted. I know one black man, a professor of religion, who in his zeal followed me, on foot, to three appointments on Sabbath, and slept the whole time I was preaching at each place. He seemed quite alive when waked up at the close of the sermon, and enjoyed himself much, but for all the profit he derived from my preaching he might as well have been listening to a waterfall.

The degraded state of morals among them is another discouragement. These vices and crimes that are considered highly disgraceful among the whites are scarcely regarded as wrong among many of them; lying and stealing are not discountenanced. There has been a total neglect of moral training in their children and youth, and they are generally devoid of moral principles. Nothing but fear of punishment keeps them generally from indulging in any kind of vicious conduct. They have but little self-respect. The marriage bond is exceedingly weak, and it is very difficult to elevate the standard of morals among them. Some of them seem to think they can have two or three wives; and be very good Christians. They can steal chickens or rob the smoke-house without marring their religious prospects in the least.

The missionary has a very limited opportunity for doing good among his charge. He has no opportunity for personal acquaintance among them. On work days they work to the time of meeting, and immediately return; at night it is nine o'clock before he can commence, and by the time he is through all parties want rest. On Sabbath he has three appointments; of course no time to delay. He can not associate with his charge in that familiar intercourse which gives success to the official laborer among the whites. He must necessarily be to a greater extent a stranger among them, and of course, there will not be that love and fellowship which gives the minister so much influence among the whites of his flock. There can not be that congeniality, that sympathy which is so essential to usefulness in the ministry. There is, and must be, too great a difference in the condition of the minister and his congregation. They may respect him, they may have confidence in him, yet still there will be an immense distance between the white man and the slave. Public sentiment compels him to take a position that prevents familiarity, such as is found in white persons. There is but little chance to make special efforts for their conversion; all has to be done in the course of a single sermon, and the good impressions made at one meeting are frequently worn off before the next.

(To be continued.)

Vote for St. John.

Let every Prohibitionist—every voter in favor of no liquor—vote at the approaching election, in November, for St. John. You say, "It will do no good." Yes, it will. It will do immediate and lasting good; good that will never be eradicated in all the coming ages. I know, of course, that there is no chance for the election of a Prohibitionist President in the present canvass and election. Not even the most enthusiastic Prohibitionist hardly dreams of such an event. But Prohibitionists everywhere should poll their votes for St. John in order to educate public sentiment on the great question of prohibition. There is nothing equal to the ballot box when public opinion is to be aroused on some political issue. It is well known that the Abolitionists talked and wrote for years with little or no effect, so far as actually abolishing slavery was concerned; but when, in 1840, they changed the mode of attack and appealed to the people's great tribunal, the ballot box, they set in operation a plan that elected an Abolitionist President in twenty years, and in four years longer freed every slave living under the stars and stripes. And yet only 7,000 votes were polled then for Binney, the first Abolitionist candidate for the Presidency. Of course, not one of those 7,000 men, who then "threw away their votes," expected Binney to be elected no more than the Prohibitionists expect St. John to be President of these United States after the November election; but they did expect and predict also that their votes, which were "cast into the air," would tell upon public sentiment in such a manner as to poll an increasing vote at every succeeding presidential election till abolitionism was a success. History, experience and personal observation too well attest the speedy fulfillment of the prediction and the realization of all their anticipations. May it not be the case, will it not be the case with reference to the prohibition movement now—the abolition of an unmitigated curse—a thousand-fold greater than that of slavery? It is so predicted; it is so believed.

It will take a great deal of patriotism, pure and genuine, if not considerable grace, to vote for St. John in the coming election. Such voters will be derided and scorned at all along the line of voting precincts as means for their intimidation; by Republicans, on the one hand, to secure votes for Blaine, and by Democrats, on the other, to secure votes for Cleveland. But let no Prohibitionist, Republican or Democrat falter a moment as to his duty. The derision of a whole nation was heaped upon 7,000 brave men, in 1840, who dared to swing loose from mere party and cast the entering wedge of a successful political movement in the body politic. Prohibition as a political issue must be decided at the ballot box; but it must also have a beginning there. Why not date this wonderful beginning, November 4, 1884. Prohibition stands in the same place in one respect that abolitionism did in 1840. It must be willing to risk the defeat of this or that party at the polls before it can succeed. Seven thousand men adopted this motto in 1840 and succeeded in twenty years. Can not an immense host of Prohibitionists assert the same manhood and succeed in much less time? It is so believed.

What we need in politics more than anything else is a living devotion to principle, a disposition and determination to do the right, though the heavens fall. So far as prohibition is concerned, a Republican reign or a Democratic rule are identical; they both favor the license and sale of intoxicating liquors. This no one can deny. The way of duty is, therefore, plain to all Prohibitionists whether they be Republicans or Democrats. They should vote for St. John. Let no man shrink from duty because he happens to be in the minority. Let every Prohibitionist summon enough moral principle on the fourth day of November to cast in a prohibition vote. This is the all-absorbing issue of the hour, and should secure our vote. The tariff question involves a financial consideration of about one hundred and thirty million of dollars, while that of prohibition is seven hundred million. Therefore let us vote in the direction in which the greater evil lies. If we had intoxicating liquors ostracised and banished from this great land of ours, the United States would be the paradise of the world. As it is, we are going to hell at a full gallop.

"We are living, we are dwelling,
In a grand and awful time,
In an age, our ages telling,
To be living is sublime."

Let our cry, therefore, be: "Down with the liquor traffic! Vote for prohibition!" Let us be called fools, impracticables, visionary men—what of it? The time is soon coming when we will be recognized as the salt of the earth. The gods will be recognized after they have left the earth. Vote, therefore, for prohibition. And if you can not vote "straight out" for electors pledged for St. John in your State, then (1) pair off with some voter in the Republican ranks if you are a Democrat, and vice versa if you are a Republican. (2) Let Republican and Democratic tickets be prepared in each State with St. John and Daniels for President and Vice-President printed at the head of each ticket. Now, let the Republican Prohibitionist who feels that he must not vote for Blaine, and can not pair off with some Democrat, vote the Republican electoral ticket which has St. John's name printed at the top. And vice versa with the Democrat. The result will be that this vote will have his vote recorded for St. John, but will actually be cast for Blaine and Cleveland, respectively. Thus the temperance vote will be recorded and nobody hurt. And let us remember that "the whisky interest of America is pledged to vote as a unit, irrespective of party affiliation, against any candidate for the Legislature or for Congress who will not in writing pledge himself against prohibition." Let us weigh the meaning of the pledge and go and do likewise. J. J. MULLINGSLEY.

Revival Correspondence.

We have just closed a good meeting at Bogue Chitto; said to be the best ever held in the place. Twelve joined the church and seven professed conversion. Bro. Robert Havers, Robert Germany and James Tucker—local preachers—gave valuable service in the meeting. We took into the church some of the best material of the town.

W. M. HINES.

October 17, 1884.

Have closed my protracted meetings on Richmond circuit. Am able to report the faith of the church quickened and a number of valuable accessions. Collections all right. Am indebted to Bros. I. W. Cooper and H. R. Singleton, of the Mississippi Conference, and T. Y. Ramsey, T. A. Adams and G. D. Wade, of the North Mississippi Conference, for faithful and valuable help. God bless these brethren.

THOMAS CAMERON.

GOULMAN, MISS., Oct. 14, 1884.

Our meeting began last Monday. The Rev. J. B. Stone, of Verona, has for the last week been preaching for us, and his ministry is in demonstration and power of the Holy Ghost. A perceptible solemnity prevails among us. Quite a number have professed conversion and joined the Methodist Church. At almost, or quite every service there are conversions. But we still hope and pray for even greater displays of power divine. Pray for us.

W. T. BOWWELL.

KOSCIUSKO, MISS., Oct. 20, 1884.

Bro. R. T. Davis held a very successful meeting this year at Salem, on the Tranquil circuit. There were twenty-two accessions and a number of conversions. Our membership at Salem was almost doubled, and all were greatly revived. The very best Christian feeling and brotherly love exist in the church at present. There seems to be a spirit of harmony prevailing, which is very pleasant indeed. Bro. Davis has done, and is doing, a great work here, and we trust that fruits will result from his labors many days hence.

HENRY CHRISTMAS.

NEAR LEXINGTON, MISS., Oct. 18, 1884.

We have just finished our round of protracted meetings. Every church was revived except one. The Lord was with us and reclaimed the backsliders. Stirred up his people to a redoubling of their diligence, awakened sinners by scores. One hundred and sixteen professed faith in Christ, and seventy have joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. One new church built. The attendance has been all we could have expected and, though the crops are short, we expect to report our collections in full as ordered by the Conference. Many thanks to Revs. Roberson, Porter, McKintire, Haynie and Miller for valuable service rendered.

D. W. HARR.

NEW ALBANY, MISS., Oct. 17, 1884.

I have just closed my protracted meeting at this place, which, I think, everything considered, was a success. There are only a few families in this place, and the congregation is a mixture of Catholics, Baptists and Methodists. Services were held nine times, which resulted in thirteen accessions, with some as bright, clear cases of conversions as I ever saw, and the church is considerably revived. I had no ministerial assistance at all in this meeting, but we thank the good Lord for these good Christian ladies in our little town who are so willing to work for the Lord. Like the sunlight of a bright day their influence will live and shine long after they are gone to their reward. Pray for us.

L. J. JONES.

WINCHESTER, MISS., Oct. 17, 1884.

We have just closed a series of meetings at Friar's Point, which resulted in more than fifty conversions and a glorious revival of the church. I never saw greater power manifested before, but once in twenty-five years. The meeting lasted seventeen days. Bro. Bowen, of Corinth, was with us eleven days, and did faithful work, preaching with power and marshaling the forces as no other man in this Conference can do. He is at home in a protracted meeting, and can not be discouraged or driven from the field. We have had in this charge during the year more than sixty conversions and fifty accessions to the church and another class yet to receive. The Greenville district is on rising ground, though sorely afflicted by the floods of last spring.

J. H. HONNELL.

FRIAR'S POINT, MISS., Oct. 15, 1884.

Mrs. Emiline Hamilton.

In an historical engraving representing the pioneers of Methodism, there are nearly three hundred faces—fifty of which are portraits of mothers in our Israel—no mean proportion when it is remembered that comparatively few of the preachers in the early days were married. If we take the two hundred and fifty eminent men there represented, we find that the married among them are out of all proportion to the rule obtaining at a time when celibacy was thought to be essential to the work of the itinerancy. The most learned and the most eloquent of the heroes of Methodism were almost without exception men who married wives and brought up families, while, beyond all controversy, a like superiority is seen in the work of the pastorate. To the gentle home ministry of patient, godly, self-sacrificing wives must be attributed much of the success of the men who in their holy calling became famous in the annals of history. If those partners of their labors and sufferings and triumphs did not become famous here, their record is on high; and in "that day" their reward is sure.

It is evident that a gentle, godly woman who exercises a refining and ennobling influence over the life of a Christian minister, stimulating him to heroic effort and patient endurance in his high vocation, will prove a blessing also to the church to which he ministers. The whole church is the beneficiary of her labor of love, and they that tarry by the stuff should be sharers with those who gather spoils from the field.

One of the most eminent men our church has ever produced pays a noble tribute to his wife as being the one:

"To whose cheerful self-denial and devotion to my work; to whose rigid economy in administering domestic expenditures; to whose ready adjustment of her wants to the exigencies of a meager support in our earlier life; to whose careful and godly training of our children in my protracted absences from home, and to the example of whose faith and purity of heart I am more deeply indebted as a Methodist preacher than anyone except my Maker can know." In the light of such a tribute is it not safe to assume, that to Harriet Brotherton the church at large is indebted for its knowledge of Bishop Marvin?

In the death of Sister Hamilton our church in Mobile has been recently called to mourn the loss of one of the best of women. And we do mourn her departure with grief unfeigned. She was born in Malden, Mass., December 26, 1811, was converted in her girlhood and entered with all the enthusiasm of an ardent spirit into a life-long service for the church. In 1832 she married Jefferson Hamilton, then a young minister in the New England Conference, who after serving the societies of Weymouth, Salem, Randolph and Abington and Brookfield and Church Street stations, in the city of Boston, was compelled by failing health to come South in 1834, leaving his wife and two children behind until he could find a suitable field of labor. He attended the session of the Alabama Conference, intending to join that body; but the exigencies of the church in New Orleans, where Methodism was then struggling for a foothold, caused the Bishop to send him to that city, where he labored for two years—after which he returned to Alabama, where, after a service of thirty-five years, he died in the midst of his brethren during Conference session in Opelika, in 1874. In the galaxy of great preachers who adorned the Alabama Conference in his day he was the most conspicuous star. As was truthfully said of him by Dr. Andrews: "In the active field of Christian enterprise he was for many years without a peer. He did more than any other man in molding the character of the preachers, in directing their efforts for the welfare and salvation of the people, and in fixing a high standard of faith and usefulness." In all his labors and conflicts he was most ably seconded by his devoted wife. In devotion to the church her superior is scarcely to be found. Like Mrs. Marvin, she knew how to "adjust her wants to the exigencies of a meager support." The records of the New England Conference show that while they were stationed at Salem, Mass., her husband's "deficiency claim" was nearly two hundred and twenty dollars, and on this received only eight dollars and twenty-five cents. When we remember that the allowance at that day was about three hundred dollars for the preacher and his wife, we are forced to conclude that must have been a hard year at the Salem parsonage, if one they had. But it is safe to say that no complaint escaped her lips.

Sister Hamilton was a woman of fine presence and superior mental endowments. Her brain, heart and hands were always employed for the Master. She planned and worked incessantly for the church. She was a gifted conversationalist and was mighty in the Scriptures and in prayer, while her love-feast and class meeting talks were a delight to all who were privileged to hear the testimony she gave for Christ. She read much. The standard works of theology were familiar to her, and while she delighted in devotional works, she kept fully posted in the literature of the day. She was true to every call of duty. Only once in her life was she known to shrink from the path marked out for her, and that was when her husband offered himself as a missionary to Africa to succeed the fallen Melville B. Cox, who died on that inhospitable coast. She never felt that she did wrong in urging his abandonment of that enterprise; but it is probable that the fact of this refusal operated on all her after life, rendering her doubly anxious to make full proof of her ministry at home. I think she knew as many poor people as any other woman in Mobile, and as her pastor, I can testify to her zeal and liberality on their behalf. It is doubtful if she ever turned away a poor person unhelped.

She not only kept abreast, but ahead, of the great enterprises of the church. Long before the Woman's Missionary Society of our church was inaugurated she had by correspondence connected herself with that of the Church, North, but after our church took up the work she was one of its most zealous supporters, and in her will she bestowed a legacy upon it. Her interest extended to every enterprise of the church, and she rejoiced in them all. Her home was a model of neatness and thrift, and when she left the parsonage it was in thorough repair. She guided her affairs with discretion. Every tenth dollar was the Lord's, kept apart for the Master's use. The last time I looked in her little box it was nearly empty; but there was no need that it be replenished, for the sands of life were nearly run out all well. For years it had been her custom to contribute to the class-room and spend an hour in prayer for God's blessing upon her pastor and the church that day; also pouring out her soul with all a mother's fervor for her youngest son, who, a preacher in the Alabama Conference, she never ceased to thank God who had called him to this exalted station.

The infirmities of age oppressed her, still she would come with tottering gait to the house of God. At last, with moistened eyes, she said, "I can come no more." Then we knew the end was near. Nature yielded rapidly, but she murmured not. Conscious the end could not be far off, she closed her household and went with her youngest son to his home, in Marianna, Fla., where in a few weeks she received the summons, "Come up higher." As a wife, mother, Christian, in every relation to the church and the world, she served her generation according to the will of God, and so fell on sleep July 29, 1884.

R. H. CHAMBERLAIN.

Mobile, Alabama.

Mrs. Pickett's Missionary Box.

BENEFITS AT A CENT APiece.

"That there missionary box," said Mrs. Pickett, surveying it with her head on one side, as it stood in state on the best parlor mantel, "that there missionary box is worth its weight in gold two or three times over to me. You'd never believe it, Miss Malcom. The things I've been able to do ever since Mary Pickett, she brought it home, or rather the mate to it, as 'told me she'd brought me a present from meetin'."

"Do tell me about it!" said the new minister's wife, with girlish pleasure at the prospect of a story.

"I've half a notion to," replied her hostess. "You've got a real drawin' out way with you, Miss Malcom. Some way you make me think of Mary Pickett herself, that was the beginning of it all, she that's a missionary to the things I've been able to do. You know, you've got your colored hair and you're light complected like her, too. Mary Pickett was always a nigger hand for laughin'." I remember when she laughed that afternoon when she came in with them two boxes, an' 'told me she was fifteen, an' I won't say but I do know but she done it jest for a joke. It was five years ago, you know, and I was scrapin' along with my boarders, an' rents was high, an' I didn't make both ends meet. I can tell you, though it was half a century ago, I thought it was. I was that downhearted that everything looked cross to me, and I'd got to have her feelings against every one 'told me they got along easier 'n me, for all I give up going to church an' to meet, an' I was a professor, an' I won't say but what I had murmurin' against Providence—fact is, I know I had—if you ask a minister's wife, an' so it was, an' another work, from one week's end to another. I never thought of nuthin' else. Then Mary Pickett she'd come over from school, where she'd been over since she was fifteen, for she took all the money her pa left her, to get an education, so 't she teach; an' she come to place in a grammar school an' come to board with me, an' she'd told me she was full of missions to that school till the day of 'em, an' the very first mornin' after she came, she walked out in the kitchen, an' she says:

"Auntie, an' you comin' to mis-

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. E. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. S. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER, REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1884.

$4,000!

This was the splendid Centenary offering at Jackson, Miss., on Sunday last. It will doubtless be increased to five thousand dollars before Conference. Many congregations in our patronizing Conferences have done well, but as yet Jackson carries the banner.

$3,000.

Rev. J. S. Oakley, writing from Starkville, North Mississippi Conference, says: "You can put down $3,000 Centenary contribution from Starkville station, with 'more to follow.'" $641.35.

The Centenary collection at Meridian, Miss., on last Sunday, amounted to $641.35, and more to follow. So writes Bro. McVoy.

Nine pastoral charges in the Plattsburg district, Missouri Conference, paid all assessments for salaries and educational funds in full. That's a good report. The Rev. M. B. Chapman presides over that district, which may, in a measure, account for this gratifying result. We raised him in the South-west.

The presiding elders are on the fourth round. The time "that tries men's souls," as Post Oak circuit says, is upon the churches. Let special effort be made to pay up the salaries of pastors. The assessment is small, and if on that there be deficiency, the man of God will suffer want, and those appointed "to serve tables" will have solemn account to render. We plead with the church to pay her promises to the last cent. An unpaid pulpit is largely shorn of its power.

"CALAMITY WATER."—We were sitting in the office of a hotel listening to the conversation of several loquacious drummers. They were discussing a recent bank failure in the town. At length one, representing a whisky house, seized his "line of samples" and started out. Another addressed him: "Say, friend, are you an agent for bank safes?" "No," he replied, "I'm selling calamity water." It was a new name for the foul drug, and we thought quite appropriate and suggestive. It is par excellence "calamity water." What other thing afflicts the human family with a tinge of its sorrow? Calamity to home, society, the nation and to individual prosperity results from the traffic and drinking of that "water."

A Methodist brother, whose little daughter was attending the Sunday-school of another denomination, remarked that in such matters he thought children ought to choose for themselves. He considered his course a great expression of liberality—a rebuke to narrow, bigoted sectarianism. But we regard it a sickly sentimentalism that has in it neither reason nor religion. The idea of a child making selection of theological instructors—of following its own fancy, or folly, and for a parent to approve and applaud! Every father, by Divine appointment, is the prophet, priest and king of his own household. The duties of these offices are imperative, and can not be neglected or relegated. He is to instruct, counsel, control and direct his children. They can not be allowed to command their own actions without hurt to themselves, sorrow to the parent and a violation of the law of God. We have known a few Methodists who refrained from baptizing their children for fear that they might be dissatisfied with it in after years and prefer another mode. Without hesitancy we say such persons commit a moral wrong. If they believe the Scriptures teach the right and duty of infant church membership, wrong is done if it be denied to the little ones God gives them. What they may do in after years is not their concern. If they choose to repudiate their child baptism and consecration to God, upon them rests the responsibility. But the parents' duty is plain. All such quibbling is unworthy of a healthy religious life. Let present duty be discharged whatever the evolutions of the future.

"A Methu Pucker."

This is the title of a delectable diatribe in the last issue of our Romish cotemporary, the Morning Star. It was provoked by our articles on Romish losses. Unable to answer argument or disprove statistics, he makes a lame attempt at ridicule. No doubt "the faithful" will think he is very brave, while he fancies that he is a marvelous defender of the faith. Romish bluster has so persistently proclaimed its mighty progress in America until the uninformed have begun to believe it. And when the facts are published this Jesuitical fustian gets into a terrible rage. Without testimony he makes flat denial and, like a pouting school-boy, says, "You're another." We very naturally discounted statistics that varied three millions in ten, and asserted that no reliance could be placed in Romish pretensions as to numbers. This the Star writer, or router, strangely, but freely, admits. He says: "The CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE gentleman, moreover, is indignant that we do not know whether the Catholics in this country number seven or ten million. But this is really not our fault, as we have never counted them, nor has anyone else." (The italics are ours.) Just so. We knew there was no authority or data for his wild guess, and now the Star makes bold acknowledgment like a little man. If no one has ever counted them, why not guess twenty million? It is just as easy to say twenty as ten, and it would make you feel so much bigger. But there really is such a thing as a Roman Catholic "Year-Book," albeit the Star editor is ignorant of its unreliable contents. It doesn't pretend to give communicant members, but estimates the Roman Catholic population. Taking these extravagant estimates as true, we will give the Star an easy little sum in arithmetic. The following figures are compiled by Dr. Dorchester from church "Year-Books":

Population of the Evangelical Churches.	Roman Catholic Population.
In 1800, 1,277,052	100,000
In 1850, 12,354,958	1,614,000
In 1870, 23,368,886	4,600,000
In 1880, 35,230,870	6,367,330

These figures show the relative position and growth of these two religious classes during the century. The increase has been:

Evangelical Pop.	R. C. Population.
1800-1880, 33,953,818	6,267,330
1850-1880, 22,013,912	4,733,330
1870-1880, 11,873,784	1,767,330

From 1800 to 1880 the Evangelical population increased 5.42 times more than the whole Roman Catholic population; from 1850 to 1880, 4.80 times more, and from 1870 to 1880, 6.75 times more. The last ten years have been, relatively, the best for Evangelical progress.

But, in order to demonstrate the fact that Roman Catholics have suffered immense losses in the United States, we will quote the words of Romanists themselves. And these may be found, with reference to chapter and page, in the volume quoted above:

In 1837, Bishop England, of South Carolina, in a letter to Lyons Propaganda, said: "If there had been no losses, the number of Catholics would have amounted to 4,000,000."

In 1852, Rev. Robert Mullen, D. D., said: "Of the number of Irish Catholics emigrating to the United States, one-third, at least, are lost to the Roman Catholic Church." He also said that Rev. Bishop Reynolds, of Charleston, S. C., told him, "You will save religion by proceeding, on your return to Ireland, from parish to parish, telling people not to lose their immortal souls by coming to America;" and that Archbishop Hughes said to him, "The people at home (Ireland) do not understand fully the position of emigrants—thousands being lost in the large cities, while in the country the faith has died out of multitudes."

In 1855, the editor of the Celt, lecturing in Ireland, said to his countrymen, "Stay at home, because the Roman Catholic Church loses sixty per cent. of the children of Roman Catholic parents in the United States."

In 1862, the Bishop of Toronto put down their loss "from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000." In 1864, The Tablet, New York City, said: "Few insurance companies, we venture to assert, would take a risk on the national life of a creed which puts five hundred daily into the grave for one it wins over to its communion; and yet this is what the Catholic Church is doing in these States while we write."

The German Catholic "Year-Book," for 1869, estimated the loss at "1,700,000 in 15 years." In 1875, an Archbishop in Ireland, after visiting the United States, told the people on his return: "It is far better for you to live here in poverty, and die in the faith, and be sure of saving your immortal souls, and going to heaven, than to go to a country where thousands of our race, our Irish race, deny the faith."

In his "Life of Archbishop Spaulding," the author, speaking of the period from 1700 to 1870, says: "We have lost in numbers by far more than we have gained, if I may express an opinion, beyond all doubt." Mr. J. O'Kane Murray, in his "History of the Catholic Church in the United States," says: "It may be safely said that more Catholics have fallen away from the faith in this country during the last century and a half than are to-day living in it."

Other testimony could be adduced; but this ought to be enough to satisfy even the dense ignorance of the Star writer. The period of largest increase to Romanism in this country was from 1850 to 1870, when immigration from Catholic countries was so enormous. The last ten years has marked a greater proportionate advance to Evangelical religion than any previous decade. The free air of liberty-loving America is not favorable to the noxious growth of the Romish hierarchy. No wonder so many go astray and so many children forsake them. Contact with intelligence destroys superstition, and when that is gone a Romish devotee ceases to be. The poet, Longfellow, describes a certain innocent class who regard the boundary line of the horizon around their homes as the end of the world. So the Star editor writes for a mass of ignorance in this city who think, because Rome is somewhat numerous here, she is everywhere. But in New Orleans her power is broken. Protestant spirit and intelligence is in the ascendant. Popular education has done the work. Roman superstition and priestcraft can not stand before the Bible and spelling-book—the school-house and an evangelical ministry. Hundreds of Catholic children attend our public schools in defiance of priestly pleadings, "puckering" and protests. All we ask, belated "Star" of the evening, is that you shed more light. If it will provoke you to open your eyes, we'll "pucker;" but in the meantime you pray—don't say prayers.

Centenary at Jackson, Miss.

Last Sunday was observed as Centenary day at the capitol city of Mississippi, and a red-letter day it was. The weather was quite inclement, with lowering clouds and a cold rain falling the entire day. But, nothing daunted, the people came out and the church was well filled. Tasteful, deft hands had appropriately and beautifully decorated the church—all of which added much to the charm and cheerfulness of the service. In the rear of the pulpit there was a large semi-circle of Roman letters in evergreen forming the words: "Centenary of American Methodism." Under one end of the arch was the name and date of "Asbury, 1784," and immediately underneath, the figures, "15,000." Under the other end of the arch was the name of "Pierce, 1884," and just beneath, the figures, "4,165,723." The whole was fringed with ivy, with an evergreen cross in the center, while on either side of the pulpit were beautifully arranged hot-house plants, and on the chancel in front a silver waiter of the rarest, brightest flowers. The cheery freshness of the church inside contrasted happily with the gloomy weather without.

In no place is the editor more at home than before that congregation, and nowhere has he ever found more generous response to his appeals. Often have we discoursed there on distinctive facts and distinguished characters in Methodist history, but the service last Sunday was seemingly none the less enjoyed. After the sermon an opportunity was afforded to make Centenary thank-offerings, and in a few minutes there was a response of $4,000. Other amounts have been promised, but not yet officially reported. We doubt not the offering will exceed five thousand dollars. When all had joined in singing the old doxology, and received the apostolic benediction, they began congratulating each other upon the glad and grateful results of the day. A happier congregation we have not seen. And thus it all ways is after a good collection. It may begin seriously; but, if the amount secured surpasses expectation, all feel happy, and none so much so as those who give most liberally.

Much, though not all, of this offering will be devoted to the completion of the new church projected two years ago. But for certain misfortunes the building would have been finished ere this. Everything now betokens a gratifying success of the grand enterprise. When completed according to plans and specifications, it will be one of the handsomest pieces of church architecture in the State, and be at the same time a marvel and monument of economy.

The proposed children's Centenary meeting in the afternoon was necessarily postponed on account of the very disagreeable weather. On next Sunday afternoon their offering will be made.

Sunday in New York.

Men make great cities; God great days. Some of these are occasional; others periodic. Some great cities—perhaps, the greatest—have failed to impress the ages with anything but their size and magnificence. Like the skeletons of the mammoth zengodon dinotherium and other monsters of animal antiquity, the bones of Nineveh and Babylon are to-day dug up and strung together. These are occasional. Political Athens, Rome, Carthage, London, Washington are repetitions of ages in the world's clock. They are periodic. With these occasional and periodic cities come days of greatness and splendor that men celebrate. But God's great days shine on his cities and they need not the light of the sun or moon. So Sunday comes in New York to shine with direct rays on God's New York and either reflected or diffused rays on the world's New York.

One can no more see all of Sunday in one day than he can see all of New York in the same time. When he attempts both at once he is a pre-organized failure. So that your readers may know that either I have taken the wrong text or that I am going to "dash." But sometimes a "dash" is better than a "center shot." Some men have been so wonderfully unlucky as to hit the mark sometimes when they ought not to. The hunter who "shot so as to kill" it was a deer and to miss if it was a calf" was so unfortunate as to fire point-blank calf range. If I do this to-day, I shall grieve.

Yesterday I walked from the Metropolitan to the Church of the Strangers. Dr. Deems has not perceptibly changed unless it be in the voice. It occurs to me that six years ago it did not take so great an effort as now. He is always distinct in articulation; but to combine that with sufficient volume seems now to cost effort. He speaks along the back of the throat and the roof of the month—a method containing wonderful intensity and edge, but lacking the sweet, soothing effect of the palatal or the roundness and volume of the ore rotunda. I saw but one old—quite old—lady nodding, very few weeping and none scolding with eyes open to correspond with the mouth. Yet there were tears in answer to the touching beauty and tenderness of thought despite the fault of lacking the palatal. The Doctor will take this kindly criticism kindly I hope. I enjoyed his sermon very much, and shall draw upon it when I get to a nail-hole in my keg.

One beautiful feature of the service was the congregational singing. The choir sang its voluntary anthem when the Doctor entered; but when the hymns were given out they proved to be hymns and tunes that I knew. I was as much surprised as the Dutchman who, after reaching America, when he heard the first cat serenade, exclaimed, "Vy, Hans, dose is Dutch gats; dey sing shoost like dose in der faderland!" I could have shut my eyes and imagined I was in the backwoods of Mississippi could I only have heard the drawing brother or squeaking sister that may have melody in the heart, but none in the voice. Another feature was ninety-five orphan boys on one side of the gallery and, I suppose, the same number of girls on the other. They remained (two boys excepted) through the entire service and sang to the delight of the congregation the hymn after the sermon. I mention this particularly since with us the boys and girls think, if they attend Sunday-school, they are at liberty to go where they please for the rest of the day. It saddens me to go to a church where I have to preach only to old people.

I met a warm handshake from the Doctor, who said that he always read what I wrote. This statement fills me with trembling. I had hoped that sometimes I might write a word that would escape his notice. Sometimes I want to speak behind the back of a friend. I have good things to say whose saccharine juice should be boiled down before use, and I have things to say which he might construe into undue severity that are meant only to point an instructive lesson to others. But he who reads so closely must mentally interlace with me; so that till one or the other dies too much care can not be taken in deciding what not to say.

Without taking time to eat I set out across the great bridge. I do not wonder that the architect became a physical and mental wreck. It is too big in its minutiae for one brain and one body. "We that are in the body groan being burdened." After all there may be too much granite, iron and gold on our hearts and in them. But it does seem to me the triumph of ingenuity is in the way the cars are spirited over without an engine by means of eight little rope-climbing wheels. A pleasant afternoon with friends in Brooklyn ended too soon. But I went to hear Talmage. What of him and his work? Well, much. 1. He is ugly enough and sensible enough to make the most of his looks. And that is lawful. 2. He stirs no fresh mud, but stirs the old in a fresh way, catching the eels by the gills instead of the tail. That is also very lawful. 3. He never gets above his audience. He has them above him, literally and metaphorically. A horse that lets all the children and the nurse ride him at once will be popular. This is also very lawful. "He that would be greatest should be servant of all." 4. He does not argue to make Scripture truth stronger—he only illustrates. He who thinks he is a champion to keep the devil from disapproving the Bible needs a bandage for his head and grace for his heart. Yet there are such, but not Talmages. 5. He is realistic. He embodies and appropriates living truths in the living issues. He does not discuss the science of religion. 6. He is unsway and, after all, he tells no bad news. Sometimes mist, sometimes rain, sometimes hail, sometimes snow, sometimes the rushing storm mingled with lightning; but in all cases his cloud has water, and it drops out. Thirsty and panting people hail it if only for the moment. The dust is laid and the scorching heat of the way has been checked, and Sunday has rested the sore shoulders and aching hearts of five thousand people. If the broad Irish grin with the cup of water make the eye dance and the heart leap, God help the freeing dignity that would scare sweet gratitude or laughing hope back till they can be as grim as the awful pictures which the ancients called gods! "In Isaac shall thy seed be called;" and the world's genuine heart-laughter was never so genuine and loud as to-day.

T. A. S. A.

The Sabbath and the Exposition.

BY REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.

Some of the District Conferences in Louisiana and Mississippi have passed resolutions asking the managers to close the gates to the Exposition Grounds on Sunday. This is well, and it would be well if petitions signed by the Christian people could be presented making the same request. But especially does it seem to me that the larger organized bodies of the Christian churches should present this request in official form. If all the synods, presbyteries, conventions, associations and conferences, or even a representative number of them, could take harmonious action, so as to express the authoritative voice of the church on this important subject, it would, at least, have the effect of putting Christianity properly before the country as a plea for the righteous observance of her Sunday.

Whether the managers of the great Exposition would conform to the request would, of course, be for them to decide. They could scarcely feel that such a request was impertinent or that the granting of it would be harmful to any of the real interests of the occasion. So far as such request has been made it has not been in the interest of partisanship or of local favoritism, but on the simple ground of the supreme claim of the Christian Sabbath to that reverent regard and keeping enjoined by the Divine law in reference to the seventh day. If Christianity is to be represented in any request concerning the observance of her Sunday, it is difficult to see on what other ground the request can be made, or what can be asked except that the gates to the Exposition Grounds shall be closed on Sunday. There is but one consistent issue in the question. Evangelical Christianity, if she asks anything, must ask that the Sabbath day shall be kept holy, and she herself must faithfully keep her own law. It is particularly urgent in these times of self-indulgent liberty, when every species of social secular pleasure and dissipation is appropriating the holy Sabbath to its special service, that the friends of humanity and followers of God should plant themselves squarely and bravely on the side of the divinely directed use of this sacred day. Methodism holds the law of the Sabbath to be among those "commandments which are called moral," and that, therefore, "no Christian whatsoever is free from the obedience" enjoined by him who "blessed the seventh day and sanctified it." The Lord has not given us the alternative of making compromises and combinations with other religions in the use and observance of this day. It is the Lord's day, and its use is under his orders. He does not share his honor and the service due to his ineffable name with those who worship other gods or their own vain imaginations.

He commandeth all men everywhere to repent. If there is any one thing clearly taught and made emphatic in the Bible, it is the uncompromising demand which God makes for the undivided homage and service of every man. And so far as men are authorized to preach any religion at all, or to practice it, it is this Christian religion. The church can not, therefore, propose any use of the Sabbath except such as belongs to its Divine appointment. If men of the world choose to gather here and there on Sunday for amusement, for revelry, even for work or idle rest, the preacher of the gospel may go in and claim their souls, their time—their all for Christ. So, if the gates of the Exposition Grounds are opened on Sundays, Christian teachers, clerical and lay, may and should seek permission to proclaim the gospel there; but that is widely different from a proposition for Christianity to make common use of Sunday with all other religions under an organization which concedes equal rights to all.

—Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt has given $500,000 to the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City.

—The Queen of England worships God in Scotland with the Presbyterians and in England with Episcopalians.

—Rev. A. D. McVoy, of East Mississippi Female College, had received up to Oct. 25, $80 for the education of the young lady missionary. Others will respond until the needed $125 is assured.

—The Life of Bishop Paine, by Dr. J. H. Rivers, has been issued from the press and is ready for distribution. Dr. McFerrin says it is a worthy tribute to the great Bishop.

—Harper's Young People is advertised this week. Its success as a literary venture has only been equaled by its merits. No wonder the little folks welcome so eagerly its weekly visits! It provides "food convenient for them."

—Prof. Oliveras, the new instructor in Spanish, for Vanderbilt University, is said to be a very fine scholar. The Nashville Advocate speaks of his arrival from the City of Mexico, having made the trip from that city to Nashville in five days.

—The "Confessional" was discussed quite at length by the recent Episcopal Church Congress. A majority of speakers favored the institution. Nothing so un-Protestant can ever be countenanced by others than deluded ignorant Romanists.

—The Pacific Methodist of the instant notices the arrival in San Francisco of our outgoing Chinese missionaries. They were to be extended a public reception and a formal farewell by our brethren in the "Ultimate West," and take passage in the City of Peking on Saturday.

—An exchange says that a Yorkshire Baptist Church, in a declaration of faith made in 1715, said: "We will content to be deaf where the Scripture is dumb, and to have our ears where the Scripture has a mouth." A good rule. And if fully practiced we would hear less of certain discussions that disquiet the peace of Zion.

—The last days of the presidential campaign are witnessing one of the bitterest struggles known in our political history. So evenly balanced are the two great parties that the result rests with a single state. What the issue will be no political prophet can foretell with any degree of certainty. But whatever the result the nation will still live.

—The Superior Court of Georgia has decided the case of the National Bank of Augusta against Robert H. Cunningham involving the question of cotton futures. The court held that future contracts are illegal and void, and expressed itself in whole some, vigorous English. This respectable (?) gambling has doubtless to injure legitimate business. Successful factors have failed on future.

—We notice in the appointment of the Pacific Conference that Rev. F. M. Featherston, D. D., has been transferred to the Mississippi Conference. Bro. Featherston began his ministry in the Mississippi Conference and there spent his life, doing valuable service and filling important appointments, until his removal to California a few years ago. He will find a cordial welcome from his old friends and co-laborers.

—Our readers will see that the Rev. T. A. S. Adams is "doing up" the North, visiting industrial schools in the interest of the State Female Industrial College of Mississippi, of which he is a trustee. His "notes on the way" will be greatly enjoyed. The letter in this week's issue from New York. We have one of file from Philadelphia which should have appeared first, but reached after the other was in type.

—A Centennial Retrospect of Methodism in Natchez, Miss., from 1799 to 1884, is the title of a substa-

SCARBOROUGH—In Keachie, July 9, 1883, RUPERT GAINTHA S. Scarborough, died of typhoid fever. He was born in Caddo parish, La., Jan. 10, 1851. Joined the M. E. Church in 1876, of which she lived a member till transferred by death. In 1870 she was married to R. N. Scarborough of Marshall, Texas. She leaves two children, an aged father, (H. T. K. love) and husband to mourn her. May heaven comfort the bereaved and the star of Bethlehem guide the safely into the presence of their omnipotent Lord.

She was the mother of seven children, four of whom preceded her to the beyond. A husband, two sons and one daughter linger behind to sorrow but not as those who have no home. They are members of the church of the wife and mother. We trust in the mother and wife to do. May they join the sainted wife and mother in the shades of the tree of life on the other side of the river. Sister Hilda died in Simpson county, Miss., A. M., September 20, 1884. Aged seven years, one month and eight days.

H. A. SULLIVAN

Southern Method

Best Publishing Tools

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST SAW MILLS, ENGINES These
(For all sections and purposes. Write for Free Price and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield,

ELKIN & CO
100-CANAL STREET-
Invite attention to their large Stock of free portations of same, extra quantities and je ices

CHINA, MATTINGS.
All varieties of CARPETING at very low pr.

Oil Cloths,
Window Shades,
Curtains,

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate,
A MARVELOUS WORK.
(Written for the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, of Baton Rouge, Miss.)

BY MISS L. CHERRY SAILER.

"A marvelous work and a wonder!"
Till now we are doing today;
The world is to be converted,
To the Truth, the life and the Way."

The wisdom of men shall perish,
The love of the scientist rot;
Not the book that is sealed shall be opened
By one who changes not.

When the marvelous work is finished,
And "the time of the end" draws nigh,
Of the names that shall be found written
Will yours be called on high?

The gospel to "every creature"
Ever then must surely be preached;
And we who are called should be working
Till this consummation is reached.

This work we must do while the day lasts,
For the night is coming apace;
Press forward, the prize is before us—
Press forward and win the race.

This marvelous work, dearest sisters,
Should have us to do and to dare;
The stumbling-stones let us climb over,
And of hindrances let us beware.

Like Martha, "the many things trouble,"
And turn us by semblance of right,
Till the world, the flesh and the devil
Shuts the "better part" out from our sight.

O! light of the World, now inspire us
To work for the goal with a will;
Till our work is but a drop in the bucket,
Many drops the bucket will fill.

The brethren must have the glad tidings,
And our heritage be in the end;
For he that is faithful hath promised—
Our Counselor, Brother and Friend.

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of Rev.
Geo. Schaeffer.

(Continued.)

May 23, 1848: I spent a couple of hours with my friend, Capt. E. B. Randolph, this morning. He is very ill, having been in declining health for two or three years. He is evidently approaching his end. He is one of my oldest and most intimate friends, and one of the most estimable men I ever knew. He is a Christian of superior cast, possessed of the purest principles and most exalted piety. He appears to possess the consolations of religion in his sufferings. He has been suffering the most agonizing pains for several weeks, and is truly passing through the furnace. Yet he glorifies God, and his only complaint is that he does not endure his sufferings without murmuring. He spoke at length of his spiritual condition, he is calm and peaceful, his mind is stayed upon God. He says he has no fears of death, no regrets, only that he has not been a more faithful Christian. He joined me in singing a hymn, after prayer, and seemed quite refreshed. There is no man in the world that I love as much as I do him, and I shall feel that a great vacuum has been made in my circle of friends by his removal. He remarked to me on his death-bed, "I have been with you fifteen years; if not in body, in spirit. Now I am about to leave you, but I shall look out for you." I humbly hope we shall meet in heaven, where is no more parting, and shall enjoy the fullness of that religion which we have here participated in.

July 27: I returned yesterday from a very interesting meeting at New Hope; about sixteen professed religion before I left and the meeting was still progressing. I preached yesterday at eleven o'clock. There was a large congregation, although a week-day, and the whole assembly seemed deeply interested. I never preached to a more serious and attentive congregation. At the conclusion penitents were invited forward, and but two came. This appeared unaccountable, as there had been seven or eight the evening previous. After two or three exhortations, and the most zealous efforts, no more coming forward, prayer was offered. Then Bro. Wier proposed that the mourners should be taken to the grove, and prayed with there, which was done. And a powerful work commenced in the woods; three or four females and two males were converted before they came in, and when they all met at the church it was a time of great joy, husbands and wives, parents and children, rejoicing together. I was much blessed at this meeting, and felt that my faith was greatly strengthened. I feel a greater interest in the salvation of sinners, and better prepared to labor for their conversion. Oh, that I might be a purified shaft in the quiver of the Almighty, and an blessed instrument in winning souls to Christ, my Master and Savior!

August 15: I am now at Frankonia, in Pickens county, Ala. I have been attending a meeting which commenced last Wednesday at Union Chapel in Bro. William Leigh's circuit. The meeting has been very interesting, especially since Saturday. It was removed to this place yesterday because most of the seekers of religion were students of the two academies here.

Last night Dr. Cravey preached, and we had upwards of fifty mourners, over forty were converted by eleven o'clock. It was a powerful time; indeed, I never knew so many to be converted in the same length of time. This place has been occupied by the Presbyterians, who had a large church of over 100 members; but, unfortunately, difficulties have sprung up among them, and they have split into two parties, each having a separate place of worship, and very hard feelings towards each other. We have no church here, but are meeting in the female academy. All parties meet with us, and the children of each party are being converted. Perhaps, we may have made the instruments in producing peace and love amongst them. My soul has been much blessed at this meeting. I feel renewed in faith and love, and look for great times this fall.

August 20: I left the meeting at Frankonia on Thursday evening. Sixty-five in all had professed religion, and the work was still progressing. I have been much revived at this meeting. I hope to see many souls converted this year, and feel willing to spend and be spent in this great work. I feel that the Lord has answered my prayers; that unbelief is taken out of my heart, and that I have been filled with faith and the Holy Ghost. I wish to live only to the honor and glory of God, and, oh, that I may glorify him in life and in death! I feel happy this morning. The Lord fills my heart with peace and consolation. Glory be to his holy name forever!

(To be continued.)

Columbus District.

We are now in the midst of the fourth round on Columbus district, for the Conference year, it being the fourth year of the writer as presiding elder of the district. For many weeks past the "fishers of men" have been industriously engaged casting the gospel net; sometimes toiling all night and taking nothing, and, again, casting the net at the word of the Lord and inclosing a multitude of fishes. These fishers of men are now drawing their nets to the shore and summing up results.

Two camp meetings and many protracted meetings have been held. The echoes of old-fashioned Methodism have been waked up in earnest preaching, in songs, old and new, and in shouts of praise from the lips of rejoicing Christians. The revival flame has been kindled in every pastoral charge, burning along the lines and blazing up with unwonted warmth and brightness in some places. From the reports, now in for the most part, we reckon about 800 professions of faith. The fact that the number of accessions falls considerably short of the number of conversions furnishes food for reflection. "Sam. Jones" has not been with us, but a greater than he, even the Lord Jesus, who has said, "Lo! I am with you always." We are in sympathy with the idea and work of the special evangelist, but we deprecate what seems to be a growing tendency among our people to send off for some other preacher—to wait for the specialist, and to turn over to him the conversion of souls and the general work of revival. By such course we lose sight of and discount the pastor and the means and power always at hand. "What preachers will help you?" is a question frequently asked of the pastor on the approach of his protracted meeting. Some of our people have been praying for "Sam. Jones" to come. We are expecting him, and will accord to him a cordial welcome and a hearty co-operation when he comes; but we would have all our people and our preachers remember that the Methodist itinerancy is a system of evangelism, and that every itinerant is an evangelist.

The Centenary boom has not struck us yet. We have preached and talked and planned for the Centenary of American Methodism; but our membership and congregations generally seem not to take on much enthusiasm about it. Perhaps they have not considered that that Methodism is doing well enough, and they think it better "to let well enough alone." Perhaps they have felt too poor to give beyond their usual offerings, and hence have lost sight also of the other great aims of the Centenary movement. Perhaps we, as preachers, have not stressed the importance of the Centenary movement with the earnestness and zeal that were needed. Much, however, can yet be done before Conference. Let the church wake up, and let the preachers give every member and friend of the church the privilege of making a Centenary thank-offering. The opportunity of a hundred years is at hand. It will not occur to us again.

Of the sixteen pastors on the district three are veterans; the others are young men. Two are local preachers supplying circuits. Only two have been in charge in the district since the writer took charge of it nearly four years ago. They are a band of earnest, self-sacrificing, gospel ministers, being, some of them, up to this time on scanty allowance, as our finances are moving slowly. We, however, look for great improvement in this respect by the close of the Conference year. All are married men, and will not probably grow rich with their assessments paid in full. In the severance of our official relations, the presiding elder will hold these brethren beloved in grateful remembrance for their kindly associations and their fellowship of toil for the Master.

Some interesting facts occur to us as we pass in review the work of four years now closing. Assuming what seems a safe annual average in each particular, we give some figures approximating results of the work done by the presiding elder and the several preachers: Misses traveled, 184,000. (Put these figures down beside the gospel commission, and it will appear that these itinerants have obeyed that part of the command that says, Go.) Sermons preached, 8,000. (Put these figures down beside the commission, and it will appear that the preachers have obeyed that part of the command also which says, Preach.) More than $30,000 have been paid for the support of the preachers on the district. (Put these figures down beside the promise, "Thy bread shall be sure," and it will be seen that the laborers have been fed.) Number of conversions, 2,500. (Put these figures down beside the prayer, "Give them souls for their hire," and it will appear that the prayer has been answered.) Raised for missions and other objects, $7,000. When to the above we add the unmentioned details of administration by the regular ministry, the work of the local preachers and of many active laymen, the parsonages and churches built and repaired, with all of which the pastor is more or less directly connected, we appreciate the fitness of Methodist technology, according to which the itinerant is styled a "traveling preacher," and his pastoral charge, a "work."

In conclusion, we are conscious of shortcomings in duty and of imperfections in the work rendered. If our faith had been greater—commensurate even with our works—then much more and better work might have been done. As it is, we come unto the Master with our imperfect works, having nothing wherewith to boast save in the cross of Christ Jesus, our Lord; thanking God for the past, and taking courage for the future.

T. C. WIER.

Letter from Rev. John Barcroft.

Mr. Editor: Few of your readers will find enough interest in reminiscences personal to myself to justify me in writing more than an item or two for your paper.

There are three things that hinder ministerial growth and usefulness in all ages. How few are wise enough to escape this desperate trio I am unable to say. Of one thing I am quite sure: either of these evils is a misfortune to be deplored, while the three centering in one frail man are enough to deprecate him for both worlds. I allude to dyspepsia, mental indolence and the love of money.

For twenty years out of the twenty-five years of my ministerial life I have been most of the time, unconsciously, a victim of dyspepsia and its inseparable ally, mental indolence. Against this second enemy I have waged a determined, persistent, and unequal warfare. If I had been cursed with the love of money, it was the money I needed, but did not have. I, a clergy devoutly pray, "From these horrors, good Lord, deliver us." And from them all, thank to God! I am almost wholly delivered so far forth as they hinder the successful performance of any duty.

In 1881 I was in charge of the Byhalia station, North Mississippi Conference. During that year I tried all known remedies for relief from indigestion and ineffectual nervous prostration, and in July came away unbenefited by a seven weeks' stay at Eureka Springs, Ark. At the Conference at Grenada, in the winter of 1881, at which our venerable Bishop Paine performed his last official act, it was urged by a number of my brethren, who knew my condition better than I, to ask for a change of relation to the Conference. To this I yielded under constraint, feeling that I was giving up a cherished purpose never to cease active service so long as life lasted. The years 1882 and 1883 were times of sorrow and distress such as it seemed then, and, as it now seems, no mortal in this world with a pure conscience and an abiding trust in Christ could feel. If hell, as a place and a state, means more than I have felt under the anguish of nervous prostration born of dyspepsia, by the grace of God I mean to escape the condition that lands impure souls in the outer darkness.

At the last session of our Conference I was better—so much improved, indeed, as to be thought fit for work—active work—and sent to Emory, Holly Springs district. Now, Mr. Editor, if I could get the ear of my brethren who need to hear me, I would tell them how I became a dyspeptic, and how I am getting out of it, and its long train of evils; but not now.

It is, perhaps, enough to say I have been able in my way to do all the work of a preacher up to date. Indeed, this has been the most laborious year of my life, and by far the most joyous. I have held five protracted meetings of four to seven days each without help from abroad except six or seven sermons. Measured by the standard of men—my own standard—my work on the circuit has been almost a failure. We had in all our meetings but three conversions; four joined the church. They are intelligent minds, and I persuaded myself, entered the church with purpose of heart to continue to the end. It is true all our services were occasions of rejoicing. The church took higher ground in all that goes to constitute higher living, new family altars were established, and I think all were rendered more joyous; but we lacked the revival power. This lack may have come of the pastor's style of preaching or his methods of conducting revival services. Be it so. Others have their methods; he has his. Some were profited, and none more than this unworthy pastor. Thus it is: God has been divinely near me all the while—in sickness, in health, in enforced retirement or in active duty and service. I have never enjoyed so much of the Divine presence and peace as during the year of grace, 1884, and, as I trust, will be better prepared to receive with joyfulness the work to which the ensuing Conference, in its wisdom, will assign me.

In no part in my field of labor is the financial outlook hopeful. With an occasional exception here and there, the people are in debt—many of them hopelessly so. Four consecutive years of short crops have wrought mightily to discourage our most successful farmers. It is said men do not take to plowing on empty stomachs. What relation there is between poor crops and the lack of revival power I do not know. When my acquaintance with this country began, four years ago, I heard of no lands for sale nor for a twelve-month afterward. Now any farm can be bought almost at the purchaser's own figures. This state of things makes it hard on our pastors in a country where parsonages are few and far between. Just where the remedy is to be found I can not conjecture, unless the pastors can be filled with wiseless men of few wants, of economical and industrious habits, till, in the Divine economy, a change for the better shall come upon the country.

BYHALIA, Mississippi.

A Camp Meeting—An Experience.

After a pleasant jaunt of thirteen miles to the eastward from DeSoto, on the Mobile & Ohio railroad, in company with pastor J. C. Brogan, and a rest of an hour in his attractive home, the writer reached Union Camp Ground at three o'clock P. M., October 17. About an hour later Rev. J. A. Godfrey came dashing into camp behind his spirited ponies covered with dust, though in fine spirits, improved in health and looking the veteran that he is of more than two-score years of hard service for the Master.

It was a pleasant surprise to find a well-built tabernacle with appointments of comfort for preacher and people, and more than a half-score of tents well filled with intelligent people awaiting the first service. And while there were only three itinerant preachers present, we were aided in the pulpit by the finest corps of local preachers I ever saw; were not only blessed with consistent lives that made their pulpit ministrations acceptable, but whose reading made them intelligent leaders of the Lord's host. The have read Watson and Wesley's writings with care and great diligence, and as they applied the thoughts of these wonderful men to the unfolding of God's blessed word, one could but feel that it was "a feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees, of fat things full of marrow, of wines on the lees well refined." It is also gratifying to note that the honorable representative of this county (Clark) was added to this noble band of local brethren on Saturday by the unanimous vote of the largest Quarterly Conference this writer ever saw assembled. Seventeen members and all present, and taking an intelligent interest in the church.

And while the congregations were large and serious and the preaching was pointed and searching, there was not a conversion nor addition to the church until Monday night. But toward the close on Tuesday night there were twenty-five conversions, seventeen accessions, eleven heads of families pledged to hold meetings organized among the young men, and twenty-one young persons pledged to read the New Testament through by April 1. I do not think I ever saw a pastor so universally loved, and few in our Conference have so many to love them, as has Bro. Brogan. Over six hundred children in his Sunday-school, and these all loving and praying for him because of the interest he takes in their souls, and their parents loving him because he is leading their children to Christ and making intelligent Christians of them. Who among us will be able to look upon his crown in glory?

As it was the last Quarterly Conference, there was considerable effort made to settle up in full with the pastor. Among these who were contributing I observed a local preacher paying, as I thought, quite liberally. I knew he was a poor man and did not think it quite right, for he preaches every Sabbath, baptizes more children, preaches more funerals, marries more couples, than any man in all that country, and I thought he should be excused.

He divined my thoughts and laughingly said: "It's a free will offering, and I will tell you why I make it. A few years ago when I offered to pay my quarterly the steward said no, you do enough without helping to support the pastor. I thought so too, and put the money in my pocket. The next year I bought sixty bushels of corn, for which I paid one dollar and twenty-five cents per bushel. The next year I would pay my usual quarterly, and that fall I sold eighty bushels of corn. So for several years I paid regularly and made all the corn I needed, until I began to think that experience was a mere accident, and when the steward demonstrated with me a second time I again put the money in my pocket and felt easy. But the very next year I bought a hundred bushels of corn. So that time on I have paid my quarterly and have not had to buy any corn and never expect to while I do my duty."

I could not but ask myself the question, Is there no connection between cause and effect? Is not the withholding of a support from the Lord's ministry the cause of so many failures and the countless troubles, some people suffer one way and another? "Bring ye all the tithes into the store-house, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

J. M. WHELAN.

How Shall We Vote?

Mr. Editor: We suppose this question is almost crucial to many Christians in our Southland.

The "peculiar institution" has left us a heritage much like the minasgeable elephant. In order to prevent the supremacy of an ignorant mass, who have been trained to array themselves, politically, against the native whites, it seems necessary to our best citizens to do all in their power to secure the success of the Democratic party. The apparently obnoxious plank in its present platform may be bridged by the charitable construction suggested by "Grandpa Goodale." Of course, prohibition is no more a "sumptuary" law than any other police regulation of the State. Whatever the framers of that famous platform may have meant, we choose to accept it according to its real and ancient meaning. But, since the talented gentleman nominated as Vice-President has so offensively obtruded his favor to free whisky, we think many lovers of order and good government have grave scruples of conscience about voting directly for a man, who seems to glory in opposing what we regard the chief political safeguard of our rising generation.

The indirect way in which presidential votes are cast give us opportunity to cast our ballots against the corrupt administration so long in power and, at the same time, to show our disapproval of such candidates as Mr. Hendricks. By crossing his name from the ticket (and Cleveland's, too, if any one believe him a corrupt and unworthy man) leaving the names of all the Democratic electors unscratched, we can effect the above object. If any ask, "What good in this, since the men we disapprove are thereby helped to election?" I reply, No immediate result, but a prospective good. "Availability" has become the chief concern to nominating conventions. We can warn our Democratic friends of the North that the sentiment of the law-abiding and moral sentiment of the South must be heeded if they bid any longer for our votes. We want to keep prohibition out of the maelstrom of politics if they will allow us.

A CHRISTIAN VOTER.

JEFFERSON COUNTY, Mississippi.

Resolutions Complimentary.

Whereas, In accordance with the polity and usage of our church, our beloved presiding elder, Rev. T. C. Wier, having now served for four years this, the Columbus district, of the North Mississippi Conference, will, at its approaching session, be removed to another field of labor; therefore, be it

Resolved, That he has greatly endeared himself to us, and that we now express our deep appreciation of his fidelity to all of the interests committed to his care, his impartial rulings, and unflinching courtesy in the chair, and his "godly walk and conversation."

Resolved, That we would commend him to whom, in the providence of God, he may be called upon to minister as "a workman approved of God," humble, consecrated and true. Upon him we pray Heaven's richest blessings now and ever.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be signed upon the Conference minutes, and publication be made in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

WALTER PRICE,

Sec. Brookville Quart. Conf.

Revival Correspondence.

We are winding up the year finely. All the collections ordered by Conference paid in full. We will report well on Centenary.

E. H. CACELY,

BROOKVILLE, Mississippi.

Our meeting closed last Thursday night, October 23. Twenty-five were received into the church on profession of faith. The church revived. Our people encouraged. The Conference outlook is good. May God bless and prosper both the editor and the Advocate! Bro. Ellis and Singleton did the preaching, and the Holy Ghost applied the word.

JOHN W. CHAMBERS, P. C.

CAMDEN, Oct. 25, 1884.

We have just closed a gracious meeting of five days' continuance. God blessed us by a great manifestation of his power. Bro. Bradley, P. C., was assisted by Bro. D. V. Skipper, who rendered us efficient service, his telling sermons and his earnest work in the altar will long be remembered by his many friends at Grand Gulf. Result of meeting: Three accessions, seven conversions and a general revival in the church. W. L. FAULK, GRAND GULF, Miss., Oct. 13, 1884.

We are just through with our meetings on the Rocky Springs circuit. Twenty-one accessions and more than twenty conversions. Some of our meetings were attended with remarkable power. The church much revived, we held class meetings, prayer meetings and meetings for inquiry. The brethren and sisters holding the above meeting in the woods, each having their place of resort. These meetings were certainly owned of God. Six hundred dollars raised and subscribed for building and repairing churches. R. BRADLEY, P. C. ROCKY SPRINGS, Miss., Oct. 17, 1884.

Our Shiloh Camp Meeting was quite a success. Sixty or more conversions. The membership much revived and confirmed in the faith once delivered to the saints. Not a very large addition to the membership. Most of these converted were from eight to twenty years of age. A few older persons were born of the Spirit. Dr. C. B. Galloway delivered, on Sunday, ten o'clock A. M., a very able and attentive audience. We had able and efficient preaching by Revs. F. M. Williams, P. E., J. T. Hurd, A. B. Nicholson, C. McDonald, D. Miller, J. L. Vinson, L. E. T. C. Clark, L. B. J. C. Long, L. P. Many thanks to these brethren for services rendered. All glory and honor to God. R. A. SMILEY, Pastor.

OCTOBER 24, 1884.

Facts for the People about Their Pastors.

The following admirable editorial from the New York Christian Advocate is commended to careful perusal. It is timely, practical, suggestive, important.

No people in personal intercourse show more brotherly kindness to their pastors than the Methodists—perhaps few so much. There are pointed exceptions, but this has been the rule from the beginning. But some things few seem to remember.

To mention himself in this journal, criticized as the minister must be a student of both books and men, and must read current news and literature. But books and papers cost money. He who spends less than $100 per year, wisely and economically, for them, is probably impeding his growth. These who fill important places must spend much more.

The minister and his wife must always keep their home, their children and themselves in order to be seen in company, for guests may arrive unannounced at any moment. He must dress every day as other men dress Sunday. He must make more than twenty per cent. per annum to his family expenses.

Other men, being themselves in trade, can take advantage at lowest rates, bargain and beat, or pay in the commodities they deal in. Ministers can not. The Jewish pastor is well served, and his flock is better in any community. Thus the cost of living is materially increased.

More appeals are made to pastors for aid than to any other class of men, which they can not resist. Moreover, they are led by inclination or forced by circumstances to give liberally to every benevolent cause taken in the name of the church. As a result, they are under a great deal of strain, and must give a much larger proportion of their incomes than others, even taking into account the fact that others pay pew rents and pastors do not.

As the physician grows older his services are more in demand and his compensation less, something he never knew in youth, and an important source of revenue. The lawyer also gains in reputation and income with years. Both physicians and lawyers can take junior partners to relieve them of the more laborious work. But with the minister is no such prospect. After a period, definite in the eyes of the laity, but more or less indefinite in the eyes of the minister, he is no longer in demand. When he can not speak with variety and animation twice on the Sabbath and whenever called upon, and pass from house to house with the sick and aged, he is no longer a necessity of youth, he can neither support himself as "pastor," take a "partner," nor commit his interests to "the hands of departments."

Devotion to the ministry from youth to middle life or old age usually qualifies a man for the successful pursuit of business, especially if he be sick or infirm.

As an offset to all this, it may be said: "The pastor has no house rent to pay, he has marriage fees and gifts, he travels at half fare, and he receives reductions from regular prices."

To which we say: It is true that when there are parsonages the pastor generally pays in house rent. If he did, in many cases he could not live at all. But the moment he retires from the active ministry this ceases. Marriage fees in country churches and small towns are an item hardly enough to pay the expenses of the pastor's family. But they are much less than the pecuniary support, especially in the case of ostentatious weddings. If ministers in large city churches were to publish their fees in every case there would be some surprises at the miserably small sum. Gifts to popular men are often more than enough to support them. They are often near nothing. Not that we would say that a man could be both popular and useful, but he may be very popular and not useful, not powerful; and he may be most useful and from that very cause unpopular and receive no gifts. Gifts are more frequently the result of the popularity of youth, and are lost in the period of life when most needed. Half-starved traveling and reductions to ministers are not universal, in many communities are not known, and at the most are small items.

There are, in some cases, considerable aids, but they assist, they leave the minister still at a disadvantage for the future.

To save, except in most unusual conditions, he must be penurious, thrifty, and seek rapid accumulations. These who do the latter generally fail in money. There are, among such, a few who, through a hard struggle, are able to elect, but with the exception of that of Bishop all must run the gauntlet of a re-election every four years, and may be unexpectedly supplanted when too old, having lost adaptive facilities, to return to the ministry, and a little too young to retire.

If this be a true picture who, who would be a minister?

In the face of all this we say that the useful minister of average or superior ability has about the happiest experience

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1884.

$2,001 25.

We had the pleasure of spending last Sunday in our old pastorate at Vicksburg. It was Centenary day, and the offering amounted to $2,001 25. Other amounts will be reported, making it aggregate near three thousand.

$124 85.

Bro. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., writes that the ladies of that church have raised $124 85 as an additional Centenary offering. This advances Carrollton beyond two thousand.

A distinguished foreign missionary says "the greatest peril of foreign missions is the want of vital piety at home." True. The spirit that sent the gospel abroad must be kept aglow or the work will cease. We rejoice at every new recruit for the mission fields. It indicates the life and fecundity of our spiritual maternity. A church that is constantly producing missionaries can not be disloyal or superannuated.

The comparative success of the home and foreign work last year is seriously suggestive. It is estimated that, while there were about seven converts to each of the preachers of the United States, there were seventy converts to each of the missionaries in Asia. Seven and seventy. And yet some object to foreign missions because of their meagre results. But while we rejoice with our brethren abroad we might inquire what is the matter at home.

This sentence from Prof. Bowne, in his "Logic of Religious Belief," is worthy of preservation: "Within the church, also, periods of rationalizing have always been periods of dearth and death." The evangelizing spirit must be kept warm and glowing or indifference and deadness will soon ensue. Our aggressive, missionary zeal has conserved and strengthened the life of Methodism. We have had little time for literature. The itinerant has had no "learned leisure." His mission was to "win souls." To this supreme purpose we must be alike consecrated. With larger educational facilities and equipment, we must as zealously emphasize the evangelical spirit. A rationalizing pulpit preaches a lifeless gospel.

In noticing the census of the student-body in attendance at the State University of Alabama, our confere of the Alabama Advocate says some very positive and pertinent things on the subject of Christian education. They have the right ring. Educated in a State institution, and a member of its Board of Trust, we appreciate and applaud the work it and similar colleges are doing. There has been an honored history, and their field of endeavor is enlarging. But we recognize it to be one of the great missions of the church to educate. And in this Centenary year we want our Methodism to take advanced ground on this important—not to say, imminent—question. Let our colleges be endowed and their halls crowded with students.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate utters a timely word of warning against a premature division of our work into little stations and circuits. A premature disturbance of circuit boundaries has worked injury in many directions. A popular young preacher serves a circuit with great acceptability. So marked is his success that he conceives the idea of taking two appointments and making a little station for the next year, and intimates to the presiding elder that he will risk them for a support. The arrangement is made and the brother measurably succeeds. Then he is appointed to another field, and the old lines have to be re-established with more or less friction. Let our multiplication of pastoral charges have the promise of permanency. Too much temporizing to accommodate the convenience of some really superannuated brother or the aspirations of a younger one is hurtful to substantial, normal growth. Churches are a burden, and not a blessing.

Denominational Loyalty.

One of the good results we look for from this Centenary year is a more intelligent and intense denominational life. We repudiate this idea, current in popular phrase, that the denominational tie affects unfavorably the broadest Christian charity. "I'm a good Methodist, but a very poor Christian" is an expression familiar to every pastor. The truth intended to be inculcated in that remark is not a truth. No man is a good Methodist who is not also a good Christian. Dr. Chalmers said, "Methodism is Christianity in earnest." It emphasizes the great doctrine of the witness of the Spirit. A good Methodist, therefore, is an experimental, witnessing Christian; and, if so, he is a good Christian. There may be a partisan adherence to our polity, and a mental, logical approval of our system of doctrine, without being in a large, spiritual sense acquainted with the same. Such an one is not a good Methodist, and that class, we believe, is very small.

Among Methodists we need a more distinct, denominational esprit de corps. We have boasted of our broad catholicity until some have allowed it to degenerate into a sentimental latitudinarianism. They repeat glibly and with a great show of liberality that venerable, old deceptive platitude, "It makes no difference what church you belong to, so you are a Christian." That expression is both illogical and untrue. It has brought untold harm, and deserves to be buried beyond the hope of resurrection. Instead of depreciating, we should put a premium upon church relation. And our observation has been that where the denominational tie was slack, brittle or attenuated, it only typed the religious experience of the individual. Believing in the interpretation of Scriptures as formulated in our creed, accepting our ecclesiastical polity and approving the spirit of the church, I can not be indifferent to my relation thereto. To sever connection with the church without a radical change of opinion is both frivolous and perilous. Because some one in a congregation may have treated us unbrotherly, or the social position of the majority is far below our ambitious ideal, is no apology for seeking another communion. The one is capriciousness, and the other a silly vanity that demands all decent excommunication. Some history on this line could be written that would make the angels weep.

Other persons we have known who criticize severely the work and members of their own church, and applaud the doings of others. They bemoan the condition of their congregation—the members are penurious, unsocial, aristocratic or plebeian (according to the speaker), and Zion is languishing generally. Other pastors are more zealous, congregations more united, the service more beautiful and the people so nice. That is the surest betrayal of sacred vows and the most pitiable acknowledgment of mental, social and spiritual stupidity. Loyalty to the church demands unvarying and hearty support. The pastor, whatever his gifts and graces, his fitness or failure, should receive cordial and united appreciation of his labors so long as he sustains that relation. Nothing is so hurtful to a pastor's efficiency as unkind, disloyal criticism. Hold up his hands and cheer his efforts. In this way a doubtful appointment has been made a grand success.

We shall hope, therefore, that the services held in each church this Centenary year will make our people better Methodists. They will learn more of its history and catch more of its true spirit—the inspiration that made our fathers heroic and apostolic. We conclude these reflections by reproducing a passage from Dr. Hudson's "Methodist Armor": "Supreme loyalty to one's church does not imply, by any means, sectarian narrowness. A decided preference for your own home is not to be construed into any dislike toward your neighbor's home. The consecration of a man to his store, farm, trade or profession is not to be taken as any hostility toward anybody else's business. The fact is, the hope of evangelizing the world lies in the Methodist being loyal to his church, the Baptist to his church, the Presbyterian to his church, and so with others. Good will toward all others, but supreme loyalty to your own church, is the true principle. A fault of too many Methodists is that false kind of liberalism which patronizes the interests of others to the neglect and pecuniary damage of its own."

Delegates to the Centennial Conference, to be held in Baltimore, in December next, who have special arrangements for their entertainment, will greatly oblige the committee by sending notice thereof at once to

L. T. WIDEMAN,

143 E. Monument St., Baltimore, Md.

A Partisan Judiciary.

Nothing has a republican government so much to fear as a partisan or corrupt judiciary. It, after all, is the citadel of our security and the bulwark of our liberties. Presidents and governors are themselves powerless before our judicial system. With a passionless and stainless judiciary our rights, property, personal and civil, are safe whatever party may be dominant or whoever sits in the presidential chair. But when corrupt or partisan men become our interpreters and expounders of law, the people mourn and the flag of our liberties trails in the dust. Judges should be removed as far as possible from the passions and prejudices of party strife. Without fear or favoritism, and with all possible impartiality, they are to decide questions at issue according to the great principles of law and equity. If biased by prejudice, justice is dethroned and the rights of a people imperiled. A man who isn't broad enough to forget his party or personal affiliations on the bench, dishonors the ermine, degrades the dignity of his exalted position and bereaves the people of their inalienable rights.

To these reflections we were brought by a telegram to the Daily States, of this city, from Columbus, O., reporting that the celebrated "Scott Liquor Law" had been declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. The correspondent added: "The decision was rendered by Democratic judges in accordance with the principles always contended for by the party in this State." Now, we do not accept the intimation that party principles determined this decision. In the absence of their published opinions, we express no judgment upon the matter. But this correspondent, in his excessive party zeal, has made a grave charge against the purity of the court and so far discounts the wisdom and righteousness of their decision. Why state that it "was rendered by Democratic judges"? Did party affiliation cut any figure in the formation of their legal opinion? And then the correspondent adds, that the decision was "in accordance with the principles always contended for by the party in this State." So, then, it was not according to the great fundamental teachings of law, but in harmony with party declarations. Alas! If such be so. When a supreme legal tribunal becomes a party machine, to do its bidding, we may bid adieu to the sacred rights and privileges of a true republic. But, as before observed, we do not accept this intimation as fact. We shall hope for better things until further light is received. In the meantime our readers are warned against the comments of little whisky papers. They will applaud the decision and ridicule prohibition as factitious folly. The principle for which we contend has already been passed upon by the Supreme Court of the United States, and sustained more than once. And this Ohio decision was on some minor point, not on the main question. That has been adjudicated and established. But technicalities will not always etay the triumph of truth.

Since writing the above we have read an article in a Republican paper, stating, with alarm, the fact that during the next quadrennium four judges of the Supreme Court of the United States will be appointed, including the chief justice. It was urged that, if the Democrats returned to power, these vacancies would be filled by men of that party, and the line of decisions for years set aside. So we see the partisan judiciary finds favor on both sides. And the fact is to be deplored. In it we see the greatest danger to the peace and perpetuity of our republican institutions.

The Record's Rejoinder Rejoined.

Our reply to the Baptist Record's challenge to produce any scriptural or other warrant for baptizing children better than a certain old German mentioned, who had his cross, crying twin babies baptized to "sweeten their dispositions," has provoked the brother to vigorous response. He invited it by a cheap attempt to caricature the Christian practice of multiplied thousands, whose piety, possibly, the editor himself would not question. If the doctrine is harmful and wrong, he has a perfect right to point it out; but that he has not and can not do. Really, brother, that chapter of history which tells of Baptists being persecuted for denying their children church membership would be interesting reading. Is it both genuine and authentic? And in what mausoleum has it been preserved? The Record further objects to our statement that for eleven hundred years the scriptural right of children to Christian baptism was not questioned. That we reaffirm with emphasis, with the further statement that it was the uniform practice of the church through all that eventful period. That writers here and there, like Tertullian, believed in the regenerative efficacy of water baptism neither disproves nor discounts the fact. It rather establishes the truth of history as to the practice of infant baptism. Would Bro. Gambrell discard immersion because a large sect believe in immersion salvation? Of course not. So another objection is disposed of. As to the scriptural authority for baptizing children, we do honestly believe it to be ample, clear and absolute. It is commanded in this great commission; it was practiced by the apostles, and was the unvarying practice of the church, without question or objection, for more than a thousand years. This Record thinks many Methodists are much disturbed on this subject. Well, really, we think the number very small, and they are composed only of those who are annoyed and mystified by some busy little proselyter. Our opportunities for ascertaining the mind of the Methodist Church on this and other subjects are supposed to be quite as good as our brothers', and we must depose that no such observation has been made. Possibly if we had put them through a catechism, told them they were all wrong, that they were practicing a superstition, and other well-known, staple statements; some little mental unrest might have been produced. But as we did not, in thousands of miles of travel and visits to hundreds of homes and congregations, no trouble on that subject has been discovered. On the other hand, we have seen many children brought into church, and hope all our people will likewise obey their Lord's command. If our brother of the Record prefers not to do it, we shall neither "spite" nor persecute (?).

But in other lines of work we will join most heartily with Bro. Gambrell. He preaches the great cardinal doctrines of justification by faith and the witness of the Spirit, and his people are urged to a distinct, comforting religious experience. They are doing a great evangelical work, in which we heartily rejoice. If a little less zealous about much water, they would be a wonderful people.

This and That.

Here are two pictures. There is serious sickness in a certain Roman Catholic family. They are greatly distressed and the doctor gives little hope. Days and nights wear away, while life trembles in the balance. Once a day two "sisters of charity" emerge from a convent, veiled and hooded according to regulation, and walk through the streets to the house of suffering. They spend, possibly, a half hour, count their beads, repeat several "Our Fathers" and "Hail Marys," and return home. This is observed for days. Then you may hear Protestants and "outsiders" exclaim: "How attentive they are to the sick! What devotion to suffering humanity! That's the sort of religion I believe in—a religion that helps you in trouble." Such expressions every pastor has heard. And with them reproaches of other churches for indifference and negligence. Picture number one.

That family has a Methodist neighbor. She went over when the patient was first stricken with disease. Leaving her own household, she watches at that bedside for days and nights. Her hands administer the remedies and soothe the fevered brow, and her heart utters many a fervent prayer for the dear one's recovery. She wears no uniform; she carries no cross and beads; she makes no formal, official calls; but in wrapper and slippers, without parade of toilet, she keeps loving vigils over that couch for weary days and nights. No one observes her going back and forth from home. Oftentimes she returns after night for a few hours' needed rest, and then resumes her place at the patient's couch before the gates of the morning are opened. Nobody ever applauds her devotion. If spoken of at all, "it was only a neighborly act—only common humanity." Her Christian consecration and angel ministry receive no tribute. That is picture number two, and taken from real life.

Now, which deserves the higher honor? Which more truly shows forth the Lord's constraining love? Which should have been more grateful to suffering humanity? We leave our readers to answer these questions, and consider how true Christianity is often sadly depreciated. We do not discount hooded piety, but submit that it should not wear laurels that belong to another brow. These pictures can be duplicated any week in bible and other cities.

An old Celtic rhyme put into modern English says:

Thrice the age of a dog is that of a horse;
Thrice the age of a horse is that of a man;
Thrice the age of a man is that of a deer;
Thrice the age of a deer is that of an eagle.

Centenary at Vicksburg.

Last Sunday was spent with our friends of the "Hill City" of Mississippi, and it was a day long to be remembered. Historic and heroic civil affairs and military achievement, Vicksburg also has a conspicuous place in the annals of South-western Methodism. Many thrilling and instructive incidents connected with the planting and nurturing of our cause in that place ought to be preserved and emblazoned in history. Just four miles below the city sleep the remains of Tobias Gibson, the first Methodist missionary to the West who landed at Natchez in the spring of 1799. A marble monument marks the sacred place, while over it in perpetual benediction are spread the sheltering branches of a magnificent forest oak. Many members of that congregation are descendants of his relatives and of Rev. Newitt Vick, in whose home the first Mississippi Conference was held in 1813.

Last Sunday was a bright, beautiful, balmy day. There was scarcely a deck of cloud in the sky, and not a shadow on the radiant faces of that joyful congregation. Of course the first thing in order was a visit to the Sunday-school under the superintendence of Bro. W. G. Paxton. That is a well-organized, enterprising school, and with an esprit de corps rarely seen. The infant department alone has an enrolled membership of about ninety, ranging in age from three years to nine or ten. In their room is a special superintendent, secretary, organist and several teachers. It was a real inspiration to see them march into the large room and join in the closing exercises. One new feature of the school quite interested us—the birthday gift box. On the anniversary day of each member there is deposited in the box a number of cents equal to the number of years of their lives. This novel idea is yielding a nice little revenue. One member, last Sunday, deposited three hundred cents—certainly an excess of liberality over longevity, for the patriarchal age is no more. This editor had to pay up for the sake of auld lang syne.

The Centenary meeting was held in the freshly and beautifully frescoed auditorium upstairs. The congregation well filled the spacious temple and entered heartily in the service. For the first time in a Methodist Church we heard a cornet in the choir. When the people recover from their surprise at the sound it will prove a real help in leading the voices. In other churches we have heard it to advantage. After a timely discourse by an ex-pastor there was a Centenary thank-offering of $2,001 25. Other amounts will surely follow.

In the afternoon a young people's meeting was held and well attended, addressed by Mrs. Chapin, of South Carolina, Mrs. Buell, of New York, and this editor. These ladies were in the city to attend a grand temperance mass meeting at the opera house that night.

We were glad to note evidences of prosperity in the church. About thirty new members have been received within the past few months, and the entire congregation is zealously interested in beautifying and improving their church building. Pastor Woodward is closing successfully his second year of service as the shepherd of that flock. The two days of our visit passed all too rapidly. Many dear friends we wanted to visit and invitations accept, "but was let hitherto." Nominally the guest of that prince of paragonage neighbors, Dr. J. M. Hunt, we had no "continuing city." Though physically wearied with the day's labor, yet socially and spiritually refreshed, we left at eight P. M. for this office by way of Jackson, and at half-past seven, on Monday morning, reported for duty.

Trouble in China—Note from Dr. Lambuth.

Mr. Editor: At this date we are in the midst of a terrible war, and our work in the interior is greatly retarded. Even here, in Shanghai, the minds of the people are so filled with war that they can scarcely think of anything else. They are greatly excited all over the country and many are terrified, and we can not tell what a day may bring forth. Multitudes thousands have fled from our midst to the interior, fearing an invasion of the French. We are on the verge of a terrible war which may end in the overthrow of the present dynasty. That is the opinion of many Chinese. The French have a large fleet and their land forces are increasing. They have been very quiet since the terrible work of destruction in Foochow until day before yesterday. They are now on the move, and forty-eight hours from this may find them in possession of Fomosa, and then they will begin to move north. The Chinese everywhere are terror-stricken since the destruction of their fleet at Poochow. I think it almost certain that before the close of this year, if the war continues, the whole Chinese fleet of seventy men-of-war will be captured, or destroyed by the French fleet. We may have trouble all through this part of China; but just now we can not tell what will be the result of the attack on Fomosa. They may turn north, and, if so, we shall certainly have trouble. Pray for us and for the church in China. SHANGHAI, CHINA, Oct. 2, 1884.

A New Era in Journalism.

The history of journalism is a perpetual marvel. Its growth has been wonderful. But a few years ago, comparatively, the art of printing was invented, and the first crude newspaper was issued from a very rude press. Now it has multiplied to great numbers and has become one of the mightiest factors in our civilization. Its lines have gone out to the ends of the earth. But with its growth in influence there has been marked change in its character. The newspaper of to-day is as different from that of a half-century ago, as the steam power press on which it is printed throwing off several thousand an hour, is superior to the old hand machine that did duty in the days of our fathers. Now it gathers news by lightning, is printed by steam and distributed to eager readers with all the speed of the modern railway. And so the typical editor is a new development. His work is better defined and far more onerous. All of which we have said only as an introduction to the following from the brilliant, sparkling editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate:

The National Intelligencer, with its ponderous essays, was the favorite of forty years ago. It could not compete with its brisk rivals. It died from excess of starch and sloth.

The modern reader of the denominational papers would not endure an issue with endless columns of reports, serial articles, and editorials, heavy as ore from a lead mine. He looks at the length of an article before perusal.

The editor whose sole work was to tear off two or three pages from an old sermon and turn up the corners for a "leader" is now in fossil. The paper of to-day is edited. The pen of its conductor must be seen on every hand.

It has been well said that Macaulay in the editorial chair of a great daily would write it to death in a year. The attempt to make the columns of the Church Gazette "Body of Divinity" ends in a burial of the body out of sight.

In the last five years the Southern Methodist press has set out on a new course of activity. The men who conduct it have found out the art of editing—work, work, work! The scissors give place to the pen. Field notes are valued beyond bushels of disquisitions on the Lost Tribes or the Number of the Beast. A column of "Drifts" is read where patriotic platitudes are passed by. Questions are discussed in a direct, cracking style. Condensation and variety may be seen on every page. All slovenliness in the make-up, or printer's smugness, is banished. Money is spent freely to secure freshness and vigor.

The Southern Methodist papers are gaining on our people. They have shown ability and enterprise. Their reward is sure. Interest in their wider circulation is growing. The number of men of influence and activity, adding in putting the journals in new homes, perhaps never so great. We have never known such zeal in making Methodists a reading people.

Does the Water Agree with You?

Good, pure water is indispensable to good health in any country and under all conditions. "No matter what the climate is, if the water is not pure, one need not expect to be healthy. Even in a malarious district the people enjoy measurably good health if they have good water to drink. Filtering helps impure water; but cooking before using is still better. I believe no class of persons in the world is so much affected by the water they drink as Methodist preachers. They seem to be more sensitive to the effects of bad water than other men. Usually they do not begin to discover the ill effects of the water until toward the close of the Conference year. Then it tells upon them painfully and rapidly. By the time Conference comes on, with some of them the water is a question of life and death to them and to their families. Filtering is out of the question and cooking the water will do no good. This they know without a trial. Nothing absolutely nothing, will do but a change of place to secure a change of water.

In some instances the official Board take the hint and confirm the judgment of the preacher as to the ill effect of the water upon him, though they are ready enough to believe it would not have the same effect upon some other man. The same water affects different men differently.

Not long ago, in one of our Conferences, some four or five preachers from different parts of the work fell in together at a railroad crossing a few weeks before Conference. Bro. A., from D. station, regretted that he would be compelled to move, as the water did not agree with him; and Bro. S., from O. station, said, "I understand the water in O. does not agree with me;" and another thought, if his charge did not come up better, the water would not agree with him, and the fourth said the water always agreed with him best where they had the best parsonage and took the best care of the preacher. At last one suggested that a certain mission in the Conference was close to some famous, health-giving springs; but all agreed that that kind of water was not adapted to their cases. After a few moments' thought it was generally agreed that for many years past the healthiest and stoutest men in the Conference were sent to that health resort. What an oversight in the Bishops, and how loath the men who stand in the greatest need of a change of water are to go where the water is so good! Quite a number of preachers are excellently well suited to water where they are, and they do not want to run the risk of a change.

Among some of the preachers, "How does the water suit you?" has come to be a common mode of salutation. Does the water in the Advocate office agree with you, Doctor? If not, come up in the hills and try our springs.

OLDEROY.

Bishop Parker preached an able sermon at Carondelet Street Church last Sunday morning.

There has been a good revival meeting in progress at Jackson, La., and quite a number of the students of Centenary College have united with the church.

Centenary offerings reported in the Nashville Advocate up to Nov. 1, amounted to $425,031. This week will doubtless advance the sum to half a million.

Rev. F. M. Featherston, D. D., and family arrived in the city, on Tuesday morning, from San Francisco. Our old friend looks not a day older than when he left Mississippi for the "ultimate West."

Bishop Keener seems to have given eminent satisfaction in the chair of the Holston Conference. The Holston Methodist says, "He leaves Bristol more esteemed and loved than when he came."

The West Virginia Conference was reorganized in 1880 with 4,000 members. Last year's reports showed a total of 15,173. That is remarkable and substantial progress, and in face of difficulties peculiar and formidable.

We regret to learn that the Methodist Church at Scranton was destroyed by fire recently. It is hoped that the amount of insurance will enable the congregation to rebuild. And this leads us to inquire how many churches are insured?

Dr. Buckley, of the New York Christian Advocate, has returned from his European tour, and sends greeting to his many readers, aptly quoting this couplet:

"If you have missed me, my absence has not been in vain;
If you have not, you surely can not complain."

Up to date the Centenary Conference amounted to $77,000. The conference resolved to direct future efforts "more especially to the advancement of the three chosen centennial causes, education, missions and church extension."

Luther Benson, Esq., a distinguished author and platform speaker, is coming to Mississippi to lecture on temperance. He is said to have rare gifts as an orator, and on this subject is a master. We bespeak for him large audiences and an attentive hearing.

Dengue has been quite prevalent in the country for some weeks past, and the clergy have not escaped its painful touch. Last Sunday Rev. J. M. Pugh, of Anlice City, La., and Rev. W. C. Black, of Natchez, were unable to occupy their pulpits, in consequence.

The Centenary of American Methodism will be celebrated at Fidelity Street Church next Sunday. Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter, the pastor, will preach in the morning, and the children's meeting will be held in the afternoon, at 6 o'clock. A grand occasion is expected.

A mass meeting in the interest of Sabbath observance will be held at the First Presbyterian Church, this city, (Rev. Dr. Palmer, pastor) next Sunday evening. Addresses will be delivered by Rt. Rev. Bishop Hugh Miller Thompson, of Mississippi, and Rev. Dr. C. K. Marshall, of Vicksburg.

The sessions of the Centennial Conference will be held in Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Baltimore. The committee of arrangements hoped to secure the Academy of Music, but failed. We are glad the church has been accepted. Its seating capacity is all sufficient, and is in every way a more suitable place.

"Chinese Gordon" is a rare combination of courage and Christian consecration. His skill as a military commander is only equaled by his simple faith and devotion as a Christian. After weeks of suspense it now transpires that instead of needing relief, he is really commanding a victorious army.

The Pittsburg Christian Advocate proposes that tardy churchgoers be treated after this fashion. Let the doors be closed at the beginning of the introductory service. Then just before the sermon provide a pause, throw open the doors, and let the people walk in to a tune on the organ known as "The Laggard's March."

We regret to see that at a recent election in Minden, La., the anti-prohibitionists carried the town by a small majority. Our friends must pick their flints and try it again. We have everything to gain from agitation. Every election, though a defeat, keeps the question before the people and stimulates thought. If we can get men to think, our cause will triumph.

The new institute building at Whitworth College, erected by Dr. H. F. Johnson, was taken formal possession of on Monday, of last week, with appropriate and imposing ceremonies. Addresses were delivered by Rev. W. B. Lewis and Judge J. B. Chrisman. The college has the largest patronage of its exceptionally successful history.

The State Prohibition Executive Committee met recently in Jackson, and projected plans for a thorough canvass of the State. Rev. J. H. Ciambrell, who has been acting as state organizer, will continue in the field as corresponding secretary. Every county is to be organized, and such an influence brought to bear upon the next legislature as will secure the passage of a good local-option law.

The following statistics of relative annual expenditure in the United States at once point a moral and call us to duty: "Christian missions, $5,500,000; public education, $85,000,000; sugar and molasses, $155,000,000; boots and shoes, $195,000,000; cotton goods, $210,000,000; sawed lumber, $233,000,000; woolen goods, $237,000,000; iron and steel, $290,000,000; meat, $303,000,000; bread, $505,000,000; liquor, $600,000,000."

A Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church said that he would not appoint a man to the presiding eldership who was over fifty years of age, whereupon Dr. Alfred Wheeler enters solemn protest in the Northern Christian Advocate. We know of no well-declined ministerial deadline. Some men do their best work after celebrating their jubilee. And then others are inefficient at thirty-five. The almanac is no criterion to pastoral activity. Better look at the man and not his birth-day.

The editor of the Religious Herald, traveling down in Georgia, notes this item of Baptist history from Augusta: "Abraham Marshall preached the first Baptist sermon ever preached in Augusta, and for doing it he was tied up and whipped in the Episcopal church-yard. The sheriff who whipped him was named Cartledge, and from that day to this the Cartledges have been Baptists as well as the Marshalls." So it was the "cat-of-nine-tails" that converted Cartledge. That accounts for their dear love of persecution. If they can only get somebody to persecute (?) them, members will be multiplied. The gospel is better than a flog as an evangelizer.

The evolution question was up for discussion in the Synod of Mississippi, at Crystal Springs, on Friday, in connection with the celebrated case of Dr. James Woodrow, of the Columbia Theological Seminary. A resolution introduced by Dr. B. M. Palmer, of this city, disapproving of such teaching in the Seminary, was passed by a vote of 42 to 8. In supporting his resolution, Dr. Palmer said he had no desire to prevent any one from studying and favoring evolution, but he objected to having it taught in theological seminaries and churches. As for the manner in which Adam was created, the Doctor said that man knows nothing about God's creative power beyond what the Bible furnishes us, and never can know such things. It is beyond the reach of science. The Synod took wise action! An unproved hypothesis should not become a subject of instruction to young ministers. We have already too much speculation in the church.

In speaking of the resignation of a prominent Baptist pastor in Boston, the Examiner says: "It is lamentable that such churches should be under necessity of looking about through months and years for the available men believed to have the ability to fill their pulpits and do the needed amount of pastoral work. How this evil is to be stayed and cured is one of the pressing and serious problems of our church life."

If there is a practical remedy, it ought to be laid hold of with vigor and persistency. The remedy is at hand. And that it is effectual is matter of observation any day. It is an itinerancy after the order of "the people called Methodists." We have no unemployed pastors and no churches without shepherds. Here it is, friends, and you may lay hold of it "with vigor and persistency" if you wish. And be assured that with many of your churches it would be like the well-known picture of "before and after taking."

The following from Rev. J. W. Butler, of the Methodist Episcopal Mission, in the City of Mexico, should thrill with new zeal every missionary spirit: "There are now 264 evangelical congregations in Mexico, with 30,000 permanent adherents. Men and women who never saw a Bible till they had spent half their money and half their lives in the Roman Catholic Church were now becoming the Christians who would go through fire and water for their religion's sake. Recently fifteen of them had been imprisoned and persecuted, but not one recanted. One congregation of 125 members, none of whom earned over thirty cents a day, have lately raised $60 for the erection of a church. They were so generous in religious matters that they had to be restrained, or they would give away their very food and clothes."

"The Morning Star" correspondent, "Agricola," comes to the defense of that luminary and takes up the cudgel against the Advocate. He assumes two statements—first, that all Catholic converts to "the Methodist Church or any of the concurrent sects" sacrificed "internal convictions" in order to "improve their temporal affairs," and, second, that the private lives of Protestant reformers are very wicked as compared with converts to Rome from Protestantism. The first statement is the exact reverse of true history. Many a man lost friends and fortune by leaving the Roman hierarchy. Did "Agricola" ever hear of Popes and cardinals commanding Catholic kings and kingdoms to declare war against Protestants in order to whip them back in the fold? Wonder if he ever heard of the Inquisition, the Bartholemew massacre, and the fires of Smithfield? If death and exile improved "their temporal affairs," then his statement is true. But when he challenges a comparison of private life the correspondence certainly shows bravado. The disingenuous and reckless immorality of Popes, bishops, priests, etc., are the "tear spots" in the chronicles of the ages. But from uncovering that cage of unclean birds we must refrain.

Dean Alford, one of the greatest scholars and authors the Christian world has ever produced, made this very positive declaration: "The practice of infant baptism does not rest on inference, but on the continuity and identity of the covenant of grace to Jew and Gentile, the sign only of admission being altered."

To Our Agents.

As an inducement for the fall campaign, we make this extraordinary offer for new subscribers to the Advocate, viz: For ten new subscribers, with cash in full for same, we will send a full set (four volumes) of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary, bound in half morocco; or for fifteen renewals and new subscribers, we will send the full set, postage prepaid—cash in full and names all at one time to accompany orders.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the Advocate and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompanies all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

SEND $1 BILLS.—We wish our patrons to bear in mind that in payment for subscriptions we do not desire postage stamps, and that they should be sent only or fractional parts of a dollar. A dollar bill is much more convenient and safe to remit than the same amount in one, two or three cents stamps. The actual risk of remitting money is slight; if properly directed not one misarrangement will occur in one thousand. Inclose the bills, and where letters containing money are sealed in presence of the postmaster, we will assume all the risk.

Pierce and Paine College.

There will be a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Pierce and Paine College, at the college building, on Saturday, November 22, at ten o'clock A. M. The following are the names of the Board appointed at the last session of the Louisiana Conference: Clerical—B. F. Alexander, R. Parvin, C. F. Evans, H. Capers, J. M. Brown, S. S. Keener, John Pipes, F. M. Grace, William Hart, J. M. Beard, J. J. Cassidy, C. R. Benson, Lay—H. J. Davis, A. Massey, William Robertson, Dr. Wilson, D. A. Blackshear, James W. Gibbs, John Pike, William Hopkins, Thomas Porter, William Porter, George Martin, Joshua Saunders.

R. F. ALEXANDER, P. E.

OCTOBER 29, 1884.

To the Brethren of the Mississippi Conference.

Will the presiding elders of the several districts please send me the names of all local preachers who will be in attendance for ordination, and of the delegates-elect to our approaching Conference. Will those of the laymen who do not expect to be in attendance inform me as soon as convenient.

T. R. HOLLOMAN.

YAZOO CITY, MISS., OCT. 27, 1884.

Books and Periodicals.

MY SCRAP BOOK. Compiled by Mrs. Ann E. Snyder. Printed for the author in Nashville, Tenn.

We are obliged to the author for a handsomely bound copy of this volume. It is a compilation of judicious selections, literary and religious, prose and poetry, and arranged with much skill. None but a pure and cultivated literary taste could have edited a volume of such merit. Our copy has been read by more than one and much enjoyed.

The North American Review, for November, has been examined with usual care. We always read the North American, and often utilize it for these columns. This number has a good table of contents: "Woman as a Political Factor," "The African Problem," "Progress in Naval Armament," "Half Time in Schools," "Friendship in Ancient Poetry," "Herbert Spencer's Latest Criticism," "Over-illustration," and "Restriction of the Suffrage." Subscription price, $7.00. Single numbers, 50 cents. New York: No. 30 Lafayette Place.

The Century, for November, is full to the brim of good things. This number begins the promised series of articles on the great battles of the war between the States. Gen. Beauregard's paper on The Battle of Bull Run will be found in this issue. Mr. W. D. Howells begins a new story and George Ticknor Curtis discusses the question, "How Shall We Elect Our President?" The editor's department is unusually fresh and suggestive. The Century Co., New York.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low cost, short weight, adulterated or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., NEW YORK.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS
THE BEST TONIC.

This medicine, combining iron with pure vegetable bitters, quickly and completely cures the various forms of debility, such as: Anemia, Indigestion, Weakness, Jaundice, Blood, Malaria, Chills and Fevers, and Neuritis.

SUNSHINE.
A large quarto book for children; profusely illustrated with superb engravings, and handsomely printed on extra heavy tinted paper. Send for circular. Publisher's price, $2.50; our price, $1. Expressage paid.

ESTERBROOK STEEL PEN CO.
28 John Street, New York.

Advocate Calendar.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the Advocate. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the Advocate.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

A little boy complains to his mother that the teacher can't remember his name. "When she speaks to me," he says, "she always calls me Silence."

The publisher of "Goblin Thoughts" on Mother, Home and Heaven" Introduction by Thos. L. Cuyler, D. D. announces the forthcoming of that work, and assures agents that have been selling it through bankrupt general agents, they can be supplied direct from the publisher, E. H. Treat, New York.

What do you suppose makes the moon so pale, darling? she asked, as they gazed at the orb of night. "I don't know, dear," he answered, "unless it is being up all night. It always affects me that way."

Hon. T. J. Sellers, St. Charles parish, La., says: "I have used the Yucca in my family and find it gives the best satisfaction of all preparations of the kind. Nothing like it, is the great popular remedy."

It is thought that the cab system in New York will tend to increase the number of elegants with conclusions, since all girls like handsome men.

"On what grounds do you have no without the extraordinary week's notice?" indignantly asked a thoroughly well-bred house mistress of a leaving boarder. "Coffee grounds, madam! Coffee grounds!" he fairly replied.

It is always foolish to dye the hair. Parker's Hair Balsam restores the original color, is not that better? Only 50 cents.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change can not be made.

The edition of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary, issued by Messrs. Jerome B. Samuels & Co., of Toledo, Ohio, and offered as a premium in another column, is nearly found in half morocco, four volumes. It gives home inducement. Every preacher in the nation will find it a complete set. See notice.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 125 Canal street, New Orleans, sells pianos and organs at low prices and on easy payments. This house is reliable and fully guarantees satisfaction. Chickering, Nathaniel, Weirich and other pianos can be bought for $50 cash and $10 monthly payments. A fine Werlein, either square or upright, is $100 to $150 cash or cash-shipped from factory, New York, direct from warehouse. New organs, Mason & Hamlin's organs can be had at very low prices; other popular makers also. Other pianos taken in exchange for new ones, as part pay. An organ can be bought on $5 monthly payments, $5 as first payment. No family should be without music if possible. It is a pleasure which no one should be deprived of. All should sing and be happy.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

Send the Advocate to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating officials.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, please inform us by postal card whether to continue the Advocate or no.

Send twenty-five cents in stamps for one copy of Kemble's Treatise on the Horse.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the Advocate.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.
Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for cough, colds, bronchitis and tubercular consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, bland and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more healthful results to the patient than a single teaspoonful of this jelly than by doubling the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. TRUCK, New York.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NEW STYLES. MOQUETTES. VELVETS. BODY BRUSSELS.
With or Without Borders.
Tapestry Brussels, 70 Cts. a Yard.
Lace Curtains, Window Shades,
MADRAH CURTAINS AND LACE.
OIL CLOTHS. LINOLEUM. CORTIGINE.
A. Brousseau's Son
23 and 25 Chartres Street 23 and 25

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOUISIANA STEAM

Sash, Blind and Door

FACTORY.

299, 301, 303, 305, 307 Oravler Street.

NEW ORLEANS.

ROBERTS & CO.

Proprietors.

Sash, Blinds, Doors, Mouldings, Flooring and Ceiling, Newels, Balusters, etc., always on hand, or made to order. Orders promptly attended to.

Plantation Cabins a Specialty

BRANCH OFFICE:

NO. 53 CARondelet STREET.

WATCHES.

We are selling the watches of the American Watch Company, Waltham, Mass., as low as they are sold anywhere.

Key-winding Silver Watches at $12.

Stem-winding Silver Watches at $18 to $25.

Stem-winding Gold Watches at $35 and upwards.

All fully guaranteed. Send for a catalogue.

A. B. GRISWOLD & CO.,

115 Canal street, New Orleans.

THOS. J. CARVER, W. L. BAKER,

CARVER & BAKER,

Cotton Factors

—AND—

COMMISSION MERCHANTS,

44 Perdido Street,

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

NO MORE NAUSEOUS DOSES.

It has been reserved to our company to furnish materials for the greatest cough and asthma remedy for all throat and lung complaints the New York Remedy. Coughs no longer, and is delicious. Home references by thousands. Life time, infallible for all.

Home Depot, 151 Julia St., N. O.

THE CENTENNIAL DAILY.

The Episcopal Methodist will publish a

DAILY PAPER

DURING THE SESSIONS OF

The Centennial Conference.

To be held in Baltimore, December 9-17, 1884.

There will be eight issues of the paper, and it will contain editorial comments on all

The Episcopate, Bishops, and of the Discussions on the Name.

It will be mailed on the evening of the day, whose advances first rate. The paper beautiful. All the price will be fifty cents in advance. No stamps taken. Be careful to write names and postoffice facility. Address:

Rev. Wm. K. Boyle,

BOX 502, BALTIMORE, MD.

EDUCATIONAL.

ASHEVILLE FEMALE COLLEGE,

IN THE "LAND OF THE SKY,"

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

The fall session opens September 10th. Faculty large and experienced. Courses thorough. Musical advances first rate. The place beautiful. All the price will be fifty cents in advance. No

stamps taken. Be careful to write names and postoffice facility. Address:

Rev. JAMES ATKINS, JR.

The E. A. Seminary

This school, for boys and girls, is located at

Acruella, Blountville, Tenn., a town on the railroad that joins Monroe and Shreveport.

The course of study is thorough and practical.

The discipline is rigid, with mildness.

For circulars, address

R. A. SMITH, Principal.

HIWASSEE COLLEGE.

FOUNDED 1840.

In the country, seven miles from Sycamore Depot,

East Tennessee.

Delicious butter and milk fresh from the cold spring house.

Quiet retreat.

Moral places.

Moderate charges.

Thorough work.

Wide patronage.

Postoffice, Hiwassee College, Tennessee. Mails

daily, except Sunday.

J. H. BRUNER, President.

Mansfield Female College.

FACULTY:

F. M. GRACE, D. D., President.

S. E. GRACE, A. M., Professor.

TEACHERS:

MISS A. R. WILLIAMS, MISS ELLA FOSTER,

MISS ELLA SMITH, MISS EMMA SUTHERLIN,

MISS R. J. HARR, Music.

MISS R. M. DILLAKE, Music.

MISS BELLE PENNINGTON, Art.

MISS K. L. BARLOW, Government and Principal.

Preparatory School.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS

SIZES AND PRICES.

No. 6, 25in.....330 114.....
 No. 6, 27in.....140 114.....
 No. 7, 30in.....490 114.....
 No. 8, 34in.....740 114.....
 No. 9, 38in.....925 114.....

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY
Bells of Pure Copper and Tin for Church
Schools, Fire Alarms, Parades, etc. FULL
WARRANTED. Catalogue and Price
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati.

CHIMES for CHURCHES, TOWNS, CLOCK, etc., etc. Prices and logues sent free. Address
E. MERRILL & CO.,
Baltimore

BELLS

ADDRESS E. S. BELL & CO., HILLSBORO, O.
CYPRESS LANDS FOR SALE

One thousand acres cypress timber lands. Situated in townships 10 and 11, south range 10 west, south west

For information,
Apply to
N. O. Christian Advocate.

112 Camp street,
New Orleans, La.

NOTE: Under positive government sample FREE: L. SMITHNIGHT, U. and, O.

TERS
THE ONLY TR

IRON

ATONIC

Will purify the BLOOD, and into the LIVER and KIDNEYS, and RESTORE THE HEALTH and VIGOR of YOUTH.
pepsia, Want of Appetite, digestion, Lack of Strength.

LADIES

Send in DR. HARTER'S TONIC TOMO a specially cure, gives a clear, healthy complexion.
For special receipts at counterfeiting and to the popularity of the original. Do not exchange for the ORIGINAL AND BEST.
Give your address to the first list. Not to "Anakesis" gives relief.

an anti-cure cure for

FILED Price $1. and drug-sent prepaid by mail.
Free. Ad. "ANALYTICAL"
Makers, Box 2410 New York, N.Y. 10116

ShotGuns 300 Box

Large Ill.
Catalogue free.

HOLMES' SURE CURE MOUTH WASH and DENTIFRICE

MOUTH WASH and DENTIFRICE
Cures Boiling Gums, Pile, Sore Mouth, Throat, Cleanses the Teeth and Purifies the Bleed, and recommended by leading dentists.
Prepared by H. J. P. & W. R. Hays, Dentists,
N. J. For Sale by all druggists and dealers.

For sale by F. J. BART & CO., New Orleans

AGENTS Send for E. B. TR of new books
 MATHER D.
 HEAVEN

CHALCO
 1. CHALCO is a small town in the heart of the state.
 2. CHALCO is a small town in the heart of the state.
 3. CHALCO is a small town in the heart of the state.
 4. CHALCO is a small town in the heart of the state.
 5. CHALCO is a small town in the heart of the state.
 6. CHALCO is a small town in the heart of the state.
 7. CHALCO is a small town in the heart of the state.
 8. CHALCO is a small town in the heart of the state.
 9. CHALCO is a small town in the heart of the state.
 10. CHALCO is a small town in the heart of the state.

1/2% LONG LOAN

PRINCIPAL need never be paid so long as interest is kept up. ⁴⁰ security only for interest. Honest poor or moderate means can send 6 cents for variman forms, etc. Address T. GARDNER, M.

Palace Building, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

QUAKER CHILI SAUCE

CLUBES MALABRI

CURES MALARIA AND CHILLS and FEVER
It is in the form of a Cake, to be eaten. No Quinine Drugs Not Disagreeable and Perfectly Safe

is a QUICK, RADICAL and PERMANENT CURE

Mr. ELLIS N. RANDALL, of Ticonderoga, New York, says "THE QUAKER CHERRY-CAKE, will of any of seven years' standing."

Mr. F. W. CANNON, of Ticonderoga, New York, says "I have used THE QUAKER CHERRY-CAKE for many years, and it has cured me of many ailments."

YORK, writes: "QUAKER CHILL-CAKE cured little boy of Chills and Fever, and it also cured of Malaria."

The price of the QUAKER PHILIP is $1.00 per issue, and will be sent, by Mail, to any of the United States, on receipt of the money.
Further information, Circulars, and Testimonials sent on application. Address,

GROFF & CO., 1522 Chestnut St., Philad.

$60.5 TO
WAGON SCALE

Home Box, Tulse Easwell,
Faint, Faint, Faint, Faint, Faint, address JONES OF JONES
BINGHAMTON

The Ministers' and Teachers'

This magnificent paper title is transported from London and is featured as The Next by the headline. This way of England. In addition to the Old and New Testaments it contains a concordance of 3000 Words 40.000 References with Context! An Encyclopaedia, A Dictionary of Proper Names, with their

With Frontispiece, 12 full page colored Maps. Poetry, Music, Ethnology, Plants, Animals, and Jewish seeds of the Bible, etc. "superior to all others." — N. Y. Times. "A complete Biblical Encyclopedia." — London Times. This Bible is bound in French morocco, with leather.

with silk book-mark, and lists copious references. Rev. Ell Milton, Norwalk, O., writes "The Bible received to-day I am more than pleased." A Special Offer! To rapidly introduce this Bible in America we will, for a limited time only, send one copy . . .

On receipt of only $2.00 for copies and one copy of Revised New Testament
for $2.00 Other Bibles, with less matter, sell for $15.
For orders

WANTED! Circulars FREE.
O. S. MAYO & CO., 160 LaSalle St., Chi.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending November 4, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary.....	7 1-10 @
Ordinary.....	8 1-10
Good ordinary.....	9 1-10
Low middling.....	9 1-10
Middling.....	9 1-10
Good middling.....	9 1-10
Fair.....	10 9-10
Salvatore middling.....	9 1-10
St. Louis middling.....	9 7-10

SUGAR.
Inferior.....	4
Common.....	4
Good common.....	4 1-2
Good fair.....	4 1-2
Fully fair.....	4 1-2
Prime.....	4 1-2
Strictly Prime.....	4 1-2
Choice.....	4 1-2
Seconds.....	4 1-2
Yellow clarified.....	4 1-2
Gray clarified.....	4 1-2
Choice whites.....	4 1-2
Granulated.....	4 1-2

MOLASSES.
Syrup.....	30
Straitly Prime.....	41
Choice.....	51
Fancy.....	51

RICE.
Choice.....	52
Prime.....	52
Good.....	52
Fair.....	52
Ordinary.....	52
Common.....	52
No. 2.....	52
Rough.....	52

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers.....	5 3/4
Minnesota patents.....	6 1/2
Extra fair.....	4 7/8
Winter wheat patents.....	5 7/8
Choice.....	5 3/4
Fancy.....	4 15/16

CORN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal.....	3 7/8
Corn meal.....	2 6/8
Grills.....	4 00
Houliny.....	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
CORN:
White.....	54
Yellow.....	55
Mixed.....	54
WHEAT:
Western.....	37
Texas rust-proof.....	41
Texas No. 2.....	41
BRAN:
Sugar-cured.....	87 1/2
HAY:
Choice.....	20 00
Prime.....	17 00

PROVISIONS.
PORK:
Mess.....	15 7/8
Prime mess.....	16 00
Rumps.....	14 50
BACON:
Choice breakfast.....	12
Shoulders.....	7 1/2
Sides, clear.....	10 1/2
Sides, clear rib.....	10 1/2

HAMS.
Sugar-cured.....	14 1/2
DRY SALT MEAT:
Shoulders.....	6 1/2
Sides, clear.....	8 1/2
Sides, clear rib.....	8 1/2

FISH.
MAKERAL:
No. 1, in bbls.....	14 25
Half bbls.....	7 75
No. 2, in bbls.....	13 75
Half bbls.....	6 25
No. 3, in bbls, large.....	13 25
Half bbls.....	7 00

GROCERIES.
COFFEE:
Rio, choice.....	94
Cordova, choice.....	12
Java, choice.....	22
BUTTER:
Western dairy.....	18
New York dairy.....	18
Country.....	20
LARD:
Choice.....	8 1/2
Fair.....	25
COAL:
Coal, cases.....	18
Coal, bbls.....	13
Cotton seed.....	50
Lard.....	80

VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES:
Western, bulk.....	54
Country.....	54
POTATOES:
Louisiana.....	1 25
Western.....	1 75
KROUT:
5 bbl.....	5 00
ONIONS:
5 bbl.....	1 80
BALING STUFFS:
12 b.....	10 1/2
2 b.....	11 1/2
BALING TWINE:
5 bundle.....	11 1/2
1 bundle.....	1 25

SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western.....	5 00
Young.....	2 50
Chickens, South'n.....	3 50
Young.....	2 00
Turkeys, Southern.....	9 00
Eggs:
Western.....	20
Southern.....	23
Wool:
Lake.....	17 1/2
Louisiana.....	15 1/2
Burly.....	7 1/2
HIDES:
Green salted.....	7 1/2
Dry salted.....	9 1/2
SKIN:
Oak, kegs.....	50 00
Oak, barrels.....	75 00
Oak, casks.....	50 00
Oak, hoghead.....	75 00

FERTILIZERS.
Cotton seed.....	8 00
Meal.....	22 50
Pure ground bone.....	22 00
Muriatic acid.....	8
Sulphuric acid.....	2 1/2
Bone black.....	8 1/2

Cured Chronic Rheumatism.
"I suffered almost intolerable torments from rheumatism for many years. Parker's Tonic restored my health," says M. Alfred Baer, of Sing Sing, N. Y.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.
GREENVILLE, S. C., Oct. 23.—The Presbyterian Synod reached a vote on the reports of the committee on the anniversary regarding the teaching of evolution late this evening, after hearing Dr. Woodrow in his own defense for more than seven hours. Both the majority and minority reports, the one condemning and the other commending Dr. Woodrow's teaching, were rejected by a vote of 52 to 41, the synod being much diminished by departures. A resolution introduced by Dr. Thompson, of Charleston, was adopted after the rejection of several other proposed compromises by a vote of 50 to 45. The full text of the resolution finally adopted by the Synod is as follows:
Resolved, That, in the judgment of this Synod, the teaching of evolution in the Theological Seminary at Columbia, except in a purely expository manner, with no intention of inculcating its truths, is hereby disapproved. The following was also adopted: Resolved, That the Synod of South Carolina hereby expresses its sincere affection for Dr. Woodrow personally, its appreciation of the purity of his Christian character, its admiration of his distinguished talents and of his scholarly attainments, both in theology and science, and its high estimate of his past services.
The Synods of Georgia, Florida and Alabama have yet to pass upon the question before it is finally decided. The resolutions do not condemn Dr. Woodrow, but simply forbid his teaching that which he has never taught.

UNIONTOWNS, Pa., Oct. 29.—The remains of fourteen victims of the Youngstown mines' disaster were buried to-day. There is yet no well-defined and accepted theory of the explosion.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30.—The Protestant Episcopal Convention, after taking nine ballots during the present session, on thirty-two in all, including balloting at the May session, seemed this morning as far from reaching an election as at the beginning. After the nineteenth call of the ballot for to-day Dr. Eccleson withdrew from the contest. The ballot resulted in the election of Dr. Pare, who received 91 out of 121 votes, more than the required majority. Dr. Pare is of French descent, and a native of New York. He is fifty-five years of age, and has been stationed at Epiphany Church, Washington, during the past eight years, where he is held in high esteem.

NEW IBERIA, La., Nov. 1.—Judge Fontenot and eight or ten others left this morning for Loreauville, Fausse Pointe, in this parish, to hold a political meeting in the interest of Kellogg. After the crowd assembled some disturbance was created by persons hallooing, "Hurrah for Gay." Joe Guilfoix rushed to the scene of trouble and was fired at, the ball of a shotgun hitting his hat. He returned the fire. At that moment a general row ensued, in which Capt. Bell, a prominent sugar planter and Democrat, Joe Guilfoix, a leading Gay man, and Oliver Boute, a colored Kellogg man from New Iberia, were all killed outright. The wounded so far as known are Jules Metayer, Republican candidate for sheriff last spring, thigh broken; ex-Sheriff T. Vator, shot twice in the abdomen, and a dozen others slightly wounded. Six negroes were killed as far as known.

FOREIGN.
HALIFAX, Oct. 29.—This afternoon a cage was being lowered down the Dufferin shaft when the gearing broke. As the cage fell it was caught down the shaft and overturned, throwing out the men, who fell a distance of 200 feet. Three were killed outright, and two others were fatally injured. The other one was very seriously injured.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—The Telegraphic states that Prime Minister Ferry has accepted England's offer to mediate between China and France.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—Radical members of Parliament are combining to oppose the government compromise with the House of Lords, also to oppose the government. The aim of the Radicals is to widen the present breach and maintain agitation for the abolition of the House of Lords.

MADRAS, Nov. 1.—An unusually fatal outbreak of cholera has occurred here which is aggravated by the difficulty of procuring provisions, as the terror-stricken villagers refuse to bring to the city the customary supplies.

GLASGOW, Nov. 1.—A serious panic occurred at the Star Theatre this evening, caused by the cry of fire. During the rush of the audience to escape from the building sixteen people were killed and twelve seriously injured.

Plan of Episcopal Visitations for 1884.

Conference.	Date.	Place.
FIRST DISTRICT—BISHOP GRANT.
Daguer.	July 23.	Denver.
Montana.	Aug. 21.	Stevensville.
Columbia.	Sept. 21.	Dayton.
Pacific.	Oct. 21.	Santa Rosa.
Los Angeles.	Oct. 21.	San Bernardino.
SECOND DISTRICT—BISHOP SAN ANTONIO.
West Texas.	Oct. 28.	San Antonio.
North Texas.	Nov. 12.	Fort Worth.
East Texas.	Nov. 19.	Longview.
German Mission.	Nov. 27.	Houston.
Texas.	Dec. 3.	Galveston.
THIRD DISTRICT—BISHOP PARKER.
Missouri.	Sept. 17.	St. Louis.
Western.	Sept. 25.	Council Grove.
Southwest Missouri.	Oct. 1.	Jefferson City.
North Carolina.	Nov. 26.	Wilmington.
Mississippi.	Dec. 17.	Yazoo City.
Baltimore.	March 11.	Salem.
FOURTH DISTRICT—BISHOP HARRISON.
St. Louis.	Sept. 4.	St. Louis.
West Virginia.	Oct. 8.	Greenup.
Arkansas.	Nov. 19.	Van Buren.
Little Rock.	Nov. 24.	Little Rock.
White River.	Dec. 3.	Batesville.
Louisiana.	Jan. 8.	Miniden.
FIFTH DISTRICT—BISHOP PIERCE.
Indian Mission.	Sept. 17.	Paul's Valley.
Tennessee.	Sept. 25.	Nashville.
North Alabama.	Nov. 12.	Talladega.
South Carolina.	Dec. 17.	Charleston.
Florida.	Jan. 8.	Gainesville.
SIXTH DISTRICT—BISHOP WILSON.
Kentucky.	Sept. 10.	St. Sterling.
Louisville.	Sept. 17.	Louisville.
Illinois.	Sept. 24.	Nashville.
North Georgia.	Nov. 26.	Atlanta.
South Georgia.	Dec. 17.	Savannah.
SEVENTH DISTRICT—BISHOP KEEFER.
Holston.	Oct. 22.	Bristol.
North Mississippi.	Nov. 12.	Lynchburg.
North Mississippi.	Nov. 26.	Nashville.
Memphis.	Dec. 3.	Memphis.
Alabama.	Dec. 17.	Opelika.
EIGHTH DISTRICT—BISHOP McTEYRE.
Indian Mission.	Sept. 17.	Paul's Valley.
Tennessee.	Sept. 25.	Nashville.
North Alabama.	Nov. 12.	Talladega.
South Carolina.	Dec. 17.	Charleston.
Florida.	Jan. 8.	Gainesville.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

CENTENARY NOTICE.—To the preachers in charge in the several Districts, North Mississippi Conference, Dear Brethren, let us not forget our Centenary year, and especially the motto: "A collection from every congregation." The opportunity of a hundred years is at hand. Let us improve it. Give every member of the church an opportunity of making a thank offering. Let it not fail in this matter. For, if we do, with Bishop Keener in the chair, we may expect to be called to account for it, when we go up to Aberdeen in November.

T. G. WIER,
Chairman Dist. Centenary Com.
The presiding elders of the North Mississippi Conference will please send me promptly the names in full, of the several delegates elect to the ensuing Conference, and of their alternates.

BYHALIA, Mississippi.
Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

MOBILE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Grand Bay, at St. Elmo.....	Oct. 11, 12
St. Francis Street.....	13
St. Charles, at Mobile.....	14
St. Paul, at Mobile.....	15
St. James, at Mobile.....	16
St. John, at Mobile.....	17
St. Peter, at Mobile.....	18
St. Andrew, at Mobile.....	19
St. George, at Mobile.....	20
St. Mark, at Mobile.....	21
St. Luke, at Mobile.....	22
St. Matthew, at Mobile.....	23
St. Philip, at Mobile.....	24
St. Timothy, at Mobile.....	25
St. Titus, at Mobile.....	26
St. Thaddeus, at Mobile.....	27
St. Ambrose, at Mobile.....	28
St. Anselm, at Mobile.....	29
St. Boniface, at Mobile.....	30

EUFAULA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Louisville circuit, at Tabernacle.....	Oct. 11, 12
Clayton.....	13
St. Paul, at Eufaula.....	14
St. James, at Eufaula.....	15
St. John, at Eufaula.....	16
St. Peter, at Eufaula.....	17
St. Andrew, at Eufaula.....	18
St. George, at Eufaula.....	19
St. Mark, at Eufaula.....	20
St. Luke, at Eufaula.....	21
St. Matthew, at Eufaula.....	22
St. Philip, at Eufaula.....	23
St. Timothy, at Eufaula.....	24
St. Titus, at Eufaula.....	25
St. Thaddeus, at Eufaula.....	26
St. Ambrose, at Eufaula.....	27
St. Anselm, at Eufaula.....	28
St. Boniface, at Eufaula.....	29
St. John, at Eufaula.....	30

PENSACOLA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Powhatan, at Byrnesville.....	Sept. 29, 30
Milton station.....	Oct. 1, 2
St. Paul, at Pensacola.....	3
St. James, at Pensacola.....	4
St. John, at Pensacola.....	5
St. Peter, at Pensacola.....	6
St. Andrew, at Pensacola.....	7
St. George, at Pensacola.....	8
St. Mark, at Pensacola.....	9
St. Luke, at Pensacola.....	10
St. Matthew, at Pensacola.....	11
St. Philip, at Pensacola.....	12
St. Timothy, at Pensacola.....	13
St. Titus, at Pensacola.....	14
St. Thaddeus, at Pensacola.....	15
St. Ambrose, at Pensacola.....	16
St. Anselm, at Pensacola.....	17
St. Boniface, at Pensacola.....	18
St. John, at Pensacola.....	19
St. James, at Pensacola.....	20

GREENSBORO DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	Sept. 29, 30
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	Oct. 1, 2
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	3
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	4
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	5
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	6
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	7
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	8
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	9
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	10
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	11
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	12
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	13
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	14
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	15
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	16
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	17
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	18
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	19
Greensboro circuit, at Carthage.....	20

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.
Logansport, at Logansport.....	Oct. 22
Grand Cane, at Grand Cane.....	23
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	24
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	25
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	26
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	27
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	28
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	29
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	30
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	31
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	32
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	33
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	34
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	35
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	36
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	37
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	38
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	39
Amite, at Bayou St. John.....	40

DELLI DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Royville, Little Creek.....	Oct. 18, 19
Montrose.....	20
Land Grove, Little Creek.....	21
Montrose.....	22
Land Grove, Little Creek.....	23
Montrose.....	24
Land Grove, Little Creek.....	25
Montrose.....	26
Land Grove, Little Creek.....	27
Montrose.....	28
Land Grove, Little Creek.....	29
Montrose.....	30
Land Grove, Little Creek.....	31
Montrose.....	32
Land Grove, Little Creek.....	33
Montrose.....	34
Land Grove, Little Creek.....	35
Montrose.....	36
Land Grove, Little Creek.....	37
Montrose.....	38
Land Grove, Little Creek.....	39
Montrose.....	40

OPELOUSAS DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Washington and Vermilionville.....	Oct. 25, 26
Grand Cane.....	27
Grand Cane.....	28
Grand Cane.....	29
Grand Cane.....	30
Grand Cane.....	31
Grand Cane.....	32
Grand Cane.....	33
Grand Cane.....	34
Grand Cane.....	35
Grand Cane.....	36
Grand Cane.....	37
Grand Cane.....	38
Grand Cane.....	39
Grand Cane.....	40
Grand Cane.....	41
Grand Cane.....	42
Grand Cane.....	43
Grand Cane.....	44
Grand Cane.....	45
Grand Cane.....	46
Grand Cane.....	47
Grand Cane.....	48
Grand Cane.....	49
Grand Cane.....	50

HOMER DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	Oct. 4, 5
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	6
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	7
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	8
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	9
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	10
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	11
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	12
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	13
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	14
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	15
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	16
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	17
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	18
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....	19
Spaulding circuit, at Evergreen.....

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 46.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1476.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—115 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT,
REV. O. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.,
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

IN THE SECRET OF HIS PRESENCE.

BY REV. HENRY DUTTON, M. A.

In the secret of his presence

I am kept from strife of tongue;

His pavilion is around me.

And within are countless songs

Of his love and his sweet will.

Heed without, but can not harm.

For the Master's voice is stilling

Storm and tempest to a calm.

In the secret of his presence

Jesus keeps, I know not how;

In the shadow of His ghost,

I am resting, hiding, now!

In the secret of his presence

All the darkness disappears;

For a sun that knows no setting

Throws a rainbow on my tears.

So the day grows ever lighter,

Bringing in the perfect noon;

So the day grows ever brighter,

Heaven is coming, near and soon.

In the secret of his presence

Neteopore can give alarm;

In the shadow of the light,

I can meet them with a smile;

For the strong, swollen flood me-

Tues their very darts aside,

And I know, what'er befalls me,

I shall live because He died!

In the secret of his presence

Jesus keeps, I know not how;

In the shadow of His ghost,

I am resting, hiding, now!

Letter from China.

(Continued.)

MR. EDITOR: It is just thirty years to-day since we first landed in Shanghai, China, among this strange people. Surely God has been gracious unto us all these years, and we will praise his holy name. He has never forsaken us a single day, but has surrounded us with his loving kindness and tender mercy, and we feel earnestly desirous of reconsecrating ourselves to his service. We earnestly pray for divine guidance in the future that we may live more entirely to the glory of God. The goodness of God has followed us all our days, and we feel that the remainder of our life should be spent in gratitude and praise. When we look back upon our past life in China we mourn that we have been able to accomplish so little for our blessed Savior. Our work in this land has all been done for him, because of the love which he had for us, and the desire we have had to make known this love to these dying heathen.

After getting acquainted with our native preacher, Bro. Liew, I formed a very strong attachment for him, and often visited his home, which was near us. He was deeply interested in the study of the word of God, and was always thankful to any one who would give him any assistance. I recollect one day, about three weeks after we arrived, seeing him in great distress of mind. On asking the cause, I was told the mission printing press had fallen into the canal, and he was using every effort by means of many coolies to recover it, and finding it impossible to do so had proposed to those present and interested should unite with him in earnest prayer to God for help that they might recover the lost press. A young man, the son of a missionary standing by, laughed at him for expressing a desire to pray to God for help. He was deeply grieved that the son of a missionary should thus reproach him for his trust in the power and goodness of God. He mourned over this many days, and to my knowledge offered up many earnest prayers for the conversion of that young man. They recovered the press, and the heart of our native brother was filled with joy and thanksgiving. He was a very conscientious man, and had daily family prayer with his wife and servants, for he had no children. On many an occasion when with him, morning and evening, I have greatly enjoyed the reading of the word of God, and uniting with our brother and his wife around this family altar in earnest prayer for God's blessing. It was truly inspiring to hear the pleadings of Bro. Liew in earnest prayer at a throne of grace for the blessing of God to rest upon his own people. His faith in God's word was firm and unshaken, and no persecution or ridicule could move him from the stronghold which he had taken.

By October 12 the situation was getting more serious all around us. Orders were given by our consuls and military authorities that no foreigner should attempt to enter the city, for it was considered dangerous to do so. The insurgents were fighting among themselves, and were discharging heavy guns from the city wall all day and night. It was no pleasant news to us to hear on the morning of the thirteenth that the Imperial officers of the district were preparing a large force to attack the British consul and all foreign residents. We were near the city and quite away from the foreign settlement and surrounded by Chinese. It was an anxious day with us, and we waited to see the result, fully trusting all in God's hands. The Chinese had frequently put out such reports to frighten foreigners, and we learned during the day that this was a false alarm.

I visited a large temple during the day and found some eight Buddhist priests dressed in their long robes, with various instruments of music and the inevitable gong among the number. They would sometimes kneel and then slowly bow their heads to the ground, calling on the name of Buddha and repeating their formulas. All the while they were making a hideous noise with gongs and shouting to Buddha to hear them. This noise is no doubt made to wake him if he be asleep, as do the Japanese when they clap their hands before bowing their heads to their idols. A little boy was on his knees before them, dressed in white, and with his head bowed to the ground. He had before him two large tables filled with rice, wine, tea, cakes, fruits and many other articles of food. All this was for the spirits of his ancestors, and especially for the spirit of his deceased father, to feed upon. On the table candles and incense sticks were burning, and a large lot of what is called ghost money, made of tin foil, was ready to be burned for the use of the spirits in the world of darkness. The little boy kneeling was dressed in white, the badge of mourning in China. His little brother was sitting near him, and he too was dressed in white. I saw that white cords had been bound in their queues, which is the sign of the death of an elder in the family. The elders of a family never mourn by dressing in white on the death of younger persons of the family. The husband never dresses in mourning on the death of his wife, but the wife must do so for the husband. I found this was a funeral occasion, and the priests were praying the dead man's soul out of purgatory. The whole ceremony was ended after, perhaps, forty-eight hours of noise and chanting by the loud explosion of crackers to frighten away evil spirits that may have followed the more fortunate one from the world of darkness who had been, according to Chinese ideas, released from a place of punishment by the prayers of the priests. As soon as this was over, and the priests had reported the spirit of the father safe, they all sat down and demolished the rice, cakes, tea, fruits, etc., and finished with the wine, as it seemed to be, and they soon became a merry crowd. Before their departure the fee was paid them for their valuable services, and the amount is always in proportion to the wealth of the family.

A poor man, nearly blind, came to see the doctor, and, while receiving treatment, was asked if he had ever heard of Jesus, and he replied he had never heard of such a man. He was then asked if he had ever heard of God. He replied, "I do not know what you are talking about." The names of several of the Chinese idol gods were then mentioned, and was asked if he had ever heard of them. He replied, "O yes, I have heard of these all my life, and I have burned incense before them, and worshiped them; but I have never heard of Jesus or the true God." He was then told that when Jesus was on earth in the form of man he went about healing all diseases, and healed the blind by speaking a word to them. He expressed great surprise at this, for he had almost lost his sight, and no doubt secretly wished Jesus was there to heal him. We felt sorry for him, and the doctor did all he could to restore his sight, with what result we never heard. There were millions of perishing heathen around us, whose spiritual vision was darkened and were needing all the blessings of the gospel.

An old school teacher in the employ of the mission had been reading about Adam, and wanted to know of the missionary what language he spoke, when he was told it was not known. The missionary then asked him what language he thought Adam spoke, and he replied, "I think he spoke the Shanghai dialect." A servant in a missionary family was asked who Jesus was. He replied in a very confident manner, "He was a Canton man."

While taking a walk I saw many miserable looking human beings, for all such sights were new to me and attracted my attention. I came to a house where several persons were weeping. They had incense burning before the door, and inside was an open coffin. Some persons were busy getting it ready for the dead. A great quantity of linen was placed in the bottom, and then some coarse paper, and upon the paper was placed the pith of a weed found here. Upon the top of all this was placed a silk covering. The coffin was moved near the body, where the priest sat smoking his pipe. The whole family were weeping and keeping up a terrible noise. I pressed my way in through the dense crowd and watched them as they took the body and placed it first on the side and then gradually turned it on the back. The body was dressed as if going to a feast, with a long robe, boots and a peculiar hat which is always worn at feasts. Then some copper cash was placed in the coffin, also a large lot of ghost money. This was for the use of the spirit on approaching the world of darkness, for the spirit will be met by a number of hungry ghosts acting as police, ready to drag them before the authorities unless he has sufficient money to bribe them. I am,

Yours in Christian fellowship,

J. W. LAMOUTH.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Sep. 27, 1884.

The Mississippi Synod.

This body met in Crystal Springs, October 23, at seven P. M. Rev. Mr. Buchanan, of Hazelhurst, Miss., was elected moderator, and Col. Dennet, of Brookhaven, Miss., clerk. There are in this Synod 69 ministers, 175 churches and 9,188 communicants. On Friday Dr. Woodrow and evolution were under consideration. The following was offered by Dr. Palmer: "In the judgment of this Synod the widespread agitation on the subject of evolution, occasioned by the new departure in the seminary of Columbia, S. C., can not be allayed until the mind of the church is ascertained. Under this conviction the Synod of Mississippi deprecates the introduction of this theory as endangering the peace and unity of the church, and can not consent that an hypothesis, confessed by its advocates to be unverified, and which therefore can not be dignified as science, shall assume to control the interpretation of the inspired word." A prolonged discussion ensued. The following are a few points made in the speeches: Mr. Finin, of New Orleans, said that while Dr. Woodrow believed in evolution he also held to the inspiration of Scripture and the doctrines of the Presbyterian Church. That he believed in the immediate breathing of the human soul as a separate creation, etc. The speaker held that theistic evolution is consistent with the freedom and responsibility of man and with the doctrine of design in nature. Also that the theory of evolution is non-theological and purely scientific, and that therefore the church should forbear any deliverance on the subject. Mr. West, of Aberdeen, Miss., held that the paper under consideration did great injustice to Dr. Woodrow by placing upon him the responsibility of "the widespread agitation on the subject of evolution," whereas the true cause was the heresy-hunting proclivity of the church. He held that evolution conflicted with the word in only one point, and that was in the "dust."

Mr. Woodbridge, of Wesson, Miss., did not know or care whether evolution was true or false. He knew the Bible was true, and loved the church, had given his life to it, and would die for it now. And he did not want the church to make any deliverance on the subject. Dr. Palmer, of New Orleans, said evolution was not only "an unverified hypothesis," but in the very nature of the case it could never be verified, for nobody was there to see God create man, and that all we could know of the process was what God revealed to us. If evolution conflicted with the inspired word at one point, which its advocates confess it does, that is enough. The eyes and naps being called for, the paper was adopted, the vote standing thus: Ayes, 42, and nays, 8.

On Friday night we had an address from Dr. Houston on foreign missions. This was one of the best missionary addresses I ever heard. It did not provoke even a smile at any point, but it made the missionary the glow on every Christian heart. It made a profound impression for good on a large audience, without the slightest compromise of the true dignity and Christian propriety of the occasion.

Dr. Houston is a returned missionary, and the assistant secretary of the Board of Missions. He went to China in 1865, and returned on account of failing health in 1871. In 1881 he went back to China, but in 1883 his wife having died, he brought his children back to America, and while here was elected to the office he now holds, and decided to remain.

The Southern Presbyterian Church has missions in China, Brazil, Greece, Italy, Mexico and the Indian Territory. The stations number about 75. The whole number of laborers sent out from this country is 59. The native helpers number 55. There are 43 organized churches in connection with these missions, with about 1,750 church members. Last year there were added to these churches 217 members. The missions have 9 boarding-schools and 12 day-schools, in which there are 531 pupils, and there are 4 theological training classes, in which there are 14 pupils.

The amount contributed last year for the support of these missions was $50,000. Of this sum $2,841 was contributed in the Synod of Mississippi. The church proposes to raise this year $100,000 and of this amount the Synod of Mississippi resolved to undertake to raise $5,500. These items were kindly furnished your correspondent by Dr. Houston.

The Synod adjourned late Saturday night to meet in Shreveport, La., in November, 1885. Many of the preachers remained over Sunday, and all the pulpits of our town were filled by ministers from the Synod.

W. M. LEWIS.

Stray Thoughts from a Note-Book.

FROM OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT.

Slowly the darkness falls

"As a feather is wafted downward
From an eagle in flight."

The clouds drift in murky folds across the sky and a wintry chill pervades the air, causing the passer-by to draw his wraps more closely about him and hasten on to home and cheery fireside. Already the leaves have donned their burial robes and fluttered down to die pressed close to earth's heart. In the parks great drifts of them are swept into pitiless, dull heaps, while the branches above sigh in the winds for the companions they have lost. We feel winter's frosty weather and know that he will soon turn the corner and be upon us before we are quite ready to receive him. Washington is beautiful now, and will continue to be beautiful when winter has placed his coronet of glittering crystals on earth's brow and thrown a mantle of snow ermine over her bare shoulders.

Only a few weeks since we complained of the heat and sought cool spots, and now our noses turn blue when we take them out and our toes have a tendency to get numb.

Only a few weeks since I wandered through Oakland Cemetery, where the flowers bloomed in wild profusion; roses and heliotropes scented the air; now the sweet flowers have been taken up and put away where wintry death may not touch them as it has the quiet sleepers below.

Standing before the monument of John Howard Payne in the beautiful cemetery, I read the appropriate words of his epitaph:

"Sure, when thy gentle spirit fled,
To rest beyond the state dome,
With outstretched arms, God's angels said,
Welcome to Heaven's home, sweet home!"

A wanderer always in life, he was a wanderer still in death; but at last his bones rest in native soil, even as his gentle spirit rests in "Heaven's home, sweet home."

"Home, sweet home!" Hark! I catch the notes even now, stolen by the chill wind from a strolling hand organ whose homeless owner shivers in his rags. "Home, sweet home!" The notes reach happy firesides, whose smiling circles re-echo the glad refrain. "Home, sweet home!" A woman in costly raiment hears it as she treads on marble floors, and a ghill, like death, creeps to her heart at the mockery of the words. To three souls, homeless as ever Payne was, when standing outside in the cold and the storm, he heard a happy group within singing his matchless words, the notes come with a sobbing wall, borne on the autumn winds. Homeless ones! look aloft, and thank God for "Heaven's home, sweet home!"

The other day, in the quaint old library of the Georgetown University, I saw a lot of ancient manuscripts. The text, like print, and the illuminated pages, like the work of monkish hands, four or five hundred years ago. Shut in from the world's turmoil, between the repetitions of his "Kyrie Eleison, Christe Eleison," he toiled over his copies of the Scriptures. In our busy day, of printing presses and telegraphs, one can but regard with wonder the work of these patient monks, even as we return thanks that the bread of life is to-day thrown broadcast upon the rushing waters of progress, whose streams carry it to famishing thousands of every land. It is no longer the undigested food of monks and priests.

Politics! Politics! We take it in with our food, we see it in the anxious faces of knaves and crowds of men gathered at every street corner; the banners flaunt it in our faces with the names of Blaine and Logan, Cleveland and Hendricks; the very air is full of it. The political heart of the nation throbs mightily in eager excitement, though it can only throb, while the great arteries and small that go out from it must do the work of sustaining and purifying the great body of the nation. Perhaps all the blood it has sent out has not been pure; but we, who must be silent watchers, for no one votes in the District, trust that it may be purified by its passage through Democratic lungs, and return fit to reanimate the languishing frame of our great republic.

Since coming to Washington I have had the pleasure of attending frequently upon the ministry of Dr. William A. Bartlett, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, a man of broad views, wide observation and grand intellect. With a vast fund of information, a ready command of language, a full pleasing voice, and a fine appearance, he approaches my ideal pulpit orator. His sermons abound in rich gospel truth, so beautifully expressed as to please the most fastidious, and yet so simple as to reach the heart and the understanding of the most ignorant. There is but one Southern Methodist Church in Washington, Mt. Vernon Place Church, and though its congregation is small, and not exceedingly fashionable, my heart turns toward it as it does towards everything—Southern and Methodist.

Now I fear Mr. Editor's wrath will come as the untimely frost and nip my literary aspirations in the bud unless I desist; so I desist.

Yours,

1.

Have We Not All One Father?

What a rebuke to all uncharitableness lies in these few and simple words of the ancient prophet! How far-reaching, searching and powerfully restraining is their gentle tone! All unbrotherliness, whether between man and man, or family and family, or nation and nation, melts before them like icebergs beneath the sun. The stripes of tongues, the frauds of trade, the oppressions of power and the treacherous bespatterings of party rivalries stand revealed in the presence of this question as fratricidal cruelties—the word of Cain, hated by every human soul, yet repeated, more or less, in every un sanctified human life. "Am I my brother's keeper?" was a murderer's question, and is asked again only in brother-deceiving selfishness all along the ages. With what overwhelming amazement shall mankind, at last standing in the all-revealing light of the judgment day, see and feel what each against his brother has done! How many then shall confess, even as Joseph's brethren did, "We are verily guilty concerning our brother!" Not only are all unkindness and cruelty by these words removed, but harmony, co-operation and mutual reconciliation are implicitly enjoined. In all things men should live as brethren.

Before this paper reaches its readers the important question who is to be President of these United States for the next four years will have been decided. We are to have one President for all the people and for all the parties. Herein is beautifully signified the brotherhood of all the citizens of all the States. Mutual forbearance, and that broad-minded altruistic spirit which sees and appreciates the good that is in others, even in opponents or enemies, should take the place of vindication and self-seeking partisanship. The recriminations and frauds and bribed deeds, alas! that they should have been, must now be repented of and forgotten. Whoever the President may be, may God make him the friend of all, the benefactor of all! The President represents the unity of the federal fraternity. The slowness of the head of each nation is a type to it of the undivided sovereignty and fatherhood of God. There can be little doubt that factions, opposition to the last elected President in his attempt to organize his cabinet, resulted in his death. Let the people support the chief magistrate in his administration of the government, or quietly submit to his authority. If he shall say,

"I'll search the land and raise the just
To possess of honor, wealth and trust;
The men who work the Bishop's will Shall be my friends and favorites still," let all the people say, Amen!

W. L. C. H.

Centenary Conference.

The propriety of calling a preliminary meeting of the delegates from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the great Centenary Conference having been suggested, the undersigned has been requested to call such meeting for Tuesday, Dec. 9 at 3 P. M., in Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Baltimore. A full attendance is earnestly desired.

J. D. McFARLIN.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D.,

Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.,

Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH,

Treasurer.

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1884.

For the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
PRAYER FOR THE HOLY SPIRIT.

BY W. L. C. C.

Lord, unto the Spirit give,
By that alone I wish to live;
Without it, Lord, my soul is dead,
For thy good Spirit, hear my cry.

Let me the Spirit daily have,
His constant grace I need and crave,
For him each hour my soul shall wait,
He only can my peace create.

Where'er I am, O Lord, I pray,
Able, thou comforter, with me;
Thy dear companionship be mine,
And make the night about me shine.

In thought, in word, in act each day,
Spirit of Truth, direct my way;
My heart on earth shall be begun,
While every path of sin I shun.

Thou Light of life, my soul's desire,
Giver of peace, O Father, give;
Consume my sin, my being fill,
Conform me all to thy best will.

Thou, Spirit, art essential good,
My famished soul is longing food;
Give me thyself, and all is given—
Thy presence is essential heaven.

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of Rev. Geo. Shaeffer.

(Continued.)

September 5, 1848: I have just returned from the Prairie Hill Camp Meeting, where the Lord poured out his spirit graciously—sixty or seventy whites and a good many blacks were converted, and the Christian church much revived. Last night, in Columbus, we had a prayer meeting at Bro. Holder's dwelling, and five ministers came forward for prayers. We had a happy time; a powerful time.

I have been much blessed in my own soul, and one of my children (Brett) professed religion at the camp meeting. May be a shining light! I feel, and believe, we shall have a glorious revival in Columbus. I think it has commenced.

September 25: A revival of religion commenced in the prayer meetings in Columbus. It was removed to the church, and ten or twelve persons were converted.

October 25: I feel very barren this morning. I find it difficult to fix my attention on heavenly things, and when I attempt to pray I have not the spirit of devotion. My heart is hard and unfeeling, my mind is wandering, and I find the same difficulty in preaching. I am not blessed in my public exercises. I preach without the spirit. I feel less spiritual strength, less power over my body. I am much disposed to ease, sensuality, and self-indulgence. Yet I desire to be holy. I feel that if I do not find happiness in God, I shall not find it anywhere else. The world can not satisfy the desires of my soul. I am not seeking happiness from it if I know myself. Yet "the little foxes spoil the tender vines," little compromises, little indulgences, little neglects, eat out the spirit of devotion. Oh, how difficult to preserve perfect purity in such a world as this, where the current sets so strongly from God and religion, where there are so many unsanctified influences to lead us astray. How I envy the happy saints in glory who are delivered from all these difficulties! There every influence is favorable to holiness, every breeze wafts us towards the throne, every inhabitant is a loyal subject of the King of kings, every eye beams with purity, every heart beats with love, every tongue is tuned to praise. There is no night there, no child of God shall ever there complain of a beclouded sky or an unfeeling heart. Oh, Lord, shall I ever get to heaven? Shall I ever be so happy as to be associated with angels and glorified spirits in that heavenly state? I sometimes feel like I shall get to heaven, notwithstanding all my spiritual conflicts, that I shall get to rest with my Savior at the end of my earthly pilgrimage. How delightful the thought! At other times I feel cast down and discouraged, I feel so unworthy. I find so much corruption in my heart. I am so prone to backsliding that I think I surely can not be found worthy to associate with such a pure and spotless company.

I am so unfaithful that I can not feel worthy to be admitted to the same honors and privileges that the faithful martyrs, and devoted, and self-sacrificing Christians of every age have attained. If I ever get to heaven I will be by the pure mercy of God, and I can only be found worthy to wash the saints feet, to perform the lowest service in the temple of my God, I shall be happy indeed. Oh, Lord, cast me not off from thy presence, withdraw not thy spirit from me, but help me and make me useful in thy church on earth, and finally admit me to join the church triumphant and dwell in thy presence forever and ever.

November 30: I have a calm and placid soul to day. I feel fully given up to God if I know myself, yet I want more faith, more spirituality, more concern for the condition of sinners. I do not feel that travail of soul that I want to feel all the time. This feeling would make my appeals to sinners far more moving and powerful. I too often preach as though I did not enter into the spirit of my subject. I appeal to sinners in a kind of mechanical way, and the words do not come burning from my heart as they should do. This is what gives success to the efforts of the minister. When sinners perceive that the minister is actuated by love to their souls, and speaks from a heart deeply affected in view of their condition as sinners exposed to wrath, and when he labors as one that expects to give an account to God, they can not resist him, their hearts will relent and they will be constrained to glorify God. Lord, increase my faith.

(To be continued.)

"Reminiscences."

BY REV. G. J. DARRIN.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

For reasons that I can not now recall the colored mission work along the Bayou Pierre was, at the close of the year 1846, merged into the regular circuit work. It does not appear upon the minutes as a separate charge for 1847. I was appointed to Crystal Springs circuit, as junior preacher, with Bro. E. R. Strickland. Two married preachers and but one parsonage—a very small house, and located at an extreme point on the circuit (old Crystal Springs.) My senior, of course, took precedence so far as parsonage accommodations were concerned, and I had to find shelter for my family wherever I could. My lot fell at Cayuga, in Hinds county, where I spent a pleasant year among kind friends and neighbors. I was fortunate in securing much more comfortable quarters than the parsonage afforded—quite convenient to a (then) prosperous church, with Sunday and week-day school privileges; so that, while I was loathe to part with my friends and patrons of the colored mission, I realized that God had provided others where he, I trust, had sent me. We had so much home-room that my children, who were old enough at the time to remember the place, speak of it as "Cayuga Long House" by way of distinction from other and less pretentious habitations we enjoyed (?) both before and since. The history of Crystal Springs circuit from that period to the present illustrates the wisdom of lessening the field in order to improve and increase the crop.

In 1847, and, perhaps, for a few years after, the Crystal Springs circuit embraced all the territory from Brownsville, in Hinds county, including the Edwards circuit, that is, now a part of Raymond circuit (omitting Clinton and Raymond,) and, sweeping southward, took in old Salem Church, near Baldwin's Ferry, on Big Black; thence, by way of Cayuga, to Rocky Springs, in Claiborne county; thence in a north-easterly direction, taking in Myor's School-house, Utica, Bear Creek, Crystal Springs, Spring Ridge and River's Chapel. There are now five separate pastoral charges within this territorial limit: one a station able to entertain an Annual Conference; each supporting a pastor, and all but one, I believe, having a parsonage. How the times have changed!

In the bounds of this extensive circuit there lived at that time men and women whose names and deeds deserve to have honorable mention and record upon the "roll of honor." Some, perhaps, at that time were unknown beyond the limits of their own neighborhood; yet now, when they are gone to their home in heaven, the savor of their pure and holy lives is seen and felt in the church; and, as I write these papers to perpetuate the memory of others, I must have liberty to devote more than one chapter to this good old circuit. By this course the necessity for recurrence to men and things as I found them after an absence of two or three years, when I returned to reside at Cayuga again, though I traveled another circuit.

The year preceding my appointment to Crystal Springs circuit was a year of extensive and blessed revival under the ministry of that wonderful man, Pleasant B. Bailey. The mention of his name will bring both joy and sorrow to many hearts. He was instrumental no doubt in the conversion of hundreds of souls; but, alas! his brilliant and successful career in Mississippi had an inglorious ending with us here. It is due to his memory, however, to say that in Texas, whither he immigrated, he was restored to the church and to the ministry as a local preacher, and was useful. His dust sleeps in the midst of a most intelligent and refined community at Sulphur Springs, Texas, among whom there are many who cherish pleasant recollections of his name and of his usefulness. It was my privilege to visit his children and grandchildren, and to find them enjoying social position that commanded the respect and good-will of the very best people in the beautiful little city of Sulphur Springs.

Cayuga and Utica, and all that part of Hinds county, before Bro. Bailey's advent among them had been noted for sporting and dissipation almost without a parallel; but under his ministry it was completely revolutionized. Card playing, horse racing, drum drinking, Sabbath breaking was the order; but when I came there I found all those who had been ring leaders "clothed and in their right mind, sitting at the feet of Jesus." Col. John McGuffey, once a prominent politician and member of the Legislature for Hinds county, resided then at Cayuga. Like too many, he had given his whole life down to old age to worldly pursuits and worldly practices. He was converted at not less than three-score years, and ever afterward led a "quiet and peaceful life in all godliness and honesty." His house had been in former years the headquarters for sportsmen, and he had thrown all of his great influence into the scale of impiety and irreligion. Now it had become a house of prayer and a pleasant lodging-place for the man of God. Nearly all of his family came into the church. One son became a traveling preacher; was a member of the Mississippi Conference, Bishop Green ordained him, however, that he was not exactly in the succession, and he went to the Episcopal Church. I do not think that he ever attained to the dignity of a rectorship of any parish. He passed into obscurity. He may be dead now. If so, I trust he has gone to heaven, notwithstanding the slight mistake he made in the route he took.

Gideon Johnston, one of the purest minded men I think I ever knew, was another example of the miracle-working power of grace in old age. He had lived to rear a large family of sons—perhaps about as many as the old patriarch, Jacob—most of them to be grown or nearly so—before he became religious. He had taken part with his neighbors in the popular vices for which the community had been notorious, with the exception that he never indulged in the use of intoxicating liquors. But the work of grace which was thorough, genuine. He was noted for his stern integrity of character even before his conversion. The name of "Uncle Gid. Johnston" was the synonym of all that was honorable—an exceptional case even while he took part in the sports of the times. He was not demonstrative as a Christian, but firm as a rock. The preacher never had a better friend, and his good wife was a helpmeet. When he entered the service of God he gave himself fully to that service. He was a faithful class leader and steward, always attended the weekly prayer meeting and was an active worker in the Sunday-school. God honored his faithful service by calling two of his sons to aid putting him in the ministry. The career of the elder son, Vernon H. Johnston, was comparatively brief, but brilliant and successful. He was a close student, ambitious to learn. His father had many sons to educate, and he being considered among the poor men of the time, Vernon had to depend mainly upon his own energy and efforts to secure an education. He did not reach the goal of his ambition in a literary point of view. Nevertheless he had made respectable attainments when he entered the ministry, and, being fully consecrated, he soon gained enviable distinction and filled some of the most important appointments in the Conference. He traveled the Bayou Pierre circuit in 1858, and carried up to the Conference the largest missionary collection ever reported by any preacher in the Conference. At the Conference held at Jackson, in November, 1859, he was appointed agent for Centenary College. He had considerable success in this field, but not so great as in gathering missionary money. Bro. V. H. Johnston was admitted on trial in 1856, and died some time during the year 1862. His end was peaceful, triumphant.

Of the younger son, Pinkney A. Johnston, I will not venture now to write all I feel and all that he deserves as a faithful minister of Jesus Christ. Some other pen will make up his record, perhaps, when he and I are both in our graves. According to his own account repeatedly given, when the great harvest time comes I may, though unworthy, present him among the sheaves that, through God's help, I gleaned. He was converted while I was praying for him. The memory of the sainted father and mother of these dear brethren is enshrined in my memory. I have made this record to do honor to the name of Gideon Johnston, whom God was pleased to so honor and reward for his undeviating piety.

MARTIN PARSONAGE, Oct. 13, 1884.

Letter from California.

MR. EDITOR: The thirty-fourth session of the Pacific Conference closed in Santa Rosa, on Tuesday evening, October 14, having lasted six days. It was the most delightful Conference that I have ever attended. The brethren all seemed to be in good spirits and in the Spirit. We had more preaching than usual, and the sermons were such as we usually expect in revival meetings. The new Bishop was at home in the chair, and by his earnest gospel preaching he won all hearts. At the Conference love feast, on Sunday morning, we had a feast indeed. The Holy Ghost came down in great power, and every heart was made to rejoice. While there has been a falling off at some points, the reports showed, on the whole, an advance in everything: the membership had increased, the collections were larger than usual and the ministry had received a better support.

One of the best things done during the Conference was the response made to the appeal of the agent of the Pacific Methodist College. Six thousand dollars were received in notes to liquidate the debt. We have in Santa Rosa a fine college property and a good school; but its work has been much retarded by debt. The entire amount has now been secured, making due allowance for losses on notes and subscriptions. Surely the college has a brighter day before it.

One of the most impressive occasions was the memorial service on Monday afternoon. Two of our members had died—Lewis R. Featherston and S. W. Davies. Bro. Davies was one of the oldest and most highly respected members of the Conference. Bro. Featherston was known to many of your readers; but they did not know him at his best. He grew, his light shone brighter after leaving his native State, and a more glorious deathbed scene was never witnessed. As brethren paid their tributes of respect, every eye was moistened and every heart was full.

We received from the Mississippi Conference seven years ago Rev. F. M. Featherston; we now return to you Dr. F. M. Featherston. We part with him reluctantly. He made many friends—both ministers and laymen. He was well adapted to the work here, and we can ill afford to lose him; but to the inevitable we must submit.

I leave Modesto and the great San Joaquin Valley to which I feel very much attached. That portion of the State has a great future before it and so, I trust, has our church there. "I leave it reluctantly, but asked for a change on account of my wife's health. We are now at Gilroy, a town of about twenty-five hundred inhabitants, in the coast range of mountains in Santa Clara county, about ninety miles south of San Francisco. We have not been here long enough to express an opinion about either the country or the prospects of the church here. We shall ever consider Modesto home, for there, on January 21, we laid away the body of our precious little Freddie, by the side of whom we expect ere long our own dust to rest.

In a few days I will mail you a copy of The Pacific Annual, containing our Conference minutes and much additional matter. If any of our friends wish facts in regard to California and our church here, they will do well to get this pamphlet. It can be obtained by enclosing address and twenty-five cents to the writer. Your brother,

W. P. ANDREWS.

GILROY, CAL., Oct. 27, 1884.

From Bro. Pipes.

MR. EDITOR: In the Advocate of the sixteenth instant I read a letter headed "From an Itinerant's Daughter," which transported me back to the days of my early ministry. Rev. D. M. Higgins, the subject of the letter, gave me license to preach at a Quarterly Conference on Washita circuit, Monroe district, Mississippi Conference, dated March 25, 1843. He was my first presiding elder in 1841, when I was on Calico circuit, Louisiana Conference. I was young and inexperienced as an itinerant preacher, and he took me with him to a number of protracted and camp meetings during the year, no doubt, that he might initiate me properly into the itinerant work. I was with him a great deal, heard him preach often and was familiar with his manner of life, and a better man I never knew. I looked upon him both as a model Christian and itinerant Methodist preacher. He was no fanatic or enthusiast, though he did profess to enjoy the blessing of sanctification and his whole deportment in life was uniformly consistent with his faith. He was plain and unassuming, but a forcible and an effective minister of the gospel of Christ. Such was the searching character of his sermons, often when sinners heard him portray their character they would go away and say somebody has told that preacher about me. He was a stern man and always fearless. At a certain camp meeting he reproved some of the gentlemen for their misbehavior so severely and timely that they became incensed and swore vengeance against him. Some days after the camp meeting he passed through the city where they lived, and sure enough they attacked him, and demanded that he take back what he had said. He replied, looking over his blue spectacles as is his custom was, in measured tones: Gentlemen, I presume you know what I did say; if you do, I want you to understand distinctly that I have no apology to make. They were unnerved, and got off by saying: If you ever come back here, we will give you the worst whipping you ever had. In speaking of the matter he would often say, when they gave me credit till next time I thought I was doing well.

When the Mississippi Conference was divided in 1846, and the Louisiana Conference was set off, he went East and I came West, and we met no more. I loved him much, and rejoiced when I saw the above notice in the Advocate from his daughter, who seems to breathe the same spirit of her sainted father. The dead rest from their labors, and their works follow them.

We would direct attention to the timely and opportune call of Mrs. E. J. Fullilove, president of the Conference Woman's Missionary Society. Let all Conference auxiliaries and pastors heed the call and prepare for a grand rally at the annual meeting of the missionary women at Minden, La., next July. We would remind corresponding secretaries of the auxiliaries that it is made their duty by a law of their order to correspond with the corresponding secretary of the Conference society, quarterly giving them information of the working of their respective societies. In this way much useful information may disseminate throughout the church.

We were surprised and saddened to day when we saw the death of Baxter Clegg announced in the Advocate. We thought of him as we had been associated with him on the circuit at the session of the Conference and on committee work, and our verdict is that Bro. Clegg was a sincere Christian, a laborious, self-sacrificing itinerant Methodist preacher, and in all these respects has left an example worthy to be imitated by his younger brethren. You see from Dr. Grace's letter that the college is coming to itself, begins to show signs of life. According to Heracles' rule help the man that helps himself. We ought to rally to the help of Dr. Grace and the college.

MANFIELD, LA., Oct. 24, 1884.

Revival Correspondence.

The Providence Camp Meeting, four miles east of Sparta, was a grand success. Result: Forty conversions, twelve accessions to the church, the membership greatly revived and built up. The protracted drought will greatly affect the finances, as the cotton is the source of revenue, and it is almost a failure in this section.

R. S. COLLIER.

SPARTA, LA., Oct. 25, 1884.

I have just finished my protracted meetings on the St. Helena circuit for this Conference year. We have had good revivals at all the churches except one. About forty conversions and seventy accessions to our church. The work is all ablaze with revival power. We have the largest congregations I have ever seen anywhere outside of the large cities. We have preached to these kind people for six years, during which time we have received over 500 members into our church. The collections will all be in by Conference. We have built one new church as a Centenary offering to the Lord, which with everything complete will be worth $100.

J. S. PARKER.

I have held six protracted meetings on the Winchester circuit the present year. The good Lord has blessed us wonderfully. We started with two hundred and eleven members the first of the year, and have added one hundred and four. We have up to date three hundred and fifteen members, and are expecting others to join before we leave for Conference. We have received ten members by letter, ninety-four by experience, twenty-three infants baptized. We have our collections raised in full, and expect to go just as far beyond the assessments as we can on our last round, and will give every member a fair chance to subscribe for the Advocate. Our beloved presiding elder, James A. Godfrey, is on his last round looking well, and seems to be thankful to God for the advancement of the Meridian district.

J. J. JONES, P. C.

WINCHESTER, Oct. 31, 1884.

The wheel has revolved, and I am where I started from, in the itinerary. In 1858, many changes have taken place; some better, some worse. Finances, not so good; morals, better. Unwavering trust in God would bring up both. We have had some refreshing showers to thirsty souls this year. Those who sought with the heart found, and many sought. Our meetings were successful. Bro. Mat. Miller, from the beautiful circuit, rendered us good service. Bro. Hazard Smith, D. S. Presbyterian, did some good work for us. He says, "If the Methodists go on as they have done, they will take the world before another century." May they be found worthy! The Sunday-school course on the circuit has had no revival; though most of the accessions have been children of school-age. I fear I will not be able to report heavily on any of the collections. My own not excepted. I proposed to take corn for missions. Could you send it to them? The cotton crop is cut down one-half; the low price is the saddest. Would it be a good thing if that goat could die? Paul said his people had zeal not according to knowledge. We lack the zeal with our knowledge.

L. P. MAGAOR.

WALTON GROVE, MISS., Oct. 19, 1884.

Now Prospect Camp Meeting, where but a few years ago was the West Pascagoula mission, is now Vanceville circuit, in the Seashore district of the Mississippi Conference. The fifth camp meeting held at New Prospect, began Friday night, October 24. Owing to the absence, by illness, of Rev. B. S. Rayner, P. C., the meeting was in care of Rev. A. P. Cox, P. C. The opening sermon, by R. B. Downer, was upon "Consecration." Saturday, at eleven A. M., the subject was "Prayer," by T. S. West; four P. M., "The perpetuity of a personal devil," by W. W. Hopper. The subject at night was "Transfiguration," by T. S. West. Sunday, at eight A. M., Thomas Price preached a clear, comprehensive sermon upon "The indwelling kingdom;" eleven A. M., T. S. West preached a centennial sermon with special reference to the bearings of Methodism on "The theology of the world;" R. B. Downer, at three P. M., had for his subject, "Escape for thy life," followed at night by W. W. Hopper on "Faith." Monday, amidst continued showers of rain, we had the four services, and on Tuesday, eight A. M., prayers. Applicants were received into full connection, and the meeting closed. Fifty conversions were reported, and members were added to the adjacent circuits. Some regard this as among the best of the meetings held there.

Our struggle at church building is still going on. Our Farmville church has been at a standstill for some time for the want of material. The saw mill was under water until the first of July, the time at which we expected to occupy our church. Doors and sash are ready, pulpit made, but no material to make seats. Our Shiloh church is up and covered, flooring ready to put down, but the workman thinks it best not to put the floor down until the doors and sash are ready to be put up, so here we are at a standstill, for we do not go in debt. And here we want to say that the membership, with a few exceptions, have done nobly, and as we have made application to our Church Extension Society for help, I feel assured that they could not help a more worthy people, and none who have sustained a greater loss; for they completed a new church about seven years ago at a cost of over $1,500, and it was burned in a few months by the explosion of a lamp. And I would also appeal to the Methodists of the Louisiana Conference to help us here at Shiloh to rebuild our church, which was so soon consumed by fire after its completion. We are also building a new church at the Tennessee appointment, the old house being almost rotten down. The new church here will be a neat box house. It will be completed by the second Sabbath in November, at which time we expect to protract the services, and we are praying for a revival of religion here which is much needed as all over the work. We have not held but one protracted meeting. Result: Nine accessions to our church, and some to the Baptist Church. Now you see, Mr. Editor, we expect to claim the Farmville circuit as the banner circuit of the Louisiana Conference in church building this our Centennial year.

J. M. JOHNSTON.

Hon. Richard H. Powell.

MR. EDITOR: The death of the distinguished gentleman whose name is written above occurred at Union Springs, Ala., last week. As he and his father before him were among the early friends and supporters of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, it seems proper that a notice of his death should appear in that paper. I first met Bro. Powell in company with his father, Dr. N. B. Powell, at a State Temperance Convention, held in Selma, Ala., in the fall of 1841. I was on my way to join the Alabama Conference, at Marvin; but, being a delegate to the Temperance Convention, I had the pleasure of meeting many warm friends of the cause in Selma. Among these none were more zealous than the Powells, father and son.

The next occasion that I recollect which threw us together was on my journey from Tuscaloosa to the Annual Conference, at Enfield, in 1859. My traveling companions were Robert K. Hargrove (now Bishop) and Walter C. Harris. We were in a private conveyance, and, after a long journey on the road, we drew up one Saturday evening at the gate of Bro. R. H. Powell, at Union Springs. The son came out, and said: "What are you doing here? I never allow Methodist preachers to stand at my gate." We enjoyed a delightful entertainment that night, and next morning we proposed to go on to Channahowee Ridge to attend church. Bro. Powell told us that an old local preacher had an appointment there that day, but did not tell us who he was. Thus our surprise when it was found that the local preacher was Dr. N. B. Powell, Dick's father, who late in life had begun preaching! He soon invited one of his traveling brethren to fill the pulpit, and Bro. Harris preached the sermon. We dined at Dr. Powell's residence, near the church, where we met an elegant company of East Alabama Methodists. That evening we drove on to Ebon, to spend the night with Uncle Jammy Banks, father-in-law of Dr. Fitzgerald, then in California. Bro. Hargrove preached in the Ebon Church at night, and never did three traveling preachers have a happier Sunday than we had with the Channahowee Methodists; for the "Ridge," as it was called, for twelve or fifteen miles was the seat of elegant homes and pious people. It was a favorite scene of old Dr. Powell to endow the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and he was wealthy then; and had his idea been popular, no doubt he would have become a large subscriber.

In 1874 I met Bro. Powell (R. H.) again in an Editorial Convention, at Montgomery. He was then the editor of the Union Springs Herald, a paper that has always borne a high character, and of which he was the founder. By a sad coincidence his valiantly addressed on retiring from the press was published on the day of his death. In 1875 the Press Convention of Alabama made an excursion to visit a similar association of editors in the State of New York. Bro. Powell was the president of our association, and I had the pleasure of traveling with him for three weeks through the cities of New York, and down the St. Lawrence to Montreal, back by way of New York and Philadelphia and home. We were met with distinguished honors by our New York confreres, and were hosted and traveled through the richest scenery of the world to our heart's content. Bro. Powell was now a very poor man and a widower—his best days were in the past; but with a noble independence and true piety he was renewing the battle of life, and, as before, was winning golden opinions from his fellows. Though wine was often set before him, he was true to temperance; and many were the pious talks he enjoyed with Father Grant, Joel W. Whitten and myself—all of us being Methodists, and two of us preachers. Alas! I alone am left of the four to tell the story. Together we stood by the

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LUTHERAN, METHODIST AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

Rev. F. A. S. ADAMS. Rev. J. T. SAWYER.
Rev. W. L. C. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1884.

$450 20.

At the Felicite Street Centenary meeting last Sunday morning, Rev. Dr. C. W. Carter, pastor, there was an offering of $450 20. The sermon was preached by the pastor, and is reported as being equal to his finest efforts.

To preserve the fruits of our labor we must nurture the young converts. Give them a good Methodist start at once. In a letter to a friend George Whitfield once wrote: "My brother, Wesley, acted wisely. The souls that were awakened under his ministry he joined in class, and thus preserved the fruits of his labor. This I neglected, and my people are a rope of sand."

Mathew Arnold said that "Wesley had a genius for godliness." What an eloquent tribute to the singular salubrity of his life! Of how many of us can it be said that we have "a genius for godliness"? But that gift is within the reach of all. We may not have Mr. Wesley's great breadth of intellect, or his profound scholarship or ecclesiastical statesmanship, but all we emulate his "genius for godliness."

The Bishop of Worcester has subscribed £10 toward the liquidation of the debt on the Primitive Methodist Chapel, at Worcester. A very generous and worthy thing for his lordship to do. He certainly has no sympathy with that Archbishop who discharged an organist for playing on one occasion in a Methodist Chapel. "The Church" is so richly irrigated by our Methodist "overdew" that it would seem good policy to help every chapel struggling with a debt or other difficulty.

A brother was asked to prepare a memoir of an aged Methodist by certain members of his family for publication in this ADVOCATE. They were anxious to ascertain its cost, promising to meet all expenses. The brother instituted rigid inquiry and learned that not a member subscribed for the paper. He then replied: "If you will give me two dollars I will have the obituary published, send you the ADVOCATE for one year and pay the balance." A very proper response. And yet our obituary friends are numerous who do not subscribe for the paper, and only want it to canonize their dead.

A subscriber to the Southern Churchman takes that editor severely to task for his liberality. Says he doesn't inveigh against "the non-Christian character of the bodies about us in regard to their ministry, etc." That narrow, little High Churchman must be a fossil of a prehistoric age. More than a hundred years ago the Archbishop of Canterbury, in speaking of the Methodists, said: "These gentlemen are irregular, but they have done good, and I pray God to bless them." The Archbishop didn't pronounce them non-Christian, but just the reverse. Alas! for such bigotry that can't distinguish between a supposed irregularity in ecclesiastical administration and the Christly spirit of a people.

Bishop Huntington, of Central New York, has addressed some very plain and timely words to the ladies of his diocese. All of us like to be endorsed, and, as his warnings are entirely accord with an editorial in this ADVOCATE, some time ago, on "Periodical Piety," we take pleasure in reproducing a liberal extract. In advance of the leuten season they may be pondered and inwardly digested. "I give notice that, when the ladies of a parish descend so far as to lay plans during Lent for a gay diversion in a play-house in Easter week, with dancing and feasting, and are heard of as hawking tickets about the town in the days which commemorate our Savior's agony on the cross, from which he cries to us to count it our glory if the world hates us because we cling to him, they must be told that they are not only lowering themselves in the eyes of their neighbors, but they are humiliating us all, and even the church herself, by a misdemeanor so flagrant. Were there evidence that one of our clergy connived at the offense I should refuse to hold a confirmation where the capacities of our faith had been recently so disturbed."

After the Election.

Another exciting presidential contest has ended, and the sovereign people have decided at the ballot-box who shall fill the highest offices of the government for the next four years. The campaign has been exciting, personal, bitter and aggressive on both sides. If one-thousandth part of the ugly things charged upon each leading candidate be true, neither is worthy of the suffrages of freemen or competent for so distinguished a trust. But it is understood that these are only the staple arguments of a political contest—a sort of Pickwickian episode in our national life. After the battle they are "remembered no more forever," unless one or the other should aspire again to political preferment. In some aspects, however, it is to be hoped this recent campaign may never be repeated. The disgusting details of private immorality should never be displayed to public gaze. Not that private morals should be ignored in public men. That doctrine is dangerous and should be discarded. But these facts ought to be canvassed before the nomination is made, and by them candidates made to stand or fall.

Now that the election is over our friends are reminded that politics do not bring prosperity. Our lands will produce as well under one party administration as another. Industry, integrity and frugality alone can give us true progress and happiness as a people. Personal habits and principles are the basis and promise of national wealth and stability. One thing is most noticeable and commands the admiration of the world—the ease with which an entire change of administration can be effected without revolution or in any wise affecting the integrity of our national life. The English papers teem with editorial comments on the recent election and the fact that party policy and domination can so quietly change hands without fear or friction. The stock market indicates no unusual excitement; capital, always timid, manifests no special nervousness, and all the lines of business move on with accustomed courage and confidence. This is cause for congratulation on our part and wonder by our friends abroad. No other government, republican or monarchical, can endure such strains without more or less of revolution. This indicates the wisdom of our institutions, and the profound attachment of the people thereto. After all the crimination and recrimination of stump speakers and partisan newspapers, patriotism is higher than partisanship. Above the contests for party triumph there is a supreme love for our great country.

Another matter is worthy of emulation. Let not the excitements of the campaign cause or perpetuate personal estrangements. Differences of opinion on political questions or policy of administration should not allow personal enmities. A man's views on the tariff do not affect his integrity. Tolerance of political opinion is necessary to the growth of republican governments. A government of the people, for the people, and by the people, is an ideal possible only to the largest liberty of opinion and freedom of expression. Two evenly balanced parties as to numerical strength, with a large number of political ecclesies, independents, "vest-pocket voters," who support the worst men, will heat secure this great and gracious result.

The successful can afford to be magnanimous. They may be elated without being offensively elevated. A man who can be generous and respectful to a defeated opponent for public position wears the badge of true royalty. Only those of narrow, contracted sympathies exist in the griefs and disappointments of their enemies.

Our people of the South especially have a grand opportunity before them. Nearly three-fourths of the electoral strength that achieved this result is in the Southern States. So recently in rebellion, we have been distrusted as to the sincerity of our patriotism and the purity of our fidelity to the federal Constitution. Now our people can demonstrate their loyalty to the general government and their kind consideration for the lately enfranchised negroes. We believe they will do it, and, forgetting the points of the compass, emulate the truest patriot of the North in advancing the prosperity and glory of our common country. There will be no disposition or effort to reverse the legislation of the past for the negro's protection or to defy the amendments to the Constitution. Large liberality will be shown these "wards of the nation," and the fact demonstrated that the colored man has no truer friends in the North than in the South. As a religious journalist, we have no party pride or pain over the result—no shout of victory or wail of defeat. But, as a patriotic Christian citizen, we pray for blessings abundant to be given our entire land—that sectional discord shall cease and fraternal concord be perpetually enthroned.

The Attachment of Anxiety.

Some recent words uttered by the Czarina of Russia state and illustrate a beautiful lesson. In speaking of the constant peril of the Czar's life, she said: "I am thankful to the nihilists for one thing. They have made me love my husband dearly. Our home life has become so different since I began to look upon him as though he were under sentence of death. You can't think how deeply his menaced state attaches me to him." Anxiety for his personal safety, and knowledge of the fact that bitter malignity shadowed his every footstep and exhausted all human and inhuman ingenuity to achieve his death, awoke every secret and latent sentiment of hers out toward him. It opened an undiscovered fountain of affection, and made the indifferent bride a tender, watchful, comforting, loving companion. She became to him more a wife than a queen. Intense and tenderest love succeeded cold, formal respect. And all because he seemed to be under a perpetual death-sentence, with the executioners ever and eagerly ready to strike the fatal blow.

Anxiety, always increases attachment. An imperiled friend commands our intensest concern. To stay the evil hour and overthrow the dark plot that threatens his life compel every energy and effort to do and dare their utmost. Our own safety is jeopardized in endeavoring to secure his. This is the abandon of love, and love itself is intensified by our friend's danger.

This is eminently true of spiritual anxiety. We become more concerned for a soul as we see his increasing danger. "Condemned already," we know that he is hastening the day of execution. Every hour lessens hope of rescue. Hence the Christian's burden of anxiety. How lovingly and longingly a pastor lingers at the bedside of a dying man who is without God and without hope in the world. The fact that the hours are few for him to live; and the last opportunity has arrived to do him any possible good, concentrates in that supreme moment every affection of the soul and every aspiration and inspiration of faith. How eagerly the countenance is watched and the faintest whisper caught to note the answer of prayer and the intelligent grasp of faith upon the great promises of God!

And thus we get an intimation of our Lord's love for the world. It was the "lost" that prompted his descending love to come in the humble form of man. And the persistent peril of the soul, after the sacrifice of his own blood, makes him intercede for us with loving, mighty plea. He is represented as standing and knocking at the door of the heart. After making salvation possible he pleads with man to accept it—after purchasing pardon he treats the captive to receive his liberty. And that attitude is the anxiety of love. The soul's danger intensifies concern. So dreadful is the issue and imminent the peril; he patiently stands without and knocks. Then let us learn that while anxiety intensifies attachment, it also discloses danger. If the results were not so momentous, the Gospels would never have been written and love would never have endured such painful strain. In love's anxiety we see the imminency and eternity of the soul's peril.

Sir Henry Fawcett.

A telegram from London, on Friday last, announced the death of this distinguished scholar, author and statesman. In his history the tragic and heroic united in an eminent degree. Gifted, ambitious and highly educated, his brilliant prospects in life were interrupted, but not defeated, by the total loss of his eyesight in early manhood. But, nothing daunted, he pursued his high purposes until he became one of England's greatest statesmen and ablest officials, having for years and at the time of his death filled the office of Postmaster General. His name will go down to history in connection with many of the most important reforms in the marvelous postal service of Great Britain. The development of the fast mail system, the postal telegraph and cheap postage have been largely the result of his able administration. Along with Sir Rowland Hill, the author of the pre-paid postage by means of small adhesive labels, he will rank as a practical, progressive, distinguished statesman. And all his work has been wrought in total blindness.

Born in Salisbury, in 1833, he graduated at Trinity Hall, Cambridge, in 1856, and the same year was elected to a fellowship. Two years thereafter, in September, 1858, he met with an accident while out shooting that cost him the sight of both eyes. But his lofty ambition could not be restrained. He became a voluminous writer for reviews on political science and economy, an author of several volumes, professor of political economy in the University of Cambridge and a member of Parliament. His parliamentary speeches have been collected into a volume, and add to his fame as a statesman.

The career of such a man, rising to the highest distinction and leaving the indelible impress of his great character and attainments upon the institutions of his country, should stimulate the laudable ambition of young manhood everywhere. If so much was accomplished against such a sad disability—the helplessness of total blindness—the more highly favored should not fear or fail. England mourns the loss of an honored son and trusted official, and the world is richer for his heroic life. Dimmed was his physical vision, but his mental eyes had the keen glance and majestic sweep of an eagle's. We trust that his spiritual vision was alike cloudless and more glorious.

A Conference Scene—Dr. Winans' Reliving.

In his charming biography of Bishop Paine, Dr. Rivers describes a scene in the Mississippi Conference during the session of 1851. It was the occasion of Dr. Winans retiring from active work. Nothing so affects us as the superannuation of an itinerant minister—the forced surrender of the glorious privilege of preaching the blessed gospel. To be no longer able to shout to the battle—to sit idly by in age and feebleness while others lead on the bannered hosts—must chafe and try the spirits of a valiant veteran. With all its perils and privations, its conflicts and toils, it is a loved employ. And how great the sorrow when infirmities compel retirement! The eloquent words of Bishop Paine must have softened the blow to our great leader. We quote as follows:

"At the Mississippi Conference Dr. William Winans was compelled by the state of his health to ask a superannuated relation. He was not more than sixty years of age. It was not, then, the infirmities of old age, but a severe bronchial affection which made the request necessary. He stated the case himself to the Conference in a modest, manly way. He stated his belief that the days of his efficiency were past. He feared that he would never be able to take regular work again. He bowed cheerfully to the will of God. In the Mississippi Conference he had spent the vigor of his youth and the prime of his manhood. He had enjoyed the largest confidence of his brethren, for which he was deeply grateful. He hoped the Conference could readily grant a request which nothing but inability to do full work could have forced him to make. Saying this, he left the Conference-room. Before putting the vote as to granting his request the Bishop said: 'Brethren, this request affects me greatly. It pains me beyond measure to hear my old friend declare his inability longer to do effective service. Time has been when William Winans would have been gladly welcomed to any station in the church. He was capable of filling any place. In intellectual power he has no superior in the Church, North or South. He indines now in no manner. He is satisfied. He retires so gracefully, so uncomplainingly as to excite my highest admiration. I have seen old men retire most ungraciously, uttering their complaints as to want of appreciation by the church and their hard lot in being cast off in old age. Dr. Winans never appeared grander than he does to-day. I have been with him in General Conference when he shone like the sun at mid-day in cloudless splendor. He was then the peer of any man on this continent. To-day he reminds me of the setting sun. He still shines in full-orbed splendor, his round of rays complete. The light may not be so dazzling; but its mellow radiance touches the tenderest sensibilities, and assures us that when the clouds of death shall gather they will be gilded with holy light, giving us with the assurance that death itself can not quench the brightness of a luminary which shall shine forever, undimmed by the clouds of death. Of course you will grant the request of Dr. Winans. The request was granted amid as deep feeling as was ever witnessed probably on any similar occasion."

Though not acknowledged by the Republican party managers as yet, it seems quite sure that Hon. Grover Cleveland, of New York, and Hon. Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, have been elected President and Vice-President of the United States. They have 219 electoral votes.

Village and Neighborhood Libraries.

Books were never so numerous, so cheap and so accessible as now. The opportunities for the masses to cultivate and develop themselves were never so many; but this favorable condition of things should be more fully utilized. We have been thinking one way to do this would be to establish village and neighborhood libraries. If, for example, the pastor, the Sunday-school superintendent, or any social leader, would call a meeting and propose the establishment of a library, setting forth in a few remarks the intellectual, social and pleasurable benefits of a common library for the use of all, we must think that it would not be difficult to secure a number of subscribers at a dime per month—only a dollar and twenty cents for subscribers per year. Forty subscribers would be an aggregate of forty-eight dollars. This in four years would purchase quite a respectable library. By sending a few cents to pay the postage, any of the large publishing houses will send a catalogue of their publications, from which suitable selections could be made. In order to cultivate a love for reading select interesting books of travel, of biography, small histories of the principal nations of the ancient and modern world. There might also be selected small and popular works on some of the sciences, as physiology, geology, botany and astronomy. Such books would impart much useful knowledge and create a thirst for more. This love for reading would be a great resource against temptation. Such persons are little tempted to go in search of sensations. Country life would be relieved of much of its dullness, and hundreds would be kept from rushing into city life, and thus their health and morals would be guarded. There are too many people in our cities. Labor-saving machines have taken their place, and cities can not find as much employment for large populations as formerly. We must make country life more attractive, and keep the young from crowding into cities in search of sensations and employment. There are in all communities bright young minds who only want the means to develop their mental powers to become shining lights in the world. The love of reading is one of the purest, cheapest and lasting of all pleasures. He that has this taste and good books about him, has a pleasant occupation for every vacant hour, and he feels little need for stimulants, crowds and noise to save him from the oppressions of dullness.

Will not some one who reads the suggestions in this short article be prompted to make the effort in his village, his neighborhood, to establish a library. We know of no movement that at so small a cost, and with so little trouble, would likely be productive of so much benefit and so much pleasure.

J. H. WALKER.

—The Centenary offerings reported to the Centenary Committee up to November 8 was $442 187.

—The West Texas Conference met its full missionary assessment with an excess of five hundred dollars.

—"Missionaries," said Dr. Haygood, in a recent speech, "can never be bred in the houses of fashionable Methodists."

—"The days of the 'fly-sheets' and 'pamphleteers' have returned to Texas. Judah and Ephraim had better cease vexing each other."

—A valued and distinguished friend thus closes a private note: "It is a pleasure for me to say that the ADVOCATE continually grows in worth and usefulness."

—The Pacific Methodist, by Conference action, has become the property of its editor, Wick B. Parsons. He is making a good paper, and deserves the largest success.

—About ten thousand dollars have already been paid of the proposed Centenary offering of $50,000 for the "Rio Girls' College." So writes Rev. J. J. Ransom, our Brazilian missionary.

—A grand cathedral has been built in Moscow to commemorate the retreat of Napoleon from Russia. The edifice will accommodate 10,000 worshippers, and has cost over eleven million dollars.

—The Holston Methodist Publishing Company has reorganized with Rev. R. N. Price as editor and Thomas A. Lewis, local editor and manager. The paper will be removed to Morristown.

—The German Church, at Osyka, Miss., which was destroyed by a cyclone some months ago, has been rebuilt, and was dedicated by Dr. J. B. A. Ahrens on last Sunday. A large congregation attended the interesting service especially in the evening, when Dr. Ahrens preached in English.

—The editor exceedingly regrets having failed to meet several Centenary appointments last week. He was quite sick during the entire week, and prepared some of the copy for this issue in bed.

—Sweden has only three Romish Churches within its limits. Happy Sweden! But what about those high-church Lutherans? They spoiled a meeting of the Evangelical Alliance, at Stockholm.

—While the population of the United States from 1870 to 1880 increased over twenty-five per cent, the number of persons unable to read increased less than nine per cent. So there is some light in the sky.

—Joaquin Miller, the famous California poet, has been in New Orleans for several weeks. His letter in the Times-Democrat, of Sunday, is a very cordial tribute to the hospitality, comfort and enterprise of the Crescent City.

—Bishop Granbery has finished his work on the Pacific coast and returned to the east. He preached in St. Louis, on a recent Sabbath, en route to his Virginia home. He is to preside at the South Carolina Conference.

—We acknowledge the pleasure of a call from our old friend, Dr. C. K. Marshall, of Vicksburg. Next week our readers will have the opportunity of seeing the Doctor's admirable address, delivered last Sunday evening, on Sabbath observance.

—The strike of the car drivers is over in this city, and we again have the privilege of riding for five cents. The strikers are satisfied with the advance of wages and everything moves on as before. They were surely very poorly remunerated—from $30 to $15 a month for eighteen hours' labor a day, and seven days in the week.

—The "hazing" abolition in our colleges and universities ought to be stamped out. The recent death of Cadet Strang, from Oregon, in the Naval Academy, at Annapolis, indicates the necessity of adopting the most vigorous and rigorous measures to put it down. He was a young man of fine presence and promise, but fell a victim to a brutal outrage that has awakened national condemnation.

—"The Aberdeen Centenary" celebrated recently, which is the centenary of the gift of the episcopate by the Church of Scotland to the American Church, reminds us that the Episcopal Church in these United States just barely escaped alliance with the Lutherans. If their request had been delayed a little longer, the American child would have had another mother. There is some interesting history along that line.

—The Rev. J. W. Wightman, D. D., of the West Virginia Conference, has joined the Southern Presbyterian Church. He left "solely for the reason that he might secure a more permanent pastorate." Whether he succeeds or not remains to be seen. Permanent pastorate are very exceptional in any denomination. And in some of the exceptional permanency means a platitudinal pulpit and a pastorless pew.

—The Franchise Bill has passed its second reading in the English House of Commons by a decisive vote of 372 to 232. This has become the great question in British politics under the championship of Mr. Gladstone. From recent expressions of the people we doubt not its ultimate triumph. The shadows have passed and Mr. Gladstone's star shines out in a clear sky. He is the grand parliamentary leader of this half century.

—The following items we have received from Anite City, La.: Last Sunday was a quarterly meeting occasion; but the Rev. D. A. Little, presiding elder, was sick with dengue fever and could not preach. A lady member of the church, Mrs. Milhark, attended morning service, returned home and died in less than two hours. At the recent election "no license" for 1885 was carried by a majority of 73. Some of the old timers voted "for Peggy and the children."

—There was a mass meeting at the First Presbyterian Church, on last Sunday night, in the interest of Sabbath observance. Eloquent addresses were delivered by Bishop Hugh Miller Thompson and Rev. Dr. C. K. Marshall, of Vicksburg. Rev. H. H. Waters, the secretary of the Sunday League, read a report of the year's work. Memorials had been presented to the Board of Management of the World's Exposition from various religious bodies, including forty-six Protestant Churches in the city of New Orleans. The action of Mr. Blaine, then Secretary of State, in having the American part of the Paris Exposition closed on Sunday was read, and the fact stated that Mr. Frelinghuysen, Secretary of State, had been asked to close the government building during the Exposition in New Orleans.

NO POISON IN THE PASTRY IF

DR. PRICE'S
SPECIAL FLAVORING
EXTRACTS ARE USED.

Price Baking Powder Co.,
Chicago, Ill. St. Louis, Mo.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder
Best Dry Hop Yeast.

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,
FOR SALE BY GROCERS.
WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

LIGHT HEALTHY BREAD

DR. PRICE'S
LUPULIN YEAST GEMS

CROCKERS SELL THEM.
Price Baking Powder Co.,
Chicago, Ill. St. Louis, Mo.

MASON & HAMLIN

Exhibited at ALL the important WORLD'S IN-TERNALES, and the LATEST EXHIBITION, THE SEVEN CROWNED YEARS. Mason & Hamlin Organs have been the highest quality and most complete best ALVANS, FINEST, BEST, and AWARD
HIGHEST PRIZES, not even in one such important competition. America's Organ has no other equal. The Organ is a masterpiece of art and science.
The Organ is a masterpiece of art and science.
The Organ is a masterpiece of art and science.
The Organ is a masterpiece of art and science.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN AND PIANO CO.,
BOSTON, 154 Tremont St. CHICAGO, 149 Wabash Ave.
NEW YORK, 46 East 14th St. (Union Square.)

A Home Production. GOODWYN'S EUREKA

YEAST POWDER.
It is, as it always has been, a pure, unadulterated article. Entirely free from Alum. Has been analyzed by a chemist, and examined by prominent physicians of this city, who have testified to its purity. Being a pure powder and a home production, it is certainly worthy the patronage of the public.
Still manufactured at 179 Gird Street, by Mrs. A. F.
Goodwyn, widow of the late P. M. Goodwyn. It is handled by wholesale grocers, and by all our leading family grocers. Orders from the country, whether in bulk or retail, will be promptly filled by sending to 179 Gird Street, New Orleans, La.

BODLEY BROTHERS,
OFFICE OF
Wagon Repository, 70-72, 74 St. Charles St. Factory at Wheeler, Va.
Manufacturers of Plantation
Wagons, Carriages,
Carts,
and all kinds of
heavy machinery.
Our Wagon and Carriage works are located at the Black Lake, near Bodley's Mill, where we have the best tools and machinery for the purpose.
We also have a large stock of
Carriage and Wagon
Materials, and are prepared to make to order any kind of
Carriage or Wagon.
We also have a large stock of
Carriage and Wagon
Materials, and are prepared to
make to order any kind of
Carriage or Wagon.

HEADQUARTERS FOR Sunday-School Supplies

Consisting in part of
-GOSPEL HYMNS, Songs and Combined,
With and without Music.
Bibles and Testaments, (cheap edition) Teachers'
Bibles, Oxford Pocket Bibles, (with clasps) Bible
Dictionaries, etc.
Union Primers, First and Second Reading Books;
Union Spelling Books; Union Question Books;
Catechisms; Reward Cards; Scripture Text Cards;
Tracts, etc. Also a large assortment of Books and Pamphlets for Sunday-School Libraries, or presents to children. Pulpit and Family Bibles, from $5 to $15. Liberal discount to ministers, churches and Sunday-schools. Catalogues sent on application.
W. D. KILLMAN,
Business Manager,
24 Camp Street, New Orleans.

RECEIPTS.—Send stamps for full direction to make a list of the best of the PUBLISHERS, MATCHES, CO., New Orleans, La.

Our Young People.

WANTED.
Boys of spirit, boys of will,
Boys of muscle, brain and power,
Fit to cope with anything—
These are wanted every hour.
Not the weak and whining drones,
Not the idle and the loafers;
Not the watch word of "I can't,"
But the nobler one, "I'll try."
Do what you have to do
With a true and earnest zeal;
Send your shins to the task;
Put your shoulder to the wheel.
In the counting-house or store,
Whatever you may be;
From your future efforts, boys,
Come a nation's destiny.

Our Children.

DEAR CHILDREN: In my previous articles, I think, I have said enough to satisfy you that children can be created anew in Christ Jesus and become true Christians even in childhood, and also that they may safely be admitted to the fellowship of the church quite early in life. But as there is an erroneous prejudice, even with some grown professors of religion, against children joining the church too young, before they know whether they can hold out or not, I will say a few more words on that point.
How can any one, young or old, know whether they can hold out until they make a fair trial? If children who join the church at a tender age are properly instructed and cared for by their parents, pastors and the older members of the church, they are more apt to be faithful to the end than those who join toward or after the middle of life. Our church registers, carefully examined, will prove the truth of this statement.
About the first person I ever saw join the Methodist Church was a very ladylike little girl about eight or nine years old. She was cordially received by the pastor and her name was duly registered. I joined the same church soon after, and often enjoyed Christian fellowship with her for the next fifty-five years, when in a good old age she fell asleep in Jesus. As she was a first cousin of mine we were very often together. I knew her intimately in her childhood, in her young womanhood and married life, and through all the vicissitudes of life if she ever made a crooked step in religion I never saw or heard of it. Children you can all be as good Christians as she was, if, like her, you daily trust in your Savior to help you and do the best you know how.

I suppose near forty years ago I was holding a protracted meeting under a brush arbor at one of my country appointments. The Spirit of God evidently rested on the large congregation and there was much feeling manifested, especially among the children and young people. At the close of the meeting I opened the door of the church when a little boy and girl about eleven years old came up and offered themselves for membership. They belonged to different families, but their parents were Methodists and were delighted to see their little ones join the church, and gave them all needed encouragement to be faithful. They became solid members of the church and remain so to the present time. There were two rather bright boys about sixteen years old, the sons of Methodist parents, who manifested deep religious feeling and wished to unite with the church, which their fathers saw and whispered in their ears that they had better not join the church so young; they had better put it off until they could feel assured that they would be able to hold out faithful. The poor boys were most sadly disappointed and went away sorrowful. One of them soon lost his religious impressions, became wicked and dissipated, and, in a few years, filled a drunkard's grave.
The other one grew to manhood and, as if by way of retaliation, turned his back upon the church of his parents', and, greatly to their mortification and sorrow, joined another church. I say then let the children join the church, and let parents and older members and especially their pastors will do their duty in teaching and caring for them;
they will make as good members in all after life as we have in the church.
When these four articles are published,
I may write to you all again.

HAZLETON, Mississippi.
J. G. JONES.
Mr. Editor: Since I have written
my last letter to the little friends, which you had the kindness to publish in your good paper, I feel encouraged to write again, as some of my questions have been answered. I was afraid for the want of merit and interest that my other letter would find its way into the waste-basket. I am always glad to get the Advocate to read the letters that are published in the little folks column.
I always feel interested in answering the young folks questions. I think it is a very good thing, for it requires a great deal of Bible reading to find them. Papa says it is a good way to get the young folks to read the Bible, which is a duty that every body should perform. I am a member of the Methodist Sunday-school. Mr. C. Newton is our superintendent. Papa and mamma are members of the Methodist Church. I will recommend to my little friends half hours with the Bible. It is a very interesting book. I will now answer Maury Hargrove's question:
"Which is the longest verse in the Bible?" It is found in Esther viii, 9.
I will answer Lizzie Morris's question:
"How old was Moses when he died?"
He was one hundred and twenty years old. It is found in Deut. xxxiv, 7.
"How old was Abah when he began to reign?" Twenty years old. It is found in II Chron. xxviii, 1. I will close by asking some questions: Which is the shortest verse in the Bible? Which is the shortest chapter in the Bible?

Where is mother-in-law mentioned in the Bible? CARL A. ROBERTS.
BASTROP, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: As I see no letters from Simshoro, I concluded I would write
one. I am a little girl eight years old.
Papa has been taking your valuable paper ever since I can recollect. I like to read it, especially the children's column. I have four sisters, three married and one single; and one dear little sister and brother in heaven. My papa, mamma, and all my sisters are members of the church. Bro. J. H.
Stone is our pastor. He is always welcome at our house, for we all love him.
I will answer Sallie Neyland's question:
Isaac was the sixth son of Jacob. It is found in Gen. xlii, 14. I will close by asking a question: Who was Josiah's mother? Your little friend,
LUCY R. ROBINSON.
Simshoro, Louisiana.

Mr. Editor: My mother takes the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and likes to read it. Sometimes she gives me the children's corner to read. I have noticed no one has sent you a letter from this place. If you think it worth reading, I will tell you of our little church at Jonestown. It was built last year, and is very pretty, but quite small compared with city churches. We have a good organ, but no pews yet. We have to sit in chairs until we are able to buy pews. Rev. H. B. Hamer is our pastor, and everyone likes him. One year ago we attended services in an old school house. Will any one tell me where Christ calls Mary, "Mother," in the Bible? ANGELINE ALCON.
EARLE'S NEST.

Mr. Editor: As I have not written to your valuable paper for some time,
I thought that I would write again. I live 4 miles from Westville, a country town. I have been going to school, and am sorry to say it closed on Oct. 31.
My grandpa is living with us. He is about ninety years of age. My grandma is dead. I am going to answer Miss Sallie Neyland's question: The sixth son of Jacob was Zebulun. It is found in Gen. xxxv, 23. I am going to ask some questions: Who drove a nail through Simeon's temple? How old was Joshua when he began to reign? With much success to your paper, I am,
Your little friend,
J. B. LOCKHART.
Westville, Mississippi.

"As One Whom His Mother Com-forteth."

A little boy came to his mother one day, and with quivering lips and tearful eyes, said:
"Mamma, need I go to school this afternoon? I don't want to go. I can't go!"
"Why! what has happened?" asked the mother. "I hope you have not been a naughty boy."
"No, mamma, I was not naughty. I just turned around in my seat a little minute, and the teacher came up and struck me with his ruler, and I don't want to go to school ever again. She is a horrid teacher," and the little breast heaved with mingled wrath and indignation.
His mother knew that although the blow might have caused him pain, it had fallen heavily on the little sensitive heart; so she drew him into her lap and laid his head upon her bosom, where he sobbed out his grief. Then putting back the hair from his heated brow and kissing him, she spoke words of tender affection.
"When he lay quietly in her arms, she said: "Little boys do have trials, and sometimes they are almost as much as such little hearts can well endure; but,
Alfie, everybody has trials, and sometimes they give up to them when they ought not. Now," she continued, "I want my boys to be good men by and by, if you keep going to school, you would stop learning, and that would not do, for you must learn a great deal in order to be a good, strong, Christian man."

"But it is hard sometimes, isn't it, mamma?" he asked, finding comfort in her arms.
"Indeed it is," was the reply.
He patted her on the cheek, smiled and said: "You are a good mother."
"Now," said she, "go bathe your face, and we will go to dinner."
When the hour for school came, he threw his arms around his mother's neck for a moment, and whispered, as though desiring assurance of her sympathy, "It is hard, isn't it?" She assured him again that it was, but he must not permit trials to discourage him.

With a light heart he went whistling on his way to school, comforted in the thought that his mother knew and appreciated the difficulty.
Nearly a hundred years ago, a homely old gentleman, who had been a mechanic and was the son of a mechanic, was sent as an ambassador from this country to France. There came to the full the splendor of the French salons, and the grace and charm of the society he met there. A weaker man, or one with less tact, would have tried to imitate and conform to it.
But Franklin knew his own foundation, and stood firm on it. He kept his simple, grave dignity, his Quaker dress and his plain language. The result was that the enthusiastic Parisians made a denial of him; men of the highest rank paid him homage; beautiful women crowded about him, actually entering the boudoirs from his coat for a moment.
Not one of the other ambassadors at the French capital, at that time, are remembered now, though they belonged to some of the noblest houses in Europe; while the advent of "the great Franklin" still remains a favorite social tradition in Paris.
America's first abroad could study the secret of Franklin's success with Europe. There is scarcely a capital in Europe where wealthy Americans are not to be found "in society," too often pushing themselves by every mean art and sordid expedient in their power among people who are as a rule, no more cultured or better bred than themselves, but who have titles. The result is, that they only win contempt from these foreigners, when simple self-respect would command their regard.

The same mistake is repeated with infinite variations in our own country.
The average American, whether old or young, is seldom content with his own social position or circle of friends. He is perpetually pushing himself into some other place which he imagines to be more fashionable; he is incessantly stung by snubs from people who are inferior to himself. In short, he takes voluntarily the position of a lackey when he might be an equal by simply keeping his own place and bringing to adorn it all the strength, grace and charm which he possesses.
There was a ring of the true metal in the reply of the Highland chief when seated below the salt at a state banquet,
"Where MacGregor sits, there is the head of the table!"—YOUTH'S COMPANION.

Caught by an Octopus.
A diver who was trying to find pearls off the Alaska coast, found none, but found himself, all of a sudden, in the grasp of an ugly octopus with arms twenty-seven feet long. Such an experience is rare; but there are thousands of people who are caught by dyspepsia, which is quite as bad. An octopus hates to let go. So does dyspepsia.
Brown's Iron Bitters cures dyspepsia, and makes it loose its cruel grip. Mrs.
Schmidt and her daughter, of 138 Cuney street, Baltimore, were both cured of dyspepsia by the use of Brown's Iron Bitters.

RAILROADS.

Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Old Reliable Route to all Eastern Cities.

THROUGH WITHOUT CHANGE TO
Mobile, Montgomery, Pensacola, Nashville,
Louisville, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Savannah, St. Louis, Jacksonville, Fla., Lynchburg, and
Washington, D. C.,
IN PULLMAN CARS.

ENTIRE TRAINS THROUGH FROM NEW OR-LEANS TO LOUISVILLE.

	Leave.	Arrive.
Express.....	8:00 A. M.	7:30 P. M.
Coast Accommodation.....	8:35 P. M.	8:10 A. M.
Fast Mail.....	8:30 P. M.	7:45 A. M.

ONLY ONE CHANGE OF CARS TO NORTHERN AND EASTERN CITIES.

Ticket office corner St. Charles and Common sta., where Sleeping Car accommodations can be secured.

C. P. ATMORE, Gen. Pass. Agent.
W. B. KENNERLY, Ticket Agent.
J. T. HARAHAN, Gen'l. Manager.

JOHN KILKENY, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agent,
New Orleans.

O. M. HUNN, Sub. N. O. and M. Division.

MERIDIAN ROUTE.

NEW DOUBLE DAILY LINE.

TO THE
NORTH AND NORTHWEST,
Via N. O. and N. E., and Mobile and Ohio Railroads.

Pullman Sleepers on both lines. Close connections made at UNION DEPOT, ST. LOUIS, with all through lines.
Excursion Tickets on sale to the Summer Resorts of the great North-west, at 10 A. M., and 10 P. M.
The 10 P. M. train daily has a sleeper through to St.
Louis without change.
SPECIAL NOTICE.—The Eating Houses on this line are unequalled by any in the country.
For Maps, Time Tables, etc., call on our address.
R. W. KILKENY, N. O. and M. Division.
General Agent M. and O. R. R. Gravier and St.
Charles streets.
G. JORDAN, Gen. Manager, Mobile, Ala.
CHAR. J. WALLER, G. P. A., Mobile, Ala.

The Great New Southern Route

TO
SAN FRANCISCO, EL PASO, SAN DIEGO and
Other CALIFORNIA and MEXICAN Points.

Through Sleeping-Cars from
New Orleans to San Francisco,
—VIA—
Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio Railway System and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Connections made at Houston with
RAILROADS TO ALL POINTS IN TEXAS.

Trains start from Elysian Fields street Depot as follows:
Alexandria, 7:45 A. M. Houston, 7:45 A. M.
Houston, 7:30 P. M.
Arrives from
Alexandria, 8:45 P. M. Houston, 8:45 P. M.
Houston, 7:30 A. M.

For further information apply to
W. O. ORLEN,
Ticket Agent,
Office corner Magazine and Natchez streets,
NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ROUTE.

The Texas and Pacific Railway,
NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

Is the direct line from NEW ORLEANS to NORTHERN, EASTERN, WESTERN and CENTRAL TEXAS and all points in Texas, Old and New Mexico and California. Through sleeper to Dallas, Fort Worth and to Colorado. Only one change to San Francisco.

Through Express leaves New Orleans from depot foot of Terapichore street, at 12:15 o'clock. This train stops only at St. Charles, Vicksburg, Houstonville and Pineville, between New Orleans and Baton Rouge Junction.

Baton Rouge Accommodation leaves New Orleans
at 7:40 A. M., foot of Terapichore street. Stops at all Prestations.

California Express arrives at New Orleans depot, foot of Terapichore street, at 10:00 A. M.
Pullman Palace sleeping cars on this train from
New Orleans to San Francisco.

Baton Rouge Accommodation leaves New Orleans
at 7:40 A. M., foot of Terapichore street. Stops at all Prestations.

For tickets or information apply at 47 St. Charles, corner Gravier street, or depot, foot of Terapichore
street.

A. S. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent.
G. W. McCULLOUGH,
General Passenger Agent.
W. E. NEWMAN,
Train Manager.
H. M. ROXIE,
Third Vice President, St. Louis, Mo.

THE PILLOW-INHALER!

ALL-NIGHT INHALATION!
CATARRH, BRONCHITIS AND CONSUMPTION CURED.

THE Pillow-Inhaler is one of the most effective medicine inventions of the age. It is a triumph of science over disease. It is tremendous in its effects, for it cures Catarrh and the whole horrible phalanx of kindred ailments.

ONE THING IT DOES—IT CURES!
It is a Mechanical Pillow that is used the same as one's ordinary bed-pillow. It contains reservoirs for volatile medicines and modifying valves to control its action. The medicines and reservoirs are the most healing and disintegrating that science has able to formulate for the purposes required. They are entirely safe and the inhaler is perfectly comfortable; a child can use it. There are no pipes or tubes for the mouth or nose. Each night, the dangerous period of the twenty-four hours, for about eight hours, the inhaler enters the wasted body of the wretched sufferer with every breath he draws! It conquers disease by a continuous application of curative agents to the diseased membranes of the respiratory tract, and while spreading stimulating and soothing agents upon the inflamed and acrid blood, searches through every pore in the body for vestiges of disease and annihilates them.

CATARRH.
BRONCHITIS.
CONSUMPTION.

HERE IS ONE TESTIMONY OUT OF HUNDREDS.
A CURE OF THE WORST TYPE OF CATARRH.

"I had Catarrh of the worst kind, and then I was going into Consumption. I persevered with the Inhaler right along, and gave up all other medicine, and now I am perfectly cured. It has wrought such a cure on me that I feel I cannot do too much to spread the knowledge of it to others. It may save many lives. The pastor in my church, in Baltimore, knows how I suffered; also many friends in Philadelphia and Baltimore."
Send for Circulars and Testimony to
THE PILLOW-INHALER CO., 1520 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

When writing please mention the name of this paper.

MISCELLANEOUS.

J. H. MUSE,

Attorney and Counsellor at Law.
OFFICE AND RESIDENCE: ANITE CITY, LA.
Will practice in New Orleans and any other part of the state to which professional talent may be required to him to go.

OPHIO

SHOT GUNS
REVOLVERS
Etc.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

Illinois Central Railroad.

The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight
To All Points
NORTH EAST AND WEST.

THE ONLY LINE RUNNING PULLMAN PALACE
SLEEPING CARS THROUGH FROM NEW OR-LEANS TO CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS, MEMPHIS AND CHICAGO WITHOUT CHANGE OF CARS.
ONLY ONE CHANGE TO NEW YORK AND EAST-ERN CITIES.

THE ONLY DIRECT ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, CHI-CAGO AND ALL POINTS NORTH AND WEST.
Many miles shorter and many hours quicker than any other line.

STANDARD GAUGE, ALL STEEL, RAILROAD
ELEGANT COACHES, CLOSE CONNECTIONS, AND QUICK TIME.

"SPEED, COMFORT, SAFETY"
RATES AS LOW AS THE LOWEST

On and after October 7, 1884—
DOUBLE DAILY TRAINS leave and arrive at Calhoun Street Depot as follows:

LEAVE. ARRIVE.
Exp. No. 2, 9:30 A. M. Exp. No. 1, 7:15 A. M.
Exp. No. 4, 5:30 P. M. Exp. No. 3, 10:45 A. M.
Ticket office, corner Canal and Common.

MATT. KENNEDY, Ticket Agent.
WM. McHARRY, Gen. Southern Passenger Agt.
A. H. HANSON, Gen. Passenger Agt., Chicago.
J. W. COLEMAN, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., New Orleans.
C. M. SHAFER, Superintendent.

Queen and Crescent Line.

New Orleans and Northeastern
Railroad.

—The Short Line—
FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS
—To All Points—
North and East and in the Northwest

Low Rates and Quick Time on
Freight Traffic.

THE MODEL, MODERN THROUGHFARE,
Double Daily Solid Through Passenger Trains with Pullman Palace Cars.

FROM
NEW ORLEANS
—TO—
Meridian,
Birmingham,
Chattanooga
and Cincinnati.

Morning Express. Even's Mail
Leaves New Orleans..... 10:00 A. M. 10:30 P. M.
Arrives, Meridian..... 6:10 P. M. 6:40 A. M.
" Birmingham..... 11:10 P. M. 1:00 P. M.
" Chattanooga..... 4:30 A. M. 6:15 P. M.
" Cincinnati..... 5:25 P. M. 7:15 A. M.

Freight and Passenger Depots,
Press street and Levee.

Freight and Ticket Offices,
34 and 36 St. Charles street, N. O.

H. COLLIERAN, General Freight Agent.
E. P. WILSON,
Gen'l. Pass. Agent,
Queen and Crescent Line,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

THE BEST

(Leading Jeweler), who give a Full Warranty

Sawing Made Easy.

MONARCH LIGHTNING SAWING MACHINE SENT ON 30 DAYS
TEST TRIAL.

For logging camps, wood yards, farmers cutting stump-wood, and all other saw-cutting, this machine is the best. A box of 10 can saw logs, oak, hickory, etc. Immense saving of labor and money. Will saw, cross-cut, and cut into all kinds of lumber. It also brilliantly illuminated power in 500 ft. of logs. "Taylor's" is the best in the world for the MONARCH MFG. CO., (200 State St., Chicago, Ill.)

SWEET GUM & MULEIN

The sweet gum taken from the tree of the Southern swamps contains a stimulating and tonic which loosens the phlegm, and cuts the false membrane, and cures Croup, Whooping Cough, Croup, Croup, and Whooping Cough. This compound contains the best of the old and new, and is the best remedy for Cough, Croup, and Whooping Cough.
It is the best remedy for Cough, Croup, and Whooping Cough.
It is the best remedy for Cough, Croup, and Whooping Cough.
It is the best remedy for Cough, Croup, and Whooping Cough.

WALTER A. TAYLOR, Atlanta, Ga.

CAPT. C. MUELLER, Str. "Felicite."
 "Ayer's Pills invariably cure me of Headache." JOHN STELL, Germantown,
Pa.
 "Ayer's Pills have cured me of Constipation of long standing." EDWARD O.
 EASTERLY, Rockford, Ill.
 "Ayer's Pills gave me new life and vigor, and restored my health." JOHN LAZARI, St. Johns, N. J.
 Ayer's Pills curel of Indigestion, Constipation, and Headache. M. V. WATSON,
342 State St., Chicago, Ill.
 Ayer's Pills curel of Liver Complaint,
 Dyspepsia and Neuralgia. P. H. HOUKES,
Newberry, Broken Co., Ind.
 "Ayer's Pills have cured me entirely."
 MRS. MARY A. SCOTT, Portland, Me.
 "Ayer's Pills cured of Rheumatism." S.
 M. SPENCER, Syracuse, N. Y.

[Pharmaceutical Chemists] LOWELL, MASS.
 Druggists.
 St. Charles St.
 MARK
DISCOVERY
 IN THE PROCESS OF MANUFACTURE. AND condition, as when first you use them. They have and European oculists, who claim that the MEDICINE restores the sight, & used in time, but in no case willing to expose:
 tely doing away with that tiresome sensation that with them pollack. Hence you will always see through nult is that the optic nerves always cool, doing away night, the light having no effect on the eye, with no improves the eye.
 GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED.
 on the frame H. HODGKIN, EMERALD
 ulé at Liberal Discount.
 who may wish to procure these spectacles, call and, directions for insuring a perfect fit, and have HODGKIN, PECTACLE COMPANY
 eet, New Orleans.
H B
 Publishing House

is the exclusive property of the Church to be to advance the cause of Christianity and useful literary and scientific information and periodicals." (See Discipline, page charge is "To see that all the people supplied with our books and periodicals answer 9.)
officers appointed by the General Conference Church at heart. All ministers in and special inducements are offered there can be no great success without system can be devised, as our preachers and are brought into pastoral contact confidence in him, the preacher is the most every preacher keep in communication in representing it before "the people they may be supplied "with our books
We rarely have a call for a religion-ist. Let our preachers write to us for anmembers, and let them be sure that their ed in every Methodist family literature in every Sunday School.
of the Advocate and Sun
to any address, post-paid.

ADVOCATE.
M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.
D. D. D., - Editor
a year; $1 to preachers. The largest Sound, lively, progressive, pure in the family or in polite society admitted in and, the young, everybody. ADDRESS
PUBLISHING HOUSE,
LE, TENN.

[illegible]

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 47.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1477.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—113 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Singles and wives of deceased preachers half price.

All preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL.
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.
REV. CHRISTIAN KENNER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.
REV. W. P. BARTON.
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

SMALL THINGS.

Despise not them small things.
The soul that longs for wings
To soar to some great height of sacrifice, too oft Forgets the daily round,
Where little cares abound,
And shakes off little duties while she looks aloft.
God has sent some below
Who must their all forego,
And while bidding give their love, their best,
The lot of some, like thine,
Is small things to resign.
Tell them give that little, thou too art blest.
Thou tread'st a lowly way,
Be willing day by day
To give up little comforts at God's call;
Then thou may'st be ready
To yield up cheerfully,
When he shall crave thy dearest and thine all.

Letter from China.

(Continued.)

MR. EDITOR: The more we saw of the superstition and idolatry of the heathen around us from day to day the more we felt they needed the enlightening influences of the Gospel of Christ. My greatest desire was to be able to tell them of a better way, and I made use of every opportunity to do so.

Late one afternoon we went to visit a little boy who was sick. He was a member of the mission school, and lived in a small hut of bamboo not far from us, in a small room not more than six feet square. An old woman was sitting by his side and looking the picture of despair. The little boy was glad to see us, and asked us in a pleasant way to come in. Everything around us showed their poverty, and the place seemed though it had not been cleaned for years. In the same miserable room were some eight women and as many children. They had an idol over the cooking range and other small idols in different parts of the room. After talking with the child and giving him some medicine we went. In the evening we found him much better. The old woman was still sitting by his side and attributed everything he said and did to the medicine he had taken. The little boy said he was nearly well, and thought if he could take the medicine once more he would be quite well. These poor people were full of superstition, and no doubt this old woman believed we had bewitched the little boy by giving him foreign medicine. Tell them of the one true God and they listen attentively; but they are so ignorant many can not understand. They admit their idols do not save them, and yet they go prostrating themselves before them. Bro. Lew preaches earnest, plain and pointed sermons against idolatry, in which he spurs no one. He told Buddhist priests were considered by one of their emperors to be worth listening attentively, while others laughed. Some said he is trying to get us to cast away our unclean idols and worship the ancestors of foreigners. Others said he wants us to worship heaven and earth. A month after our arrival a poor man came to the door of the mission house with some articles for sale. I went with him through an interpreter. He was asked if he had ever heard of Jesus the Savior of men. He replied he knew nothing of Jesus, and had never heard of him. Said he was not able to read, and was very poor. He was then told Jesus loved the poor as well as the rich, and that we had come to tell him how he might be saved. We told him Jesus died for our sins and would save all who put their trust in him. He wanted to know how to believe, and was willing to receive instruction. Many times during our missionary life we have been asked that question. My heart yearned to tell him of the love of Jesus, but my lips were sealed. I gave him a catechism of Christian doctrine, and he went away much pleased.

About this time a young man came every day and sat at the mission gate begging. He had a lame foot which the doctor had kindly dressed for him, and money had been given him from time to time. On the day I speak of he had the place dressed and was told to go to work as he had done a month before. This he promised to do, but said he wanted to be paid for having his wound dressed. The doctor will remember well this poor beggar. He said people despised and kicked him about and called him a poor beggar. I will give a short history of this poor boy for the three or four years I knew him. About the time I reached Shanghai he became a beggar. Before this he had employment as a coolie carrying bricks, and was then supporting his mother, sister and himself. One day a brick fell upon his foot and made an ugly wound. A missionary, seeing his condition and knowing him to be an industrious boy, with a mother and sister dependent upon him, gave him a small sum of money. The next day or two the same amount was given, and so on for some time. The doctor did all he could to cure him, but in vain, for he would irritate the place at night, and return in the morning in a worse condition, begging for money. As soon as this was known he received no more money, and from that time he began to beg from house to house. Six months from that date he was offered good wages if he would leave off begging to go to work. He worked half a day in the garden, then threw down his hoe and said, "I thank you, I believe I had rather beg, good-bye." Weeks, months and years after that I met that young man begging from house to house in the city. When begging at the door, if something was not given him at once he would enter the house, work his way to the inner rooms and persevere until he received a cash or two—the tenth part of a cent. Years after this when we had opened a chapel in the city this beggar boy would come in, listen awhile and leave. I often had conversation with him during these years, and tried to lead him to repentance and faith in Christ. He would always say, "Thank you, your advice is good, and I believe in Jesus; but I am a poor, despised beggar, and no one cares for me. There is no hope for me, good-bye."

In 1859 he came to the chapel one day, and shaking a few dollars in his waist-band, said, "Lan-sieu-sang, I am going to a foreign country to get rich, and I am come to say my last good-bye. You see the money the foreign man has given me?" I said, "I am afraid that you are deceived and that you will regret it some day." He replied, "I am not deceived, for the foreign man tells me I will get rich in that country, and I am happy." I asked him to remember what I had often told him about the love of Jesus, and, while talking with him, he wiped off a few tears from his cheeks and said he would remember it, and with a bow said, "Good-bye." I never met him again as he went to Cuba in a French ship.

Near the close of October we heard the insurgents had captured a foreigner who had been employed in the imperial army. Heavy chains bound his hands and feet. Some foreigners were in to see him, and he said to them, "For four months I have been chained in close confinement, and not able to see the face of a white man. I expect to suffer extreme torture and death in this place." He was considered by his own government as an outlaw, received no protection, and, no doubt, suffered untold agony until death put an end to his life. The imperialists and insurgents were fighting almost daily around us, and cannon balls were passing day and night uncomfortably near our mission house. Dr. Jenkins' house was struck on several occasions by shot and great openings were made in the walls. One ball passed over our mission house and fell in a field beyond. Some Chinese near where it fell ran, dug it out of the ground and carried it away. Battles were almost a daily occurrence, and balls fell thick and fast all around us. One ball struck a few feet from the door of the mission house, and another passed through the veranda. During one battle we saw one insurgent killed and fall into the canal. Some imperial soldiers ran to the spot, drew out the body, cut off the head and threw back the body into the canal, carrying off the head with them. At another time we saw an insurgent captured and led off the field by two men.

About this time imperialists began to throw up fortifications just back of our mission house, not more than thirty yards distant, and everything became so threatening we felt it was not safe for us to remain there any longer. The insurgents had attacked a body of French soldiers, killing one man, wounding another and wounding four Chinese. They reported the French protecting imperial soldiers and cutting off their supplies, all of which was very true. For this they threatened to burn all foreign houses in the French settlement, ours included. The French on the other hand threatened to exterminate the insurgents in the city and destroy the whole place.

On the night of November 5 we were so disturbed by the guns from both parties, also by the savage yells, and every moment expecting an attack, we determined on the morning of the sixth to leave the mission house we had been occupying for the one in the American settlement. Threats came from the insurgents in the city that they were coming to burn our house. On our way to the new mission house we found all the ferry-boats guarded by imperial soldiers. Foreigners were expecting every day to have another difficulty with the imperialists, and were preparing for it. In a few days after leaving our mission house thousands of imperial and insurgent soldiers were engaged in a severe battle around the house. Several persons were killed and many wounded. Not long after the mission house was abandoned, it, with Dr. Jenkins' house, was burned by imperial soldiers, and immense cannons were planted almost on the very spot where the mission house once stood.

Yours in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.
SHANGHAI, CHINA, Sep. 30, 1854.

Methodism, Whence?

BY REV. ANOUS DOWLING.

Methodism is a child of Providence. This child was generated by the active forces of divine grace under the guidance of divine wisdom. The forces were in the written word and Holy Spirit. Their united power and fruit were seen and felt during the passage of the Wesleys across the Atlantic on their mission to Georgia to preach the gospel to the Indians. Although coming to the United Colonies to preach the gospel of salvation to others they themselves had not yet been saved. The Wesleys found on board the ship upon which they were to take passage one hundred and twenty persons, twenty-six German Moravians with their Bishop, David Nitschman. The great event of the voyage, as affecting the history of Methodism, was the illustration of genuine religion which the little band of Moravian passengers gave during a perilous storm. Wesley had observed with deep interest their humble piety in offices of mutual kindness and service, and in patience under occasional maltreatment; but when the storm arose there was opportunity of seeing whether they were delivered from the spirit of fear as well as from that of pride, anger and revenge. During the storm a terrible alarm and outcry arose among the English, but the Germans calmly sang the praise of God. Wesley asked one of them, "Were you not afraid?" He answered, "I thank God, no." "But were not your women and children?" "No; our women and children are not afraid to die." Wesley felt that he had not so learned Christ, and retired to lay the lesson to heart. He was impressed by the simple beauty of the religious life of these Moravians. He found the same simple beauty in the lives of the members and ministers of this church. Although deeply awakened he still clung to the ritualism of the church of England and vainly sought relief in an ascetic life. Thus he toiled and struggled for more than two years. In this state of soul he returned to old England, and was not relieved till May 24, 1738. He went to a meeting at night conducted by a layman. While this layman was reading Luther's preface to the Epistle to the Romans, describing the change which the spirit works in the heart through faith in Christ he realized his heart "strangely warmed." Then and there the Rev. John Wesley was scripturally and soulfully "converted."

Let us now briefly consider the forces employed in the conversion of Wesley, and consequently in the formation of Methodism: 1. By reading carefully the word of God in the original Greek he saw that he was an unrepentant sinner, although an ordained deacon and priest in the Church of England. In this he saw that deep learning and standard church theology did not satisfy the demands of an awakened conscience. 2. By the lives of the humble German Moravians he saw illustrated the very thing he so much desired and sought after. But how to obtain this sought for blessing and still be a true and consistent churchman he saw not. He was hampered by his penance as Luther did. He lived on bread and water, lay out the ground for a bed and went barefoot in order to get the blessing while in Georgia. He was so severely rigid in his churchism in conducting service that he drove many of the people from him and provoked persecution. He would not even baptize an infant except by immersion, and allowed that no one—adult or infant—had been baptized if not done by the Church of England. Hence he failed and went back to England much troubled. 3. But at last he was saved by simple faith in the truth of God's word, including the atoning virtue of the life and death of Jesus Christ and operation of the Holy Spirit. The truth of revelation and the value of redemption became potential in his personal salvation by the agency, and only by the agency of the Holy Spirit. These all became personal to him by faith therein.

Then Methodism is the outcome of the Bible, including the light and power of the Moravians and Lutherans. When the Council of Constance decreed the burning of Jerome and Huss it touched a force that sprang the Moravians into burning embers and produced Methodism. When the Diet of Worms sought to overthrow Martin Luther it came into contact with power that shook kingdoms and dissolved thrones and produced Methodism. If there is force in an honored ancestry Methodism has force. She is the result of Moravia and Lutheran teaching and living with the superadded light and glory of the Holy Spirit. This is Methodism.

—BIRMINGHAM, ALA., Oct. 24, 1884.

"A Partisan Judiciary."

MR. EDITOR: I notice on the fourth page of the ADVOCATE of the sixth an anonymous article with the above caption. I think you ought to apply the rules strictly in regard to communications which are likely to be taken as editorials and require the writer to sign his own name. I came very near taking the article alluded to as from your own pen, and it was not until I had twice written a reply to it that I decided that it had slipped in when you were out upon a Centenary tramp. Although the writer of the article has withheld his name from the public I want to file a bill of objections. 1. A man who decides a legal question according to a declared principle in a party platform is not eo facto a partisan. Example: Chief Justice Taney remanded fugitive slaves to their masters, while Abraham Lincoln declared all slaves in the Union free. Both were party but not partisan decisions.

2. Parties embody certain principles in platforms, and those who are elected are pledged beforehand to enforce the construction of the law endorsed by their party. If then an erroneous or corrupt decision is rendered it is the party and not the functionary that is to be arraigned. The functionary is not actually sworn to so decide, but he is bound by his word of honor which is as sacred.

3. A law is not understood until a judge has passed on it, no matter how explicit it may appear. "Thou shalt not kill." I have just killed. What? A wasp. Have I violated the sixth commandment? No judge but a wasp would so decide. A case decided is a definition of the law which everybody is bound to abide until reversed. If appealed to the highest court and reaffirmed then it must so stand until a future plebiscite. Absurdity of decision is not supposable in the legal sense. Two of the highest functionaries of our church are in evidence to this point.

4. The statement of a reporter is not ground for an attack upon the grave decision of a supreme court and the arraignment of a party. There might be two reporters, one approving and the other disapproving. Both may be wrong in assuming the state of mind determining the action of the court. The court may not have been influenced by the consideration named. If it were it attaches to the people behind the court. If the court itself announces that it is looking to certain principles or interests that involves the court but not necessarily the party. The court for reason can not go outside court jurisdiction, and courts do not construct platforms.

5. The boomerang is an Australian weapon for killing kangaroos and other marauders. Europeans and Americans often commit suicide with it. Two good reasons exist why we should not shy a boomerang at a kangaroo: (1) We do not know just when, in what direction and how far a kangaroo will jump, and (2) in throwing we might drop out of saddle kangaroo's pocket.

T. A. S. A.

"This and That." Picture Number Three.

MR. EDITOR: In the ADVOCATE of last week, you gave us two pictures, to which I wish to add a third. A member of the Roman Catholic Church in this place was taken sick about a week ago and died yesterday morning. During her illness she was attended by Protestant friends, who, with loving hands and sympathetic hearts, ministered to the comfort of her body and prayed for the comfort of her soul. And when death came they bore her remains to the church of her choice, where a funeral oration was pronounced by the priest in which he took occasion to say to his Protestant audience, for a very few Romanists were present, that the house in which they were assembled was the only house of God in town. That to him had been given the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and that whosoever he bound on earth would be bound in heaven, and whosoever he loosed on earth would be loosed in heaven. That he would loose no one from his sins who refused to confess to him and do penance. That none were Christians but members of the Roman Catholic Church. That all Protestants, being heretics, were exposed to the damnation of hell. That though he used such plainness of speech he hoped they would not be offended. And they were not offended, for at the close of his remarks they took up the dead body and bore it to its last resting place and, without the aid of a single Romanist, gently laid it away to await the resurrection morn.

Returning home they comforted one another with the words of Christ, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven." This, too, is a picture from real life.

M. C. GALLOWAY.

Some Interesting History.

We made brief reference last week to the facts in the following extract from the Central Christian Advocate. A candid and impartial reading of the same would clothe some ecclesiastical small talkers with more becoming modesty:

It is known that some of our Protestant Episcopal friends are extremely sensitive lest the public should not understand that they consider themselves in possession of a better quality of the episcopacy than the Methodist Episcopal Church. They claim not only a superior article—an older brand—but would like to make it appear that they were first on the ground in this country with a Bishop and general church organization. We are ready to concede to them all they can prove, for no intelligent Methodist attributes any merit whatever to any particular line of prelatical or priority of church organizations. The facts, however, since they are being canvassed, are about as follows: A number of the Church of England clergymen in 1783 elected Dr. Seabury, of Connecticut, and sent him to England to obtain Episcopal ordination. The English Bishops refused to consecrate the American candidate, on account of the unsettled civil relations between the two countries. Wearied out by waiting for a settlement in civil affairs, on November 14, 1784, as a last resort, he accepted consecration from the Scotch Bishops, who were not in good ecclesiastical standing. Bishop Seabury did not return to this country till June, 1785, when he reached Newport, R. I., and preached his first Episcopal sermon in this country. He was never very well received by some parties on account of the doubtful quality of his Episcopal order; and the history of the care that was taken to rectify and heal the irregularity is very amusing to a Methodist. He was no doubt a worthy man, and as truly a Bishop as those who obtained their orders in after years of the Church of England Bishops.

Mr. Wesley, seeing in 1784 that the time had come for an independent organization of Methodism in this country, determined to recommend and provide for it an Episcopal form of government. He had no doubt of his authority to make suitable provision for the Altholists in this country, and he had all the precedent needed for one in his position. From a high-church point of view his right to consecrate a Bishop was quite as good as that of the Scotch Bishops. So early in September, 1784, more than a month before Dr. Seabury was consecrated, Mr. Wesley consecrated Dr. Thomas Coke, a Church of England presbyter, to the Episcopal office and commissioned him to exercise Episcopal functions in the United States. Bishop Coke sailed immediately, and after arriving here called the Methodist preachers together at Baltimore in December, 1784, and the Methodist Episcopal Church was organized. Bishop Coke ordained Bishop Asbury and a number of elders and deacons during the session of this Conference. All this occurred more than five months before a Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church had arrived in this country. That God has bestowed on the Methodist Episcopal Church as great favor as on the church which claims a more churchly organization, is patent to the observation of any one. And as the church exists for the salvation of souls we are quite content with the recognition that God gives us.

Good Words.

I praise thee while my days go on;
I love thee while my days go on.
Through dark and dreary, through fire and frost,
With steadfast arms and treasure lost,
I thank thee while my days go on.
—R. B. Browning.
—The man who can see nothing in the fire of Jesus which nerves him to try to do something for the good of others does not know Jesus.—D. L. Wilson.
—Teaching men morals is as though I had a clock that would not go, and I turned round one of the cog wheels. But faith takes the key and winds up the mechanism, and the whole thing runs on readily.—Spurgeon.
—To be ignorant of what is impossible to know is to be learned; to be ignorant of what God has revealed, and call it modesty, is neither modesty nor learning.—Calvin.
—Faith is letting down our nets into the untransparent deeps at the divine command, not knowing what we shall take.—Faber.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.
REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.
REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.
JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D.D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1884.

$512!

We learn from Lt. Gov. Shands that this was the creditable offering at Senatobia, North Mississippi Conference, last Sunday week. We regretted not being present according to appointment, but severe sickness prevented.

$108 75!

This was the Centenary offering at Algiers, La., last Sunday morning. Bishop Parker preached the sermon and Pastor Wright lifted the collection.

$102!

This amount should be added to the Centenary offering of Felicita Street reported last week. It comes from the Sunday-school.

NOVEMBER 14, 1784.—That is a memorable day in the history of American Methodism for three reasons: 1. It witnessed the first meeting of Dr. Coke and Mr. Asbury, the first and second Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church. 2. The administration of the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper for the first time in America by regularly ordained Methodist ministers. 3. The preliminary arrangements for the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at Baltimore, on December 23, following. All this occurred at Barrett's Chapel, in Kent county, Del., eleven miles from Dover.

In nothing has Methodism so amazed the world as in the rapidity of its growth and the greatness of its numerical results. False prophets were many in the early days who foretold its speedy death. Isaac Taylor gave it ninety years to live. When Barrett Chapel, in Delaware, was being built, in 1780, a gentleman "of quality" remarked: "It is unnecessary to build such a house, for by the time the war is over a corn-crib will hold them all." But after other wars have ceased and a hundred years have passed we know of no corn-crib, county or commonwealth sufficiently capacious to comfortably accommodate "the people called Methodists." Its capabilities were never more prophetic of marvelous growth than at present.

The Supreme Court of the United States, the highest judicial tribunal in this nation, has again pronounced itself on the constitutionality of prohibitory liquor laws. That this decision should have been rendered so soon after the Scott liquor law of Ohio was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of that State—three judges in favor and two against—is a happy coincidence. The whisky organs had scarcely time to rejoice over a supposed victory before the court of last resort affirmed its deliverances of many years ago. It was an appeal case from Kansas. A county attorney had been removed for refusing to prosecute offenders against the liquor laws. He appealed to this court, first, on the ground that the prohibitory law was unconstitutional and, second, that he should have been proceeded against in a criminal court. The Supreme Court affirmed the decision of removal, and we hope has settled forever the legal status of the issue. When the full text of the opinion is received we will give it to our readers.

"According to reliable statistics," says the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, "there are two hundred Christians who favor infant baptism to one who opposes it." A fit occasion this for remembering who has said, "Thou shalt not follow a multitude to do evil." (Exodus xxiii, 2.)—Christian Index.

What an air of complacent infallibility bath this judge in Israel! The reference to the quoted text, however, indicates more narrowness than wit. We hardly supposed the most contracted landmark would call almost the entire Christian Church a generation of evil doers. But to such extremes superstition will sometimes lead. To this brother we might apply the words of Sidney Smith in characterizing Dr. Whewell. He said: "Whewell's forte is science; his folble is omnipotence."

The Wesleyan Missionary Secretariat.

The London Watchman, of October 22, ultimo, contains an elaborate account of the Special Committee meeting on the missionary secretariat. We read the entire proceedings with profound interest, together with the admirable editorial on this same subject. At the last Conference there was an animated "conversation" on the propriety of reducing the number of secretaries in the mission rooms. In this spirit of "retrenchment and reform" the Leeds district meeting had memorialized the Conference to make such reduction, and inveighed somewhat vigorously against the excessive cost of administration. There are now four secretaries, besides clerks and a special book-keeper. It was proposed to reduce this number to three, and curtail their "allowances." After much debate the whole question was referred to a large committee, selected on a broad basis, consisting of the President of the Conference, together with fifteen ministers and fifteen laymen not members of the Missionary Committee, and fifteen ministers and fifteen laymen who should be appointed by the Missionary Committee. There was a full attendance, and in all respects it was a notable gathering. The great, representative men of the Connection were present, and the discussion was able, candid and exhaustive.

Two important points were to be considered: First, was it expedient to reduce the number of the general secretaries? And, secondly, was any modification of their work advisable? The first of these questions was decided in favor of retaining four secretaries by an overwhelming majority—only six recording their votes against it. But the discussion, and not the decision, interested us, for it covered the whole range of missionary administration. The proper work of secretaries, the amount expected from them, how their time was employed, their labor divided, methods used and the expenses of their offices were all passed in critical review. There were no concealments or condemnations. The lights were turned on from every quarter, the secretaries rigidly criticized and all needed facts discovered. The speech of Mr. Kilner, the senior secretary, was a masterpiece of lucid statement, keen analysis and broad comprehension. He evinced equal acquaintance with the smallest details of his office and the grand, underlying principles of the missionary cause. Surely that office is no sinecure, though filled by four of the ablest men in the Wesleyan Connection. They are never unemployed or idly employed. On this point the Watchman aptly observes: "We are quite sure if there were any aspirants for the secretariatship present, Mr. Kilner quenched the fire of their ambition, and sent them back to their circuits with bosoms filled with sweet content. It is one of the weaknesses of human nature to suppose that the work of other persons can not compare in importance and exhaustiveness with our own. Every man whom we meet with thinks that there are vacant spaces in our life which could easily be occupied with toil. A decisive check to this delusion, as far as missionary secretaries are concerned, will be administered to anyone who will carefully study Mr. Kilner's statement." Wise, well-spoken words, and they have a marked application to our western longitude and southern latitude.

The Wesleyan Missionary Society is an old and thoroughly organized institution, collecting and disbursing large sums and doing a great work in winning the heathen world to the Lord Jesus. From its long history, its loyal support by the Connection, the liberality of the people, and their excellent methods of raising revenues, it would seem that less than four secretaries and several clerks could administer its affairs. But after studying the proceedings of the committee we feel assured that wise administration has been the secret of its success. Southern Methodists have only two salaried officers—one secretary and one treasurer—and yet in some quarters there are occasional complaints of "office expenses." And just here let it be said that Southern Methodism spends a smaller per cent. of her missionary revenues in administration than any of the leading denominations in England, or America. Whether or not this is false economy is hardly an open question.

This time of the Wesleyan secretaries is entirely occupied with "deputation work"—visiting churches and attending anniversaries, district meetings, etc.—meeting committees of various sorts, and preparing reports therefor, corresponding with missionaries, editing "Missionary Notices" and the general report, preparing occasional pamphlets to meet special emergencies, receiving callers on mission business, periodical visits to the several foreign fields and "following every sixpence of the money to see that it is rightly expended." No wonder Dr. Punshon uttered those pathetic words before the Conference in 1877: "If you can allow us to have four secretaries, we may then have a little time for reading, and one of us can now and then afford to be ill."

As to "deputation work," which answers to our secretaries' visits to churches and Conferences, Mr. Kilner said that there could be but one opinion as to its vital importance. Spending one-fourth of his own time in that way, attending, as a rule, three services on Sunday, he yet argued that there were many and powerful reasons why that department should have increased attention. And then the thought occurs, if "deputation work" be so imperative in old England, with her homogeneous society and tried methods, how much more important in our country. One speaker objected to taking able and eloquent men from the circuits and putting them in the departments. He insisted that they wanted clerks in the mission rooms, not preachers, and concluded by saying that if God had have given them a Spurgeon, they would have sent him to his orphan house or to the Pastor's College, and so lost the influence of his preaching. In reply the venerable Dr. Osborn made a vigorous and impressive speech, a few sentences of which we reproduce: "The secretaries ought to have time to stand on the watch-tower and survey the world. Fancy a man whom no one wished to hear preach standing by the side of the secretaries of other societies! Think of him in communication with the Colonial office, defending the rights of oppressed aborigines! We need men as secretaries who can lead the mind of the connection. In the nineteenth century only the best men can carry on the work of the Missionary Society." And to that work English Methodism has consecrated some of her noblest blood. To the eloquent pleadings of such men as Jabez Bunting, Robert Newton, Dr. James, Luke H. Wiseman, William Morley Punshon and William Arthur is the society indebted for its noble history. And that platform service is yet a necessity.

Another matter mentioned by Mr. Kilner, and urged as very important by Dr. Riggs and other speakers, was the careful editing of "Missionary Notices"—that is, the collecting and sending out of missionary bulletins to the church. A similar department in our administration our friend, Dr. Potter, of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, has advocated with zeal and ability. As a stimulus to the intelligent faith and liberality of the people, its value can not be overestimated. But it requires time and sanctified learning. Then articles and pamphlets are to be written in defense or advocacy of a certain cause or policy—all commanding the richest gifts of the church.

But possibly of greatest importance in effective administration is the secretaries' official and semi-official correspondence with the missionaries in the field. Wise and friendly letters frequently addressed to men in their different stations are inestimable. How lonesome and forsaken that missionary must have felt who for fourteen years received no such letter from home! Mr. Kilner is an old missionary himself, and laid great stress on the good results of frequent correspondence. These letters often involve difficult and complex questions, and require promptness and great discretion. In speaking of his own labors in that department, he said he wrote four or five hundred official letters in a year, besides very many of a shorter description. He thought that the secretaries wrote annually four thousand official and friendly communications to the several missions, and yet so pressed was he for time that one hundred unanswered letters were then upon his desk.

Other points we might consider, but these are sufficient to command the serious thought of our ecclesiastical statesmen. They indicate the necessity for enlargement in our own methods of operation. Let these facts be remembered:

1. With the increase of our missions and the multiplication of missionaries the labor of the home office becomes more burdensome. What one secretary did when our receipts were less than seventy-five thousand dollars and we had but few missionaries in the field, can not now be successfully done by two active, full-worked men when we disburse two hundred thousand dollars and have scores of laborers under employment.

2. "Deputation work" can not be dispensed with. Pulpit and platform must thunder with the appeals of those specially commissioned by the church to direct her foreign operations.

3. Money paid for wise administration is the best and cheapest money the church can expend. A high-salaried supervising architect is the most economical investment in building a house. Our superintending episcopacy is the cheapest department of our service, and always has been in the history of American Methodism.

An Independent Judiciary.

On this first page will be found an article by our special friend and correspondent, "T. A. S. A.," commenting adversely upon a recent editorial of ours on "A Partisan Judiciary." We admit his criticism without hesitation, and for two reasons: First, an editor should lay no claim to infallibility, and, secondly, an exchange of opinion is helpful to a clearer discernment of the truth. Some further thoughts on the subject may not be inappropriate, as many of our readers are clothed with the solemn responsibilities of citizenship and are under imperative obligation to discharge its important functions.

All political authority is vested in three great co-ordinate departments: the executive, the legislative and the judiciary. If all these powers were concentrated in one person, we would have an absolute monarchy; if in a select few, an oligarchy; but when derived from the people and distributed into different departments, we have a true republic and the surest guarantee of liberty and safety. This legislature represents the collective will of the community in matters of public policy and administration. It makes and unmakes laws, levies taxes, directs the collection and disbursement of revenues and controls all governmental affairs in the interest of the public good. It is very properly elective at short intervals, and is representative of the current thought of a commonwealth or confederation. The policy and trend of legislation will depend upon the party in majority. But in an ideal republic, and in harmony with the purpose of our federal and State constitutions, the judicial department of government is to be independent—not biased by fear or favor, passion, prejudice or party clamor. Therefore the judiciary has no discretion; its course is definitely fixed. It is to determine questions of personal, property or governmental rights, by great legal and constitutional rules, and apply the same with rigorous and impartial exactness. If a court becomes the agent of a faction and decides questions at issue by caucus dictation or convention platform, justice degenerates into mere travesty, and the citadel of our security is ingloriously dismantled. The perpetuity and grandeur of true republicanism—a government that guarantees the largest liberty and safety—is dependent upon an independent judiciary. While passion surges through legislative halls, the judiciary should be unimpassioned and impersonal—as firm and undisturbed as Gibraltar against which the wild waves of ocean dash in harmless fury.

Under this system, rightly administered, the personal rights of the humblest citizen are as secure, even against a whole community, as the most distinguished official. Before an independent judiciary a pauper is the equal of the President of the United States. And the Chief Executive himself can not abridge that man's liberty without the authority of law. He is protected by a Constitution and certain fixed laws which a President dare not defy. This law the judiciary represents. Not popular clamor, not party policy, not a favored class, but certain constitutional and legal principles and imperatives that preserve and guard the rights and liberties of every citizen alike. And this has been the theory of all our political writers and the eloquent boast of our ablest statesmen.

That this has not always been the history of our judiciary we may admit. Partisanship has possibly invaded in some measure our several courts from the highest to the lowest. But there has been sufficient adherence to principle and the great sanctions of law, settled by a long line of decisions, for it to be the trusted arbiter of our rights and liberties. To perpetuate its independence, and thereby preserve its purity, should be the aim of every true citizen. A partisan and corrupt judiciary in England had its culmination and flower in "the bloody Jeffreys." The Jacobin party in France could never have wrought its ruin and reigned in terror but for a servile and shameless court of law. These historic examples warn us to preserve from stain or wrinkle the judicial ermine. However reprehensible and base the methods of party politics, the judiciary must be enthroned above them in inapproachable security.

We are indulging in no sentimentality. We know the weakness of human nature and the temptation of even jurists to allow party prejudice to affect their opinions. The ideal of our Constitution may not be realized, but nothing less should be our aim and demand. How the superior courts of the land have been our great breakwater in periods of political and parliamentary peril is history known and read of all men. Of two things we are sure: this has been the theory of our republic from the beginning, and is its surest hope of permanency in the future.

Death of Rev. F. A. Mood, D. D.

In the death of Rev. Francis Asbury Mood, D. D., our church in Texas loses one of its ablest, noblest men, and profound sorrow is felt throughout our broad connection. A prince and a leader has fallen in our Israel. He died at Waco, whither he had gone to attend the North-west Texas Conference, and passed away about the time the appointments were being read. While his brethren were receiving their assignments for the year he heard his Master's call, "Come up higher."

Born in South Carolina, of good Methodist stock, he served the church of his native State with great ability and acceptability until transferred to Texas. We have heard it stated that his grandfather, father, three brothers, six uncles and eight cousins were Methodist preachers. By tradition, conviction, inheritance and training he was a Methodist, loyal, loving and true. In early childhood he was converted and joined the church, and to the day of his death, at fifty-seven years of age, he lived a life of singular saintliness and beauty. For sixteen years he served in the pastoral relation, and for a long time was the accomplished secretary of the South Carolina Conference.

He wielded a polished, vigorous pen and became an author of distinction and popularity. His history of Methodism in Charleston has a permanent place in our literature. As a preacher he was lucid in exposition, rigid in analysis, felicitous in elaboration and fruitful in illustration. And in all the relations of life he was a scholarly, refined, elegant gentleman. Broad in his sympathies and gentle in manner, he was yet manly, courageous and enterprising.

But as an educator and the administrator of a great university will his name abide in our annals. Dr. Mood was the Wilbur Fisk of Texas Methodism. He so unified the church in that State that a number of small, poorly patronized institutions were organized into the South-Western University, at Georgetown, under the joint supervision of the five Texas Conferences. That was a noble achievement, and could only have been accomplished by a masterful leader. That university is a grand monument to his memory, as it is also the crown of glory upon the brow of our "Lone Star" Methodism. He leaves a wife and a large family of children the legacy of a spotless character and well-spent life.

This from the Church Record, of Cokesbury, S. C., is good enough for wide publication. Too much Annual Conference inquiry has also eliminated many things.

One of the speakers at a recent political meeting in the State paid a fine tribute to Methodism without specially designing to do so. He was arguing the importance of a change in the administration of the federal government in order to institute an inquiry into the expenditure of the public moneys by the party now in power, and he illustrated his argument by relating an anecdote of a man of rather loose morals who withdrew from the Methodist Church because, said he, "these Methodists have too many inquiry meetings to suit me."

—And our old friend, the Rev. J. A. Hackett, of San Antonio, Texas, has joined the editor of the Baptist Record in a bit of discussion on the subject of infant baptism. His reference to the editor of the ADVOCATE was a rather lame attempt at facetiousness. But that was perfectly excusable, for the old gentleman was over on a second bridal trip. How funny an old bridegroom can be when he tries! His experience as a Methodist and the occasion of his going over may be satisfactory to him, but are of no force as an argument. The fact that Bro. Hackett, a young Methodist, became Elder Hackett, a Baptist preacher, is a matter of small consequence in the baptismal controversy. Unless his scholarship entitled him to bear authority and his logical discernment was phenomenal, his change of church relation is no more significant than that of other lads. These changes are occurring all the time to and from the Baptist and other churches. There is nothing peculiar in Bro. Hackett's case that we can see. All who change their party politics or church relations are alike radical. That they do to justify their course.

—Bishop Granbery will make his home in St. Louis after the first of January.

—Sir Moses Montefiore, the celebrated philanthropist, has 311 grandchildren.

—The Hon. Frederick T. Frelinghuysen has been elected President of the American Bible Society.

—The Alabama Advocate has resumed its original folio form, though somewhat enlarged. We like the return of the good old face.

—A large company of Northern Methodist missionaries bound for India, sailed from New York, November 1, in the steamship City of Rome.

—During last year 2,104 persons, mostly Roman Catholics, joined the Evangelical Church in Germany, being two hundred more than in the previous year.

—Wah Sin Lee, a Chinaman, who has made $15,000 at the laundry business, has applied for admission into Cornell University, to prepare himself for mission work in China.

—The Rev. H. D. Kimball, pastor of Moreau Street Church, left for North Louisiana last Monday, on a thrilling mission. We forward congratulations in anticipation.

—Benjamin Franklin left $5,000 to Boston, to be loaned in small sums to young married mechanics under twenty-five. The fund now amounts to more than $290,000, and is increasing at the rate of $10,000 a year.

—The Pittsburg Conference Historical Society has been presented with a silver-headed cane made of wood taken from the traveling carriage of Bishop Asbury. It was carried by the late Rev. James G. Sansom.

—The question of dividing the North Carolina Conference at the next General Conference is being discussed. Dr. Burkhead defines his position thus: "An equal division of the present territory, membership and property of the Conference or no division."

—One of the results of the revival in Japan is the maintenance of a four o'clock morning prayer-meeting at Abashiki, where there is a mission under the American board. The city has 17,000 inhabitants, and three of the largest liquor-dealers have attended the meetings.

—The secret of the great revival in Texas is stated by Dr. Bourland, in a letter to the Texas Christian Advocate. He says the preachers have ceased this year "preaching about success, falsely so-called, and have preached repentance, faith, regeneration and a holy life."

—Last Sunday was Centenary day at Algiers, Rev. J. L. Wright, pastor. Bishop Parker preached the sermon, and he struck fire. There was a good old Methodist time. The pastor was radiant and jubilant, even on Monday morning. The offering amounted to $108 75, which is very creditable to that little flock.

—King Humbert's kindly generosity and kindly philanthropy are still being displayed. He has requested the municipal authorities of Rome to devote to the relief of cholera sufferers in the several cities, the money he was intended to appropriate for preparing a grand welcome to the king on his return to the capital.

—The North-West Texas Conference, which met in Waco, November 6, was formerly welcomed to the city by the Mayor, Hon. J. S. Wilks. In reply Bishop McTyeire made a characteristic speech. He said that the second time he had ever been welcomed by a mayor. The first was at the Ecumenical Conference in London.

—Centenary Church, Richmond, Va., is to have a new pastor next year. The officials returned to the old paths, by agreeing upon a statement of their condition and needs, and then joined in prayer to God to send the right man. Our Richmond conferees say, "We hail this move as a good omen."

—The Rev. Jno. A. Ellis, president of the Jackson district, Mississippi Conference, and Miss Lizzie Ellis, of Amite City, La., were married on the 12th instant, the interesting ceremony being performed by the Rev. J. M. Pugh. We congratulate our special friend and brother on his rare good fortune. May blessing attend their itinerant career.

—The Board of Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church recently in session at Philadelphia makes a fine report for the year. The Board has added 138 churches, more than nine per cent, and forty-one more than the preceding year. Receipts from conference collections, $151,083 63; donations and loan fund account, $71,806 38; balance from last year, $104,594 70. Disbursements were as follows: Donations to churches, $141,295 60; loans to churches, $186,254 13.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending November 18, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	7 1/2	@
Ordinary	8 1/2	—
Good ordinary	9 1/2	—
Low middling	10 1/2	—
Middling	11 1/2	—
Good middling	12 1/2	—
Middling fair	13 1/2	—
Fair	14 1/2	—
Galveston middling	15 1/2	—
Mobile middling	16 1/2	—
St. Louis middling	17 1/2	—
SUGAR.
Inferior	34	—
Common	35	—
Good common	36	—
Fair	37	—
Good fair	38	—
Fully fair	39	—
Prime	40	—
Strictly Prime	41	—
Choice	42	—
Seconds	43	—
Yellow clarified	44	—
Gray clarified	45	—
Choice whites	46	—
Granulated	47	—
MOLASSES.
Syrup	27	—
Fair	28	—
Strictly Prime	29	—
Choice	30	—
Fancy	31	—
RICE.
Fancy	6 1/2	—
Choice	6 1/4	—
Prime	6 1/3	—
Good	6 1/2	—
Fair	6 1/4	—
Ordinary	6 1/3	—
Common	6 1/2	—
No. 2	6 1/4	—
No. 3	6 1/3	—
No. 4	6 1/2	—
FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	4 50	—
Minnesota patents	5 50	—
Extra fancy	4 75	—
White wheat patents	5 25	—
Choice	5 50	—
Fancy	4 05	—
CORN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal	3 25	—
Corn meal	2 50	—
Grits	3 25	—
Hominy	4 00	—
GRAIN, ETC.
CORN:
White	45	—
Yellow	50	—
Mixed	—	—
OATS:
Western	37	—
Texas rust-proof	43	—
BRAN:
1st cwt.	80	—
2nd cwt.	70	—
Choice	18 00	—
Prime	16 00	—
PROVISIONS.
MEAT:
Prime mess	14 50	—
Rumps	13 25	—
BACON:
Choice breakfast	12 1/2	—
Shoulders	—	—
Sides, clear	9 1/2	—
Sides, clear rib	9 1/2	—
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	13 1/2	—
DRY SALT MEAT:
Shoulders	6 1/2	—
Sides, clear	7 1/2	—
Sides, clear rib	7 1/2	—
FISH.
MACKEREL:
No. 1, in bbls.	14 25	—
Half bbls.	7 75	—
No. 2, in bbls.	13 75	—
Half bbls.	6 25	—
No. 3, in bbls.	13 25	—
Half bbls.	7 00	—
GROceries.
COFFEE:
Rio, choice	9 1/2	—
Cordova, choice	12 1/2	—
Java, choice	22	—
BUTTER:
Western dairy	18	—
New York dairy	20	—
Country	20	—
LARD:
Choice	8	—
Fair	8	—
TEAS:
Choice	50	—
Fair	25	—
OILS:
Coal, cases	18	—
Coal, bbls.	13	—
Cotton seed	50	—
Lard	80	—
VEGETABLES.
CABBAGES:
Western bulk	8	—
COUNTRY:
POTATOES:
Louisiana	1 35	—
Western	1 35	—
KROUT:
1 bbl.	4 00	—
ONIONS:
1 bbl.	1 40	—
TURNIPS:
1 bbl.	75	—
BALING STUFFS.
BAGGING:
1 b.	10 1/2	—
2 b.	11 1/2	—
BALING TWINE:
1 b.	1 25	—
TIES:
1 bundle	1 25	—
SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	4 00	—
Young	2 00	—
Chickens, South'n	3 00	—
Young	1 50	—
Turkeys, Southern	9 00	—
Eggs:
Western	25	—
Southern	25	—
WOOL:
Lake	17 1/2	—
Louisiana	15 1/2	—
Hops:
Greenaltd	7 1/2	—
Dry salted	7 1/2	—
STAVES:
Oak, kegs	50 00	—
Oak, barrels	75 00	—
Oak, casks	50 00	—
Oak, hogsheads	75 00	—
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00	—
Barrels	22 00	—
Half barrels	12 50	—
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00	—
Meat	22 50	—
Pure ground bone	42 00	—
Muriatic acid	8	—
Sulphuric acid	24	—
Bone black	24	—

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Diphtheria has broken out among the pupils of one of the public schools, and several fatal cases are already reported. Health department officials are considering the advisability of closing the school. The health commissioner declares that the disease is certainly epidemic in the city. One family is reported as having lost six children out of seven in the past two weeks through the disease.

EUFAULA, Ala., Nov. 12.—Long's Hotel block, containing a hotel upstairs and twelve stores underneath, was consumed by fire this morning. The fire broke out at 3 o'clock, and the entire block, with 200 bales of cotton, lying in the street fronting, were in ruins by 6. The guests at the hotel narrowly escaped with their lives, some being almost suffocated in the rooms by the smoke before awaking. Nearly all the property was destroyed. The aggregate loss is about $100,000. The fire is believed to have been the work of an incendiary.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The Washington monument to-day reached a greater height than that of any structure in the world, being 520 feet 10 inches above the floor of the monument. The next highest structure is the spire of the Cologne Cathedral, which towers 515 feet above the floor of the building. It is estimated that it will take but twenty-five working days to complete the monument, so there is no doubt of its being finished in time for dedication on Feb. 22.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The young English girl who was rescued yesterday from the Mormon elders on the steamship Arizona was to-day taken to the country seat of Conrad N. Jordan, vice president of the West Shore Railroad, at West Englewood, N. J. Mr. Jordan was a passenger on the Arizona and witnessed the girl's rescue. His wife became very much interested in her and resolved to make her household and give her an opportunity to become better educated. The girl's real name is Lovinia Bonn. She is eighteen years old. Mr. H. Burdett, of Brooklyn, a passenger on the steamer, said to-day: "I looked into the stateroom where the girl was rescued, and saw the Mormon elders who were among the captors, and saw actions that would not be tolerated by any decent person. It became a matter of protest among the passengers that young country girls should be subjected to such influences."

WACO, Tex., Nov. 12.—Rev. F. A. Mood, D. D., rector of the Southwestern University at Georgetown, Tex., the leading educational institution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Texas, died here to-day. He came to Waco last week to attend Conference, and was attacked by illness Saturday. Dr. Mood was fifty-seven years old. For many years he was editor of the Southern Christian Advocate at Charleston, S. C.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The Governor to-day transmitted to the State Board of Health a long communication from the National Board of Health on the subject of cholera. Immediately on its receipt the State Board of Health apprised the local health officers that the rapid advance of cholera in Europe threatens an invasion of this country, and asked the establishment and enforcement of quarantine.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 13.—A representative of the Times visited Olathe, Kan., to-day, and interviewed ex-Gov. St. John upon the political situation. Mr. St. John declared emphatically that he had no relations whatever with any political party in the campaign, except the Prohibition party; that he had made this first declaration upon the principle which he represented, and stated his intention of taking the field again after a few weeks rest, and continuing active efforts in behalf of the National Constitutional Prohibition, which he felt assured would be ultimately established.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 14.—The 100th anniversary of the consecration of Bishop Seabury was celebrated at Christ Church to-day. Bishop Williams presided. There was a large attendance of clergymen and others.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 14.—A meeting of leading Prohibitionists of the State was held this evening. It was decided to perfect and retain the State organization to place the agent in the field to organize a club in every part of the State to raise the necessary funds by an assessment on every member, and to keep up the campaign unceasingly for four years. T. C. Richmond was appointed as State agent. No compromise with any party such as high license, submission of constitutional amendments, etc., will be considered. Local clubs will hold regular monthly meetings, and every member will be pledged to support the Prohibition ticket at all times.

HEMPSTEAD, Texas, Nov. 14.—About 1:30 o'clock this morning the north-bound train on the Houston and Texas Central Railway was wrecked at Clear Creek Station about two miles south of this place, and as far as known ten people were killed outright and fifteen wounded more or less dangerously. An investigation by the railway authorities reveals the fact that the diabolical work was done by discharged employees who lighted a fire in the vicinity, which brought a freight train for the spalls it contained. Four cars left the bridge over Clear Creek, falling a distance of forty feet into twelve feet of water. Two cars were loaded with immigrants. Among the wounded was Rev. Isaac G. John, D. D., editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, of Galveston. He was on his way to preach the funeral sermon of Rev. F. A. Mood, of Georgetown, who was buried to-day.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Nov. 15.—An incendiary fire started in the heart of the business portion of the city, and the loss is over $200,000.

COLUMBIA, O., Nov. 15.—The official canvass of this State was completed to-day, showing a total vote of 75,173. Blaine 400,082, Cleveland 308,250, Butler 5170, St. John 11,203, Blaine's plurality, 31,802.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 15.—The official vote of the State for President, except two counties which are estimated, is as follows: Blaine 153,395, Cleveland 90,080, Butler 17,044, St. John 4273. Blaine's plurality, 63,315.

GOLDENRO, N. C., Nov. 16.—Twenty-five leading business houses in the business part of the city have been burned.

FOREIGN.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—In the Commons to-day the franchise bill passed third reading without a division.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—The police are making valiant efforts to put a stop to public gambling. They have just closed thirty-three gambling clubs.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—It is supposed that the cholera was introduced into Paris by an inmate of the Breitenfeld Asylum, who returned recently from a holiday excursion party. Four deaths occurred at the asylum. The mortality has been greater among males than among females. The asylum has 250 inmates. Troops are removing to barracks outside of the town. Jules Valles, in l'Opinion, urges a withdrawal in the streets to enable to healthier parts and occupy fashionable and deserted houses, and help themselves to wholesome food.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—In the House of Lords this afternoon the franchise bill passed its first reading. The bill will be read the second time on Tuesday next.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—St. Paul's Cathedral to-day was the scene of a stately service in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the consecration of Bishop Seabury, first American bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church. The service was conducted by the archbishop of Canterbury, assisted by the bishops of London, Winchester, Durham and Albany. After eulogizing the life and character of Bishop Seabury, the archbishop said: "The Church of America was humbled because it was loved by God. She was made to suffer long and to hunger in order to prove her strength. The successors of Bishop Seabury number 139 at the present time. From the trials of the church, lessons of patience and contentment were to be learned."

LONDON, Nov. 15.—The mammoth steamer Great Eastern will sail for New Orleans with European exhibits for the World's Exposition in the last week of November.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The latest letter received from Gen. Gouraud says: "My position is very secure; the troops are in excellent spirits." The General adds: "The British regularly receives copies of European newspapers, by which he learns of the movements of the troops." Gen. Gouraud warns the French consul general that the Mahdi possesses the cipher code of M. Herbin, killed with Gen. Stewart, and may make use of it.

DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

CENTURY NOTICE.—To the preachers in charge in the bounds of Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference: Dear brethren, let us not forget our Century work, and especially the motto: "A collection from every congregation." The opportunity of a hundred years is at hand. Let us improve it. Give every member of the church an opportunity of making a useful offering. Let us not fail in this matter. For, if we do, with Bishop Keener in the chair, we may expect to be called to account for it, when we go up to Aberdeen in November.

T. C. WIER,
Chairman District, Century Com.

The presiding elders of the North Mississippi Conference will please send the names in full of the several delegates elect to the ensuing Conference, and of their alternates.

BYADIA, Mississippi. JNO. BANCROFT.

Address all mail matter to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

Quarterly Conferences.

ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

MOBILE DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Grand Bay, at St. Elmo, Oct. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Mar. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Apr. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, May 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jun. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jul. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Aug. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Sep. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Oct. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Mar. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Apr. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, May 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jun. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jul. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Aug. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Sep. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Oct. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Nov. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Dec. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Feb. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Mar. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Apr. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, May 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jun. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Jul. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Aug. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, Sep. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27,

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 48.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1478.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—115 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Single copies and copies of the Methodist Preacher half price.

All teachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

REV. F. L. HILL.

REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.

REV. CHRISTIAN KEENER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. JAMES A. GODFREY.

REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT.

REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REV. W. T. RYLIAN, D. D.

REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THANKFULNESSES.

BY MISS ELLEN ISABELLA TUPPER.

For all that God in mercy sends;

For health and children, home and friends,

For comfort in the time of need,

For every kind word and deed,

For happy thoughts and holy talk,

For guidance in our daily walks,

For everything give thanks!

For beauty in this world of ours,

For verdant grass and lovely flowers,

For song of birds, for hum of bees,

For the refreshing summer breeze,

For hill and plain, for stream and wood,

For the great ocean's mighty flood,

For everything give thanks!

For the sweet sleep which comes with night,

For the refreshing morning's light,

For the bright sun that shines so high,

For the stars glittering in the sky,

For the moon that shines so bright,

For the dew that glistens in the night,

For the rain that falls so soft and true,

For the wind that blows so fresh and new,

For everything give thanks!

The Victory of Faith.

BY REV. J. B. A. ADAMS, D. D.

The Ethiopian can not change his skin, nor the leopard his spots.

Equally impossible it is for unregenerate man to do good, do good from unregenerate motives, do good because he is good and for the sake of

good.

This being scripturally and experimentally true, it appears that much of our pulpit effort, partaking largely of the character of pedantry, pedagogy and windy hortation, is worse than love's labor lost. Instruct the fish in pedestrian evolutions, the serpent in aerial flights! The legs, the wings, are lacking. Man lacks the good heart in order that from its good treasure good things should spring. Too many sermons suffer the supposition to arise in the minds of the hearers that a species of righteousness by works is possible. As if the Divine work of grace consisted solely in rendering supernatural aid when such aid was very necessary.

Men preach to make known God's will, and then encourage the hearers to comply with it.

This is the gospel of rationalism; a theology without the blood of Christ.

The law must be set forth in its full vigor, even with more emphasis than is customary; but great care must be taken that not the least hope is awakened in the hearer to be able wholly or in part to comply with the Divine demands. Under the preaching of the law, the eternal mutterings of sin, despair must ensue of ever attaining to a partial or perfect righteousness by works. This despair is the incipience of conviction of sin.

The sole purpose of preaching the law should be to convict the hearer of sin. When conviction of sin takes place repentance has already begun.

Now conversion is possible and is accomplished in prayer. Regeneration makes the sinner a new creature and enables him to lead a new life.

The heart, washed with the blood of the Lamb, is now a temple of God in which the Holy Ghost resides and presides.

This indwelling of the Holy Ghost,

this Divine life, this celestial illumination, is what we denominate living, saving faith. This faith ani-still, however vaguely, the supposition in some way or other satisfactorily to comply with it. It is not beheld that the law is but the schoolmaster to bring us to Christ. Rightly says St. Paul: "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whosoever of you are (suppositiously) justified by the law."

For the true believer the mere letter of the law is almost superfluous. More distinct than are the two tables of stone is it engraven in the heart. Constrained, impelled by the love of God, we gladly do what he requires of us. Could it be possible that one born of God, who knows and confesses that Christ died for his sins the fearful death on the cross, should continue to live in sin? For such an one to continue in sin would be tantamount to again nailing

Christ to the cross. Whosoever sins, wants to sin; is not of God and knows not of God. The apostle declares that whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin, i. e., can not possibly intend and design to sin. If the fountain is sweet, it follows as a matter of course that we follow

Christ's steps and have our conversation in heaven.

Thus Moses, by faith, renounced the pleasures of sin; this Paul counted "all things but loss and dung that he might win Christ. So in our day.

To lead a holy life will only then be possible when faith, omnipotent faith, fills our soul.

Have you faith? The devils believe, but continue in their devilry.

By faith we mean the Divine life, a new creation in Christ Jesus. Without this our attempt of a Christian life is a hopeless task, a useless hardship. Much rather not be a Christian at all than to be one without living faith. Be worldly, since without faith you are worldly.

If, on the other hand, we have put on Christ, living faith animating us,

we come out more than conquerors in the contest with sin, Satan and the world. In the dominion of faith sin has no dwelling-place.

Autumn in the West.

If you have never seen one of the long and lingering autumns of the West, "pompous with many colored leaves and the glow of Indian summers," you can form very little idea of the beauty of these "sweet October days." If Bryant had lived in the West, he would never have called these days melancholy. This year we have had a typical Western fall and the weather has been simply perfect. Crisp, sharp frosts at night have given a tonic to the atmosphere

each morning, which has made it a luxury to breathe. As the day wears on the sun lazily sends his beams through the hazy Indian summer air, making the temperature as balmy as spring. Thompson called the autumnal days of England "beautiful days," when

"Attemper'd sun arises,
Sweet beam'd, and shedding gold through lucid clouds
A pleasing calm."

How would he have characterized such days as we have had, for the past weeks, when the "sweet beam'd" sun has been playing hide-and-seek with the "fleecey mantle of the sky," and a golden glory has rested from dawn until the fading of the after glow upon hill and meadow, field and forest, sky and earth.

This fall, as if in sympathy with the matchless days, the forests have been more beautiful than ever. I used to think that surely nothing in all the world was so beautiful as our Southern forests in summer, and sometimes now I close my eyes and almost fancy that I can see

"The arrows of sunset Lodged in the tree-tops bright" around my boyhood's home while the air seems tremulous with the fragrance of magnolias and jessami-nes. But no artist ever painted or poet imagined so beautiful a landscape as an autumnal forest on some Western hillside.

Last week I rode for miles beside long stretches of such many colored woods, and I doubt if this side of paradise there be a more gorgeous picture. It was as if a thousand sunsets had fallen in fragments on the forest and set it all ablaze. The maples were all crowned with scarlet and gold, almost every leaf a different shade; the oaks were crimson; the green; while the ivy and fern added sugar trees yellow and crimson and their wealth of color, the whole looking as if there had been a resurrection of the brightest flowers of spring and summer to be hung upon the forest boughs as if to celebrate the pageant of a monarch. Some one has said that in entering the woods at this season one might think that he was walking down the aisles of some vast cathedral. "The sun shines through the foliage as through old tinted windows, suffusing the air with warmth and color and worship."

This glory, however, was but short lived this year. A week's display and it was all over. The bright colors of the leaves faded into brown and "dusk and dim," and then began to fall. The pageant faded as rapidly as it appeared, and now the meadows are all "brown and sere," while

"Heaped in the hollows of the grove, the autumn
leaves lie dead;
They lie to the eddylog gull, and to the rabbit's trail."

But, though the middle of November, our lovely weather continues, and the year "still smiles as it draws near its death."

M. D. CHAPMAN.

St. Joseph, Missouri.

A Trip to Sabine.

Leaving Mansfield, in company with our presiding elder, Rev. B. F.

Alexander, on the morning of October 31, I made my first visit to Sabine parish. Our road lay through the battlefields of Mansfield and Pleasant Hill, and as my travelling companion was present in both in his capacity of chaplain of the Twenty-Eighth Louisiana Regiment,

I had an opportunity of learning the particulars of those interesting engagements on the very grounds where they were fought. Nothing now marks the spot or distinguishes it from the surrounding scenery, all the open land that there was being now overgrown with young pines.

On the site of the second battle I found the home of Bro. Parvin, pastor of Pleasant Hill church, and there we dined with his wife and the venerable Mrs. John S. Childress and her daughter. In the afternoon we plunged into the almost unbroken forests of Sabine parish, and here I was surprised to find large bodies of good lands offering great inducements to settlers. The country is almost new, and land is extremely cheap. The few settlements made are of industrious white people, and anybody wishing a home in a new country would do well to examine this parish. I would especially recommend the neighborhood of

Fort Jessup, or rather of New Hope

Church, where our good brother,

Rev. J. M. Franklin, owns a productive farm. You can buy land there that will make one thousand pounds of cotton at two or three dollars per acre and have a good school and church at your door.

Our first quarterly meeting was held at an old church known as

Bayou Seale, where Bro. A. had preached many years ago. The house was far too small for the congregation, having been built some thirty or forty years before, and at the suggestion of the writer an impromptu effort was made to raise the money for a new house to commemorate the hundredth year of Methodism.

About five hundred dollars was subscribed, and I have the promise of the pastor of an invitation to dedicate it some time next year. So you may put down in your list of centenennial contributions five hundred dollars from Sabine circuit, Rev. J. M.

Franklin, pastor. We spent two nights with thrifty farmers in the neighborhood and found that by industry and economy a man may soon accumulate wealth in this part of Louisiana. Both these gentlemen make cotton, but one of them adds a steam mill and gin to his business, and the other raises large numbers of cattle and hogs.

On Monday we visited Manny and were hospitably entertained by the Hon. J. Fisher Smith, one of the patrons of this college. There we met the good Sister Davidson, of

New Orleans, who has contributed so largely to the building of the Louisiana Avenue Church. Manny was her former home, and the church there also acknowledges her benefactions. From Mr. Smith we learned that his parish would probably vote for prohibition at the election which has since taken place, and, sure enough, Sabine has voted to expel the demon alcohol from its limits by nearly two to one. Much praise is due to our worthy brother, E. F.

Presley, for this result; his paper having been for a long time a warm advocate of temperance. Natchitoches parish was to have voted on the same question at the same time, but the Police Jury postponed the day, fearing some complications with the presidential contest. Should this parish also adopt prohibition

there will be no whisky sold in four adjoining parishes. Rapides and

Grant having already decreed prohibition. In one locality which we passed in Sabine the women turned out and literally burned a new house built for a saloon. They did it in open day, and will never be prosecuted for it. If this was an error it certainly leaned to virtue's side.

Monday night was spent with Bro.

Franklin's family, where we had all the good cheer that one preacher knows so well how to give another.

Our brief visits to his and Bro. Parvin's have convinced us that there is yet no danger of the illuacy being starved out in the Louisiana Conference.

F. M. GRACE.

Centennial Conference.

The following information is furnished for the convenience of delegates and visitors to the "Centennial Conference" of American Methodism, which will convene in the city of Baltimore on the ninth and continue in session until the sixteenth of December next:

RAILROAD RATES.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad and connections, including the Pittsburg and Connellsville, the Valley and Metropolitan branches; the Pennsylvania railroad, including the Northern Central, Balt more and Potomac, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore; the Western Maryland railroad; the Shenandoah Valley railroad; the East Tennessee,

Virginia and Georgia railroad and the Richmond and Danville railroad, with connections, including the Virginia Midland and the Chesapeake and Ohio, will issue round trip tickets to and from Baltimore, at all stations on their lines, at the rate of two cents per mile each way, except that both the B. & O. and R. & P.

will charge $1.65 for the round trip from Washington City. Tickets at these rates will be sold both to the delegates and all visitors to the Conference, but only upon "orders."

The "trunk lines" will transport passengers from the general competing points, such as New York,

Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, etc., to Baltimore for one full fare, and return them for one-third of the lowest unlimited fares. These rates can also be had by all delegates and visitors, but only on presenting at their place of departure "certificates."

The above-named "orders" and

"certificates" are in charge only of the chairman of Committee on Transportation, who will, in due time, mail one to each accredited delegate and official visitor. All other persons wishing to visit the Conference may get them by applying to him, or any delegate may order enough sent himself to supply friends.

These tickets will be good from the fifth of December, and for leaving

Baltimore up to the twenty-second of same month, and their privileges are granted by all the principal lines east of the Mississippi, except New England. Information concerning the

New England roads and the lines west of the Mississippi will be given later. Outside these bounds delegates will have to make private terms in order to reach the nearest

"trunk line" city, and for this purpose the "certificates" to be furnished may aid them.

All communications concerning transportation should be addressed to

Mr. J. Frank Supplee, Chairman

Committee on Transportation, P. O.

Box 632.

ENTERTAINMENT.

All delegates and official visitors will be entertained by Methodist families, and each one will, in due time, receive by mail at his address a card, giving name and residence of his host, and serving as a letter of introduction, so that, on arriving in this city, he may proceed at once to his home. The families will also be informed of their guests. Delegates are requested to notify their hosts of the time they expect to arrive.

Visitors to the Conference can get accommodation at greatly reduced rates at the principal hotels. Barnum's and the Carrollton will charge

$2.50; the Etna House, $2; and the

Howard and Mansion House, $1.50, and the Claremont, $1, per diem.

Lower rates will be made by the week at private boarding-houses, a list of which may be seen by applying to the undersigned, to whom also should be addressed all communications pertaining to entertainment.

L. T. Wideman, Chairman of Committee on Homes, 103 W. Baltimore street.

MISCELLANEOUS MATTERS.

A lunch will be served daily in the parlors of Mt. Vernon Place

Church to those delegates whose homes may be at a great distance from the church.

A paper called the Daily Methodist will be issued each morning of the Conference, by the Rev. W. K.

Boyle, editor of the Episcopal Methodist. It will contain full report of all proceedings, and the text of all papers read or addresses delivered.

Those who have been appointed to speak are requested to furnish him advance copies of their papers. The subscription will be fifty cents.

The Quarterly Review—Important Notice.

The editor of the Quarterly Review,

Methodist Episcopal Church, South, makes this statement and appeal to subscribers and to the public.

This organ of the church, as to its higher literature, is offered hereafter at the very low price of $2.50 per annum, always cash in advance. It can not be safely published on any other plan—a fact proven by six years of trial. This is a reduction on former rate of fifty cents a year. No periodical of its rank is printed in the wide world cheaper than this;

and it is first-class in every regard.

We appeal to subscribers in arrears to remit; and we also solicit renewals at once. Settlements for the past are to be on the rate of $3—payments for 1885 are to be $2.50 for the year. A single number will cost seventy-five cents.

It is very essential for the editor to hear at once from subscribers, that he may know how many copies to print. Those who delay may find themselves too late. We respectfully appeal to all subscribers, new or old, to notify us of any changes in post-offices.

Our loss by failure to do this has been very great. Postal cards are cheap. If any preacher desires the Review for 1885, and has not the cash, he may send a due bill for $3 on postal card, payable in twelve months—this will be considered equivalent to cash. We greatly prefer the lower cash rate. An average of fifty subscribers from a Conference would place the Quarterly on a firm basis—there ought to be at least one hundred subscribers from all the larger Conferences. The Review is not simply a preachers' periodical; it is devoted to the higher order of literature in every department. It is read by cultivated men and women in every vocation.

We have a surplus of the October issue yet on hand, containing two articles on Bishop Pierce—one by the editor, the other by Dr. Lipscomb.

This number may be had separately for seventy-five cents. A response to this appeal is invited; let us hear without delay.

J. W. HINTON, Editor.

Dr. Lafferty pays the following graphic and eloquent tribute to Bishop Keener at the Virginia Conference:

Bishop Keener has conducted the business with speed and alid axes;

Not a wheel has touched a rock

"big as a partridge egg." There has not been a quiver in the springs.

In turning from one subject to another, a text of driving, he didn't let a tire scrape against the body.

The gentle wisdom and firm courtesy of dear George Pierce have come upon the brusque man of affairs from Louisiana. He is now at his best, and this best is the maximum of moderating assemblies. On yesterday he preached. I speak words of sobriety. In saying, neither

Bishop Keener himself, nor any other man, nor not even Bro. Alph.

Wilson nor our Walker, of Westmoreland, can pile up in an hour such a heap of granite blocks of thought. It was original material.

Sermons are often built like the palaces of the Cardinal in Rome, by pulling apart the masonry of the Coliseum—the workmanship of the dead and giant builders. In Bro.

Keener's discourse there was the fresh groove of his own steel drill on the pieces. He did his own quarrying. Here and there were beads of beauty that revealed a certain poetical fancy that all along has ornamented his stern work as a swamp pioneer among the bayous, editor and Bishop. He leaves us, honored and loved by the entire Conference.

Memoir of Dr. Watkins.

MR. EDITOR: After many vexations and unavoidable delays, the manuscript of the biographical sketch of the Rev. Dr. W. H. Watkins, accompanying many of his best sermons, has been completed for the press. I hazard nothing in saying that many of these sermons will rank among the best in our language. Before concluding the contract with the publishers I would like to hear from the brethren of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences as to how many copies each one would purchase for himself and others, so that I may know how large an edition to order. The book will be sold at about $1.25 per copy

—any profits to go to the relief of the superannuated preachers and widows of the Mississippi Conference.

Concerning my part of the work, I would say that my sketch discloses none of the features of Dr. Watkins' character. I have endeavored to present a faithful portrait of the man and the preacher. Besides the sketch from my own pen there are the tributes from Bishop Parker and

Dr. C. K. Marshall, heretofore published, and one from Rev. Dr. John

Hunter, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Jackson, Miss. Twenty-eight sermons and eight or ten miscellaneous essays are also comprised in the book. One high in literary circle to whom the MS. has been submitted writes: "I would give your book a ready, frank acceptance.

It is worthy of it."

T. L. NELLEN.

To the Preachers of the Louisiana

Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: I call your attention to Paragraph 63, Answer 17, of the Discipline. The Joint Board of Finance must have the information, which this law makes it your duty to give, in order to a judicious distribution of its funds.

C. W. CARTER,

Chairman.

Rev. D. L. Cogdell, writing from

Ripley, North Mississippi Conference, makes a final report as follows.

The statute of limitation compels his

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1884.

THANKSGIVING HYMN.

BY REV. CHARLES W. HUNTER.

Our heavenly Father, we offer our thanks to thee
on this glad day;
With grateful hearts we sing
Thy love and grace to bring
To us, O Lord, our King.

Another year has passed,
And still thy mercies last;
Thou loved us in the past,
To thee our hearts shall raise
Their voices in praise,
Nor, in all future days,
Thy love forget.

Our hearts, O Lord, our King,
Offered to thee in love,
And when life's work is o'er,
Our souls to thee shall soar;
We'll praise thee evermore,
At home, in heaven.

—Central Christian Advocate.

Texas Letter.

In pursuance of a long-cherished design your correspondent, on October 30, paid a visit to San Antonio. It was the occasion of the assembling of the West Texas Annual Conference, which fact added a new interest to my stay of several days. Bishop McFeyre was in the chair, this being the first in his round of Texas Conferences. The reports from the various charges showed here and conscientious work on every hand. Although never having seen this notable pioneer body before, I yet did not feel wholly a stranger, for on different occasions fortune had thrown me in the way of a goodly number of its members. Among these was first of all Bro. H. S. Thrall, presiding elder of the San Antonio district, the historian of Texas and Texas Methodism, and, perhaps, now the most prominent man in the church in the Lone Star commonwealth; and the man whom Bishop Wilson calls, in his "Book on Missions," "the indomitable frontiersman." Then came the redoubtable Potter—"Potter, the fighting parson of the Texas frontier." That is the way it is written in a book, published at Nashville, called the "Life of W. H. Potter," and one has only to look at the face of those eyes, the rugged countenance, with its flint-like features, and hear the formidable sound of that voice to believe it all true. But Potter is no longer the fighting parson. The occasion and the necessity have gone with the past of this now peaceful and beautiful land, and so has the belligerent attitude of the frontier preacher. When you know Potter you know a child—a child of God. Then I met that sterling layman and friend of my young boyhood, Prof. V. M. West, of Uvalde, formerly of Waynesboro, Miss. How the memories of other days came up in both our minds and leaped in words to our lips as we went over the half-forgotten past!

I had here also the pleasure to meet for the first time with our native Mexican brethren. They have grown to be a considerable army, stalwart in faith as well as physique. With a few exceptions, they can all speak English; but with what intensity and concern they entered into all the work of the Conference, and how our souls flowed together in the holy worship of the sanctuary! Among those who spoke fluently the English tongue was Alejo Rodriguez, presiding elder of the Meculova, Mexican district. He seems to be a full-blooded Castilian, and a handsome and more polished gentleman one seldom sees, and, best of all, the evidences of a renewed heart and a godly life are an epistle known and read of all. A feature of the Conference was an address delivered on missionary night by a native preacher whose name I did not catch. Though in an unknown tongue, it thrilled me with its pathos and fervor, and the dulcet resonance of that Castilian speech quivered over the assembled multitude like the changes of far-off music. It was a scene never to be forgotten. I went away with grander thoughts of humankind and its hopes and more devout thankfulness to God than I had ever known before. This noble band of workers is leading the van of a glorious conquest of Mexico. One day—and that day is not far distant—they shall meet their brethren coming up from the city of the Montezumas with the shout of salvation, and priest-ridden Mexico shall know herself forever freed from papal bondage. Perhaps to no man is due more honor for the success and progress of this work than to the present superintendent of our Border Mission, the Rev. A. H. Sutherland. The name of "Alex." Sutherland will be a watchword in evangelized Mexico as long as the fire of love burns in the hearts of its children rescued from ignorance and spiritual bondage.

Bishop McFeyre's sermon, on Sunday, was characteristic. You, Mr. Editor, know what that means. "The fullness of the blessing of the gospel of Christ" was text and theme. How infinite that fullness! How nameless those blessings! The peroration was a masterpiece. It will stir many a preacher's heart to endurance and change many a hard lot the "Philippe" of success the coming year.

But I want to tell your readers something about this unique and beautiful city nestled among the prairies of the Western land. I said it was an ancient city. That is hardly the case except with reference to the site and name. The old city is well nigh gone. Here and there you may see an adobe, sandwiched between modern cottages or imposing fronts and pretentious mansions, landmarks of Spanish days. Only one thing makes the city peculiar. That is the vast number of cottages and one-story houses; but they are nearly all modern and tastefully built. The native population is melting away. A few years ago it was nearly four-fifths; now, in a population of thirty thousand people, it does not number above four or five thousand. Skilled labor has driven them to the rural districts and villages or, more likely, beyond the Rio Grande. But San Antonio is still Spanish in habit, thought and the abandonment of its populace. The Sabbath is hardly known. The revelries and dissipation distinctly Mexican prevail. Although the original population is disappearing, traces of Spanish blood are everywhere. Almost everywhere one turns they see faces in which the rich, warm blood of the Castilian shows itself. These are among the highest and most respectable families. But they are Americans in every essential matter. Catholicism still holds a royal sway in the city. Churches and chapels are everywhere. The great cathedral, about two hundred years old, faces the main plaza of the city. It is a massive building—plain outside, but impoaling within. In company with Dr. Bourland, of the South-western University, I witnessed the celebration of high mass on Sunday morning. It was "All Souls' Day." The services were marked by pomp and solemn ceremony, and I suppose there is no place in America where they take on so distinctively a Latin character as here. The responses in Spanish, the thousands of upturned awarthy faces, and the chanting of voices, and the long trains of nuns and sisters naturally carry one back to times when Spain held the power of Rome and, at her will, terrified with threats or awed with dazzling pagantry the Catholic world.

We went, of course, to see the Alamo. There is no spot in the new world more sacred to patriotism. Sebastopol does not mean more than the Alamo. One is almost necessarily disappointed in the dimensions of this landmark. It is one of the chain of churches stretching for many miles along the San Antonio river, and known as the "missions." It is probably two hundred years old, is built of stone and adobe, is two stories high, and in many places the walls are five feet in thickness. It was evidently built for the two-fold purpose of worship and defense. The story of the Alamo is too well known to need even an outline. I walked through the interior of the building, dark and mouldy. Along the sides are lines of low, dark cloisters in which, in the long ago, cowed monks on these cold grey stones, where I stood with changing sensations, knelt and counted their beads by the light of a flickering taper. On the second floor of the building, somewhat to the left, is a room, larger, higher and better ventilated than the common cloister. This, I take it, was the sacristy, or cloister, of the superior, or abbot, of the order owning the church. Connecting with these is a long, low wing, one story high, built adobe, meant for cloisters and granaries. This wing has been built over, by permission of the former owners of the property, and is occupied as a wholesale whisky establishment (3). This is the Alamo. I went and stood out the spot where Crockett and his comrades are said to have fallen, and saw where deep-formed scars had been made in the sides of the hoary fortress by the weapons and missiles of the Mexicans. The Alamo has recently been purchased by the State government, and will hereafter be properly cared for and kept. In the heart of a busy city one enters the Alamo, and is lost to the sights and sounds of the present and is beckoned away by scenes and memories of the heroic past.

In company with Capt. Stevens, ex-American consul at St. Petersburg, and whose guest I was, I drove out to see the missions on the lower San Antonio river. They are antique and curious buildings, scattered for many miles along this beautiful stream. They are all much larger and several of a much earlier date than the Alamo. Many theories have been advanced to account for their erection. Some say that the converted Indians and the native Catholics in their zeal, without knowledge of arts or letters, erected them. This is not reasonable, as they are marvels of architecture, and the sculpture and carvings show the hand of a master. The most probable theory is that they were built by the papal propaganda in the hope that by pomp and magnificence the Indian tribes might be won to Christianity. They are mostly in ruins now. We had time to visit two: The Mission San Jose and the Mission of the Immaculate Conception (Concepcion)—the latter five and the former seven miles from the city. The Mission Concepcion is in a state of almost perfect preservation, even the frescoes and etchings on the walls and arched ceiling remaining as perfect as when traced by the artist's hand. The windows, door-ways and cornices are elaborately set about with molding and carvings, deep and rich, suggesting the taste of the Italian renaissance rather than the instinct of the half-civilized denizen of the Americas. At the time of our visit a silent and solemn mass was being celebrated. There was no audience, and the two or three priests officiating were lost behind the long rows of colonnades, while the flickering tapers upon the time-worn altars alone told that the souls of those who once crowded into the hoary structure were being remembered that day. The walls of these buildings, like those of the Alamo, are of immense thickness, while the thatched roofs are simply a layer of earth from three to four feet deep resting in a concrete basin. At the San Jose Mission I saw upon this roof an oak tree growing which had attained to the height of some four or five feet. All these churches have low wings of cloisters going off in irregular sections with granaries and storehouses attached—all in a high state of preservation, although it is likely a cowed head has not passed beneath their low door-ways for more than a century.

The Mission San Jose is in ruins. It was originally the largest and most elaborately finished of the whole cluster. Its carvings and statuary were peculiarly rich and fine. Above the main entrance, or door-way, is a notable group. One of the figures is decapitated. I take it that they were meant to represent the Virgin, Christ and his reputed father, Joseph, in whose honor the mission was built. To contemplate one of these immense piles of stone and earth and the labor necessary to complete them is simply appalling. Twenty years could scarcely have sufficed under primitive conditions to do the work. There are certainly no relics elsewhere in the American republic comparable to these. But reckless and almost sacrilegious hands are tearing away the ornaments and delicate carvings of these ancient temples. They are nearly in the hands of the Catholic Church. But the weakening power of Catholicism renders it unable to afford adequate protection. An effort will likely be made by the patriotic citizens of San Antonio to organize a "mission association" to protect and preserve these interesting remains.

But I have taken up enough of your space already. Many good wishes for the ADVOCATE and kind greetings to the brethren in Mississippi.

NOVEMBER 12, 1884.

H. M. DUNN.

An Open Letter to You.

"Love thy neighbor as thyself" is the foundation of, at least, the corner-stone of temperance work—of Woman's Christian Temperance Union work. It is the true principle of Christ working in the hearts of his followers. To love our fellow-man and work for his welfare and happiness, to bring peace and purity and plenty to homes and hearts made desolate by drink, disease, despair and death, is the aim of our Woman's Christian Temperance Union. We desire to "keep unspotted from the world and to live near to him who is the Savior of men, the Prince of Peace."

Our motto, "For God and home and native land," means a great deal. It means love, work, sacrifice, trial, sorrow, courage and forbearance; but we glory in tribulation also, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience, experience, and experience, hope. God calls upon his followers to endure for the sake of others. The cry of suffering humanity is heard all around us. Mothers are weeping for profligate sons; wives are suffering heart torments, and little children in their innocence are enduring pangs of hunger, cold and heat. A cloud of sorrow is over the land, shutting out the beautiful sunlight of God's love from many homes, covering, as with a pall, the lives of many. Lord Bacon has said: "All the crimes on the earth do not destroy so many of the human race nor alienate so much property as drunkenness." As Christians we must arise and do all in our power to do away with this evil, this sin of our land. Apathy and neglect are criminal. An earnest writer says: "Every lawful means of removing this anti-Christian curse ought immediately to be adopted and earnestly prosecuted by every sincere follower of the Lord Jesus Christ. Personal sacrifice, if required, should be brought to bear on this all-important question. The important duty of example among Christians carries with it immense responsibility."

This is written for the purpose of asking all good people to help us in our temperance work. Will not all—philanthropists and patriots, Christ's disciples and God's ministers—add us of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in raising aloft the standard which bears upon its snowy folds the heart-stirring, all-peace and love-embracing words, "For God and home and native land"? We feel assured of the sympathy of many, but we ask for active workers in this branch of the Lord's work. We ask you to agitate continually the temperance and prohibition question. We ask you to give yourself to the cause.

"God's love hath wealth in us unheaped—Only by giving it is repaid.
The body withers and the mind,
If pent up by a selfish shield.
Give time, give love, and give thyself;
Give tears, give love—yes give thyself;
Give, give, give, be always giving—
He alone who gives is living."

Will not the ministers of our land, who are the world's exemplars, call together interested ones and organize a "Woman's Christian Temperance Union" wherever they can and help them to aggressive work? By vigorous united effort on our part, by labor, earnestness and well-timed, we may soon bring the blessing of prohibition to our country. I believe with him who says, "The crowning glory of the temperance reform is seen in removing the most powerful obstacles in the way of the gospel and preparing the mind for the reception of the truth."

Please write to me for constitution and by-laws of our Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and for any particulars as to manner of organizing.

Yours in gospel bonds,
MRS. MARY J. READ GOODALE,
Cor. Sec. La. W. C. T. U.
BATON ROUGE, LA., Nov. 13, 1884.

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of Rev. Geo. Shaeffer.

(Continued.)

About this time I wrote the following views on Christian consistency: Consistency is an important trait in the character of a Christian, and is absolutely essential to his influence upon others. That man whose conduct gives the lie to his profession may be courted and flattered for his patronage and influence; but he can not possess the confidence of his acquaintances, and only confirms the wicked in their unbelief and disregard for the claims of religion.

There is a secret diabolism in the reality of religion in the hearts of all sinners; they are tempted to doubt the sincerity of the religious world, and nothing tends so powerfully to rivet this doubt as the inconsistency of professing Christians. Sinners are constantly shielding themselves behind the faults and improprieties of the church, and it is exceedingly difficult to dislodge them from this entrenchment. Satan, doubtless, takes advantage of this disposition, and magnifies the faults of Christians and makes Christianity appear hateful in their estimation.

The Christian should be consistent in his attention to the means of grace. He professes to believe that religion is superior to "everything else, that it alone can give happiness, and that it is his privilege to grow in grace and in the knowledge of Christ. He professes to regard holiness as essential to happiness and heaven. He professes to believe that God has instituted the means of grace as the medium of being made and kept holy, and Methodists profess to believe their salvation is contingent upon perseverance to the end, and this can not be done without attention to the means of grace. What must be thought then of the sincerity of one who neglects the means of grace, who suffers worldly interests to crowd out religious duties? No means of making or saving a dollar, and yet suffers the family altar to be neglected, the closet to be forsaken, the Bible unread, the house of worship, the class and prayer meetings to be unattended! His conduct gives the lie to his profession, and even the little children regard him a hypocrite. "Pa, is your God dead?" said a little boy, four or five years old, to his father one day. "No, child; what makes you ask that question?" "Because you used to pray to your God, but you do not do it now." A man who really appreciates holiness will use the means of attaining it.

In the government of his passions the Christian should be consistent. Christianity condemns sinful tempers, and the professor of religion says, by that profession, that he will strive to subdue his nature. If he indulges in sinful tempers, such as anger, envy, pride, etc., he acts inconsistently, and the world concludes that religion is nothing but a name, and Christians no better than others. If men really believed that the indulgence in sinful tempers was destructive to piety and calculated to grieve the Holy Spirit, they would not rest until they had got the ascendancy over them. It is greatly to be feared that much of the piety of the present day is spurious. It is not deep and thorough, and only suffices to quiet the conscience and lay its possessors into a state of carnal security. If our religion does not save us from sin it will never save us from hell. The indulgence in sinful tempers operates against our religious influence. A child once asked his mother, "Mother, will grandpa be in heaven?" "Yes, my child; I hope he will." "Well, said he, 'I do not want to go there.' 'Why?' 'Because grandpa would go much. I do not want to go there if he goes.'"

The Christian should show his consistency by giving precedence to his spiritual—interests. Christianity teaches men to use this world as not abusing it, seeing the fashion of it is passing away. To count all things, but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ. To live to him who died for us and rose again and glorify God in our bodies and spirits which are his. But many seem by their conduct to make religion a secondary matter. If it is convenient they will go to church, they will serve God; but if sacrifices are required they can not make them. The right hand or the right leg must not be parted with. We always give attention to things in proportion to their importance in our estimation. If we regard religion as the one thing needful, its interests should not be compromised to the world.

Zeal for the salvation of sinners and the spread of the gospel should characterize the Christian. One who professes to believe that his friends are in danger of eternal torment should manifest great anxiety for their salvation. Indifference on the part of Christians leads sinners to disbelieve that they are in danger; they know their friends would not be indifferent if their persons or property were in danger, and they can not think they would be unconcerned when their eternal destiny is at stake. Common benevolence would lead us to feel for a nature starving for food, and we would be ready to contribute to their relief, but we too often feel indifferent while whole nations are perishing for the bread of life, and will do nothing to aid in sending them the gospel. How inconsistent!

Again, Christians should be examples of integrity and truth, and should never deviate from the path of rectitude. They should not accommodate themselves to the false standard of the world, but make the word of God their standard and act independently. They are not to be governed by the world, but he lights in the world. What must be thought of men professing godliness who can not be trusted, whose word is not considered good for the smallest matter, who are tricky and uncertain? Such professors are a stumbling block to sinners, and do more to establish infidelity than all the writings of infidels.

It requires nice discrimination sometimes to determine the path of duty, but the Christian who studies his Bible and preserves the spirit of piety will be assisted by the Holy Spirit, and will not go far astray. We should regulate our lives on Christian principles, and firmly rely upon the truth of God like Abraham, not staggering at the promise through unbelief, but believing that what God has promised he is able also to perform.

(To be continued.)

"The Lost Key Found."

The above is the title of an essay of eighty small pages in length, on the subject of baptism, by the Rev. J. W. Ellison, of the Mississippi Conference. It is a judgment upon all the thinking I am able to invest in the subject that far more than nine-tenths of all the books and essays put forth by anti-immersionists on this subject are not only worthless, but far worse than worthless. They entangle smooth things and mystify plain ones. My own experience in this almost illimitable field of religious debate and elaboration is small. I never preached a sermon on the subject. Thirty or more years ago my presiding elder and some other brethren urged me to write an essay on the subject. I did so. Its extensive sale by the Publishing House up to the present day convinces me that the church is reasonably satisfied with it. I never had a cent of pecuniary interest in my "Baptismal Demonstration." Nevertheless, in my larger arguments on ecclesiastical science the general subject of the social sacrament is alluded to in a variety of ways and shapes.

Bro. Ellison desires to know, and wishes the public to know, my opinion of his essay; and he knows, or ought to know, that I have no duty or no due commendation for living people. That subject is sufficiently disgraced by others. The essay is one of the very best I have seen. It is not a ding-dong monology of repetitions. It has brains in it. It will be read with profit. It has the rare quality of having been written by its author. It is not compiled.

In the first place the author recognizes the great and greatly neglected doctrine that Christ did not come into social life to introduce a new religion, new doctrines or new principles of dispensing grace and mercy. He did not found institutions or institute new measures, dismantling old ones. He came, rather, to keep, to follow, to maintain, to fulfill the then written laws of the Scripture, as he plainly tells us. He abolished nothing; he ignored or set aside nothing.

So, baptism was not instituted by Christ. It was by no means a new and unknown thing in his day. As a sign or symbol of justification it dates back nobody knows where. It is well known that water is the only thing that cleanses the skin or anything else, indeed, of physical impurity. So, among a people who taught as largely, as did the Jews, by symbolic representation, water would, of course, be used to represent moral cleansing. This was as well known to John the Baptist as to us now. The notion, therefore, that baptism was instituted then and there must be exploded. This is well done in the essay before us.

Of the variety of ways and occasions of this religious washing we are by no means well informed. Most likely there was no strict and uniform rule on the subject always in vogue in every place. Immersion was out of the question. There was great variety of these religious washings, and known under a great variety of names and on various religious occasions. John's baptism did not take people into the church; he baptized those already in.

Now, the social sacrament—that is, the obligation to be religious, which refers to our fellow-man—the church must, of course, continue, for there can be no religion without it; but the mode of administering it must be changed. To continue it would be absurd, in that it would deny that Christ had come and suffered. So Christ applied this symbolic washing to this purpose. Its typical uses, of course, discontinued.

This subject looks to me so exceedingly simple, so rational, so biblical and so plain that it is hard to see room for difference of belief about it. The essay before us is a valuable contribution to that class of literature, and ought, and likely will, tend strongly to allay discussion on that subject.

A. ABBY.

Yazoo City, Mississippi.

From the Work.

DARTMOUTH, LA.

The one dozen of us who in this parish voted for St. John and Daniel are well pleased with the very handsome increase in the nation over the prohibition vote of four years ago. We are encouraged to believe that in 1888 and 1892 many thousands more will rally to our white banner, and that the American people, in the meantime fighting it in detail in the counties and States, will then forever prohibit the diabolic traffic in the liquid fire. Our Police Jury have acceded to the petition to that end of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and have fixed on Wednesday, December 31, as the day when the voters of Morehouse parish shall decide for or against license. We beseech the prayers of all temperance friends and urge upon every reader of your paper who lives in our parish to work as well as pray for a prohibition victory in our midst on the last day of 1884.

NOVEMBER 14, 1884.

COFFEYVILLE, MISS.

Mr. Editor: I will send you a few lines concerning the progress we have made on the Coffeyville circuit during this year. Our meetings resulted in a revival of the church in places, and about a dozen conversions and accessions. Collectors ordered by the Annual Conference will not be paid in full, but much more has been collected on them than was collected last year, or, perhaps, for several years in the past. This can not be properly appreciated unless we take into consideration the fact that the financial condition of our people is alarming. The cotton crops, both last year and this, have been failures. Our people are mostly small farmers, yet in the bounds of this circuit were lost this year about seventy-five thousand dollars' worth of mules and horses killed by the gnats. The financial condition of the people has not been so distressing since the war. The valuable services of Revs. T. J. Newell, of the Grand College Institute, T. Y. Ramsey, of Grenada, J. Ritchie, of Batesville, and K. A. Jones, of Water Valley, as well as our local preachers, I take this opportunity to acknowledge with gratitude. Yours truly,

NOVEMBER 13, 1884.

J. M. HYGIN.

ALABAMA.

Mr. Editor: Possibly a short letter from me, a furloughed member of the Alabama Conference, will be of interest to some of your readers. My ministerial labors have been this year along the Air Line railroad from twenty to thirty-five miles from Atsuta. This has been a year of wonderful prosperity to the church in all this country. We have never before passed through so many gracious revivals, and have never seen such manifestations of divine power. Each church has been blessed with a revival of unusual extent and depth. Salvation, like a mighty flood, has swept almost this entire country. I have had appointments in three circuits. We are now holding our fourth Quarterly Conference for these circuits, of which the reports of the preachers show that there have been about half as many accessions as there were members at the beginning of the year, and hundreds claim pure hearts through the blood of Christ. It is a notable fact that those who were formerly the most religious and best members were the first to claim and profess holiness to the honor and glory of God. The presiding elder, and most of the preachers in this (Gainesville) district, claim this rich, glorious blessing. The revival of this old Methodist Bible doctrine is working a mighty reformation in this country. May Methodists, it need be, take a new departure and "spread scriptural holiness over these lands!"

W. M. WINS.

COMO, MISS.

At the rounding up of my second year's labors in Como and Fredonia charge I have a few items to represent that might be of interest to some of the readers of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. Many valuable members have been added to both our churches this year as a result of most glorious revivals of religion. Our meeting in Como, of recent date, continued each night for nearly four weeks, having commenced during our quarterly meeting, two weeks earlier than projected services had been expected. But we saw the spirit of God was upon the people and did not wait for our set time.

On Sunday night, at the close of a very earnest sermon by our presiding elder, Rev. C. N. Torry, an invitation for penitents was extended, which was responded to by a very influential Roman Catholic young lady prospect forward and kneeling at the altar for prayer, thus renouncing her former faith, and on the following day joining herself with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Being a teacher in our school—held in the highest esteem by the entire community—she is wielding quite an influence for good. Children usually are the first reached in a revival, but this was principally confined to adults and heads of families at that. But the fewest families now in Como are not represented in our church. With the exception of two days' labor by our presiding elder, and three sermons from Rev. J. H. Cameron, we had no ministerial help. Great and lasting good we trust has been done. Our people do not take to the Centenary work—it seems—as many are doing in other places. For this we can not account. The matter has been kept before them. We were disappointed in not having you with us, Mr. Editor, last week. But can assure you that our failure to get as large a Centenary offering as we had expected was not due to our friend and brother, Rev. T. J. Newell. He did his part well. The preacher's salary and all the collections ordered by the Conference in hand. We distributed missionary eggs a few weeks since to the children of our congregations, promising, as a prize, a Centenary medal to every one that obtained as much as five dollars, and you would be surprised to know how both rich and poor worked to fill these eggs, and with what pleasure they looked to the appointed day for the "egg smashing."

At Fredonia (our beautiful country church) sixty dollars was raised—ten children out of sixteen received medals. Como resulted in fifty-seven dollars and eighty cents—eight out of twenty-one obtaining medals. It was a treat to witness the bright, happy faces of parents and children on these occasions as the hammer fell upon the egg. This plan of raising money far exceeded our expectations. These precious children deserve credit and encouragement for their zeal and self-denial, and we are sure their labors and hearts will be owned of God. Before the prohibition movement was made in this portion of the country we thought this one of the most civil, moral towns in the State; but since not a drop of the poisonous stuff—whisky—is sold in the community, we were enabled to see greater damage was being done than we were aware of. The change for good is marked. Men once coming to town, spending all the money they had at a whisky shop, and going home intoxicated, now distribute their money in proper channels, not putting it all into one man's hands and receiving for it worse than nothing, but giving every one a chance who is in an honest business to do well and to be blessed, to live and to let live. You will find a few persons who once handled whisky that are very much distressed over the great decline in business since the establishment of prohibition. But these are men who only see good in money as it comes into their own pockets. They never look to the general good of mankind. Their net making as much as while under the reign of whisky shows how much more they had been receiving because dealing with a class of men untried for business transactions than they were justly entitled to. The same amount that used to go from Mr. A. to Mr. C. is still spent in town, but Mr. C. has had to give up the sale of whisky, consequently Mr. A. comes to town with a cool brain getting what he actually needs and going where he can find the best bargain. A vast difference in trading with drunken men and sober ones. Mr. C. may have to bring on a much better stock of goods to be convinced the town is not going down, for Mr. A. can see better now and will do his buying somewhere else. Fraternally, praises as well as kings; they were priests in pagan temples, he was "priest of the Most High God," which dwelt not in temples made of hands. Abraham evidently regarded him a character so well representing God on earth that he gave him a tenth of all his vast spoils. He was without father, without descent. The regular plan pursued by Moses in his history was to give the ancestry of every great man of whom he wrote and often some of their descendants, but in this instance no father nor mother is given, nor is any son or daughter mentioned. So according to the record of history he was "without father, without mother, without descent," without any account of his birth or the time he began to reign, nor of the time when he died. Paul seizes upon this circumstance to illustrate the perpetuity of the priesthood without recorded birth or death or descent, nothing is ever to come after it. It is a priesthood forever.

E. B. RAMSEY.

J. D. N.

Thanksgiving Day.

BY MISS MARGARET E. SANFORD.

It is a beautiful custom which in this busy age gives pause to a wide land, lays an arrest on its activities, and opens the church doors on a week day to give thanks. For the observance of the day itself, and for the public opinion which would be shocked were it dropped from the calendar, we ought surely to be grateful. On the time-honored last Thursday of November, when the trees are leafless, the leaves gathered, the fruit picked away for winter use, and the fields awaiting the winter snows, States and communities are happy in keeping our home festival, and in devoutly making mention of God's goodness to us, as a people and as individuals.

Thanksgiving Day is one of remembrance. Sifted family groups endeavor to meet around the family board. There is much social enjoyment, and much lavish hospitality. The poor are not forgotten, and the various asylums and institutions of charity, hospitals and even prisons are brightened on this day. In an unobtrusive manner, the best and divinest of the day, the day of the right, many richer or humbler benefactions are sent, till the hearts of widow and orphan are made to sing for joy. It is a child's thanksgiving, and therefore, none at all which realizes no obligation to help the unfortunate, cheer the wretched and comfort the sad on Thanksgiving Day.

Anniversaries, however, have always their mournful side. No family ever gathers its entire band about a dinner-table. Somewhere there are missing links. Always there are the absent dear ones who cannot come, or the aged and feeble who are what in fruit unifying with festal throngs, or the dead who have gone away from this transient world and await us, who are still mortal, in the land of immortality. Always we miss somebody. As we grow older, it seems to us often that the only ones who were united in our youth are left. Yet we would not change places with them, for these who have left us beckon us on to the only home where the birth is never shadowed and the sky is ever clear.

I think Thanksgiving Day is a good time to remember our personal duty to praise God. Is it the spontaneous and unstated expression of our heart-life, to give him thanks every day, and everywhere, as David did, and Habakkuk, and Paul, and do in the future? Ah! I fear we are sometimes very far from wearing singing robes. Our prayers are full of thanks. Two solemn are they half adoration, half glad mention of the favors of the King.

I heard the other day of a dear little child who was very ill last winter with scarlet fever. For some days she was so sick that she could not say her prayers. When she was better, and could say her prayers, she told them, she looked anxiously into her mother's face: "Do you think Jesus will excuse me, mamma?" she asked.

I wonder if Jesus, our Master, whom we love, will excuse us for the lack of honest, hearty praise in our touch of prayer. Communion with him would be sweeter, fuller, closer, if we loved him so truly that we were always telling him of the gentleness that makes us great.—Christian Intelligence.

With unwilling bounds, it has been said, it is hard to limit. Any which depends in part upon the co-operation of others, may be greatly helped or hindered by them. A general may very skillfully arrange a campaign and direct his forces, but if they refuse to obey his commands, or refuse to execute his orders, it will be a marvel if he succeeds. Many a minister has written bitter things against himself because he does not see the work of the Lord prosper, and his labors crowned with success. But after all, the fault may not be his. Those upon whose assistance the success of the work to a great extent depends, have not perhaps co-operated with him as they should—have not held up his hands—and as a consequence he has not been successful, and realized the results desired. There were certain places where Christ himself did not perform his mighty works because of the unbelief of the people, and there are places where his true servants, although faithful, can accomplish comparatively little. While a man should not entertain too high an opinion of his own efforts, he should not unduly charge himself with the failures of others.—Methodist Recorder.

DR. HALL ON CONVERSION.—Keep clear of personalities in general conversation. Talk of things, objects, thoughts. The smallest minds occupy themselves with persons. Do not needlessly report ill of others. There are times when we are compelled to say, "I do not think so," but when there is no need to express an opinion, let poor humbler swaggers away. Others will take his measure, no doubt, and save you the trouble of making him out as an insinuating man. And, as far as possible, dwell on the good side of human beings. There are many hearts where a constant process of deprecating, as skulking motives, and ending up character, goes forward. They are not pleasant places. One who is healthy does not wish to dine at a diseased table. There is evil even in the good side of every young man and woman to detail and report it all. Keep the atmosphere as pure as possible, and fragrant with gentleness and charity.—New York Observer.

PROSPECTUS

YOUTH'S COMPANION

HISTORY. JAS. A. FROUDE.
SCIENCE. PROF. TYNDALL.
LANGUAGE. MAX MULLER.
STORIES. J. T. TROWBRIDGE.
LETTERS. L. C. MOULTON.
ADVENTURE. C. A. STEPHENS.

THE COMPANION has now attained a weekly circulation larger than that of any other literary paper in the world. Its steadily increasing success imposes an additional responsibility upon its conductors to deserve the appreciation and encouragement of American parents. It will use all its abilities, and all its resources, to make the young people of America mainly men and womanly women.

Illustrated Serial Stories

A SERIAL STORY for Boys, by J. T. TROWBRIDGE.
MY BROTHER FRANK. A Serial Story for the Household, by ALPHONSE DAUDET.
SERIAL STORY for Boys and Girls, by EDGAR FAWCETT.
A COUNTRY COUSIN. A Story for Girls, by FRANK R. STOCKTON.
SUSPECTED. A Serial Story, by C. A. STEPHENS.
SERIAL STORY for Bad Boys, by J. T. TROWBRIDGE.

Travel and Biography

LETTERS FROM SPAIN, by LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON.
BUSH LIFE in Australia, by ARCHIBALD FORBES.
LETTERS FROM PERSIA, by S. G. W. BENJAMIN.
IN THE FORESTS OF VENEZUELA, by W. T. HORNADAY.
FAMOUS AMBASSADORS and Their Triumphs, by JAMES PARTON.
IN THE HEART of the Sahara. Adventures during a tour in the great African desert, by H. H. WEBER.

Tales of Adventure

THE LIGHTHOUSE Keeper's Stories, by JUSTIN CARRICK.
HUNTERS' TALES of the Red River Country, by F. W. CALKINS.
A YOUNG IMMIGRANT'S Journey to Colorado, by D. L. CHAMBERS.
UP THE TRAIL, Cattle-Driving on "the breaks" of the Llano Estacado, Kansas, by AMOS M. NEVIN.
MY ENCOUNTER with the Black Flags. An incident of the French conquest of Tonkin, by HENRI MEUNIER.

$3,000, Prize Stories

Nearly seven thousand manuscripts were sent in competition for the COMPANION prizes of $3,000 offered for the best Short Stories, many of them by eminent writers in both Europe and America. For eight of these, Prizes have been awarded. These stories, with others selected from the seven thousand sent, will be a feature of the coming volume of the COMPANION.

Science and Education

A remarkable series of articles by Eminent Writers will be given as follows:
JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE, on The Study of History.
PROF. TYNDALL, on Popular Science for Young People.
PROF. MAX MULLER, on The Cultivation of the Memory.
CANON FARRAR, on The Study of English Literature.
PROF. T. STERRY HUNT, on The Chemistry of Sea and Land.
RICHARD A. PROCTOR, on Star Clouds, and Other Articles.
E. P. WHIPPLE, on Precocious Boys in History.
E. A. FREEMAN, on Children a Thousand Years Ago.

Instructive and Entertaining

AN EXILE'S Escape from Siberia, by COL. THOS. W. KNOX.
STORIES OF MILL GIRLS, by An "OLD OPERATIVE."
THOSE TERRIBLE PARISIANS, on the Dangers of the Classes of Paris, by JUNIUS H. BROWNE.
THREE SHARP FELLOWS. The career of three boys who thought themselves "smart," and who made "sharp" ventures, and are now living with other "sharp fellows" in their late stone buildings, by WM. M. ACTON.

The Children's Page filled with charming pictures, poems and stories, adapted to very young readers, has always been an attractive feature of the COMPANION. The Editorials will continue to give clear views of current events at home and abroad.

Subscription Price, $1.75 a Year.

Announcement and Specimen Copies Free.

Please mention this Paper. Address PERRY MASON & CO., Publishers, 41 Temple Place, Boston, Mass.

COMES EVERY WEEK ELEGANTLY ILLUSTRATED $1.75 A YEAR SPECIMEN COPY FREE

MISCELLANEOUS.

SUNSHINE.

A large quarto book for children; profusely illustrated with superior engravings, and handsomely printed on extra heavy tinted paper. Sent for $1.00. Publishers' price, $2.50; our price, $1.00. Expressage paid.

ESTERBROOK STEEL PEN CO., 20 John Street, New York.

When President Edwards came to die, after his long and noble life, he said to his wife, "I have lived a long time, but I have not lived a day that I have not lived for my fellow-creatures." This is the spirit of the COMPANION. It is a book for children, but it is a book for all. It is a book that will give you a new view of the world, and a new view of life. It is a book that will give you a new view of the world, and a new view of life. It is a book that will give you a new view of the world, and a new view of life.

W. C. SHEPARD, 49 Camp Street, New Orleans.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

Crockery, China and Glass Ware.

General Furnishers for HOUSE, HOTEL AND STEAMBOATS.

For Country Dealers

Packages Nicely Assorted.

CROCKERY WARE

YELLOW WARE

GLASS WARE

TIN WARE

Sole Agents for

Coal Oil Stores and Garden Mists.

Wanted Agents in every Town in the State.

Refrigerators, Ice Boxes, Water Coolers, Ice Cream Freezers, Cheese Presses, Etc., Etc., Etc.

Parrot and Squirrel Cages

CHEAPEST CASH HOUSE IN THE CITY.

Send for Catalogue.

ANDERSON & DABBS

—DEALERS IN—

Alabama Coal and Coke,

54 Carondelet street.

Coal and Coke in Bids. for Shipment.

COUNTRY ORDERS SOLICITED.

JAMES PYLE'S

PEARLINE

The Great Invention,

For EASY WASHING,

IN HARD OR SOFT, HOT OR COLD WATER.

Without Harm to FABRIC or HANDS, and particularly adapted to Wash Children's

No family, rich or poor, should be without it.

Sold by all Grocers, but beware of vile imitations.

PEARLINE is manufactured only by

JAMES PYLE, NEW YORK.

Hemorrhage and Asthma.

Extracts from letters of JAMES PYLE to his friends.

"I know all about the PEARLINE."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

"I have used it for several years, and it has perfectly cured me."

FAIR AND HONEST.

If you are sick or ailing no matter what your complaint, write to us and we will send you the Treatise of our large Electric Medicated Appliances to suit your case, provided you agree to pay for it if it cures you in one month. If it does not cure you it costs you nothing to try it. Different Appliances to cure Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Fever and Kidney Disease, Piles, Lung Diseases, Asthma, Catarrh, Lower Back, Acne, Debility, and many other diseases. Remember—do not ask us to buy them for you, but merely to try them at our risk. 75¢ per copy made during 1884—send us where all our treatments are sold. Price very low. Illustrated book giving full particulars and plans for treatment of your own case sent free. Address at once. ELECTRIC MEDIC CO., 501 STATE ST., BOSTON, N.Y.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

PIANOS.

Square and Upright.

For $300; worth $400.

For $200; worth $300.

Full Guarantee.

Write for Catalogues.

TERMS MADE TO SUIT.

ORGANS!

For $75; worth $100.

P. WERLEIN,

135 CANAL STREET,

NEW ORLEANS.

Music Store. Leading Piano House.

NEW and fresh Music builds up and insures new life in a Sunday School. The best Music Book published is FACTORS' and TRADERS' INSURANCE COMPANY.

49 CARONDELET STREET.

Paid Up Capital $1,000,000.

ED. A. DALLMEYER, President.

JOHN CHAFFEY, Vice President.

THOS. F. WALKER, Secretary.

Issue Policies Covering Fire, River and Marine Risks at the Lowest Tariff Rates.

LIVERPOOL AND GLOBE INSURANCE COMPANY.

Office, Cor. Carondelet and Gravier Streets.

DIRECTOR IS NEW ORLEANS.

J. F. SCROEDER, Chairman.

Agents in the United States: Wm. L. Wooten, Wm. L. Wooten & Co., 101 N. 2nd St., New Orleans.

Supplies over all the United States. $5,000,000.

Wm. L. Wooten, Resident Secretary.

CLARENCE F. LOW, Deputy Asst. Resident Secy.

CRESCENT INSURANCE COMPANY.

Incorporated as a Mutual Company in 1860—has been established as a stock company in 1880.

CASH CAPITAL $500,000.

Has paid nearly NINE MILLIONS for losses since 1870.

Annual and Term Policies issued on Desirable Fire Risks.

W. R. LYMAN, President.

CHAS. H. DUNN, Vice President.

CHAS. E. RICE, Secretary.

W. LUDDEN AND GEO. O. ROBINSON.

ANY SUNDAY SCHOOL MAY NOW OBTAIN 25 Copies, Words and Music, at 30c. - $7.50 75 Copies, Words only, at 10c. - 7.50

100 SONG BOOKS FOR $15.

Music edition 35c. each; 10¢ per copy. Postage 10c. Words edition 12c. each; 10¢ per copy. Postage 5c. A specimen copy, Note edition, mailed postpaid, for 25c. Specimen notes free. Published in London and Chicago. Write to ordering agency which you want. Address the Publishers.

LUDDEN & BATES

Southern Music House, SAVANNAH, GA.

See our Agents throughout Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi and Arkansas.

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. M. ADAMS, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. O. HENNING.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1884.

$1,100!

Centenary day was observed at St. Charles Avenue Church, in this city, on Sunday last. The sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. Beverly Carradine, and eleven hundred dollars collected. A splendid offering!

$9731

This is the creditable Centenary offering of Greenville, North Mississippi Conference, Rev. R. M. Standefer, pastor.

Be ye thankful.

In everything give thanks.

Send your pastor to Conference with a clean balance-sheet. This is specially for your eye, dear reader.

"Do not neglect praying for the souls in purgatory, at least during this month." So exhorts the Morning Star. Just so! It must not be neglected at least during this month. They need prayer just now, for, as Dr. Walker, at our elbow, facetiously observes, "the winter is coming on and they can get along without it." What a fatal superstition! It will rob heaven of many a precious soul.

Richard Watson is credited with saying that it was not so much "money that the Missionary Society needs as collectors." Very true; for good collectors will keep a full treasury. And they are the need of the church in all her departments of service. Pastors are poorly paid, not because of the poverty or generosity of the people, but for lack of active, liberal, intelligent collectors. Tact, method and religion in their work must produce a needed revolution in the church.

The fact that 150 persons left Chattanooga recently for Utah in charge of a Mormon elder recalls the importance of more stringent legislation against that iniquity. Mormonism is the plague-spot in our American civilization. There has been a vast amount of temporizing with it, which has been worse than nothing. It has emboldened the Mormons to more stubborn defiance of the government. A strong, practical measure is demanded that will crush out this abomination.

The unanimity with which the synods and presbyteries of the Southern Presbyterian Church pronounced against Prof. Woodrow's evolution teachings is refreshing to conservative thinkers. Its condemnation was complete and emphatic. The church has determined to guard with care the teachings of her theological seminaries. Of this matter the Louisville Christian Observer says:

Of the four synods which control the teaching: South Carolina, by a vote of 50 to 45; Georgia, by a vote of 60 to 21; Alabama, by a vote of 41 to 19. The other, the Synod of South Carolina and Florida, will not meet till November 27. In addition, the Synod of Kentucky has rejected it unanimously, the Synod of Nashville does the same with two dissenting votes, the Synod of Memphis with but one dissenting vote and (if we understand aright the reports in the daily papers) the Synod of Mississippi rejects it by a vote of 42 to 8.

On our relation to the Sabbath question the Rev. William Arthur, of England, uttered these words at the Ecumenical Methodist Conference, held in City Road Chapel, London: "We have to stand between the past with a Sabbath and the future with or without a Sabbath. The world says a future without one. The past of the Jewish Church, the past of the Christian Church, says with a Sabbath; the present of very many branches of the Christian Church gives to that question an uncertain sound. * * * Out of the English Lord's day has grown up the Saturday half holiday; out of the continental idea of a play-Sunday comes not only labor for six days in the week, but labor for the seventh day also—and if we are to preserve to the world the great institution of rest, I contend again it is only by claiming the day as one of worship, secure God's honor, and be will secure man's welfare—trample down God's claim over the day, and the claim of the laborer, the claim of the poor and the claim of the rich will all go down together."

Sunday and the Exposition.

The time draws near when the great Exposition is to be open for one of the grandest displays ever seen in the world. Exhibits are arriving by car-loads and ship-loads daily, and with all possible dispatch they are being placed in position. The management deserves all praise for the remarkable executive ability displayed in the preparations made. Everything has been planned on a magnificent scale and success is assured. Multiplied thousands of visitors will come from every shore and from all points of the compass to see the world in miniature. For such it will be—the products of every clime and the handiwork of all civilizations. Every visitor will be amply repaid for his coming, and we hope the Exposition will be a financial success.

But, with thousands of others, we are concerned that the Exposition gates shall be closed on the Sabbath day. In advance of any formal and official action of the Board of Management, we are warned that there is a strong sentiment in favor of Sunday opening. This we judge from the position of the Times-Democrat and a recent editorial in the Morning Star. In the former journal our people have not been allowed to forget the way Europeans keep the Sabbath, and the fact that larger liberality (?) is the trend of American thought. Articles and arguments on the other side have not been numerous. One would naturally suppose that a religious journal—set for the defense of the truth and the propagation of Christianity—would righteously oppose any desecration of the day hallowed and blessed by the God of heaven. But not such a defender of the faith is the Morning Star, of this city, published under "the official sanction of the Most Rev. Archbishop of New Orleans, head of our Ecclesiastical Province" and other "Right Rev. Bishops of the Province." It grows merry and denunciatory by turns in opposing the "Puritanical acceptance" of the Sabbath. In referring to the addresses of Dr. Marshall and Bishop Thompson, which "it calls 'the effervescence of the Sunday League,'" the Star speaks as follows:

They refer to the expositions held in Philadelphia, Louisville, and Cincinnati as precedents of Sunday closing; but these localities are still under strong Puritanical influence and can not be cited as authority in a cosmopolitan city like this. The reverend gentlemen rather gave themselves away when they set forth that the American and British Commissions at the Paris Exposition closed up on Sunday, for the presumption is that no one else did. Christendom consists of a good deal more than England and the United States, and, in the general opinion of the Christian world at large, these two countries, no doubt, make asses of themselves by such conduct.

It is very easy to dispose of the examples cited in the United States by saying "those localities are still under strong Puritanical influence," but it will not satisfy a man of conscience or brains. It may as well be remembered that the great Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia was a national affair, authorized by act of Congress and aided by a large appropriation. The Board of Management was appointed by the President of the United States, and in closing the gates on Sunday they reflected the moral sense of the nation. The "localities," however Puritanical, did not control their action. But the Puritan idea is certainly not dominant in Cincinnati. Our neighbor will, therefore, have to try another dodge.

Right there, however, we stop to make a point. The locality, whether Puritan or cosmopolitan, is not important in this issue. This Exposition in New Orleans stands precisely upon the same footing as the Centennial at Philadelphia. It has been authorized by Congress, aided by a national loan of a million dollars, and the Board of Management are appointees of the President of the United States. As such they do not represent this locality, however cosmopolitan, but the nation at large. They are not the officials of New Orleans, but of the general government. Then their official acts must accord with other national appointments, and must respect the moral sense of the nation. If so, they will close the gates of the Exposition. Sunday is a national day, recognized by the Constitution of the United States, and protected by statute in every State in the Union except "cosmopolitan" Louisiana. It is a die non in the commercial world and is the "lord of days" in the Christian Church. Now, if the management disregard the national sentiment and please a certain element of the baser sort in New Orleans, they contract it into a local affair.

And, then those gentlemen have an individual responsibility in their action, whatever it may be. The member who votes for opening the gates not only records himself as favoring Sabbath desecration, but encourages vast multitudes to do the same. The idea that, if the Exposition gates are not open, the people will go to worse places is no apology in morals. Each of us is under Divine obligation to keep our own consciences void of offense. After our utmost duty has been discharged we are free from blame. It is well known that the decision of the Board of Management rests upon a very few shoulders. What they recommend will be done.

The Morning Star closes its appeal for desecration as follows: "Shall the whole affair be made a miserable financial failure, as in Philadelphia, just to please a few gentlemen of antiquated theological prejudices?" And as to that financial fear we have a word to say. A little arithmetic and common sense will convince any one that the loss of revenue by Sunday closing could not possibly embarrass the enterprise. There will only be about twelve Sundays during the entire continuance of the Exposition, which certainly could not affect disastrously the receipts in any event. But, unlike the Philadelphia Centennial, this will be open during the Christmas holidays, when all classes spend money freely. Then, again, if those who would go only on Sunday find that they can not, they will attend on Saturday afternoons and evenings. Workingmen generally will be found there in large numbers at that time. But if there be some decrease, shall money prostitute morals? Isn't the public and moral good of the people better than a little paltry revenue? Alas! for such patriotism—to say nothing of religion or theology.

Thanksgiving.

The ADVOCATE is issued this week on the day of our national Thanksgiving, and it joins with millions of American citizens in ascribing praises unto the God of nations and the Giver of every good and perfect gift. This is a custom, wise and appropriate. From the very beginning of our constitutional history this annual occasion has been observed and the good providence of God acknowledged. Before that great instrument was adopted that perfected the autonomy of the United States government there was a hush in the solemn proceedings, and a minister of the gospel present was asked to invoke the blessing of Heaven upon the vote about to be taken. So this nation came into being with the voice of prayer and thanksgiving. And it is eminently fitting that a day should be appointed wherein the whole people should cease from accustomed labor and reflect upon the bounteous goodness vouchsafed to our land. The significance and value of such an appointment, of course, vast multitudes will not appreciate. Though reaping and enjoying the rich gifts with which our country is crowned, they think not of their source—the unseen hand of exhaustless supply.

A review of the past year shows us to be a highly favored people. Health and happiness have presided over our homes. No plague has come upon our dwellings, and the pestilence that walketh in darkness has kept far from our shores. This is occasion for devout thanksgiving. To estimate the blessing of a nation's exemption from destructive plagues we have only to recall the sad history of a few years ago when our Southern land was filled with mourning. In some communities there was crape on every door and a vacant chair at every hearth-stone. Across the seas we mourn with sorrowing cities in the death-march of a cholera epidemic. That we have yet escaped its coming should awaken songs of gratitude. Added years and freedom from peculiar sorrow ought to humble us before God and stimulate us to steadfastness in faith and abounding work for the Master.

There is general prosperity in the country. In our Southland we have no people either hungry or cold. Despite occasional complaints, there is abundance to supply all our wants. There is bread for the eater and seed for the sower. The husbandman's toil has been rewarded, and the Lord has crowned the year with his goodness. Gaunt famine has never made us pensioners on the world's charity, but instead we have been honored with the privilege of relieving the hunger of other lands. For these ordinary blessings we should not be indifferent. They are as surely the gifts of God as some peculiar providence of priceless value.

In civil and political privileges we are specially blessed. There is a true love of country in the masses of the people that rises superior to mere party contests and conquests. We have just passed peacefully through a fierce presidential campaign, and, while the unsuccessful feel the pain of defeat, there is patriotic desire to help forward the splendid progress of our government. At peace with all nations, may we have increased fraternity at home!

As Christians, and especially as Methodists, we have reason to rejoice with an exceeding great joy. The Lord has favored our Zion with the fullness of His grace. History has repeated itself in the revival power that has attended the ministry of the word. On the pulpit there has been the overshadowing of the Almighty. The revival spirit has glowed in the churches, and all over our broad connection there have been the scenes of former days. Centenary year has had a crowning celebration in a general and genuine revival of religion.

North Mississippi Conference.

This body meets on Wednesday, of this week, in the beautiful little city of Aberdeen, long known in our connection as the home of Bishop Paine. Here that honored leader of our Israel lived for many years, and at the close of an eventful life sweetly fell asleep. The North Mississippi is a young, vigorous Conference, and ranks among the foremost for connectional loyalty and liberality. Organized in 1870, its growth has been constant and healthful. We had the honor of sitting in that first session, in Water Valley, presided over by Bishop Doggett. How readily the remnants of several Conferences adjusted themselves into a single harmonious body! Bishop Keener presides this year, and his coming will be hailed with pleasure. He has intimate acquaintance with the Conference, and is held in high esteem. From the many reports published in our column of "Revival Correspondence," we doubt not the statistics will show a large increase of members. One fact we have noted with pleasure—the number of good revivals in the towns. On account of association with some other religionists and the tyrannous rule of so-called fashionable society, it is often difficult in towns and cities to have a true Pentecostal season. Our own people are exceedingly zealous that everything shall be done decently and in order, and that "a scene" shall be scrupulously avoided. They fear to pray much lest "an anxious-bench-religion" will be the answer. That this spiritual timidity and worldly tyranny has been overcome, and so many North Mississippi towns made to rejoice in a Pentecostal baptism, is occasion for gratitude. We do not deprecate "city religion." The highest types of piety are found in metropolitan congregations. But we rejoice in an enthronement of experimental religion in these worldly communities. We pray the Divine blessing upon the present Conference session.

The Ingenuity of Faith.

Faith develops along different lines. It varies not only in strength and intensity, but in quality and activity. Faith may be warm and strong without being ingenious and inventive. Masterful muscle is not always skillful. The arm of a blacksmith that wields with ease the ponderous hammer may be awkward in using the saw or plane of a carpenter or the delicate tools of a watchmaker. The eye of a pilot, the touch of a pianist and the ear of a telegraph operator become abnormally acute for the purposes of their professions. Specific sense gives them a peculiar sensitiveness and skill. So in the unfolding of our great spiritual powers. The character of their development is determined by the methods of their employment. If one class of faculties is emphasized to the neglect of others, or if those are held rigidly to one line of exercise, the results are evident and inevitable. This accounts for the great variety of Christian character and experience everywhere apparent. It is determined, not alone by difference in opportunity, disposition or natural gifts, but in the special and peculiar employments of the same faculties and advantages.

Now, if the general principle be applied to Christian faith and its characteristics, we at once learn an important lesson and discover a key to spiritual discernment. We have, then, only to observe the "order of a man's mind to ascertain the habits of his life. The expression of his thought reveals the character of his faith. And a wise pastor will readily suggest the course to remedy defect or encourage the line of development already pursued. A morbid experience needs certain treatment, while perfunctory piety demands an entirely different prescription.

Faith, then, becomes ingenious as well as strong under certain exercise. Those of "little faith" are not only mighty to the pulling down of strongholds, but inventive of methods and agencies by which the strongholds may be speedily captured and dismantled. The ingenuity of faith is developed in labor for others. If one's experience becomes morbid, and time is consumed in studying his own frames of mind, faith may be active, but can not be inventive. But when we are interested in others, and for the salvation of special persons, how full of resources is our faith! How ingenious in discovering and employing agencies and arguments that will reach them and bring them to Christ! If one device has failed, another is tried. If one appeal has been resisted, another is resorted to until faith's fertility seems inexhaustible. Striking and instructive illustrations could here be given, but they will at once crowd the memory of every thoughtful reader. We knew a pastor who reached a livery stable keeper by asking him for a horse to visit a sick parsonage. On his return he spoke a few kind words to the rough, hurly man, who refused to accept compensation, and told him how much good his kindness had done the afflicted one. He soon felt that he was a sort of partner with the pastor in good work. He furnished the horse and the man of God did the riding, and souls were being blest. That led to his conversion and a faithful Christian life. A Sunday-school teacher, after failing with every other plan, invited a certain thoughtful girl in her class to visit her on a stated afternoon and she would show her how to crochet a little shawl. The pupil felt flattered and came, and the teacher found her long-coveted opportunity. Between the stitches there were wise words of Christian cheer, bright stories with a pointed lesson, but no formal, solemn, forbidding lecturing. The pupil regretted when the afternoon was passed. She had learned the pretty crochet-work, but, best of all, the teacher had learned a way into her heart. Faith had triumphed and a soul was led to the Savior. And so we have only to give it exercise to develop its marvelous fertility of resource.

Bishop Paine on Infant Baptism.

In a recent copy of the Baptist Record a Bro. Hackett tells his experience about leaving the Methodist Church. He sought the Scriptures diligently, and, failing to find the doctrine of infant church membership taught, he became a Baptist. Not simply to give an example on the other side, but to reproduce the mature and Scriptural views of Bishop Paine for our readers, we make an extract from his "Notes of Life." The Bishop was raised under Baptist influence and clung tenaciously to the immersion idea for a long time. He read the New Testament in Greek with special reference to that question, and was so clearly convinced that he joined the Methodists. Here is what he says on infant baptism:

"The process of reasoning which satisfied me as to the baptism of children was short and simple. God is king; the church his kingdom; children have ever been recognized members of it. It was so in its organization under the Abrahamic covenant, which is the gospel covenant, unchanged in essentials and substance—only modified in services—the same king and kingdom. When and by whom were children disfranchised and exiled from the kingdom? Not by Christ, who took them up in his arms and proclaimed 'little children'—'Infants'—to be subjects of his kingdom, the church. (Matthew xix, 14.) 'Of such is the kingdom of Heaven'—i. e., let them come, for my kingdom is of such. Again, 'Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter the kingdom of Heaven.' (Matthew xviii, 3.) If adults must become internally like children to fit them for citizenship, surely children themselves have an original, rightful claim to citizenship in it; and, as water baptism is the only full and formal recognition of citizenship, they are consequently entitled to it. Did not our Lord teach Nicodemus that while the internal operation, 'born again,' is a requisite, 'to see the kingdom of God' (John iii, 3) baptism, or to be born of water as well as the Spirit, is needful to a formal and full recognition and entrance into the gospel church? Was not all this reaffirmation and confirmation of the chartered rights and privileges of the beneficiaries of the original covenant with Abraham, 'confirmed before God in Christ,' which can not be 'disannulled?' Surely it was not a reversal or repeal of the original law, and of universal usage under it. Certainly neither the apostles nor their opponents understood it so. A change so radical would have been a case demanded by the latter and recorded unequivocally by the evangelists. It could not have been unnoticed. It involved the status of every child. Then many teachers would have waited and refused to be comforted. The apostles and early Christians did not understand that Christ had closed the door against these children, and that the promise was not to their children as well as to them. The fact is that no question of the kind is more certainly established than that infant baptism was the prevailing custom of the early and purest period of the Christian Church. I find no evidence that the right of children to this ordinance was denied for the first thousand years after Christ. The postponement of baptism from infancy to maturity came with other errors."

The Presiding Eldership.

The following observations of the Richmond Christian Advocate on this important office are so just and timely that we desire to give them commendation and a wider circulation. No other office has been so much discussed or so diligently sought to be modified. It caused a Bishop-elect in 1820 to decline ordination and occasioned the O'Kelley schism. But after an abundance of ecclesiastical revelation on the subject and years of fiery trial, its importance and usefulness are becoming more apparent. The office needs men rather than modification.

"The presiding eldership to a conscientious preacher must draw heavily upon the heart. It seems to be a position from which men would shrink in fear of failure to quit themselves well to the church and their brethren. There can be no man too wise, gifted or devout for such office. It would fill an angel's hands."

"He must be a man of affairs, quick to discern 'what Israel ought to do.' If he allows any subaltern to surpass him in forwardness in every good work, and soldierly hardness, he loses caste. His rank puts him on his mettle always. He must lead 'spend and be spent.' He can not be a drone without disgrace. No man is fit for this oversight and care of his brethren without tenderest sensibilities. He must bear their burdens and carry their griefs. An unfeeling presiding elder is an abhorrent object. He who gathers in his own soul the needs, sorrows and wishes of his band (making God by prayer a partner in the weight of care) and is faithful and true to the hardest man, hath kinship in character to the chiefest apostle. Let us consider the difficulties of their duties, their weighty responsibilities and their like passions with ourselves, giving them our prayers and encouragement to the advisers of the Bishop. May God be with them!"

Read This.

The beneficiaries of the Conference Fund are the worn-out or superannuated ministers, the widows and orphans of deceased ministers, and none else. Every year the Conference Board of Stewards look over the list of claimants and make an assessment upon the church, so that to each claimant a small sum of money shall be paid at the next Conference session. But when did the membership of our church ever measure up to its obligation with a "paid up in full" assessment?

Must we "forever live at this poor, dying rate"? Where are our wise laymen, men of affairs, whose special business is to look after temporal matters? Can not some plan be devised and made practical that will lift this sacred fund up to a liberal standard and successful collection?

Why not organize a Board of Trustees with authority to receive donations, bequests, etc., invest the principal and use the interest to supplement the annual collection? The Tennessee Conference has resolved to do better; why should not the Mississippi? Will not some layman consecrate himself to this work of love and give us a plan by next Conference? Brother, sister, have you contributed to the Conference Fund this year, as your Christian duty requires? Do not fail.

R. B. DOWNS.

Mississippi Conference Notice.

The class of the first year will please meet the committee in Yazoo City, on Monday afternoon, December 15.

W. B. LEWIS,

For Committee.

Rev. R. M. Standefer, writing from Greenville, North Mississippi Conference, November 16, 1884, says:

Our Centenary offerings amount up to the present to Greenville station, North Mississippi Conference, to $973, and we have not neglected the collections for the general and either. All the Conference claims are collected with something over.

This we find in the Southern Christian Advocate. Who can be so

A Mississippi man, whose the lung heavy on his hands, earned the number of grains in a barrel. He sowed 72,430 of corn, 122,000 of wheat, 100,000 of peas, and 164,166 of cotton seed.

Weekly Market Review.

(For Week Ending November 25, 1884.)

COTTON.
Low ordinary	7 1/2 @
Good ordinary	8 1/2
Low middling	10
Middling	10 1/2
Good middling	10 3/4
Middling fair	11
Fair	11 1/4
Galveston middling	11 1/4
Mobile middling	10
St. Louis middling	9 15-16

SUGAR.
Infant	2 1/2
Common	3 1/4
Good common	3 3/4
Fair	3 1/2
Good fair	3 3/4
Fully fair	3 1/2
Prime	4
Strictly Prime	4 1/4
Choice	4 1/2
Seconds	3 1/2
Yellow clarified	4 1/2
Gray clarified	4 1/2
Choice whites	5 1/2
Granulated	5 1/2

MOLASSES.
Syrup	27
Fair	26
Strictly Prime	36
Choice	40

RICE.
Fancy	—
Choice	54
Prime	54
Good	54
Fair	54
Ordinary	4 11-16
Common	4 1/2
No. 2	2 11-16
Rough	3 50

FLOUR.
Minnesota bakers	4 50
Minnesota patents	5 50
Extra fancy	4 75
Winter wheat patents	5 25
Choice	5 25
Fancy	4 05

CORN PRODUCTS.
Cream meal	3 10
Corn meal	2 30
Grits	3 10
Hominy	4 00

GRAIN, ETC.
Corn:
White	50
Yellow	52
Mixed	—
Wheat:
Western	87
Texas rust-proof	44
Barley:
Choice	80
Hay:
Choice	19 00
Prime	20 00

PROVISIONS.
Pork:
Mess	12 75
Prime mess	12 50
Rumps	12 00
Bacon:
Choice breakfast	11 1/4
Shoulders	8 1/2
Sides, clear	8 1/2
Sides, clear rib	8 1/2
HAMS:
Sugar-cured	12 1/2
Dry salt meat:
Shoulders	5 1/2
Sides, clear	5 1/2
Sides, clear rib	5 1/2

FISH.
Mackerel:
No. 1 in bbls.	14 25
Half bbls.	7 75
No. 2 in bbls.	13 75
Half bbls.	6 25
No. 3 in bbls.	13 25
Half bbls.	7 00

GROCERIES.
Coffee:
Rio, choice	94
Corvaya, choice	12
Java, choice	22
Butter:
Western dairy	20
New York dairy	21
Country	17
Lard:
Choice	7 1/2
TEA:
Choice	50
Fair	25
OILS:
Cod, cases	18
Cod, bbls	13
Cotton seed	50
Lard	80

VEGETABLES.
Western, bulk	10
Country	—
POTATOES:
Louisiana	1 50
Western	2 00
KROUT:
1/2 bbl.	5 00
ONIONS:
1/2 bbl.	1 50
TUPELINS:
1/2 bbl.	—

BALING STUFFS.
11 lb.	10 1/2
2 lb.	11 1/2
BALING TWINE:
1 lb.	—
1 lb.	12 1/2
1 lb.	1 25

SUNDRIES.
POULTRY:
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22 00
Half barrels	12 50
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed	8 00
Meal	22 50
Pure ground bone	42 00
Muriatic acid	3 00
Sulphuric acid	23 00
Bone black	3 1/2

SUNDRIES.
Chickens, Western	3 75
Young	1 50
Chickens, Southern	3 00
Young	1 50
Turnkeys, Southern	9 00
EGGS:
Western	24
Southern	27
Wool:
Lake	17 1/2
Louisiana	16 1/2
Hurricane	7 1/2
Hides:
Green salted	7 1/2
Dry salted	9 1/2
STAVES:
Oak, logs	50 00
Oak, barrels	75 00
Oak, char.	50 00
Oak, hogshead	75 00
HOOP POLES:
Hoghead	45 00
Barrels	22

Christian Advocate.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1884.

THE SMOKE OF SACRIFICE.

BY GEORGE MACDONALD.

Lord, I have laid my heart upon the altar.
But can not get the wood to burn.
It hardly flames ere it begins to siffer,
And to the dark returns.

Old sin, or night-fallen dew, has damped the fuel;
In vain my heart's wood-time provokes;
Yet see! at every poor attempt the renewal
To thee ascends the smoke.

'Tis all I have—shook, shudder, felled, out-cast,
Gold-dust and dust and related lack;
Such as I have I send thee, Perfect Giver,
Send them thy lightning back!

Those Noble Women.

It was my good fortune to be in St. Louis during the recent session of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and to attend all of the meetings of the session. My attendance was the result of accident rather than of design. I was on my way home from a hasty trip to New England, reached St. Louis Saturday morning, went to Mr. Blue, agent of the Cairo Short Line, to have my ticket counter-acted, and he very kindly proposed to extend it for me. Our good friends, the Larrimores, father and son, husband and wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Carlisle and Mr. and Mrs. Newport—all members of our church except the two last, who are of the Baptist faith, and all former residents of this parish—pressed upon me and upon my niece, who was accompanying me from New England to my Southern home, a hospitality so tempting and spontaneous that I could not resist it; and last, as a sort of cap-stone to the whole argument, setting aside all discussion, came the announcement that Mrs. G. was coming on the night train to attend the meeting of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Of course I started. Who would not?

Of the beautiful city, its wonderful churches, its delightful drives, its beautiful gardens and parks, its palatial residences, its gallery of art, its public institutions—all of these I felt would speak, but must not. Of the charming families in which we were entertained with a hospitality so unfeigned as to leave no room for suggestion of further possibilities in that direction; of the deep, inspiring, halting love that bound the members of those households together in a sympathy that was infectious and made us feel that for the time we were living in the magic circle, were breathing the incense that exhaled from the very Shewahs of those sacred homes—of this, too, I would like to speak, but must not, for this letter is to be devoted to the exclusive consideration of those noble women of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

And now what to say about them is the question. Suppose, my dear reader, that your mother and every body else's mother, and your sisters and every body else's sisters, and your wife and every body else's wife (well, not exactly every body—only the best of people, you know) were to get together in societies all over this land, and then they were to select as delegates the smartest and the purest and the best-looking of these various groups and send them to some central point to confer together about some matter of sufficient interest to fire the heart, flush the cheek and quicken the brain, don't you think you would see a fair home representation there? Well, that was what I saw in that convention of the N. W. C. T. U. Perhaps you know what these letters stand for. Why not this: "No Woman Can Talk Uselessly"? Whether or not this be true as a rule, I certainly heard less useless talking there among those three hundred, or more, delegates during five days of the convention than I have been accustomed to hear in similar conventions of men. They talked, it is true—talked earnestly, talked fearlessly, talked with a pure of manner and incisiveness of style suggestive of deep thought, positive conviction and dauntless courage. They talked about their work in the thirty-four departments into which it is divided; they talked about education, religion and, yes, they talked about politics—that is, if I know what "politics" is when I see it. This was the way of it: Their custom had been to recognize in a friendly way—a sort of metaphorical pat on the back, you know—every society, organization, movement—everything, in fact, of every sort that seemed to be going in their direction and working toward the same end. Thus they patted on the back the institutions for the suppression of vice, of the social evil, of indecent literature, for the overthrow of the power of habit, and they had a friendly exhortation for all reform and industrial schools, etc.; and for three successive years they had resolved that the influence of the national society should be given to that political party which would afford the best protection for the home against the foe against which their laws were couched, and there seemed no doubt that the time to redeem their pledge had come. So, without calling any names, they stretched out a very slapping arm (and one that in four years more will be strong for blows instead of caresses merely) and patted on the back—don't be afraid of it—"St. John and Daniel."

This is what they said:
We refer to the history of ten years' of moral education work as fully establishing our claim to be called a non-political society, but one which steadily follows the white banner of prohibition wherever it may be displayed. We have, however, as individuals, always allied ourselves in local and State political contests with those voters whose efforts and labors have been given for the removal of the drink and its attendant evils; and at this time, while recognizing that our action as a national society is not binding upon States or individuals, we reaffirm the position taken by the society both at Louisville, in 1882, and at Detroit, in 1883, pledging our influence to that party, by whatever name called, which shall furnish the best embodiment of prohibition principles and will most surely protect our homes. And, as we now know which national party gives us the desired embodiment of the principles for which our ten years' labor has been expended, we will continue to lend our influence to the political organization which declares in its platform for national prohibition and home protection.

In this, as in all our progressive efforts, we will endeavor to meet argument with argument, misjudgment with patience, demagoguery with kindness, and all our difficulties and dangers with prayer.

As might be expected, this resolution did not pass without opposition, and the discussion which preceded its passage was earnest and at times even excited. These ladies have, however, a method of calming excitement and preserving a fine feeling of fellowship even during the most heated discussion which should, beyond doubt, be adopted by all deliberative bodies. Whenever the first of debate threatened to break over their legitimate barriers some prudent member invariably called a halt and moved that some one lead in prayer. Indeed, this most prominent feature in this organization, from whatever standpoint you view it, is its strong devotional character. If the word "temperance" in their motto is written in italics, the word "Christian" is written in large capital letters. It is this fact so apparent in all their work, standing out boldly as the points both of departure and of destination, that slayed whatever anxiety I at first felt as to the effect of the passage of the foregoing resolution upon our work here, in the South, under our local action laws. I had some anxiety at first lest the action of the National Union should be construed by some, whose influence and active sympathy and co-operation seem essential to success in this all-important work, as an abandonment of the legitimate field of endeavor for one too narrowly allied to the political arena; but it is impossible to breathe the atmosphere hallowed by such perfect consecration and feel any anxiety as to the result. Besides, as I have said that they talked about politics, perhaps I should call attention to the fact that the very opening sentences of the resolution passed is an entire disclaimer of being political.

I would very much like, did space only allow, to speak of the personnel of this association—of its peerless president, Miss Frances K. Willard, who presides over this large assembly with a grace and dignity, an impartiality and knowledge of parliamentary usage quite up to the highest standard among men; of Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop, a regularly ordained minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, whose gifts in prayer and in preaching are among the rarest; of Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, whose earnest appeals and faithful efforts in behalf of scientific education have already secured the passage of compulsory laws upon the subject in five States; and whose work is only just begun; of our own Mrs. Sallie F. Chapin, dear to the heart of every Southern worker in the temperance cause, whom to praise in our own Southland were vain—I had almost said, were egotistical—so near does she bring herself to our hearts; of Mrs. Foster, the lawyer of the party, whose eloquence has stirred the pulses of both sexes, and whose contributions to temperance literature make the work for others seem an easy thing. Indeed, there are so many in this noble army whose special gifts and graces charmed me that I must really stop abruptly or call the entire roll.

"Well, and what do you think of us?" asked one of the members of me when the convention was about closing. "Madame," said I, "my highest conception of womanhood has been exalted."

W. H. GOODALE.
Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 13, 1884.

The Eighteenth Century.—No. 3.

SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

What is a Sunday-school? Of course it is a school taught on Sunday. Robert Raikes, pitying the ignorant poor, hired ladies to teach poor children, and these ladies taught the children letters, literature and the catechism of the Church of England. This was a good work, and was in the year 1781; and one of his teachers was a Methodist—possibly all of them were Methodists, for Wesley had been preaching then nearly half a hundred years; and forty-six years before that, in 1735, John Wesley taught the children in Georgia, on Sunday, the word God and the religion of Jesus Christ, and then went back to England, where he did the same and enjoined this teaching on his preachers and people.

Now, these earlier schools of John Wesley, like the Sunday-schools of modern times, comes nearer our idea of what a Sunday-school is, or ought to be, than do the later schools of Robert Raikes. This being the case, the fact then is that John Wesley was the founder of Sunday-schools earlier and better than those of Robert Raikes, and all in that eighteenth century—a century of great beginnings.

But back to the original question: What is a Sunday-school? It is an orderly assemblage of persons—men, women and children—on the Lord's day for the purpose of studying, teaching and learning the Holy Scriptures. Such, we think, is the modern and proper idea of a Sunday-school. This being the case, here is a field in which all may be engaged—old, middle-aged and young. Some years since, on a visiting tour North, we had occasion to spend a Sabbath in Covington, Ky. In the afternoon we crossed the Ohio river and visited the City Mission Sunday-school in Cincinnati. The vast audience-room and the vast galleries were divided into vast apartments, and all of these apartments were full of busy workers. In one division there were a hundred little children, more or less; in another, a hundred a little larger; in another, a hundred a little larger, and so on up. In one of these divisions there were a hundred men, and in another a hundred women. Some of these men's heads were streaked with gray. All were teaching or being taught the word of God. And why not? Who should not study the Bible on Sunday? And here were more than two thousand human beings together in one room learning the way to heaven. The superintendent told us that the attendance from Sabbath to Sabbath numbered from 2,100 to 2,500, and the secretary assured us that the average attendance was some 2,300 the year round.

And, indeed, why not all the fullness, inviolable and alok—why not all of the rest of the people go to Sunday-school? Why graduate out of the Sunday-school at the age of fifteen and never return to it? Why not study on and teach or be taught? Why study more pleasant and more profitable than the study of the word of God? And would we all engage in this work, how the usefulness of the Sunday-school would be multiplied!

These schools are the loving arms of the church, with which she retains the children of the church, and with which she gathers millions more into the fold of Christ. In these fields—everyone can labor, and everyone can be instrumental in saving a child at least, if not a dozen or a score.

And is there not need of this teaching and learning the Bible? A vast multitude of the adult members of the churches are woefully ignorant of the contents of the book of God, and the great outside world is still more ignorant of this great treasure-house of Divine teaching. Indeed, none of us know too much of these precious teachings; none of us know them all, and all of us can always find something new on every page—new even though we may know the page by heart. We are happy to know that the record of the Methodist Church from the days of Wesley down to the present has been a good one on this subject. May her future one be a better record forever!

LOCAL ITINERANT.

God Geometrizes.

Ingersoll, and others of like agnostic character, use arguments drawn from the Scriptures as weapons to throw discredit on the authenticity of the Bible and the truth of Christianity. A late writer, Q. W. D., in the Saturday Evening Post, has used a mathematical argument that such pseudo-scientists as Ingersoll and others of his type can not resist, twist or use in any way to disprove the existence of a God, or that which is beyond and superior to the centrifugal and centrifugal forces of the heavenly bodies, for their motions declare the glory of him who said, "Let there be light, and there was light." The following is the writer's concluding remarks.

"God Geometrizes." And it may be laid down as a mathematical proposition that the perception of mathematical truth evinces mind of a lofty order; and for this reason, by universal admission of mankind, Plato, Pythagoras and Archimedes, Kepler, Newton, Herschel and La Place stand foremost among the noblest of their kind. Hence it follows, as a self-evident corollary, that to evolve mathematical notions evinces mind of a still loftier order, and that the motions and vibrations of the material universe, in all its wonders, variety and unity, are strictly mathematical, the correlative intelligence rests between the visible matter and the invisible mind. There is no other alternative; either these things are going forth of their own volition, or they are controlled by mind—by something that thinks. "Jehovah, Jehovah," call it what you please. Behold, there is a thinker at the helm!

When Kepler, the great old man, announced to the world his immortal laws he established scientifically the existence of Duty—a revelation not alone to one poor prophet, priest or seer, in some obscure corner of the earth, but to all the intelligence of the universe. And how was this great revelation received by the orthodox world? With curses and contempt. Had they laid hands on him they would have burnt him like Bruno and Soranus, or tortured him like Galileo; but as they did not lay hands on him, they left him to his work, and he lived his life in the quietude of his study, where it remained until 1824.

Thus Christianity encouraged (vile Dr. Noble, at his science, civilization and progress!

But to the agnostic I would say: Study Kepler's first great law—that the plenary orbits of the planets revolve in the sun in one of the foci—and tell me whence the intelligence to trace the mathematical lines with unerring precision for countless centuries? Again: The times occupied by a planet in describing any given arc of its orbit are as the areas of its sectors. And how was the planets evolved this beautiful law for themselves? And again: The maintenance of harmony among themselves, these sentient masses, have resolved that the squares of the periods of their revolutions shall be always as the cubes of their distances from the sun!

"I have triumphed!" he cried. "I have found the golden secret of the universe. I will indulge my sacred rapture. I care not whether my work be read or not; whether any mortal can afford to wait centuries for answers, since God himself has waited eternities for an observer."

No argument can load weight to language so sublime. In this controversy the trouble is that the disputants have no common plane of thought, nor have they any common goal to gain. Each strives, not to find "what is truth," but to prove that he is right; and where exists the greatest error, there is found the most vituperation.

Would the infidelistic stoop to malign the ignorant who should deny that the three angles of a triangle are always equal to two right angles, or that three times one are eternally three?

Village Libraries.

The Advocate, of November 13, contains, from the pen of Dr. J. B. Walker, a very suggestive article upon the above topic. To encourage those who live in pent-up boundaries, and are ready to murmur because entrusted with but one talent, I now write what has been done at this place. Ocean Springs, Miss., is a small coastal village, the Creole population predominating in numbers, and all are in limited circumstances. I can not think of a more discouraging field to inaugurate a library enterprise. I doubted if the books were procured that they would be taken out and read. I was devoid of any enthusiasm upon the subject. In our midst lives an old lady, full of faith and good works, who last spring determined that Ocean Springs should have a "free circulating village library" and resolved herself into a committee of one, soliciting for and near donations of some good books. Some one hundred and fifty volumes of good, useful books now are on the shelves. The number of readers increases each month, and already she feels repaid for her arduous labors. Not content with this work of love she at the same time projected a ministers' library for the benefit of the pastors sent to serve Ocean Springs. Methodist Episcopal Church, South. It now numbers some fifty odd volumes, all solicited by her and contributed by persons who were glad to do so worthy an enterprise. The latter books are the property of the church for the use of its pastor. This latter enterprise, if duplicated all over our Conference, would cheer the heart of many a pastor and illuminate the dark passages of many a sermon. Oh, that outpour of the Master! "She hath done what she could." How it will thrill the hearts of the holy ones when the deeds of heroic, self-sacrificing women are made manifest at the last day!

There is another elect lady in our midst—one of God's chastened ones—who for the want of male members at this point has assumed the burden of collecting funds for the support of her pastor and presiding elder, and every year so far has had the pleasure of paying up every cent of the assessment to this appointment. A more faithful, successful steward I have had. Consecration to the Lord has developed these friends of Jesus. Let their number increase.

R. B. DOWNER.
OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS., NOV. 13, 1884.

From the Work.

A NEW CHURCH.

On the third Sunday in October last, we worshiped for the first time in our new church, recently built, at Mt. Herman, on the Franklin church. It is a neat, frame building, with a seating capacity of three hundred. Situated, as it is, in one of the largest and best communities in the country, its influence for good will be felt for years to come. The brethren, in their efforts to build, labored under many discouragements that would have been fatal to those of less determination. We have at last established ourselves and we mean to stay.

S. S. MOORE, Pastor.
NOVEMBER 13, 1884.

RED RIVER CIRCUIT.

Mr. Editor: We have just closed a protracted meeting at Hill Chapel, a church recently built by Bros. Rice, Carlisle, Calanica, Gardner and others. Results: Five accessions, eight or ten conversions and the church quivered. Rev. Bro. Conroy, of Louisiana, was with us and did faithful work. This closes our protracted efforts for this season, except it be a short meeting next week. We have received twenty-four members into the church to date and baptized nine children. In addition to the building Hill Chapel, we have a church going up at Posier Point, a neighborhood taken into our charge this year. Heretofore they were without the gospel, but now, in addition to the pastor's personal attention, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, the Discipline and Nov. 13 have found their way into the community. We have had a steady development in this circuit for at least five years. This closes my second year, provided by Bro. Cassity. I have something to say about our patronage in my next. Fraternally,

NOVEMBER 13, 1884.
R. M. LOCKER.

BROADHAX, LA.

Mr. Editor: Now that we have completed one year of protracted meetings, we trust it will not be amiss to make a brief report. The present Conference year has, in many respects, been pleasant, and our labors under the blessing of God have been crowned with some success. We have baptized up to date seventy-five children, thirty-five adults, and received into the church forty-five members, ranging in age from ten to fifty years. Have held four protracted meetings, in one of which we were officiously assisted by Bro. Robert Randle, our faithful presiding elder, and in another by Bro. J. T. Sawyer, of Bastrop, who preached three Holy Ghost sermons with telling effect. While the Holy Spirit was with us in power at every point, it was at Bartholomew Church especially that the good Lord was visibly manifest. The church was crowded from the beginning, and the congregations increased each day. Shouts of new-born souls arose daily, old souls among the members broken up, enemies reconciled, and there was a general handshaking among all present. Our oldest citizens say they never before witnessed such a scene. As we look back upon this scene and others similar to it, we do bless the Lord from our inmost soul.

Financially, we make a meagre report up to date, but will do well in the end. If our collections equal our subscriptions, will hold a Centenary mass meeting at Bartholomew Church on the third Sunday of December. Bro. J. T. Sawyer will deliver the address. Our local election to vote against whisky will take place on the last day of December. May the good Lord help us in this direction also, is our prayer.

R. S. IRRELL, P. C.

PAULDING, MISS.

I have just completed my sixth and last protracted meeting on Paulding circuit for 1884. Rev. L. Carley, of Vicksburg, Rev. J. H. Holland, of Ellisville, Rev. I. M. Mero, of Rose Hill Institute, Ingo Ryan and his son, Rev. Peyton Ryan, of the Congregational Church, rendered valuable service at some of these meetings, for which I am truly thankful. The above meetings were all productive of good results. We met on fifty conversions and thirty accessions to the church. In reviewing the year's work for any want of greater success, I blame myself more than any one else. I have tried to do my duty and to preach others to the point of doing theirs. I am sorry to say finances are meagre all along the line from preacher's salary to centennial thank-offerings. I may be to blame for this. I may not have properly presented to the people the claims of the church to their benevolence, or may not have adopted the best methods in collecting the Lord's tithes.

With a few noble exceptions many Methodists in this portion of East Mississippi have yet to learn the "grace of liberality." After asking every allowance for short crops, low price of cotton and poverty of the church generally, I fear many fail to properly appreciate their religious privileges and to fully measure up their ability in supporting the gospel of Jesus. If our pastor and presiding elder, and every year so far has had the pleasure of paying up every cent of the assessment to this appointment. A more faithful, successful steward I have had. Consecration to the Lord has developed these friends of Jesus. Let their number increase.

R. B. DOWNER.
OCEAN SPRINGS, MISS., NOV. 13, 1884.

My First Visit.

Mr. Editor: Two weeks ago I was privileged with my first opportunity of attending a Roman Catholic funeral. In company with some young friends we proceeded to the church. While entering the church my heart almost failed me. As I entered the beautiful building I felt as though I were entering the cells of a prison. I took my seat in rear of the sanctuary and listened with an attentive ear, but understood very little the priest said. During his discourse he was shown the greatest respect. The audience consisted of Protestants, with the exception of two or three Romanists. He took occasion to say to his Protestant audience that his church was the only church; that to him had been given the keys of heaven, and that whosoever he bound on earth would be bound in heaven, and whosoever he loosed on earth would be loosed in heaven; that he would forgive no man from his sins who refused to confess to him and do penance; that many were Christians but members of the Catholic Church; that all Protestants, being heretics, were exposed to the danger of hell; that, though he used such plainness of speech, he hoped no one would be offended. And they were not offended, for at the close of his remarks they took up the doxology and carried it to its last resting place where it was deposited to remain till God shall bid it rise. We have one hope of redemption, and that is based on the prayer which our Savior prayed for those who crucified him—"Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." I am happy to say that I have lived to the age of an old man and have never before attended a Roman Catholic Church.

G. M. S.

Mrs. Mary Margaret Bridges.

The subject of this sketch departed this life at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Catching, near Georgetown, Copiah county, Miss., on November 2, 1884, after a painful illness of about two months' duration. She was born in Pike county, Miss., October 25, 1810, and was, therefore, at the time of her death seventy-four years of age. Her maiden name was Smith. She was married to Mr. H. Frank Bridges, Jr., January 1, 1829, in Pike county. Mrs. Bridges survives to mourn the loss of one of the best wives that ever graced and blessed a Christian home. They lived together in happiness more than fifty-five years, and were the parents of ten children—five sons and five daughters. Four of these children died in childhood, the other six lived to mature years, but only three are yet living—Mrs. Catching, of Georgetown, Mr. Robert S. Bridges, of McComb City, and Hugh C. Bridges, Esq., of Summitt. These, now in the meridian of life, with families of their own, cherish the fondest recollections of one of the most devoted of mothers, whose tender care and deep concern for their spiritual welfare will not be forgotten by them now that she is gone. One of them, writing to his father after receiving the sad intelligence of the death of his mother, said: "The thought that I will never more see her sweet face and hear her gentle voice and never again receive her loving embrace is overpowering, and my heart is crushed." But God in wisdom has seen fit to take her from us and transplant her spirit from this world of sorrow to a brighter and purer world. "She is not dead, but sleeping." She has gone to join the dear ones who have gone before, and her spirit will be with us. I knew all her life, and she was a bright and clear before me, and I was satisfied that she went straight to heaven. * * * She was a good and devoted mother and a good Christian. I shall always remember her teachings. * * * Thus was fulfilled in Mrs. Bridges the description of a virtuous woman (Proverbs xxxi, 28): "Children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praise her, saying, 'She is a good and virtuous woman, the praise of her is not in vain.'"

Mrs. Bridges was converted and joined the Methodist Church in 1857, in Pike county, Miss., near the home of her childhood and old age. She was then about seventeen years of age. "There was no church in Holmesville at that time; but there was a preaching place, perhaps, in a school-house, and an organized society called Providence, about two miles south of Holmesville. That was the place of her spiritual birth, and there she held her membership until a church was established in Holmesville, when the Providence Society was merged into that. At the time of her marriage to Mr. Bridges, about two years after her conversion, she was a model of piety. A young lady, nearly nineteen years of age, truly converted and thoroughly consecrated, beautiful in person and graceful in manners, with a sprightly and symmetrical character, she was an ornament to society and a useful member of the church. It is by no means strange that with such a start as this she made the wife and mother she did. Her home became the scene of Christian hospitality which she dispensed with a generous heart. Noted how many ministers of the gospel have found shelter and food there. God blessed them with a good degree of worldly prosperity, and their cultured, beautiful home was always a loving and attractive resting-place for the messengers of peace. Mrs. Bridges loved the house of God. Her former pastors will remember her as a regular attendant upon public worship, where she drew attention to the service and radiant countenance and fervent prayers were an inspiration to the preacher of the gospel and to other worshippers. Every minister knows how helpful such hearers and parishioners are. She was liberal with her means in supporting the institutions of religion, and the poor had no better friend in the community in which she lived. One of the secrets of this bright example of Christian piety was her regular attention to the private means of grace. She had a time and place to pray in secret, and the habit was formed in early life and never broken. There, daily communion with her God, her heart was made and kept clean, and her spirit was refreshed and strengthened for the duties and emulations of life. This is what made her such a shining light in the church and gave such heavenly fragrance to her godly conversation.

We deem it an honor to have been selected by the family to prepare the tribute to the memory of this noble and friend of our own sainted mother. We remember how for twenty years they worshiped together in the church in Holmesville, sitting together in front row. How often have we seen them happy and rejoicing together with shouts of praise. And then our mother, nine years ago, went to glory, and Sister Bridges sat alone in the same row. Now she is gone, and we have met again, and are worshipping together in the upper sanctuary. Thank God for such mothers! We will follow them as they followed the Lord till we join them in heaven.

H. P. AND W. R. LEWIS.

—Never turn a blessing round to see whether it has a dark side. Kind Words.

Don't fall to read the "ad" head. "Multum in Parvo."

$250 A MONTH Agents wanted. NO best selling needles in the world. 1 sample free. Address JAY BRINSON, Detroit, Mich.

compared to that into which we

to that into which we fell imperceptibly. The hay have bruised or broken out the latter has felted until it can not move. 3. wickedness usually attacks to have ascended to one of altitudes," but at times
"the cool sequestered vale
Arctic explorers take no against yellow fever, nor Culian provide against the Prager Rake Man had no prayer against spiritual ness; but, alas! the angel the crown close to his head persuade him to look at it.
rakes vary in size. Our not complete without some with rakes to suit their age, the horse rake and the steam muck rake still. The truck with his patch and the wheat rakes to suit. The drag-the railway magnate! The cker on three or four-hand and the jobber in stocks with Rakes, rakeal! Straw!
The animal feeds on straw, goes not after cabbages or onions. The rakes all take upward. The honorable is not complete all turn to rable. Little matters it at ther I rode a steam rake or and rake with half the teeth
th it I have gathered the le. It may have been only —it may have been a
; but rubbish after all, and ake of that rubbish lost the
T. A. S. A.

Death of Bishop Wiley.

death of Bishop Isaac W.
the Methodist Episcopal oses one of its wisest chief and American Methodism a shed ornament. He died in China, whither he had a tour of episcopal visitation.
mission he had labored in hood, but on account of health had to return to
In 1877 he visited the
as a Bishop, and presided first session of the Foreign convention. And now he returns resting-place amid the scenes of his missionary labors. His laborious, heroic, successful inverted at the tender age of years, he soon ripened into a intelligent and conservative man. At eighteen he was to preach, but a throat diseased to disappoint his ever becoming a Methodist After receiving a thorough education he offered for the China Mission, and was accepted. Returning to the States, he became principal of the Sunday School, and then of the Ladies' Repository;
in addition he held until elevated to episcopacy.

and the pleasure of entertaining Bishop Wiley at our home for a few days at winter, and learned to love him. He left the fragrance of a sweet, Christian influence. Every member of the household bade him a regretful good-bye. He had a kind and gentle faculty for lured sacrament.
His words were chosen without effort, but with remarkable aptness.
His words were an exact synonym, and of the English-Saxon, always came straight to the heart. We heard several of his addresses, and each one was a perfect address. For perfect equipage of character, firmness, power of principle, passion, and devotion to one cause his church had no superior.
Looking far toward the "high night" we spent with him discussing the great interests of the church. That experience will live with his name as a precious memory. Though in all his views
I did not sympathize, we rejoiced in the friendship of a man so fully catholic and of such distinguished ability.

It is a practical suggestion to all thoughtful pastors will not forget to heed:

It is very interesting and profitable for the part of Methodists under this vicinity, held two weeks of our resident young brother, filling the pastoral charge, said quoting the scriptures and saying of another, that "any afternoon he was mentioned to go out fishing for souls."
"He" was that he started for persons of whom he had not converted, but whom he by personal labor, to bring into the Christian fold. The increase of success in this work was striking and encouraging. No experience could be suggested by pastor. Before the weekly meeting or the approaching he might be determining upon the neglected districts, a little from the sanctuary, and in the earnest spirit enter the special office which our ordained for his disciples—ual approaches becoming "a of men."

fall to read the "ad" headed man in Paris."

MISCELLANEOUS.

TEST YOUR BAKING POWDER TO-DAY!

It is a scientific and practical test to CONTAIN AMMONIA.

DOES NOT CONTAIN AMMONIA. ITS HEALTHFULNESS HAS NEVER BEEN QUESTIONED.

In a million homes for a quarter of a century it has stood the test of the oven.

THE TEST OF THE OVEN.

PRICE BAKING POWDER CO., BAKERS OF

Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts, The strongest, most delicious and natural flavor known, and

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems For Light, Healthy Bread, The Best Dry Yeast in the World.

FOR SALE BY GROCERS. CHICAGO. ST. LOUIS.

LIGHT HEALTHY BREAD

DR. PRICE'S LUPULIN YEAST GEMS

The best dry yeast in the world. Bread raised by this yeast is light, white and wholesome like our grandmother's delicious bread.

GROCERS SELL THEM.

Price Baking Powder Co., Makers of Dr. Price's Special Flavoring Extracts, Chicago, Ill. St. Louis, Mo.

WATSON'S SURE CURE

MOUTH WASH AND DENTIFRICE

For sore throat, tonsillitis, sore mouth, sore gums, and all other affections of the mouth and throat. Prepared by Dr. J. B. Watson, Dentist, New Orleans, La. Sold by all druggists and dentists.

MASON & HAMLIN

Manufacturers of ALL the important MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. PIANOS, ORGANS, and ALL other musical instruments. We have the largest stock of instruments in the South, and our prices are the lowest. We also have the best of workmen to repair and tune instruments.

ORGANS Organ from $100 to $1,000. Pianos from $50 to $500. We have the best of workmen to repair and tune instruments.

PIANOS Pianos from $50 to $500. We have the best of workmen to repair and tune instruments.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN AND PIANO CO., BOSTON, 154 Tremont St. CHICAGO, 149 Wabash Ave. NEW YORK, 46 East 14th St. (Union Square).

X-MAS MUSIC

OUR CHRISTMAS CAROLS FOR 1884

Contains usually the contributions from Geo. F. Root, J. B. Watson, W. B. Watson, H. P. Watson, P. B. Watson, and John A. Watson. A beautiful service prepared by Miss Anna A. Watson. The whole furnished by X-MAS MUSIC.

CHRISTMAS-ENTERTAINMENT.

16 pages, elegantly printed in colors on one tinted paper. Price 50 cts. each, or 50 cts. a dozen by mail, post-paid. A hundred by express, not prepaid.

Send for complete list of Cantatas, Services, and Themes, and Christmas solos.

Published by JOHN CHURCH & CO., CINCINNATI, OHIO.

CATCHING KRIS KRINGLE!

RETURNED AND ENLARGED. BY BUTTERWORTH AND ROOT. A Bright and Amusing Christmas Cantata. Price 50 cts. each, or 50 cts. a dozen by mail, post-paid. A hundred by express, not prepaid.

Send for complete list of Cantatas, Services, and Themes, and Christmas solos.

Published by JOHN CHURCH & CO., CINCINNATI, OHIO.

A Home Production.

GOODWIN'S EUREKA

YEAST POWDER.

It is the best yeast in the world, a pure, manufactured article. It is the best yeast in the world, a pure, manufactured article. It is the best yeast in the world, a pure, manufactured article.

Our Young People.

THE LIGHT THAT IS FELT.

BY JOHN G. WHITTELL.

A tender child of summers three, Seeking her little bed at night, Passed on the dark star timidly, "Oh, Mother! Take my hand," said she, "And I will all be bright."

From dark to dark she went, From dark to dark she went, And only when her hands were laid, Dear Lord, in thine, the night is day, And there in darkness nevermore.

Reach downward to the sunless day, Wherein our guides are blind as we, And faith is small and hope delays; Take thou the hands of prayer we raise, And let us feel the light of thee! —St. Nicholas.

Our Children.

DEAR CHILDREN: In the preceding numbers addressed to you I think I have proved to your satisfaction that none of you are too young to have an evidence that your sins are all forgiven and that you are accepted as the children of the Lord. I now wish to call your attention to some of the important reasons why you should immediately seek to know God as a Father and as a Friend. God and devote your young lives to his service. I might mention many important reasons growing out of your relation to him as your Creator, Preserver, Benefactor and Redeemer, why you should give him your hearts and live in obedience to his holy will and commandments, but I will pass them by for the present and speak of some things that you can understand better. If you do not embrace religion in early childhood you will soon get into the habit of indulging sinful thoughts, tempers and passions, followed by wicked words and actions, and all these will gain strength by indulgence until they will become confirmed habits which you will find it impossible to overcome. Better never indulge in sinful habits than that they should become a source of temptation and trouble to you in all after life. I know that children, as well as older people, are tempted to look on a strictly religious life as a life of miserable self-denial which deprives its votaries of all the natural pleasures of childhood and youth and dooms them to sort of melancholy funeral existence. But a greater mistake was never made than this. The Bible and all genuine Christian experience proves that true Christians are the best satisfied and happiest people on earth. They only enjoy the "peace of God which passeth all understanding" and can "rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." In all the good hymns that Dr. Watts ever wrote he never penned a truer phrase of every Christian's experience than when he said, "Religion never was designed to make our pleasures less." It is the peculiar privilege of the "Servants of our heavenly King to speak their joys abroad." Another thing to be taken into the account is that the more good you get and the more good you do on earth the greater will be your reward in heaven, so that if you set out in early childhood in the service of God you may have the privilege of living a long life of holiness and usefulness on earth which will be rewarded by "an exceeding and eternal weight of glory." "Every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labour." In my next I will point out the great danger of putting off seeking religion until some undetermined time in months or years to come.

J. G. JONES.

HAZLEHURST, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: Having been a constant reader of the young people's department for some time, and being much interested in it, I have concluded to write you a letter. My educational advantages have been very few, being limited to the country schools. I have two sisters and two brothers living. My papa and three little brothers are in heaven. One little brother died only a few days ago. We live two miles from the nearest church, Emory. Bro. Barcroft was our preacher last year. We have not yet learned who is to preach to us next year. I will answer Carl A. Roberts' questions. Which is the shortest verse in the Bible? It is to be found in St. John xi, 35, "What is the shortest chapter in the Bible?" Psalm cxviii. "Mother-in-law" occurs twice in the book of Ruth—1, 14; ii, 10. I will close by asking where "lawyer" is mentioned in the Bible? Your little friend, IDA M. INGRAM.

HAZLEHURST, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a reader of your paper. I am a little Methodist girl. Pa and ma go to church every Sunday. Our pastor is a good man. He is the Rev. H. D. Howell. We have a fine Sunday-school. Mr. J. W. McMaster is our superintendent. I will answer George M. Foote's question: Og, the King of Bashan. It is found in Deut. iii, 11. I will ask one question: How many times was the ark rebuilt? Now Mr. Editor, you have a pair of scissors and a waste-basket. You can use both if you see proper.

HAZLEHURST, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I have written to your valuable paper twice, and seeking my letters in print both times, it encouraged me to write again and answer some of the questions that are asked. The answer to Lillian L. Beasley's question can be found in 11 Sam. v, 23, 24. Answer to Lucy R. Robinson's question: Jehidiah was Josiah's mother, will be found in 11 Kings xxii, 1. The answer to J. R. Lockhart's question is: Josiah

HAZLEHURST, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I have written to your valuable paper twice, and seeking my letters in print both times, it encouraged me to write again and answer some of the questions that are asked. The answer to Lillian L. Beasley's question can be found in 11 Sam. v, 23, 24. Answer to Lucy R. Robinson's question: Jehidiah was Josiah's mother, will be found in 11 Kings xxii, 1. The answer to J. R. Lockhart's question is: Josiah was eight years old when he began to reign. It was Jael who drove a nail in Sisera's temple. It is found in Judges iv, 21. Now I am going to ask a question: Where is "the collar of my coat" found in the Bible? Where is "white wool" found in the Bible? Your little friend, PERCY B. BELL, DEARBORN, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not written to your valuable paper, I thought I would write. We live five miles from Garlandville. Mamma takes your paper, and we all like to read it very much. Mr. Hawkins is our pastor, and I like to hear him preach. I will answer Carl A. Roberts' question: "Which is the shortest verse in the Bible?" It is, "Jesus wept." You will find it in St. John xi, 35. I will close by asking a question: What two chapters in the Bible are alike? How many times is the word "Jehovah" mentioned in the Bible? Your little friend, CLARA FOLEY, JASPER, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As it has been some time since I wrote to the ADVOCATE, I will again write you a short missive. We are all very well at this time. Papa is a farmer, and has about harvested his crop. We attend Sabbath-school every Sunday. I like it very much. Rev. J. T. Heard is our pastor. I hope the Conference will send him back to us another year. I was delighted to see the children's friend and the editor of the dear ADVOCATE at camp-meeting. I hope you will come again next camp-meeting. I will answer Robble Kimball's question: The word "grandmother" is found in II Timothy i, 5, and her name was Lois. For fear of finding my way to the waste-basket, I will ask some boy or girl a question and close. Where is the word "screch-owl" found in the Bible? With good wishes, Pam, Your little friend, LOIS E. MANNING, BRANDON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never written a letter to your paper, I thought I would write one, and I hope that my first attempt will not be thrown into the waste basket. I am eleven years old. I have two sisters, no brothers, and my mother is a widow. I am going to school. I study Latin, dictionary, English composition, Smith's grammar, history, arithmetic, and writing. There was a wedding in the neighborhood not long ago. I went to it and had a very pleasant time. I will ask a question: Where was Samson buried? Your little friend, CLAUDIA SOLES, FARMERSVILLE, Alabama.

MR. EDITOR: As I see no letters from this part of the vineyard, I thought I would like to write one. I take a great interest in reading the children's column in your good paper. Pa takes your paper, and he likes it very much. My father and mother are both members of the Methodist Church. Rev. L. P. Meador is our pastor, and we like him very much. I will close by asking a question: Who was David's mother? If one of the little children can answer this question, I would like for the kind editor to do so.

JOSEPH A. WILLIAMS, HIGH HILL, Mississippi.

REINVENTING AN INVENTOR.—An inventor must run the gauntlet of criticism and ridicule before he gains for his invention the confidence of the public. It is annoying to the inventor, but it is beneficial to the community, for it secures the survival of the fittest. George Stephenson used to speak with indignation of how the "Parliament men" badgered and baited him with their book-learning, when he proposed to build a railroad from Liverpool to Manchester.

The smoke from the engine, said these book-learning men, will kill all the birds, and the sparks will set fire to fields and houses. The passengers will be made sea-sick; the noise will frighten away the game, and thousands of coachmen and inn-keepers will be thrown out of employment.

The fast mail-coaches were driven at the rate of ten miles an hour. When Stephenson asserted that his steam coaches would attain to a much more rapid rate of speed, he was laughed at and hooted as a crack-brained enthusiast.

You must not claim a speed of over eight miles an hour, said the book-learning men. "And the notorious count of the promoters of the railroad to Stephenson, just as he was about to appear before a Parliamentary committee."

A member of the committee, opposed to the proposed railroad, thought he could make the simple-hearted engineer assert an absurdity that would kill the project.

"Well, Mr. Stephenson," he asked, "perhaps you could go seventeen miles an hour?"

"Yes."

"Perhaps twenty miles an hour?"

"Certainly."

"Twenty-five, I dare say. You do not think it impossible?"

"Not at all impossible."

"Dangerous, though?"

"Certainly not."

"Now tell me, Mr. Stephenson, will you say that you can go thirty miles an hour?"

"The fish was in an absurdity, so every member of the committee thought, and he leaned back in their chairs and laughed with laughter. Their sons had a sixty miles in sixty minutes."

A Christian Editor's Opinion.

Mr. G. R. Lynch, publisher of the Alabama "Christian Advocate," at Birmingham, writes: "I travel all over the State, and my friends say they find your paper a most excellent medicine. My book-keeper and foreman both use it in place of calomel, pills, etc."

Twenty-five Years a Citizen of Georgia

and the past seven years I have suffered continually from indigestion and bronchitis of a most severe type. I was treated by two prominent physicians, and had taken all the patent medicines recommended for these diseases. I got no relief, and continued to grow worse until I commenced the use of Dr. Moziey's Lemon Balm. One dozen bottles has made a final cure of both diseases.

J. R. HILL, No. 1 Connally St., Atlanta, Ga.

A CAID.

From a number of St. Louis' prominent citizens as to the merits of Dr. Moziey's Lemon Balm, the following named gentlemen pronounce it the only pleasant, thoroughly reliable and economical remedy they have ever used for the diseases for which it is recommended.

Judge Alex. Davis, Fourth and Chestnut streets.

Judge John P. Higgins, 102 N. Fourth St.

Hon. J. L. Martin, office opposite Four Courts.

T. P. Grady, Law Office, 117 Clark Avenue.

Capt. J. A. K. Stotts, of the St. Louis Beef Canning Company.

Dr. Moziey's Lemon Balm, prepared at his drug store, 114 Whitehall street, Atlanta, Ga.

It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidney and blood.

Fifty cents for one half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and by L. L. Lyons, wholesale druggist.

RAILROADS.

Louisville and Nashville Railroad.

The Old Reliable Route to all Eastern Cities.

THROUGH WITHOUT CHANGE TO

Mobile, Montgomery, Pensacola, Nashville

Louisville, Cincinnati, Atlanta, Savannah, St. Louis, Jacksonville,

Fla., Lynchburg, and

Washington, D. C.

IN PULLMAN CARS.

ENTIRE TRAINS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO LOUISVILLE.

ONLY ONE CHANGE OF CARS TO NORTHERN AND EASTERN CITIES.

Ticket office corner St. Charles and Common sts., where Sleeping Car accommodations can be secured.

O. P. ATMORE, Gen. Pass. Agent.

W. B. KINKER, Ticket Agent.

J. T. HARRAHAN, Gen'l Manager.

JOHN KILKENY, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agent, New Orleans.

O. M. DUNK, Sup't N. O. and M. Division.

MERIDIAN ROUTE.

TO THE

NORTH and NORTHWEST,

Via N. O. and N. E.; and Mobile and Ohio Railroads.

Pullman Sleepers on both trains. Close connections made at UNION DEPOT, ST. LOUIS, with all diverging lines.

Excursion Tickets on sale to the Summer Resorts of the great Northwest.

Trains leave New Orleans at 11 A. M. and 10 P. M. The 10 P. M. train daily has sleepers through to St. Louis without change.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The Eating Houses on this line are conducted by any in the country.

For Maps, Time Tables, etc., call on or address R. W. GILLESPIE.

General Agent M. and O. R. R., Gravier and St. Charles streets.

GEORGE D. GAN, Manager, Mobile, Ala.

CHAS. J. WALLER, G. P. A., Mobile, Ala.

The Great New Southern Route

TO

SAN FRANCISCO, EL PASO, SAN DIEGO and other CALIFORNIA and MEXICAN Points.

Through Sleeping-Cars from New Orleans to San Francisco.

—VIA—

Morgan's Louisiana and Texas Railroad, Galveston, Houston and San Antonio Railway System and Southern Pacific Railroad.

Connections made at Houston with RAILROADS TO ALL POINTS IN TEXAS.

Trains start from Elysian Fields Street Depot as follows:

Alexandria, 7:45 A. M. Houston, 7:45 A. M.

Houston, 7:30 P. M.

Alexandria, 8:45 P. M. Houston, 8:45 P. M.

Houston, 7:30 A. M.

For further information apply to

W. J. O'BRIEN, Ticket Agent.

Office corner Magazine and Natchez Streets, NEW ORLEANS.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA ROUTE.

The Texas and Pacific Railway,

NOW OPEN FOR BUSINESS.

Is the direct line from NEW ORLEANS to NORTHERN, EASTERN, WESTERN and CENTRAL TEXAS and California. Old and New Mexico and California. Through sleeper to Dallas, Fort Worth and to Colorado. Only one change to San Francisco.

Through Express leaves New Orleans from depot foot of Tchoupchee street, at 12:35 noon. This train stops only at St. Charles, Vacherie, Donaldsonville and Bogalusa, between New Orleans and Baton Rouge junction.

Baton Rouge Accommodation leaves New Orleans at 7:30 A. M., foot of Tchoupchee street. Stops at all 11 stations to Baton Rouge.

Baton Rouge Accommodation arrives at New Orleans at 6:30 P. M.

For tickets or information apply at 47 St. Charles, corner Gravier street, or depot, foot of Tchoupchee street.

A. A. GRAHAM, Ticket Agent.

B. W. MULLOCH, Gen. Passenger Agent.

W. H. NEWMAN, Traffic Manager.

H. M. HOKIE, Third Vice President, St. Louis, Mo.

It Will Pay You

TO

READ! READ! READ!

GOOD READING

GOOD READING

CHEAP

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE!

Illinois Central Railroad.

The Great Through Line for Passengers and Freight

TO ALL POINTS

NORTH EAST AND WEST.

THE ONLY LINE running PULLMAN PALACE SLEEPING CARS THROUGH FROM NEW ORLEANS TO CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS, MEMPHIS and CHICAGO WITHOUT CHANGE OF CARS.

ONLY ONE CHANGE TO NEW YORK AND EASTERN CITIES.

THE ONLY DIRECT ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, CHICAGO AND ALL POINTS NORTH AND WEST. Many miles shorter and many hours quicker than any other line.

STANDARD GAUGE, ALL STEEL RAILS, ELEGANT COACHES, CLOSE CONNECTIONS, and QUICK TIME.

RATES AS LOW AS THE LOWEST.

On and after October 7, 1884—

DOUBLE DAILY TRAINS leave and arrive at Calhoun Street Depot as follows:

LEAVE. ARRIVE.

Exp. No. 4, 9:15 A. M. Exp. No. 1, 7:30 A. M.

Exp. No. 4, 8:30 P. M. Exp. No. 1, 6:45 A. M.

Ticket office, corner Canal and Carondelet.

MATT. KENNEDY, Ticket Agent.

WM. MURRAY, Gen. Southern Passenger Agt.

A. H. HANSON, Gen. Passenger Agt., Chicago.

J. W. COLEMAN, Asst. Gen. Pass. Agt., New Orleans.

C. M. SHEPPE, Superintendent.

Queen and Crescent Line.

New Orleans and Northeastern

Railroad.

—The Short Line—

FOR FREIGHT AND PASSENGERS

—To All Points—

North and East and in the Northwest

Low Rates and Quick Time on

Freight Traffic.

THE MODEL, MODERN THROUGHFARE, Double Daily Solid Through Passenger Trains with Pullman Palace Cars.

—FROM—

NEW ORLEANS

—TO—

Meridian,

Birmingham,

Chattanooga

and Cincinnati.

Morning Express. Evening Mail

Leaves New Orleans..... 10:40 A. M. 10:40 P. M.

Arrives Meridian..... 5:40 P. M. 6:00 A. M.

" Birmingham..... 11:15 P. M. 1:00 P. M.

" Chattanooga..... 4:20 A. M. 6:35 P. M.

" Cincinnati..... 5:25 P. M. 7:10 A. M.

Freight and Passenger Depots,

Press street and Levees.

Freight and Ticket Offices,

34 and 36 St. Charles street, N. O.

H. COLLIERAN, General Freight Agent.

E. E. WILSON,

Gen'l Pass. Agent,

Queen and Crescent Line,

Cincinnati, Ohio.

BARNARD BROWN,

Gen'l Frt. and Pass. Agt., N. O. and N. E. R. R.,

New Orleans, La.

MULTUM IN PARVO.

This ancient phrase aptly describes

Rev. W. C. Black's book, "A Centennial Retrospect," concerning which Dr. C. B. Galloway says: "It is crowded with thrilling and instructive incidents in the lives of the heroic men who planted Methodism in the great South-west."

The Natchez Democrat says: "It is interesting not only to Methodists, but to all who would know the character of the pioneers who made a history for Mississippi. The reader who takes it up will not be likely to lay it down until all its pages are read."

Rev. W. L. C. Hunt says: "It contains a vast amount of important information. It is as much in it as any work of its size I ever read."

Rev. J. G. Jones says: "It reveals talent as a brilliant paragraph writer."

It contains notices

MISCELLANEOUS.

GUERRERO DIST.—FOURTH ROUND

Hogshead.....	41 00	—
Barrel.....	22 00	—
Half barrel.....	12 50	—
FERTILIZERS:
Cotton seed.....	8 00	10 50
Mash.....	22 50	—
Pure ground bone.....	42 00	—
Muriatic acid.....	3	—
Sulphuric acid.....	2 1/2	—
Bone black.....	34	—

Like a Prairie on Fire.

"Parker's Tonic is bound to sweeten the blood."

LONDON, Nov. 27. — The Vienna correspondent says United States Minister Lowell writes friends there that he intends to return to America in order to resume his literary work.

B. D. WOOD & BROS
Dealers in Best Qualities of
COAL and COKE
25 Camp Street, New Orleans.
Families Supplied at Lowest Market Rates.

PENSACOLA DIST. - FOURTH BOARD.
Powerline at Bayview	Oct. 20
Military station	27
Sequilar at Adams	27
Shuckton at Shuckton	Oct. 4
Pensacola station	31
Warrington at Warrington	31
Dealsville at M. C. road	23
Brewton at Blomberg	23
Bay Minette at S. E. 10	Nov. 1
Georgiana at South Bay	8
Gravelly at Gravelly	15

tery, at Hertsch.	Sept. 27,
Cromel Spruce	30, Dec.
Spruce Ridge, at Oak Hill.
20	J. A. B. JONES, P. F.
JACKSON HILL.—FOURTH HOUND.
Shirazi, at Mt. Pleasant	Sept. 27,
Jackson	Oct. 11,
Carb.	18,
Carb.	28,
M. dison, at W. V. Spruce	Nov. 1,
Thomson, at Mt. Carmel	Nov. 1,
Boyer, at Fletcher Chapel.	45

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 50.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1480.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.
OFFICE—119 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.
Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Teachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. FELIX R. HILL,
REV. CHAS. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KERNER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GOLFERT,
REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

THE ANGEL WHISPER.

BY ETHEL T. HUGHES.

Deep mystery of human life, that holds
Within the tiny form the hopes of heaven,
The love and joy of earth! In restless sleep,
The baby lies, while the tired mother weeps
To hush the household tasks; and all unseen,
An angel tends the child with whisper sweet.
A lifting of the little hands; a smile,
That parts the rosy lips; a lingering sigh,
A quiet look of perfect peace, is all
The sign that baby gives in greeting back.

O little sailor on this life's rough sea!
What is it that the angels whisper thee?
As they cradle thee their light hands rest,
As close above thee hover the loving hosts!
Thou hast but feet to climb; they wings to fly:
Thou'rt life eternal! Thou'rt immortal! die!
The light of home is with thee, little one!
Close to the father's arms when day is done,
Thou'rt whitherest back what angel tells to thee;
Or cooing sweetly on thy mother's knee,
With lips the angels kiss, repeat the strain,
And every day repeat it new again!

Ah, dim and pathless track that lies between
The doors of earthly home and home unseen,
Whence from the Father's face the angel feet
Come to the little child with whisper sweet!
Could but the veil be dropped from wondering eyes
How could we trace thee to the boundless skies?
What lessons should we learn of courage true,
How strong to gleam to suffer and to do,
What countless glimpses of a Father's love,
What treasures of the home prepared above?

No cradle bed too poor to have thy care,
No lullaby that the child may hear,
Of softer strains, dear angel whisper sweet,
How far the way for thy swift willing feet!
How do we stand revealed to thee, to thee,
O guardian angel from our home to be!
With pitying love, with tidings of vain alloy,
With this life our best and dearest joy;
Telling thy that the surest path to God,
The way of blessing, is by angel's trod!

—Woman's Century.

Letter from China.

(Continued.)

MR. EDITOR: On December 9, 1884, the French began to fire upon the city of Shanghai from the French man-of-war. They had a slight skirmish with some of the insurgent troops near the north gate of the city, when three or four insurgents were killed and the rest of the troops were driven back into the city. I witnessed the bombardment, in which I am sure many innocent people suffered, and, perhaps, were killed. The action of the French in this matter was condemned by the English and the United States consuls of Shanghai. The insurgent chief sent a messenger to the United States and English consuls asking them if they had any intention of assisting the French, and the answer they returned was that they were using every effort to prevent them from firing upon the city.

On Dec. 10, Sabbath, the French authorities placed sharpshooters in a position near the wall of the city, with orders to fire upon man, woman or child who should at any time appear upon the wall. At this time it was the custom of many men and women to come to the wall every day to obtain provisions, and I feel sure many were killed by the sharpshooters. In this they showed no mercy, and earned the ill-will of thousands of Chinese in and out of the city. The French authorities sent word to the insurgent chief that if he would vacate the city they would protect him and his followers from the violence of the imperial troops. The insurgent chief sent word to them that they could occupy the ground outside the city, but within they should not have an inch, and any Frenchman who tries to enter the city would be shot.

Truly we were in the midst of war and rumors of war, and we had to begin our missionary work under great difficulties. We could not go into the country any distance, for bands of lawless soldiers were roaming about ready for any set of violence. Notwithstanding all the troubles without and around us, I had that peace which passeth all understanding. I had an increased desire to be wholly the Lord's—to be sanctified in body, soul and spirit, and entirely given up to the service of God.

On December 24 we saw in the distance a very strange procession, such as we had not before witnessed, and, feeling anxious to know what it meant, we determined to follow it. We walked for two miles and saw them deposit a coffin in an idolatrous temple. There were eight Buddhist and eight other priests present. There were six tables, each of which was carried by four men. Upon one table was an entire sheep uncooked, on another was a hog, and upon the other tables were placed chickens, rice, cakes, fruits and many other articles of food. All was placed before the idols in order that the spirit of the deceased and his ancestors might partake, and it was expected the idols would also take a portion. There were also many tablets and the portrait of the deceased on paper, carried by two men in a sedan chair. The wife and daughter of the deceased were dressed in sackcloth, and were bitterly wailing and lamenting the loss of husband and father. Candles and incense were placed before the great, grim and dusty images, and the wife and daughter prostrated themselves before them and began to weep and lament. So then all was dark in the future, and they had no hope of ever again seeing him who had been snatched away by death. A great number of firecrackers were exploded to frighten away all evil and welcome spirits, and the sixteen priests of those heathen gods set up unearthly sounds of what they call music and sacred melodies. These confused sounds were deafening to our ears, but it seemed to delight the great crowd which had assembled. If any noise would frighten away evil spirits, certainly that would answer the purpose. Large quantities of mock money were burned before the coffin to pay the way of the spirit of the deceased in the world of darkness. The man was a relative of one who had been a high official, and according to Chinese custom the family could borrow his title and all the honors which could be bestowed upon the man who had held such a high position under the government could also be granted to him. In the judgment of the people this is quite correct, and no one thinks of questioning the proceeding. The food thus placed before the idols was then removed to the home of the widow, and a grand feast was made for the priests and invited guests which lasted two or three days. Though the priests were not allowed to eat meat, there were other things they could eat, such as rice, vegetable, fruits, and these were prepared for them in great abundance.

The new year, 1885, dawned upon us in all its splendor and beauty. All the young missionaries of our little band were full of life and hard at work trying to master this difficult language and get a sufficient vocabulary to make known the truths of the gospel to this dying people, dead in trespasses and sins. All were cheerful, full of hope and determined to begin the new year with redoubled energy. One of our number said, "I hope to live to see the day when we shall have camp meetings in China." He was the first to be taken from our midst.

How different were the circumstances of this new year from the one which preceded it! Here we were in a heathen land and multiplied thousands of idolaters at our doors. We were circumscribed in our field of labor. We were surrounded by hostile foes. The city and the country were closed against us. The city of Shanghai had been in the hands of the insurgents for eighteen months, and no imperial army of ten thousand soldiers were camped around the city. The French had bombarded the city three separate times. At one time they breached the wall and tried to enter, but were repulsed with the loss of twelve men. During the whole of January things continued to become more threatening. Foreigners were fired upon by the insurgents and imperialists, and near the settlement they were continually molesting them and threatening an attack. Near the close of the month news came to us that the insurgent and imperial troops had united and determined to attack all Europeans, murder them and destroy all their property. The whole foreign population, including all the missionaries, was formed into a home guard for our defense. With my rifle in hand I had to take my watch with others. One night, while on guard with the Rev. Dr. Nelson, of the American Episcopal mission, we had our watch through the village on the Wookung river (Soochow creek), a notoriously wicked people even to this day. With my rifle on my shoulder, we marched from street to street, or by paths, long after midnight, when the thousands of villagers around us were sleeping, not dreaming of a guard of missionaries walking their streets to keep the peace. It did seem so inconsistent for missionaries who had come to bring glad tidings of peace to these heathen people and yet be marching about them with gun in hand for our protection. There was not a man to be seen upon the streets but ourselves, and everything around us was hushed in profound sleep. The whole place was under martial law at that time, and we, with others, were appointed to do all in our power to protect the lives of our families. The beat of the native watchman upon their bamboo was heard in every direction, while the call from the shore of the foreign guard was answered by the watchman aboard ship in the still hours of the night, crying out, "All well." It was a sound never to be forgotten, and reminded us that we were living in perilous times.

While going our round of the native village, between midnight and day, the whole heavens seemed to be lit up by a great fire in the city, and we were sure the French had entered the city or the imperial troops. It was the morning of February 17 and the first day of the Chinese new year. Dr. Nelson and I kept a close watch upon the banks of the Wookung river, for we did not know but that the great fire was the signal for a united attack upon all foreigners. The noise of a multitude of voices from the city and vicinity was terrific and greatly confirmed our suspicions. It was a time of great anxiety with us. Should we give the alarm? While watching the progress of the fire we saw a small craft come gliding down the river and soon two men landed near us. We called to them to halt, and found they were long-haired insurgents who had escaped from the city. Seeing we were foreigners, they fell on their knees and begged us to save their lives. They were taken to Dr. Nelson's house, their heads shaved and before daylight they were set at liberty. We heard afterwards that one or both of them were caught and beheaded. They told us the insurgents had set the city on fire and had escaped by the way of the south gate. The morning sun rose in all his splendor and we were all safe, but the whole city seemed in a blaze and in great commotion. Will write of this in my next letter. I am,

Yours in Christ,

J. W. LAMRUTH.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Oct. 19, 1884.

Anniversaries Again.

MR. EDITOR: Some have already spoken through our church organs on a subject near my heart, viz: what is the best method of securing a full result from our missionary anniversaries? The plan usually adopted with us has been to strive by all lawful means to supplement the deficit in our regular offerings by a good anniversary collection. Our best speakers, and especially our most persistent and successful collectors, have been secured for the occasion. These have done noble work—the latter often under protest of their own inner feelings of reluctance and propriety. While striving to draw or squeeze a creditable collection from an unwilling audience, these have, sometimes, themselves been dragged into giving more than they felt able; or subscribing what they could not pay until the close of next year. But aside from all the questionable methods that have at times resulted in adding a few hundred dollars to that brought in by the pastors, I submit that it were better to make our anniversaries subserve the higher end of sowing seed—thoughts for future harvests rather than of gleaning a few remaining sheaves from a field already well harvested. It is a fact sadly evident to the members of our Missionary Board that on Saturday night of Conference session our congregations are becoming more and more meagre.

The preachers themselves often stay away because they fear the urgency of collectors, which sometimes has resulted in their giving the last dollar which was to take them home. For the average Methodist preacher has so high a regard for the honor of his church, especially Conference times, that he had rather beg his way home than see a pitiful collection on so great an occasion. Then the hospitable people, among whom we sojourn, have usually contributed to this cause all that an indefatigable pastor has been able to extract from them. Therefore, being ashamed in the presence of their preacher guests, to give the little additional they might, they also begin to make excuse and stay at home.

If, instead of the time-honored collection, the whole force of this intrinsically grand occasion were delivered on the hearts and consciences of the many preachers and laymen gladly present to listen, the result would be a great increase of missionary information and zeal in a hundred preachers, whose word, during the next January and February, would burn up many old stubble fields of chaffy "opposition to foreign missions" and bring into our treasury next Conference through the regular channels tenfold more in actual cash than the meagre result of an anniversary collection on the present plan.

In this let us build wisely with reference to the future. Our chosen speakers would have more breathing thoughts and burning words if they felt they were speaking for the ages to come, informing the minds of an intelligent audience who would assimilate and propagate the truths uttered in hundreds of other congregations. Only let the addresses be real seed—sowing, not grinding. To illustrate my view of the needs of the hour I quote from the thoughtful utterance of our beloved W. B. Lewis. In his late account of "The Mississippi Synod's" session, in Crystal Springs, he mentions "one of the best missionary addresses I ever heard. It did not provoke even a smile at any point, but it made the missionary fire glow on every Christian heart. It made a profound impression for good on a large audience, without the slightest compromise of the true dignity and Christian propriety of the occasion." I trust we are already entering a new era of right progress in this important sphere, and that our people may be brought seriously to consider the solemn responsibility and joyful privilege of giving the gospel to the heathen.

Yours in Christian love,

J. F. DRAKE.

FAYETTE, MISS., Nov. 28, 1884.

December 14, 1884.

The Executive Committee of the Centennial Conference has made arrangements for a centennial celebration of the Sunday-schools of the city of Baltimore, Sunday, December 14, 1884, at three P. M. The Sunday included in the time set apart for the December Conference. Twenty-one churches will be opened for this service. These twenty-one churches will be so many centers in which all the Sunday-schools of the respective districts will unite. The day on which the twenty-five thousand Sunday-school children of Baltimore Methodism are invited to meet for prayer and praise, promises to be one of peculiar impressiveness.

Further: The committee recommends that all Sunday-schools in the United States and Canada conduct a similar service at such hour, on the same day, as may be most convenient—that where practical, several schools unite in the service—that where this can not be done, each meeting be held for the several schools.

If the recommendation of the committee shall be observed, prayer and praise will ascend on that day from more than three millions identified with the Sunday-school work of American Methodism.

The committee recommends the following order of exercises:

1. Doxology: "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."
2. Prayer.
3. Singing: All hail! the power of Jesus Name.
4. Address. Topic: "The hand of God as seen in the Sunday-school work of the past century."
5. Singing: "All glory and praise to Jesus be given." (Gospel Hymns 111.)
6. Address. Topic: "The promise of the Sunday-school work for the coming century if God's people are faithful."
7. Prayer for the spirit of consecration to this work.
8. Singing: "Walk in the Light." (Gift of Grace.)
9. Benediction.

T. J. MAGRUDER,
SAM'L. RODGERS,
J. F. DITCHER, Committee.
R. O. ANDREWS, CHAIRMAN.
H. K. CARROLL, Sec'y.

A "Thus Saith the Lord."

We reproduce from the Southern Churchman the following response to the Religious Herald. It seems some Romanists' down in South America turned Baptists, and the Religious Herald felicitates itself upon the report that the change was from an unaided study of the Bible. As the Southern Churchman and Religious Herald each claim to represent the only true and apostolic church, the discussion has additional interest, especially on the subject of ecclesiastical antiquity and ancestry.

That a few ignorant South Americans, coming to the Bible for the purpose of finding a "thus saith the Lord" for everything, could not find infant baptism thus commanded, is not hard to explain; their error was to expect commands for everything. But if they had asked for a "thus saith the Lord" for building churches, or slugging out of a book, or burying the dead, or solemnizing matrimony, and many other matters—just suppose their condition. They write to their friends in Richmond, saying, "We can not find a 'thus saith the Lord' for infant baptism!" and "Richmond—brethren—reply." "True, and therefore you must not believe in it or do it." Again they write, saying, "A 'thus saith the Lord' for feet washing; what must we do? Baptist brethren send down word, never mind that, it's of no consequence. Again they write, we find no 'thus saith the Lord' for keeping the first day of the week holy; what must we do? Baptist brethren send word, you must do that. Once more they write, we find a 'thus saith the Lord' for keeping holy the seventh day of the week. Again, Baptist brethren from Richmond write, never mind about that. What a condition for 'the fifty'! Will they not conclude 'thus saith the Lord' has no effect upon the Baptist brethren of Virginia; that they are playing fast and loose with the word of the Living One; and can anything more terrible be imagined? Baptist brethren, we beg you reflect about this matter, and do not blow hot to-day and cold to-morrow, when the word of God is to be explained.

And while, as we said, we can not explain this particular vagary of "the fifty," perhaps (not Bro. So and So, but) the Religious Herald may explain how it is that not a few ignorant South Americans, but many thousands more or less intelligent Anglo-Saxons, reading no other book except the New Testament, should have come to the conclusion that the "laying on of hands" (confirmation) is one of the principles of Christ to be observed forever. And yet since 1639 there have been Baptist churches in this country who will hold no communion with other Baptists unless they practice confirmation.

And will the Religious Herald explain, not how a few ignorant South Americans, but several thousand, or less intelligent Anglo-Saxons, reading no other book but the Bible, should have come to the conclusion that Christians must not keep holy the first day of the week, but the seventh; and so call themselves "Seventh Day Baptists?"

And will the Religious Herald explain how it is that not a few ignorant South Americans, but many thousands of the more intelligent Saxon race, reading only the New Testament, should have come to the conclusion that "the washing of feet" is a divine institution?

And other Baptists, reading only the New Testament are Calvinistic Baptists; other Baptists are Arminians, reading only the New Testament; some Baptists are close communion and other Baptists free communion, reading only the New Testament. Other Baptists, reading only the New Testament, are opposed to missionary societies, Sunday-schools, colleges and theological seminaries; reading only the New Testament they can find no "thus saith the Lord" for any of these things, and are opposed by other Baptists who do. But these Baptists are just as wise as those Baptists who want a "thus saith the Lord" for infant baptism, when our Lord Christ affirmed that infants were members of his kingdom: "Of such (infants) is the kingdom of heaven" (compared.) We are sorry we can not give more satisfactory answer to our contemporary why these "fifty" should have become Baptists. Nor are we able to give answer to another question, "Why there should be Baptists at all. Nor why a denomination of Christians only two hundred and fifty years old should affirm they alone are the church of God! It is amazing that Christian people, reading only the New Testament, which is eighteen hundred years old, should have come to the conclusion that they who are only two hundred and fifty years old, are alone that church which Christ said he would build and the gates of hades not prevail against it.

Special Christian Work.

The church of Christ exists for the double purpose of cherishing the spiritual life of believers, and bringing the unsaved home to God. In their principles and in their methods these two chief ends of Christian endeavor are essentially one. Wherever the spiritual life of the church flourishes, converts are multiplied and extension certain; but poverty in spiritual experience invariably restricts the advance of Christianity. It is not enough that theoretically it should be held true, that salvation is the work of God; it must be borne in mind, that in the work of salvation God's people are his instruments. Their fitness for his service depends on the degree of their resemblance to himself. Character is one of the chief elements of their usefulness, and of far more account than knowledge. Reality, consistency, earnestness and entire consecration are qualities that never fail to be influential. They are often simulated, but simulated virtues, like painted fire, possess no efficiency. The root of all excellence, and therefore, of all real usefulness is in the life. To get it deepened in the soul, and enriched with the gifts of divine grace is the true, the direct, the certain way to success in God's work. In framing plans for special effort let all begin with renewed consecration. Let the whole church—ministers, officers and members, with one heart wait upon God for the gift of the Holy Ghost. He is the Lord and Giver of life, and the influence of life, although often hard to define, and often still beyond the power of analysis, is nevertheless the most pervasive, the most potent, sways with a mightier spell, and searches with a more penetrating force, than any other that is human. It is moreover cumulative, ordinarily the influence increases with numbers and is so felt in large assemblies. Divisions always lessen it. Work for God whether normal or special is greatly helped or hindered according as the church joins in with all its strength, or a portion of the membership keeps formally aloof. Those who stand apart are not influential, and therefore, not responsible. Not only is the general influence lessened by isolation, souls are directly affected, the hearts of earnest workers are discouraged, the moral valuation of soul-saving effort is depreciated, countenance is given to indecision, and failure, however unintentional, openly invited. Now, as of old, the Master's word is, "Whosoever is not with me is against me." To make special efforts successful they must be united. The whole church connection ought to be incorporated in the movement, and by unanimity and earnestness show to the world that salvation is above all things a matter of personal and supreme moment. Doubtless this holds true at all times as well as on occasions when Christian people make special endeavors for the conversion of the unsaved. But much of the worth of particular efforts consists in the combination of strength, in the force of the shock given to monotony, in the coming from under the benumbing power of sameness, and evincing openly the intensity of Christian solicitude for the conversion of souls. Such a union of believers in a crusade against the enslaving power of worldliness, and for the rescue of their children and friends from the deadly bondage of indifference, is a prime duty. Let a holy rivalry for its discharge mark all the churches; in order to success, let all enter fully into the highest Christian life, and then upon such concerted efforts will come down the smile and blessing of Almighty God.—Irish Christian Advocate.

Central Centenary Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.
REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D.,
Chairman.
REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.,
Secretary.
JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH,
Treasurer.

—The Episcopal

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of
C. C. Stoeffler

(Continued.)

He arose, while still the close of meeting, the Wednesday after the meeting closed. Bro. Manning Mahee and myself, as before, sat close and pray with him. On our arrival found him in a very apparently weak condition. As soon as we saw me he held his head and broke out into most pained expressions of spiritual distress and uttering the prospect of a long without hope. He, then, said, have been lying here fifteen days, paralysed with the stroke, and is thus being segregated to the life hereafter with the poor Germans." "O," said I, "I don't want to guide me pray for me." I asked him if he never enjoyed religion. He said "No." I encouraged him to hope in the name of God and pointed him to Christ, because as I believed that he requested to let him rest a few moments.

(To be continued.)

CRYSTAL SPRINGS CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

win, and others, once prominent in social and religious circles, had passed he passed quickly to the next item in the agenda.

Beside the class meeting work, the "Band Society" at Cayuga, of which several brethren whose names I mentioned were members. We met weekly, once a week, and conducted our meetings strictly according to the rules then contained in the Discipline. Among all the institutions of Methodism none were more adapted to spiritual development and the promotion of brotherly love than the "Band Societies."

At this digression I proceed to my special mention of Bros. Ladd and Winners. "Bob" Lackey, I was then fairly known, as I have already said, had a reputation because of his own, his native city. He was prominent in masonic circles, a grand lecturer for the district, and a mason in the State. I was of so humble origin and where, he was told there was a preaching at the Methodist Church. After the meal he repaired to the place. Being a lutelete, the congregation had assembled and the sermon had commenced. There were two trances in the church from the west, one on either side of the pulpit, entered the chthon he heard many sounds of many voices (responding and "all the people," he said, "books in their hands.") He walked almost the entire length of the church to find a seat. Turning to seat himself, he eyed toward the pulpit where (as he used to be) "saw a man standing upon a dream in a nightgown." Very soon the congregation was called to prayer. All kneeled—ha with the rest. Several responses according to liturgy there was a general "Amen" from the congregation. He then

Now, whatever technical name be given to any or all the various states, stages or conditions, or various duties enjoined upon Christians, this one truth underlies universal application, viz: The younger or old, of much or little knowledge or intelligence, who abjects any one general command, which is an exemplification of one of the Christian of very high, if not the best conceivable type, — the life style of Christianity is unbelief — the difference, and the only fundamental difference, between religion and unbelief is that the latter resists and holds a stiff neck, says, "I will have no unrequited nature, in opposition Divine government. I am former is obedient, docile, yielding, and does so cheerfully."

We have most of us young or thoughtless notion that young or

I have held seven protracted tina. My last was held at Fannin by the presiding elder,
Williams, J. P. Heard and A.
Nicholson, also a Bro. Lewis, whose services were highly appre-
as they presided in demonstratthe Spirit and in power. Bro. W. preached a good confessional ser-Sunday, and we intended to be regularly can cannot service in the nearly way of truly restoring matter, but time prevented. Mr.
B. King noted the same at all church. He is a local minister practice as physician prevents from getting as much of his val-service as we desired. I have forty-two acres close to the church twenty-five cultivated but idle. S.
Baptists joined our congregation beautiful lot of four and a half acland, situated in the town of hatchee, on the Vicksburg and clan railroad, has been deeded to a gift from Bro. Frank King, of
W. King, already mentioned. S.
to be used for purposes of which will make it much pro-

WD Christmas, Christians, and Egg Nog

This chief advantage secured by new electrical piano forces which Mason & Hamer Company are introducing is undoubtedly the quality of tone, which is of considerable importance in a fundamental excellence in tone. By their new management, the instruments are accurately and securely built; subject to little or no variation in tone, and comparatively, healthful in the atmosphere, etc. Many perfect accurate vibrations of the strings are secured, which are continuous entirely, instead of the tones being dulled by the duration of the notes. The general quality of the Mason & Hamer piano is out of these from the same cause. This instrument in these plans is, in the best modes of construction, here employed.—Boston Traveller.

The American Institute of Christian Philosophy.

In the Christian Advocate, Nashville, September 27, is an article by Rev. William F. Tillet, professor of systematic theology in Vanderbilt University. The professor modestly omits the statement that he was the second lecturer in the course.

The last summer school of the American Institute of Christian Philosophy, which Rev. Charles F. Deems, D.D., is president, was held at Rice's Springs, a popular summer resort near Osego lake, in the northern part of New York. It is proved to be the most successful, and encouraging to all present, and especially to those more immediately interested in the success and progress of this theological-philosophical organization. The primary object of the Institute is a laudable one, to defend the faith of the Christian Church against all opposing theories, and to present the Christian faith in its fullness, against the bias of the unbelief, world, scepticism, rationalism, agnosticism, materialism, atheism, and thus to advance the interests of evangelized religion. Its design is to present, in that form and manner best suited to the age, the evidences of Christianity, and by giving new and original statements to old arguments. It endeavors to show that all science that is entitled to the name is in perfect accord with the Bible, and that the best and truest philosophy is Christian philosophy. It is endeavoring to show the evidences of revealed religion drawn from all sources that they may present an impregnable wall for the defense of Christian truth against the enemy, and lay such a foundation as shall give believers stronger faith in their faith. These are among the noblest objects for which the Institute exists, and which it is rapidly accomplishing so far as its means and its membership will allow. It has associated together Christian men of science, philosophers, authors, writers, teachers, preachers, thinkers, that it may the more efficiently accomplish these ends by means of lectures, addresses and discussions, all of which, or at least the best of which, are published in the Christian Thought, the bimonthly journal of the Institute.

There were eight speakers present at the last meeting, representing four theological seminaries, one State university, two bishops, and the Church of the Strangers. Dr. Francis L. Patton, of Princeton, delivered an address on "Bible," discussing it in all its bearings upon the religious faith of the masses and of the individual. It was a timely discussion of a living topic. Dr. Patton is a ready and forcible extemporaneous speaker. He has of late years come to be one of the leading thinkers and theologians of the Northern Presbyterian Church. The third speaker was Dr. Herck Johnson, for many years pastor of one of the leading Presbyterian churches of Chicago, but now professor in the theological seminary located there. His theme was "Theological Education and the Bible," and his address was a strong and ringing protest against the introduction into the pulpit of all sensational topics, whether philosophical or otherwise, and an earnest plea that only the pure, plain gospel should be preached from the pulpit. Dr. Johnson is a native of Alabama, where he was once a minister of the Gospel, and the University of that State. He spoke in the most fervent and affectionate terms of our much-loved and venerable chancellor, remarking, in private conversation to the writer, that he felt that he owed more to him than to any man living. The Bishop was elected to the House of Michigan when he had been in the ministry but ten years, having been elected some two or three years previous to another diocese which he declined.

Monday, the 25th, Dr. Deems delivered the annual address. He showed how little there was to cause alarm, and how much to encourage our faith in the present day. Bishop Foster was prevented from being present according to appointment by unforeseen circumstances. He was supplied by Rev. H. H. Foster, Episcopal clergyman of Rochester, N. Y. The writer regretted that he was unable to remain and hear the address of Prof. Nash K. Davis, D.D., of the University of Virginia, on the theme, "Is Prayer Reasonable?" and that of Rev. Willis J. Beecher, D.D., of Andover Theological Seminary, on "Theological versus Critical Evidence." Altogether it was a most pleasant and profitable meeting of the Institute. The country produces no better theological school than that which appears in Christian Thought, where the addresses delivered before the Institute are published. These addresses are not dry discussions of dead theological issues, but for the most part, able and scholarly discussions of living and important questions of a theological philosophical nature.

It is a rule of the Institute that every speaker, after having been introduced, should in the afternoon, come down and take a chair in the midst of the audience and submit to criticism and questions from any and all who want further light on points not made plain, or who take issue with him upon any assumed. These afternoon inquiry meetings are very popular with the students, and very popular and much attended by the speakers. It is a most remarkable feature of the Institute as it is calculated to make speakers accurate in their statements and lead them to make only such assertions as they know or firmly believe to be true, and are prepared to defend. Public speakers having the habit of making statements and not being used to having their statements called in question, are likely to grow careless or inaccurate in their assertions, and build up false arguments on unsophisticated reasoning which may be shown to be untrue by the public speaker who is often or compelled to speak before an audience who do not know as much about his own subject, as he knows himself. But he still have an opportunity to call in question the accuracy of statements made or the soundness of arguments advanced. The liberty enjoyed at these inquiry meetings, in the pulpit as elsewhere, too often leads to an abuse which intelligent listeners are always quick to detect and not infrequently to complain of.

A most pleasant feature of this meeting was one not down on the program, viz: an excursion to Osego lake, where a steamer was waiting to give them a pleasant ride on this beautiful and historic sheet of water. It carried them to Cooperstown, an attractive little city at the southern extremity of the lake, named after the celebrated author and novelist, James Fenimore Cooper, who lived, labored and died here. It was a pleasure to visit the old cemetery, where he and his wife and babe lay buried, and to sail over the lake which his own writings have made historic, and where the scenes of some of his most popular novels are located.

The Institute—at least the officers and lecturers—were entertained with a right royal hospitality and free of charge, by Mr. Uriah Welch, proprietor of the New American Hotel, who also contributed very liberally in cash toward meeting the expenses of the summer session. He is a refined and modest Christian gentleman. The meetings of the Institute were held in the Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. D. M. Rankin, D.D., is pastor, who impressed all with his Christian courtesy and fraternal spirit.

SINGLE WOMEN.—A clever old maid once said that it was far better to be laughed at because you were not married than not to be able to laugh because you were. There is sound logic in that. It is well for women to marry if she meets a good, true man, who loves her, and whom she loves; but if she be not suited, better that she remain single. Many old maids are helpful, capable, and sweet tempered, and fill their allotted niche as acceptably as their married sisters. Are they not more to be honored than they would have been had they married merely for a home or position? Our young ladies have erroneous ideas upon this subject. They feel almost disgraced if they have arrived at a mature age, and are not able to write "Mrs." before their names. Their whole ambition is to get a husband, by hook or crook, but get him somehow they must. Consequently they take the first man who offers himself, whether he really suits them or not.

Now, girls, do not marry in haste. Get the best education possible, help about domestic affairs, and enter some trade or profession for which you have a taste, and master it. Skilled labor is always well paid. Don't spend your time repining because you can not see the coming man. If you never see him, you can live useful, happy lives.

Don't fail to read the "ad" headed "Mullin in Parvo."

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Christian Editor's Opinion.
Mr. G. R. Lynch, publisher of the Alabama Christian Advocate, at Birmingham, writes: "I have all over the State, and my friends say they find your Lemon Balm a most excellent medicine. My book-keeper and foreman both use it in place of camphor, etc."

Twenty-five Years a Citizen of Georgia.
And the past seven years I have suffered continually from bronchitis or bronchitis as a was severe type. I was treated in two prominent physicians, and had taken all the potent medicines recommended for the disease, and had continued to grow worse until I commenced the use of Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm. One dose bottles has made a great cure of my disease.

J. B. HILL,
No. Connally St., Atlanta, Ga.

A CARD.
From a number of St. Louis prominent citizens to the friends of Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm, the following interesting pronouncement is the only pleasant, thoroughly reliable and economical remedy they have ever used for the disease for which it is recommended.

Judge Alex. Davis, Fourth and Chestnut streets.
Dr. J. M. Hughes, 102 N. Fourth St.
Hon. J. L. Marshall, office opposite Court House.
T. L. Francis, law office, 102 Court Avenue.
Capt. J. A. Smith, of the St. Louis Best Canning Company.

Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm, prepared at his drug store, 114 West Third Street, St. Louis, Mo. It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility, and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder.

Fifty cents for one half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and by J. L. Lyons, wholesale druggist.

While in the summer months the weather is so hot, it is particularly desirable to have a remedy that will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

When Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is used, it will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. It is sold by all druggists.

Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility, and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder.

Fifty cents for one half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and by J. L. Lyons, wholesale druggist.

While in the summer months the weather is so hot, it is particularly desirable to have a remedy that will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

When Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is used, it will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. It is sold by all druggists.

Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility, and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder.

Fifty cents for one half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and by J. L. Lyons, wholesale druggist.

While in the summer months the weather is so hot, it is particularly desirable to have a remedy that will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

When Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is used, it will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. It is sold by all druggists.

Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility, and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder.

Fifty cents for one half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and by J. L. Lyons, wholesale druggist.

While in the summer months the weather is so hot, it is particularly desirable to have a remedy that will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

When Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is used, it will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. It is sold by all druggists.

Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility, and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder.

Fifty cents for one half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and by J. L. Lyons, wholesale druggist.

While in the summer months the weather is so hot, it is particularly desirable to have a remedy that will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

When Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is used, it will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. It is sold by all druggists.

Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility, and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder.

Fifty cents for one half pint bottle. One dollar for one and a half pint bottle. Sold by druggists generally, and by J. L. Lyons, wholesale druggist.

While in the summer months the weather is so hot, it is particularly desirable to have a remedy that will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

When Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is used, it will cool the system, and give relief from the heat and the various ailments that attend it. It is sold by all druggists.

Dr. Mooley's Lemon Balm is a most valuable remedy for all these ailments, and is sold by all druggists.

It cures all biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney disease, fever, chills, impurities of the blood, loss of appetite, debility, and nervous prostration by regulating the liver, stomach, bowels, kidneys and bladder.

PROSPECTUS YOUTH'S COMPANION.

HISTORY.
JAS. A. FROUDE.

SCIENCE.
PROF. TYNDALL.

LANGUAGE.
MAX MULLER.

STORIES.
J. T. TROWBRIDGE.

LETTERS.
L. C. MOULTON.

ADVENTURE.
C. A. STEPHENS.

THE COMPANION has now attained a weekly circulation larger than that of any other literary paper in the world. Its steadily increasing success imposes an additional responsibility upon its conductors to deserve the appreciation and encouragement of American parents. It will use all its abilities, and all its resources, to make the young people of America mainly men and womanly women.

Illustrated Serial Stories

A SERIAL STORY for Boys, by MY BROTHER FRANK. A Serial Story for the Household, by SERIAL STORY for Boys and Girls, by A COUNTRY COUSIN. A Story for Girls, by SUSPECTED. A Serial Story, by SERIAL STORY for Bad Boys, by

J. T. TROWBRIDGE.
Mrs. OLIPHANT.
ALPHONSE DAUDET.
EDGAR FAWCETT.
FRANK E. STOCKTON.
C. A. STEPHENS.

Travel and Biography

LETTERS FROM SPAIN, by BUSH LIFE in Australia, by LETTERS FROM PERSIA, by
IN THE FORESTS OF VENEZUELA, by FAMOUS AMBASSADORS and Their Triumphs, by
IN THE HEART of the Sahara. Adventures during a tour in the great African desert, by LOUISE CHANDLER MOULTON.

ARCHIBALD FORBES.
B. G. W. BENJAMIN.
W. T. HOBNADAY.
JAMES PARTON.
H. H. WEBER.

Tales of Adventure

THE LIGHTHOUSE Keeper's Stories, by HUNTERS' TALES of the Red River Country, by A YOUNG IMMIGRANT'S Journey to Colorado, by UP THE TRAIL. Cattle Driving on "the break" of the Llano Estacado, Kansas, by MY ENCOUNTER with the Black Flags. An incident of the French conquest of Tonkin, by JUSTIN CARRICK.

F. W. CALKINS.
D. L. CHAMBERS.
AMOS M. KEVIN.
HENRI MEUNIER.

$3,000. Prize Stories

Nearly seven thousand manuscripts were sent in competition for the COMPANION prizes of $3,000 offered for the best Short Stories, many of them by eminent writers in both Europe and America. For eight of these, Prizes have been awarded. They are delightful stories. These stories, with others selected from the seven thousand sent, will be a feature of the coming volume of the COMPANION.

Science and Education

A remarkable series of articles by Eminent Writers will be given as follows:

JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE, on PROF. TYNDALL, on
PROF. MAX MULLER, on CANON FARRAR, on
PROF. T. STERRY HUNT, on RICHARD A. PROCTOR, on E. P. WHIFFLE, on
E. A. FREEMAN, on

The Study of History.
Popular Science for Young People.
The Cultivation of the Memory.
The Study of English Literature.
The Chemistry of Sea and Land.
Star Clouds, and Other Articles.
Precocious Boys in History.
Children a Thousand Years Ago.

The Children's Page filled with charming pictures, poems and stories, adapted to very young readers, has always been an attractive feature of the COMPANION. The Editorials will continue to give clear views of current events at home and abroad.

Subscription Price, $1.75 a Year.

Announcement and Specimen Copies Free.

Please mention this Paper. Address PERRY MASON & CO., Publishers, 41 Temple Place, Boston, Mass.

COMES EVERY WEEK. ELEGANTLY ILLUSTRATED. $1.75 A YEAR. SPECIMEN COPY FREE.

The E. A. Seminary

This school, for boys and girls, is located at Arcadia, Blenville Parish, La., a town on the railroad that joins Monroe and Shreveport. The course of study is thorough and practical. The discipline is rigid, with mildness. For circulars, address R. A. SMITH, Principal.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

PIANOS.

Square and Upright.

For $300; worth $400.

For $200; worth $300.

Full Guarantee.

Write for Catalogues.

TERMS MADE TO SUIT.

PHILIP HALLARAN.

—MANUFACTURED BY—

Plain Tin and Japan Ware,

—ALSO DEALER IN—

COOKING AND HEATING

STOVES AND RANGES.

Sole Agent for New Goods from England, France, and Germany.

24 CANAL ST., BELOW POY-DESS.

NEW ORLEANS.

Music Store, Leading Piano House.

The Lowest Priced First-Class

Piano Made in the GUILD, CHURCH & CO.

Manufacturers, Boston, Mass.

20,000 NOW IN USE

In the Cities, towns and villages of the South and West.

Durable in Construction.

Stands in Tune.

Keeps in Touch.

First-Class in every respect, and at prices which bring them within the reach of all.

THE USE OF THE

GUILD PIANOS

Is the best for the Art of Music and for the Health of the Child.

Fully Guaranteed for Six Years.

A Right Sound, Clear and Bold of Music from Free With Every Guild Piano.

And Full of Pathos, as well as of power and vigor, leading South, South and West, and all over the world.

Luden & B. Co., Southern Music House, Savannah, Ga.

Southern Wholesale Depot for Guild Pianos.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

WHEELER & PIERSON

SUCCESSOR TO

WHEELER & PIERSON

CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,

Nos. 13 & 15 CANAL STREET, New Orleans.

Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to 15.

6 Shirts for $9. Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.

Orders from Clergymen solicited, and liberal reduction made to them.

Prices for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent O. O. D.

D. H. HOLMES,

155 CANAL STREET,

15 Bourbon Street, - - - 15 Dauphine Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

House Established in 1842.

Keep at all times a most complete assortment of European and Domestic

DRY GOODS

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will find Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

Samples Sent Throughout the Country, and Orders Promptly Executed.

THE BONNET and DRESS-MAKING Departments are placed in most

SKILLFUL HANDS.

ACCLIMATED JERSEYS.

I am prepared to fill all orders for AMERICAN JERSEY CATTLE CLUB

Registered Bulls, Cows, Heifers and Bull Calves.

Bulls For Grading Up Common Cattle.

CAN ALSO SUPPLY FAMILIES WITH

FIRST-CLASS GRADE JERSEY MILK COWS.

High Grade Jersey Heifers at Farmers' Prices.

TO PARTIES DESIRING OF SETTING ONE OR MORE

JERSEYS DIRECT FROM THE ISLAND,

TO BE LANDED AT NEW ORLEANS.

I OFFER SPECIAL INDUCEMENTS.

Prices listed for MERINO SHEEP.

W. R. STUART,

56 Carondelet St., New Orleans,

OR CAN BE SENT BY RAIL.

CHILD'S CATARRH

Treatment For

And Discharge of the HEAD, THROAT & LUNGS!

And Discharge of the HEAD, THROAT & LUNGS!

And Discharge of the HEAD, THROAT & LUNGS!

And Discharge of the HEAD, THROAT & LUNGS!

And Discharge of the HEAD, THROAT & LUNGS!

And Discharge of the HEAD, THROAT & LUNGS!

And Discharge of the HEAD, THROAT & LUNGS!

And Discharge of the HEAD, THROAT & LUNGS!

W. H. H. PIERSON,

SUCCESSOR TO

WHEELER & PIERSON

CLOTHING AND FURNISHING GOODS,

Nos. 13 & 15 CANAL STREET, New Orleans.

Black Cloth Suits, $20 to 40. Business Suits, $12 to 15.

6 Shirts for $9. Collars, $1.50 per Dozen.

Orders from Clergymen solicited, and liberal reduction made to them.

Prices for self-measurement sent on application, and goods sent O. O. D.

D. H. HOLMES,

155 CANAL STREET,

15 Bourbon Street, - - - 15 Dauphine Street,

NEW ORLEANS.

House Established in 1842.

Keep at all times a most complete assortment of European and Domestic

DRY GOODS

As the Stock is replenished by weekly arrivals. Purchasers will find Advantageous to Call and Examine the Goods.

Samples Sent Throughout the Country, and Orders Promptly Executed.

THE BONNET and DRESS-MAKING Departments are placed in most

SKILLFUL HANDS.

ACCLIM

Christian Advocate.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1884.

$5,465 40!

This is the grand Centenary offering of Shreveport, La., Rev. C. F. Evans, D. D., pastor—and "more to follow."

$167 80!

Consabatta circuit, Louisiana Conference, Rev. A. C. Coney.

Grand total, Centenary collection, North Mississippi Conference, $37,440 30.

Love always does the best it can in the circumstances which surround and with the means in reach. This is the test of its genuineness. "Love is the fulfilling of the law." How about your love for the Master, dear reader? Does it manifest its genuine character by doing the best it can?

Mr. Spurgeon is reported as saying: "If drink could be got rid of, we might be sure of conquering the devil himself. Many of the drink-houses are nothing less than infernal; in some respects they are worse, for hell has its uses as a divine protest against sin—but as for a gin-palace, there is nothing to be said in its favor." And yet it is said that some who claim to be followers of Jesus patronize them! There is no deception so perfect as self-deception.

This from the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate we endorse, and send it forth with the hope that every pastor will try to put his "better friend" in every family on his work:

No pastor can put a better friend into the families of his church than the church paper. It strengthens the affections of the people for their pastors, and secures every effort made by the ministers to build up the church in the faith of the gospel, and in all Christian and benevolent work. Help the Advocate and it will help you.

This from the Holston Methodist will find echo in many a paragon: "Sometimes when a steward approaches a money-making and money-loving Methodist and asks him for his part of his preacher's pay, he answers, 'I am in debt and I can't give much this year.' This is a proposition to make his preacher help for the last farm he bought—to enrich himself and his children out of the honest toil of his preacher. Why didn't he make this same answer when his merchant and his physician presented their bills, and refuse to pay, thus compelling them to contribute their part toward the increase of his wealth? He could do so with equal justice and propriety."

The Harvard students have petitioned the authorities to abolish compulsory attendance on morning prayers. If their request is granted, Harvard is a good place not to patronize. The idea of boys controlling in the administration of a great institution! But some one will argue: Enforced attendance upon any religious service is more harmful than non-attendance; it must be voluntary in order to be profitable. Just apply that rule to the home training of children, and see how it will work. Let them decide all questions of right and duty while parents surrender the reins, and see what specimens of manhood and womanhood will be developed. Enforced attendance at family prayers, Sunday-school and church makes children complain; but in after years they are grateful for such an exercise of parental authority. Until the Divine statute is repealed which constitutes a parent the prophet, priest and king of his household, he can not relegate his authority without sin and peril.

As THYSELF.—The measure of duty to our neighbor is the same as the measure of duty to ourselves. Self-love is the measure of neighbor-love. There is nothing plainer in the word of God. The Savior has given this precept as an epitome of the duties enjoined in the second table of the Decalogue. It is binding upon every individual and upon every church organization. Will some one please explain what this injunction really means? Does it mean that we are to do as much for our neighbor in matters temporal as we do for ourselves? Does it mean that we are to put forth as earnest and continuous effort for the salvation of our neighbor as we put forth for our own salvation? Does it mean that we are to contribute as much money to give our neighbor the gospel as we give to keep the gospel in our midst?

Handling the Bible.

When the Apostle John speaks, in his first epistle, of "that which our hands have handled of the word of life," he doubtless alludes to those instances in which Christ had granted to his disciples the guarantee of the sense of touch, against any deficiency or delusion which might attend the evidences of hearing and sight, as to the reality of his risen body. "Reach hither thy hand and thrust it into my side," said he to Thomas, "and be not faithless, but believing." And to all of them, when they were terrified and troubled at his unexpected appearance, he said: "It is I myself; handle me and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have." And he showed them his hands and feet, and while yet they believed not for joy, and wondered, he proceeded to eat before them.

But these visible and palpable manifestations were peculiar to the age of Christ's personal presence. His soon afterward ascended from earth, and has never since been seen by mortal eyes. The Holy Spirit is not to be perceived by bodily senses. What visible sign have we now left of God on earth? The pillar of cloud and fire passed away with the generation it was intended to guide and instruct. Jesus is no more with us. The Spirit is as the wind that bloweth where it listeth. But has God left himself without a visible monument of his revealed presence among men? Is not the book called the Bible the embodiment of the word and spirit and power of Almighty God, as no other object cognizable by human senses can be? Is that book not the Shekinah of God's presence abiding among men throughout the ages? The paper and ink are not God; but what would the world's knowledge of God be without them? Only a tradition, vague, variable and vanishing forever. That book is essentially connected with all correct and, especially, with all saving knowledge of God, beautifully illustrating to our faith, as copies are unceasingly multiplied in every language and dialect of earth, the spiritual omnipresence of God who is its author, and essence. And shall not such a book be handled with a peculiar and reverential respect?

The devout heathen prostrates himself with awe before the idol which only represents an invisible divinity, while the Christian often handles the holy book, which embodies the mind of his Creator and the last will and testament of a crucified Savior, as though it were a common thing. Preachers have been known to beat the book vehemently with their fists, as if to knock the sense out of it by blows. One in a church placed the Bible upon the floor, and, standing with his feet upon it, exclaimed to his audience: See how I stand upon the promises of God! Another took the Bible, and, placing it upon the communion table, seated himself upon the book, with his feet upon the altar railing, and thus continued his exhortation.

In the average Christian family the Bible is not shown any preference over other books either in the manner of its keeping or use. My wife never lays another book or anything else upon a Bible. She regards it as the book, the book of God, and likes always to treat the book itself with some proper reverence to its priceless contents and its Divine authorship. She thinks there is a moral power in association, and that to show by any act that we have forgotten that the church is the house of God, and that the Bible is his book, is to betray the loss or lack of that grace which may be exhibited, if not acquired, by the management of our bodies and the guidance of our hands. I have been led to believe there is something other than superstition in the respect she shows for the Bible, regarded simply as a book. This leads me to enquire whether the careless handling of the Bible by our Sunday-school scholars, and others, is not an unfortunate result of our attempts to teach the word, and, especially, whether the cutting the Bible up into scraps and publishing it as it is now done for our Sunday-schools, while very convenient in many respects, is not attended with some bad consequences which ought to be guarded against. The lesson papers and quarterlies are torn up, trampled under feet, and treated in many unbecoming and even shockingly irreverent and sacrilegious ways. The impropriety of using the refuse printed sheets of the Bible as wrapping paper might well be considered by Christian publishing houses.

It seems to me that every child of proper age should have a Bible to be regarded as a very precious piece of personal property. Further, I would have every child taught the name, place and order of succession of each book of which the great volume called the Bible is composed. Think of a book composed of sixty-six lesser books—all bound together! Very many of our Sunday-school scholars do not know the names and places of the books of the Bible. They are not used to handling the book. They would be slow at finding Nahum or Titus, and would be thoroughly puzzled if asked whether there is such a book as Zechariah in the Bible.

It is not a small thing for the young student of the Bible to know just where to find each book of the two Testaments, and, especially, to know how to use references with facility. Thousands of grown people never use a reference Bible, having never learned the great advantage of studying the Bible with references, which are the most reliable of commentaries. References give us the exposition of the word by its authors or, rather, by its Author. Let every one have a Bible and use it with references. The Oxford Teacher's Bible is, perhaps, the best for one who wishes to procure the most helps in a single convenient volume. The next most important aid is a concordance. That word was used not long since before a class of bright boys, not small ones, in a Sunday-school. They enquired with as much eager curiosity about the concordance as if the teacher had mentioned a chimpanzee.

W. L. C. II.

Franco-Chinese War—Latest News from Dr. Lambuth.

MR. EDITOR: Since I last wrote to you the French have gained several decisive victories in Tonquin. On yesterday, or the day before, Fomosa was declared to be in a state of blockade. The French have landed troops on the island, have taken possession of Kelung and are preparing to march overland to the port of Tamsai, twelve miles from Kelung. French troops are arriving almost daily. They have already a large fleet in these waters, and, no doubt, in six months' time the rickety, unstable government will be shaken to its very centre. Nothing but a terrible upheaval, a universal revolution, an overturning of existing evils, will ever do this corrupt government any good. It does seem that the time for such a revolution is at hand. The government officials from the reigning emperor down to the lowest official seem perplexed. They are making desperate efforts to gather strength by giving of their untold, hidden wealth to prepare to repel their invaders should they attempt to land upon the soil of China proper. The high officials of state—those who compose the cabinet of the emperor or empress—have alone given about fourteen million dollars. But what is all their money worth if they have not suitable men to command their armies and navy? There is no doubt but that this dynasty is doomed. It may last a year, but I think its end is near.

In this great revolution, which is now convulsing this great empire, persecution and trouble will come upon the native church. Already we see it manifesting itself in many parts of China in the south. Churches are being destroyed, and native Christians are tortured and accused of being connected with the French and acting as spies. When these troubles come the people make no distinction of a nationality or sect, and these mobs are liable at this time to spring up at any moment or on the slightest pretext. We have not as yet been disturbed except that the interest in hearing the gospel is greatly lessened, and few seem willing to identify themselves with us. On the island of Fomosa, at the port of Tamsai, the French, in attempting to land a small force, lost some ten or twenty men. Their heads were severed from their bodies and exposed upon poles in view of the whole Chinese army. After this defeat of the French many chapels and churches were destroyed and native Christians persecuted. We expect it here sooner or later. The mouth of our river is almost entirely blocked up with junks loaded with stones.

We pray for the blessing and presence of God upon us and all his people in this land, for we, as Christians, have no friends among the higher, official and wealthy classes of China. They would drive us all from China to-day if they could. Among the middle and lower classes we have those who are our friends and would be glad to have us remain and spread Christianity among them.

Bishop Wiley is staying with us, and is very feeble. He had all the missionaries of the Central China Mission come to Shanghai, and they are now having their Conference at our house in Shanghai. The Bishop leaves here, next week, for Foochow to hold another Conference there, and then try and get home; but I fear he will never live to return to his family. Pray for us all that God would be with us and keep us by his mighty power from evil.

Your brother in Christ,
W. L. C. II.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, Oct. 29, 1884.

A Battle to Be Fought.

We mean the school question versus the Roman Catholics. They are avowed and unrelenting enemies of our entire school system and, if possible, would destroy its very existence. Education, independent of the priests, they know to be the sure overthrow of the hierarchy. Superstition can not live in an atmosphere of intelligence. Falling in other schemes, they now boldly declare their purpose to demand a share of the school-tax for the support of parochial schools. In face of an express constitutional prohibition this is certainly a bold declaration. And as the church wields a fierce political power, the menace is not to be despised. It behooves every patriotic citizen to give serious thought to this problem, for the day of danger is not far distant. We are no alarmist, and have no thought that ecclesiastical tyranny is to triumph; but when their highest council proclaims its purpose "it is time to awake. When any church shall ever lay its hand upon our school system, and begin its disintegration by claiming a division of public revenue, a blow will be struck at the very life of our political institutions. Read these words uttered by one of the distinguished prelates in the Plenary Council at Baltimore:

It is not many years since the columns of the press teemed with articles on the public school question. This has been a source of great annoyance to the leaders of the Catholic Church. In nearly every large city in the country a great number of Catholic children attend the public schools. Experience has taught that these children frequently become careless in the duties of their religion and indifferent to the high standard of morality on which the church places so high a value. Her bishops and clergy sternly advocate the daily catechism and stated instructions on the principal tenets of the Catholic faith. To bring about this result parish schools have been attached to many churches, where the poorer children are educated. But Catholics are crippled by the want of pecuniary resources, and thus it happens that in some instances these parish schools are inferior in their curriculum to the public schools of our country. The bishops see that the only way for them to secure a thorough disciplining of the children according to Catholic belief and practice is to establish a more thorough system of parish schools in every city, the studies being graded on the same plan as the primary, grammar and high school courses of the country. For this purpose they demand such a division of the school-tax as will enable them to place their schools on a level with the public schools. What means can be adopted for the accomplishment of this plan is a problem to be solved by the wisdom of the fathers of the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore.

Preachers' Sons—A Deserved Rebuke.

The following reply by Rev. Dr. C. K. Marshall to a paragraph in the Vicksburg Herald we cordially reproduce. Such slander deserves rebuke.

Vicksburg, Miss., Dec. 3, 1884.

Editor of Commercial Herald—

DEAR SIR: Nothing editorial has ever emanated from your pen so utterly at war with the facts in the case, nor anything so wounding to the sensibilities of a very great number of your patrons, as the following burning philippian against a large class of the best families and truest men that ever adorned the walks of polite society:

"The 'cussedness' of George Alfred Townsend—Gath—is at last accounted for. He says in a recent letter that his father was a Methodist preacher. It is a matter of no consequence in what church the Rev. Mr. Townsend ministered; life fact remains that the sons of preachers, to which their fathers belong, are usually the greatest scamps to be found in the country round about, and 'Gath' is not an exception to the rule."

Now of George Alfred Townsend, alias "Gath," I have nothing to say further than this. If he is one of "the greatest scamps to be found," his parents were among the very best and tenderest in affection for George; and if he has grieved them by bad behavior and a wicked life, and is full of "cussedness," and a great—nay, one of "the greatest scamps" to be found, then it must have been a sad day for them. What pang of sorrow they have experienced may you never know. If George has broken their hearts and sent them weeping over their prodigal son to the valley of the shadow of death, does it become a brave man controlling the column of a "conscientious" journal to heap heavier load upon their aged, trembling and grief-stricken hearts? Who ever mocked at that wall of parental grief? "O Abaddon, my son, my son, would to God I had died for thee!" And a vicious son, one of "the greatest scamps" to be found, is ten times over to be mourned more than a dead son by fond and loving parents. If George is a great scamp full of "cussedness," then I will, rather in pity to his afflicted parents, not charge it all to his father's sacred vocation.

But I challenge the statement that "the sons of preachers, regardless of denomination, are usually the greatest scamps to be found." This is an old, unkind assertion that has been bandied about for ages, and it is false as it is flippant. Of course if clergymen's sons are "great scamps," their daughters must be a poor lot—the same training, the same influences mould and form like the sons and daughters. So, then, the stigma is a family reproach, and the idea intended to be driven home is that the saintlier his parents, the more devilish the children.

This bitter column was uttered a few years ago in one of the Eastern States, and was taken up and looked at in the light of facts. And it was found that eighty-five per cent. of the sons and daughters of clergymen had turned out exceptionally well, and that no other professional class of citizens had succeeded so well in the raising, educating and placing in good positions their offspring as had the clergy. And, knowing the great body of ministers of all denominations in Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana and Tennessee, I believe it can be shown and demonstrated, by name and number, that no class of citizens can boast so large a proportion of virtuous, manly, noble and praiseworthy sons as those of these ministers of the gospel.

This statement of "scamps" among the sons of preachers doubtless springs from the simple fact that more is expected of them than of other boys—their peers. If the preacher's young son thrashes his playmate and says some ugly words to him he had learned from the lips of either an editor, a lawyer, a physician or eminent citizen, then all the tables are turned in town set up a cry. "O! the bad, bad son of a preacher." And yet it may be the young chip of the cloth was clearly in the right in all but the imitation of the language of his teachers.

In Memoriam.

EDWARD NOTLEE.

The Holy Spirit with infinite resources at his command, not only uses them for the promotion of the growth of the Christian Church, but, in all possible ways, he uses them to advance the development of a Christian character for those who commit themselves implicitly to his control. The apostle, in speaking of the enlargement of individual Christian character, says, "Ye are God's building." The Christian character is the work of the Holy Ghost. The human soul is the sphere in which the Holy Spirit does his grandest work. We do not know how great some of this work is, and we can only conjecture the grandeur of its proportions and the beauty of its finish when the light eternal shall reveal it as it is. In this work of building character, the divine Architect has a perfect model before him, and his study and work is to fashion his subject according to that model. The Apostle John, referring to the finished work of the Spirit upon the individual Christian, says, "We shall be like him." The delicate shadings which show the tracing of nature's pencil, the nice touches of color reflected from surroundings, the bold prominence of personal traits, the fine strokes which exhibit race-characteristics, the rugged features which manifest the tendencies of the daily employment, these and more than these, the Holy Spirit, by his patient hands works into a statue of the "beauty of holiness" for "a spectacle to men and angels." Then, in his own appointed time, he transfers his work to the "house beautiful" above, where, in the future ages, will be exhibited in all its grace and finish the work he has accomplished in and upon the souls of the saints. From Felicity Church one more specimen of the Holy Spirit's work has gone up to God.

Edward Notlee was an Englishman by birth, his eyes first seeing the light in Cornwall, March 31, 1820. When he came to this Western world, I do not know, but he came to New Orleans from the Dominion of Canada in 1847. In February, 1848, he was converted. On June 10 of the same year he was united in marriage to Miss Martha E. Wleker, of Jackson, La., who, with her daughter, Mrs. E. P. Mackie, survives him. He died in this city at 3 P. M., on Thanksgiving Day. He was past 64 years of age.

Bro. Notlee's religion, for many years, was of a very demonstrative type. He had a vivid realization of the power of Divine grace to save a sinner from his sins now, and he often manifested joy over such an experience. But as the years fled by and he grew in grace, and the Spirit worked upon him, the melioration process began and continued its influences until the religious life which started with making "a loud noise to the Lord" ended like the dying away of "a weary, worn-out wind."

Bro. Notlee was a great reader, especially of religious books, and his mind was well stored with religious knowledge. He knew Methodistism well and loved it very dearly. When he sang, "I love thy kingdom, Lord," the words of his lips were the true sentiments of a heart throbbing with fervent love for the church. He made the best possible use of the social meetings of the church. He was a good singer and, what was better, he loved to sing. He was most fervent in prayer—his fervor often times manifesting itself by very bold yet reverent approaches to the throne of grace. He believed God was his father and he approached him with all the confidence of a loving and loved son. His talks in class-meeting were altogether unlike any others. You could never forecast what he was going to say, and yet when he sat down you felt that he had told his present experience. I have heard him almost every week for four years, and I think he has never said the same thing twice in class-meeting during that time. When he was first converted he began to wonder at the amazing grace that had saved him, and this feeling kept getting larger and larger to the close of his life. His last class-meeting talk had these words: "Brethren, I wonder at the amazing grace that God has manifested in my salvation."

Bro. Notlee passed through an epidemic of yellow fever in 1849, and he became from that time one of the most earnest and faithful and successful nurses that the Methodists have had when that dread scourge had visited our city. When the Seashore Camp Meeting was started he became a zealous supporter of it, and built him a tent and there, with his family, spent every summer, enjoying and profiting by the hallowed privileges which that meeting affords. During my pastorate in Felicity Street Church, Bro. Notlee has almost invariably been in his place in the public congregation on the Sabbath, in his place in the Wednesday evening prayer meeting and in his place in the Friday night class-meeting. He is one of the few members of the church whose death makes a vacant chair in the social meetings. Bro. Notlee had his peculiarities, but whether they were the outcome of the laws of heredity or whether they sprang from some other source, they were very far from being offensive in any sense. To me they were very interesting peculiarities, and sometimes quite refreshing themes of meditation. He had lived to be one of the old land-marks of Methodism in New Orleans. For thirty-seven years he stood up bravely for God and his cause in this wicked city, and no sort of suffering or persecution ever did drive him from his post nor any kind of temptation cause him to desert the "blood-stained banner of the cross." He was "faithful unto death." He left no dying testimony, for there was no need of it. He had been bearing daily testimony to the power of Divine grace for nearly forty years. As we looked upon him lying in his coffin, it seemed as if the last influence of the saved spirit, before it left the clay tenement for its upward flight homeward, had been to stamp upon the features the expression of heavenly peace. We felt that the Holy Spirit had done his divine work in giving the finishing touches to his Christian character, and we yielded without a murmur to the call of the Master in the sure hope that "we shall meet him in that day."

C. W. CARTER.

Arkansas Conference.

APPOINTMENTS.

FORT SMITH DISTRICT.—M. E. Butts, P. E. Fort Smith, J. W. Boswell; Fort Smith circuit, Frank Taylor; Greenwood, J. A. Peebles; Harkett City, J. N. C. Hamilton; Whiteville, T. A. Martin; Charleston, Barton Williams; National Springs, R. E. Harwood; Paris and Rossville, D. C. Matthews; Booneville, F. N. Moore; Waldron, S. S. Key; Cynthiana, James Cox; Forehe, C. H. Carey; Magazine, D. G. Crew.

CLARKSVILLE DISTRICT.—T. F. Horton, P. E. Clarksville Station, J. L. Massey; Clarksville circuit, J. E. Martin; Cabin Creek, W. H. Burns; Altus, F. S. H. Johnson; Ozark, G. W. Hill; Ozark circuit, B. W. Aston; Mulberry, C. W. Boyles; Alma, H. L. Jackson; Van Buren, D. J. Weaver; Van Buren circuit, J. W. Bryan; and W. V. Smith; Mountainburg, G. H. Wade; Ozark, N. V. Vallies; Central College Institute, I. L. Burrow and V. V. Harlan.

DARKESSVILLE DISTRICT.—H. D. Mahoney, P. E. Darkeville, T. J. Smith; Darkeville circuit, W. G. Damon; Russellville, A. P. Melton; Dover, J. Steele; Atkins, J. P. Caloway; Opelous, E. Dickens; Perryville, E. L. Massey; Dover, E. P. Burke; Grady Hill, J. P. Stevenson; Walnut Grove, T. A. Graham; Danville, P. B. Sumner; Chickasha, to be supplied; Prairie View, W. H. Mahoney; Oakland, W. E. England.

MORRILLTON DISTRICT.—S. H. Babcock, P. E. Morrillton, B. H. Greathouse; Pimmarville, C. C. Graham; Pimmarville, C. W. Lindsay; Conway, J. Loving; Springfield and Hill Creek, W. R. Gardner; Clinton, J. F. Verdon; Point Runover, A. E. Sutton; Mt. Vernon, C. Ray; Quitman, J. E. Hall; Quitman College, S. H. Babcock, President.

FAYETTEVILLE DISTRICT.—J. A. Anderson, P. E. Fayetteville, W. Penn; Springfield, J. A. Warden; Center Point, W. D. Powell; Bentonville and Rogers, F. M. Paine; Bentonville circuit, T. J. Reynolds; Bentonville, W. W. Landry; Mayfield, H. C. Ross; Wadley, A. E. Williams; Prairie Grove, Young Ewing; Bonestown, P. D. Hopkins and R. H. Moore; White River, L. W. Harrison; Brentwood, to be supplied; Goshen, W. H. Corley; Clifton, J. R. Maxwell.

YELLEVILLE DISTRICT.—T. M. C. Birmingham, P. E. Yellville and Herrington, O. H. Tucker; Yellville circuit, to be supplied; Mountain Home, McKee; Big Flat, W. A. Massey; Wiley's Cove, J. E. Danaway; Lead Hill, A. L. Matthews; Valley Springs, J. H. Bradford; Carrollton, J. H. Watts; Berryville, J. S. Shanks; Eureka Springs, W. T. Keith; White River, J. M. Cantrell; Copeland, H. A. Story; Huntsville, J. H. Cummins.

TRANSMISSISSIPPI.—J. A. Harwood, Los Angeles; B. K. Throver, St. Louis; M. Elan, Indian Mission Conference; W. A. Dorrick, Southwest Missouri Conference.

New York has furnished this country with four Presidents. Two by "accident"—Fillmore and Arthur, and two by vote—Van Buren and Cleveland.

The last advice is that the condition of Bishop Wilson has been very little, if any, improved. The gravest fears are entertained in regard to the result of his illness.

Rev. James E. Latimer, professor of systematic divinity and dean of the school of theology in Boston University, died on Thanksgiving Day, aged fifty-eight years.

President D. M. Rush, of Centenary College, writes that two weeks' vacation will be given for the Christmas holidays. Parents desiring their sons to visit the Exposition, in the city, during the holidays are requested to send written permission.

Statistics of North Mississippi Conference are as follows: Local preachers, 153; members, 31,793—Increase this year, 1,317; infants baptized, 811; adults baptized, 2,001; Sunday-schools, 316; officers and teachers, 1,786; scholars, 13,953.

Dr. Haygood, having resigned the presidency of Emory College in order that he may give his entire time to the administration of the Slater Fund, Rev. Dr. Hopkins has been elected to the college in his stead. So says the Richmond Advertiser.

A note from Rev. J. M. Johnston, of Farmville, La., brings the gratifying intelligence of the triumph of the temperance cause in Union parish, La. The vote polled was: For license, 400; against license, 901. So the cause of humanity is going forward.

Our old friend, Rev. John Hamilton, D. D., who served as pastor both St. Charles Avenue and Felicity Street Churches, in this city, having finished a four years' term in Park Place Church, Richmond, Va., has been sent this year to the Memorial Church, in Lynchburg, Va.

The editor of this paper left last week for the Methodist Centennial Conference, which met in Baltimore, Tuesday eve, the ninth instant. He takes a part in the platform meeting, Monday eve, the fifteenth instant, when the subject of Sunday-schools will be presented and discussed.

This correspondent of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, writing from the seat of the Arkansas Conference, says that "the Conference found itself too full and applied the remedy of location to relieve the case." That was a very unusual case and quite an unusual remedy.

The last number of the New York Independent contained twenty-six poems from Swinburne, and yet the editor says, "Mr. Swinburne's warmest admirers will hardly claim that he is a great poet." Just so. How can a man be a great poet when "whole passages are almost, if not absolutely, destitute of sense?"

Mrs. Ellen H. Simpson, widow of the late Bishop Simpson, has sent Bishop Taylor $52 to purchase "a big tent for public worship in Africa," with the request that the name "Bishop Matthew Simpson" be put on it. Since the days of Paul women have been and are still laboring to extend the gospel of Christ.

Mrs. H. H. Kavanagh, widow of the late Bishop Kavanagh, passed through our city, last week, en route for California. She expects to reside at Petaluma. She lingered in Kentucky until she saw an appropriate monument raised to the memory of the "grand preacher." The prayers of the people of God ascend to the throne of grace that the remainder of her useful life may be peaceful and happy.

Children's Centenary services at Carondelet Street Church, last Sunday afternoon, were pleasant, entertaining and instructive. With the church tastefully decorated, the children trained well for their respective parts, the singing delightfully executed, the speeches all delivered in spirit, and a large audience to enjoy the whole. Bro. Carver, the superintendent, and his teachers earned and obtained a great success.

The "Great Eastern," the mammoth steamship used in laying the Atlantic cable, will reach New Orleans in a few weeks and be one of the attractions of the World's Exposition. The following from the Times-Democrat will be of interest to who contemplate a visit to the Crescent City this winter:

"While here, the 'Great Eastern' will lie at the Exposition wharf, and will be used as a great floating hotel, being easily able to accommodate 1,500 persons. She will contain a very fine English restaurant for such of her boarders as may desire to take their meals aboard. She will also be thrown open to the inspection of visitors, for which a small fee, not to exceed twenty-five cents, will be charged. She will remain here throughout the Exposition, having been chartered for twelve months. The vessel is to be thoroughly illuminated with electric lights, electric lights being placed on each mast and on the rigging.

The following are some of the dimensions of this great vessel: Length, 692 feet—one-eighth of a mile; breadth of deck, 83 feet—across paddle boxes, 120 feet; depth from deck to keel, 60 feet; height of five saloons on lower deck, 13 feet, 8 inches; height of five saloons on upper deck, 12 feet; length of saloons, 60 feet; cost of vessel when launched, $3,200,000.

World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The National Woman's Christian Temperance Union has taken preliminary steps toward securing in all parts of the world a concert of prayer for the temperance cause. The noon hour of each day has been designated, ever since the crusade, as a time for individual lifting up of the heart, and now it is suggested that, in addition to this, Thursday afternoon be the time for a temperance prayer meeting, to be held weekly, or less often, as may be determined in the different localities. Thus concerted prayer, by the women in all nations, for the overthrow of the poison habits of all races is rendered possible, and we urge attention to this as the very best kind of a beginning. The temperance ladies have consulted with leading missionaries, as well as workers in the great cause, and have found help and encouragement on every hand. They have also appointed Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt, of Boston, who has for a year been working on the Pacific coast, under the auspices of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, to make a reconnaissance in the Sandwich Islands, Australia and, perhaps, India, China and Japan, visiting the missionaries of those countries and endeavoring to introduce the Woman's Christian Temperance Union methods and to provide for a helpful interchange of sympathy and work by which the influence of the gospel temperance movement shall eventually be felt in the world. May this earnest, gifted Christian lady be abundantly blessed in her gospel enterprise, and find a welcome in the hearts and homes of Christians everywhere!

Notice to the Mississippi Conference.

On arrival of train at Yazoo City brethren will report at Methodist Church. Excursion rates at four cents per mile for round trip on the Louisville and Nashville railroad. Fraternally,

T. H. HOLLOMAN,
Yazoo City, Miss., Dec. 4, 1884.

The editor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate has this to say of the Bishop who presided at the North Carolina Conference:

Bishop Parker gave entire satisfaction in the chair, in the pulpit and in the council. His sermons were first class in every sense. He presides in an easy, admirable manner, and we will be glad to have him in North Carolina at any time. Our preachers and people were all delighted with him. He is a charming man and a grand Bishop.

SEND $1 BILLS.—We wish our patrons to bear in mind that in payment for subscriptions we do not desire postage stamps, and that they should be sent only or fractional parts of a dollar. A dollar bill is much more convenient and safe to remit than the same amount in one, two or three cents stamps. The actual risk of remitting money is slight; if properly directed not one miscarriage will occur in one thousand. Inclose the bills, and where letters containing money are sealed in presence of the postmaster, we will assume all the risk.

To Our Agents.

As an inducement for the fall campaign, we make this extraordinary offer for new subscribers to the ADVOCATE, viz: For ten new subscribers, with cash in full for same, we will send a full set (four volumes) of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary, bound in half morocco; or for fifteen renewals and new subscribers, we will send the full set, postage prepaid—cash in full and names all at one time to accompany orders.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and Southern Cultivator for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless cash accompany all orders, no attention will be paid to same. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

Don't fail to read the "ad" headed "Multa in Parvo."

From Basirap, La.

On November 19 we buried another of our members, Bro. John T. Cason. His wife we buried in July last. His death was in the calm assurance and holy triumph of the religion of Jesus. One of our most prominent citizens, a Mason of long standing and a leading Methodist, he is mourned by the entire community. The reaper, death, has been busy with us here all the year through.

Last night, at the Baptist Church, we listened to Bishop John N. Gatter. We had often heard of his rare pulpit powers and we were not disappointed in our expectations. His subject was well handled, his diction choice and his manner of presentation pleasing. He insisted on actual cross-bearing as of the essence of genuine religion. The present Bishop of Louisiana is a worthy successor of Bishop Wilmer.

Our new church, as it progresses, is becoming "a thing of beauty," captivating the eyes of all strangers and fairly taking the hearts of the Bastropians, regardless of creed. It will hardly be ready for dedication before Conference; but, having been from the start a Centenary Church, the cost of it will very properly be added to the amounts given for the three objects on our May Centenary Day. It is being built on a plan selected from Dr. Morton's Church Extension Catalogue. The prohibition question is being agitated throughout our parish preliminary to a vote to be had on December 31. As is usual in such matters, both sides claim to be sure of victory. The ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union are working as if determined that the good cause shall not be lost by any lack of effort on their part. Sabbath parish last month voted for prohibition by three to one—so, why can not Morehouse parish do as well?

Basirap, La., Dec. 1, 1884.

The Twenty-Seventh Psalm.

The psalm is remarkable for the abrupt transition of feeling which cleaves it into two parts: one, (verses 1-6), full of jubilation hope and enthusiasm; the other, (verses 7-14), a lowly cry for help. There is no need to suppose, with some critics, that we have here two independent hymns bound together in error. He must have little knowledge of the fluctuations of the devout life, who is surprised to find so swift a passage from the ecstasy of joy to the agony of despair. While the usual order in the psalms, as the usual order in good men's experience, is that prayer for deliverance precedes praise and triumph, true communion with God is bound to no mechanical order, and may begin with gasping, with tears, and realizing the mystery of being in his secret place, ere it drops to faith. It is, perhaps, a nobler effect of faith to begin with God and hymn the victory as if already won, than to begin with trouble and call for deliverance. But with whichever we commence, the prayer, the cry, the hymn, the praise, and so long as we are weak and God is our strength, its elements must be "supplication and thanksgiving." The prayer of our psalm begins roundly again to its beginning, and after the plaintive cry for help breaks once more into confidence as he thinks of his Father's hand. (verses 11, 14.) The psalmist has had his trial, he has not trusted in God, and leaves the untold sentence—as a man looking down into some fearful gulf starts back and covers his eyes, before he has well seen the bottom of the abyss.

I had not believed to see the goodness of the Lord in the land of the living! Then rejoicing to remember how even by his feeble trust he has been saved, he stirs up himself to a firmer faith, in words which are themselves an exercise of faith, as well as an intendment to it:

Wait on Jehovah!
Courage! and let thy heart be strong!
Yes, wait on Jehovah!

Here is the true, highest type of a troubled soul's fellowship with God, when the black tear and conscious weakness is inclosed in a golden ring of happy trust. Let the name of our God be first upon our lips, and the call to our wayward hearts to wait upon him be last, and then we may be thankful of our loneliness and loneliness, and for our Father's hand.—Alexander MacLaren, D. D.

Good Words.

—A religion that never suffices to govern a man will never suffice to save him. That which does not distinguish him from a sinful world will never distinguish him from a perishing world.—John Howe.

—When alone, we have our thoughts to watch; in the family, our temper; in society, our tongues. We should endeavor to illustrate our devotion in the morning by our conduct through the day.—Hannah More.

—Age is not all decay; it is the ripening, the swelling of the fresh life within, that withers and bursts the husk.—George MacDonald.

—When nations can subdue their enemies by kind treatment, the instruments of war may be destroyed.

—They that do nothing are in the readiest way to do that which is worse than nothing.—Zimmerman.

—God had one Son on earth without out sin, but never one without suffering.—Augustine.

—Gentils at first is nothing more than a great capacity for receiving discipline.—George Eliot.

—The consciousness of duty performed gives us music at midnight.—George Herbert.

—To change and to be better are two different things.

—Scepticism is slow suicide.—Emerson.

Advocate Calendar.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON,
Publishers.

Think not the girl you love loves not,
She loves, indeed upon it;
With willing heart she'll share your lot—
If there's a building on it.

JAS. H. AITKEN & CO.—In this issue of the ADVOCATE will be found the advertisement of this first-class establishment, which is located at 112 Camp street. Everything in their line of goods are of the best quality and latest patterns, with a complete assortment from plain to elegant. Call and see the beautiful design in globes and brackets. Send and get estimates for filling churches with either gas, oil or sunlight gas chandeliers.

$1—"Thief!" $50,000—"Defaulter!"
$100,000—"Shortage!" $500,000—"Canadian tourist!"
$1,000,000—"Brilliant financier!"

HISTORY OF METHODISM.—See advertisement of Rev. D. P. Bradford in this issue.

There are two kinds of drafts, my son. One you get gold by, the other you get gold by.

Almost every day develops something new about the remarkable product of our swamp, the New La. Remedy and Life Tonic. Prove at the depot, 151 Julia St., N. O.

In a bedroom furnishing, as in life, it will be found that the greater the "sham," the bigger the "spread."

SANITARIUM, Riverside, Cal. The dry climate cures. Nose, Throat, Lungs, full flesh, 30 p. route, cost free.

"Another bad report, my son."
"Yes, papa; you must really talk to my teacher, or he will keep on doing it."

Now is the time to send to the Publishing House at Nashville, for Sunday-school supplies. Write for catalogue and prices.

There was an old doctor, who, when asked what was good for nothing, wrote back: "How do you suppose I can tell unless I know what ails the moths?"

The glory of woman is a beautiful head of hair—her very own. Parker's Hair Balsam excels in producing it. Only 50 cents.

Christmas presents are in order. See the list of first class publications of the Southern Methodist Publishing House in this issue, and order one or more for your friend.

Don't fail to read the "ad" headed "Multa in Parvo."

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Press the ADVOCATE circulation now.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of orders to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change cannot be made.

The edition of Jamieson, Fausset and Brown's Commentary, issued by Messrs. Jerome B. Names & Co., of Toledo, Ohio, and offered as a premium in number columns, is nearly found in half morocco, four volumes. It gives home improvement, every preceptor in the paragonizing conference can secure a complete set. See notice.

Mr. Philip Werlein, 135 Canal street, New Orleans, sells pianos and organs at low prices and on easy payments. This house is reliable and fully guarantees satisfaction. Chickering, Mather, Werlein and other plans can be bought for $20 cash and $10 monthly payments. A fine Werlein, either square or upright, is $100—10 per cent off for cash—shipped from factory, New York, direct or from warehouses, New Orleans. Mason & Hamlin's organs can be had at very low prices; other popular makers also. Other plans taken in exchange for new ones, as part pay. An organ can be bought for $20 monthly payments, $10 as first payment. No family should be without music if possible, it is a pleasure which no one should be deprived of. All should sing and be happy.

W. C. Shephard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and Star and Crescent via Houston.

Send the ADVOCATE to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—Is the favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; has adopted the standard gauge with a well ballasted track, and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, safe connections, and accommodating officers.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

To those of our subscribers, not convenient to a money order office, we would say, Please inform us by postal card whether to continue the ADVOCATE or no.

Send fifteen cents in stamps for a copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and pulmonary consumption, scrofula and general debility. The most mild, pleasant and nutritious form in which Cod Liver Oil can be used, and with more beneficial results to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by double the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and R. H. TRUFF, New York.

A Good Investment.

Messrs. CHADBOCK & CO.

Please send me $25 box of CHADBOCK'S INFANTS' REMEDY, which will cure me of Croup, Whooping Cough, and all other ailments. I enclose five pounds in two weeks. The $25 sent with you has done more good for me than the $250 paid to doctors.

W. E. JONES,
No. 1014 Levee Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy makes for itself, one bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. There is not a single symptom of Croup or Consumption that it does not dislodge at once, and it will break up a fresh cold in a few hours. $250 per pint bottle, or three bottles, $5.00.

Address: CHADBOCK & CO.,
102 Main street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND LIME.

To the Consumptive.—Wilbor's Compound of Cod Liver Oil and Lime, without sugar, is the very most powerful of all the remedies heretofore used, is endorsed by the Phosphate of Lime with a leading property which renders the oil doubly efficacious. Remarkable testimonials of its efficacy can be shown. Sold by A. B. WILBOR, Chemist, Boston, and all druggists.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

JAS. H. AITKEN & CO.,
PLUMBERS,
Steam and Gas Fitters,
—DEALERS IN—
Iron Pipe Fittings, Valves and Boiler Tubes, Brackets, GAS FIXTURES, Globes,
112 CAMP STREET,
Near Poydras, NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Telephone in Office.

B. D. WOOD & BROS.,
Dealers in Best Quality of
COAL and COKE,
25 Camp Street, New Orleans.
Families supplied at Lowest Market Rates.

—OFFICE OF TUGBOATS—
Elmer E. Wood, Charlie Wood, W. M. Wood,
Maine, Wood, Will H. Wood.

"History of Methodism."

At the session of the Mississippi Conference I will have on sale a HISTORY OF METHODISM.

Any brother bringing six subscriptions, with the money, will receive a copy free, and for ten subscriptions agents will receive a copy in Full Morocco.

D. P. Bradford.

1885.
Harper's Weekly.
ILLUSTRATED.

HARPER'S WEEKLY has now, for twenty years, maintained its position as the leading illustrated weekly newspaper in America. With a constant increase of literary and artistic resources it is able to offer for the reading year attractive and unequalled by any previous volume, embracing a capital illustrated serial story by W. E. Norris; illustrated articles with special reference to the West and South, including the World's Exposition at New Orleans; entertaining short stories, mostly illustrated, and important papers by high authorities on the chief topics of the day.

Every one who desires a trustworthy political guide, an entertaining and instructive journal, entirely free from objectionable features, in either letter-press or illustrations, should subscribe to HARPER'S WEEKLY.

Harper's Periodicals.

Per Year:

HARPER'S WEEKLY.....$4 00
HARPER'S MAGAZINE.....4 00
HARPER'S BAZAR.....4 00
HARPER'S YOUNG PEOPLE.....2 00
HARPER'S FRANKLIN SQUARE LIBRARY,
(One Year (12 Numbers)).....10 00

Postage Free to all subscribers in the United States and Canada.

The Volumes of the Weekly begin with the first Number for January of each year. When no time is mentioned, it will be understood that the subscriber wishes to commence with the Number next after the receipt of order.

The last Year Annual Volume of Harper's Weekly, in most cloth binding, will be sent by mail, postage paid, or by express, free of expense (provided the freight does not exceed one dollar per volume, for $1 per volume).

Cloth Cases for each volume, suitable for binding, will be sent by mail, prepaid, on receipt of $1 each. References should be made by Postoffice Money Order or Draft, to avoid chance of loss.

Newspapers are not to be taken by subscription without the express order of HARPER & BROTHERS.

Address HARPER & BROTHERS, New York.

EDWARD HEATH,
HEADQUARTERS FOR
Wall Paper in all Grades,
From Low Priced to Fine Heavy Papers,
Picture Frames and Mouldings,
WIRE SCREENS,
75 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

H. D. MCCOWN,
—DEALER IN—FINE CLOTHING
—AND—
MEN'S FURNISHING GOODS.
Headquarters of the Celebrated STAR SHIRT.
Boys' Clothing a Specialty. Men's and Boys' Hats, CLOTHING MADE TO ORDER
Corner St. Charles and Common sts., N. O.

$250 A MONTH Agents wanted. Sit best. References will be made in the world. 1 sample free. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NO MORE NAUSEOUS DOSES.

It has been recommended to our swamps to furnish materials for the treated cough and distressing sleep caused for all throat and lung complaints, the New La. Remedy. Coughs no longer, and is delicious. Home references by thousands. Life tonic, infallible for children.

Home Remedy, Julia St., N. O.

THE CENTENNIAL DAILY.

The Episcopal Methodist will publish a DAILY PAPER.

FOR THE SESSIONS OF THE Centennial Conference.

To be held in Baltimore, September 17, 1885.

There will be eight issues of the paper, and it will contain a short report of all the sessions.

The Speeches Delivered, And of the Discussions on the Same.

It will be useful on the evening of the day, whose sessions it reports.

The price will be fifty cents in every copy. No stamps taken. Remittances to be made in cash and post-office orders.

Address: Rev. Wm. K. Boyle,
Baltimore, Md.

WOODEN and WILLOW WARE,
Cordage, Paper, Tinware,
Base Balls, etc.,
Flasks and Bottles,
Ink and Clalk,
Japanned Ware,
Blacking,
Lamps, etc.,
Lyon and Soap,
Mirrors,
Oskun and Oari
Pottery,
Curry Combs,
Cutlery and Saws,
Fishing Tackle,
Furnaces,
Stoves,
Tanks, etc., etc.

J. C. MORRIS,
40, 42 and 44 Tchoupitoulas Street.

Wrought & Cast
IRON JACK SCREWS.

These Jack screws have brass heads, stout bodies with all latest improvements.
We make more than 1500 different styles and sizes.
Priced from $6 up.

Send for Jack Screw
Price List.

REINERT & CO.,
Savannah, Ga., N.Y., U.S.A.

MULTA IN PARVO.

This ancient phrase aptly describes Rev. W. C. Black's book, "A Centennial Retrospect," concerning which Dr. P. B. Galloway says: "It is crowded with thrilling and instructive incidents in the lives of the heroic men who planted Methodism in the great South-west."

The Sacred Scriptures say: "It is interesting not only to Methodists, but to all who would know the character of the pioneers who made a history for Mississippi. The reader who takes it up will not be likely to lay it down until all its pages are read."

Rev. W. L. C. Hunsbrett says: "It contains a vast amount of important information. It has as much in it as any work of its size I ever read."

Rev. J. G. Jones says: "It reveals talent as a brilliant paragraph writer."

Dr. C. K. Marshall says: "A capital book—gathers up many hidden facts."

Rev. R. A. Day says: "It contains a large amount of historic material well put together."

It contains notes of more than fifty preachers, among whom are: Gilliam, Blackburn, Milles, Harper, William Warrick, John Lane, J. M. Phipps, John C. Harbison, B. M. Drake, R. Phipps, William Curtis, D. L. Nash, F. A. Davis, Thomas Ford, J. N. Moffit, R. R. Randolph, S. W. Spier, A. T. M. Fly, R. W. Lambuth, George H. Chittum, W. E. M. Lambeth.

For sale by Carver & Jamieson, 112 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Paper, twenty-five cents; cloth, fifty cents.

W. G. WHEELER,
Clothing and Furnishing GOODS.
Successor in Wholesale to
WHEELER & PIERSON,
40 Canal Street, NEW ORLEANS.

GOSSAMER GARMENTS FREE!

Twenty readers of this paper who will send to show our goods and try to influence sales on any goods we will send postage paid to the reader. Gossamer Garments, Water proof, Worsted, Apron, 1000 samples, provided you cut out and return with 25 cents to pay a store fee. WARREN MANUFACTURING CO., 9 Wall St., N.Y.

ANDERSON & DABBS

—DEALERS IN—
Alabama Coal and Coke,
54 Carondelet Street.

Coal and Coke in Bids. for Shipment.

AGRICULTURAL SUPPLIES.
FERTILIZERS
—AND—
CHEMICALS.
Highest Grade of Manure and Fertilizers.

Stern's Ammoniated Raw Bone Superphosphate,
Stern's Pure Ground Bone.

Write for Agricultural Almanac.

Sulphuric Acid, Muratic Acid,
Bone Black.

STERN'S FERTILIZING CHEMICAL CO.,
14 UNION STREET.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NO POISON
IN THE PASTRY
IF

DR. PRICE'S SPECIAL FLAVORING
EXTRACTS

Vanilla, Lemon, Orange, etc., Flavor Cakes, Creams, Puddings, etc., and are used exactly as the fruit from which they are made.

FOR STRENGTH AND TRUE FRUIT FLAVOR THEY STAND ALONE.

Price Baking Powder Co.,
Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

WE MAKE BUT ONE QUALITY.

Price Baking Powder Co.,

Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder

Dr. Price's Lupulin Yeast Gems,

FOR BREAD MAKING.

Our Young People.

WINTER.

BY G. C. CHISHOLM.

O winter! thou art not that lagged Lear,
With snowy beard and cap of ice,
In hoarse, desolating howl of fear,
To me thou art the white queen of the year,
A starry virgin in her robes of snow,
With rosy lips and eyes of blue,
With curls of gold and hair of red and blue,
Nor dost thou come in barren majesty,
Thou hast the flower of sunbeams thrice refined;
No songless, but with cheerful minstrelsy,
Rang from the slaying harp of the wind;
And with such sweet dreams—such visions bright,
Of flowers, and birds, and love's divine delight,
—The century.

Our Children.

DEAR CHILDREN: I think the most successful plan of the devil to lead people to hell is to let them have a hope that they will certainly get religion at some future time and so go to heaven when they die, but to persuade them to put off seeking it to some indefinite time in the unknown future. Satan don't want people to feel uneasy about going to hell, but just wait for a more convenient time to make their peace with God, and he is very careful not to let them find that convenient time until their time is all out and their opportunities for salvation all gone forever. It is impossible to point out fully the danger of putting off seeking religion for a single day, for none of us can tell what a day may bring forth. You will find that many have suddenly come to an end, or some radical change may take place in your feelings or circumstances that may lead you to wander further and further from "the narrow way" until you will never get back to it. I have been looking around lately at the ravages of death in our thickly settled community. Among the dead I number many children from infancy to sixteen or eighteen years of age. Most of them died from ordinary diseases, but some from fatal accidents without a moment's warning. We are apt to hope for the best, but in the light of the Bible, I do not know that all these dead children were saved. Some of them who did not seem to be Christians were certainly old enough to be accountable for the deeds done in the body. The only safe way is at once to seek a preparation for death and be always ready to go when the Master calls for us. It does not make any body die the sooner to be always prepared for death, and as life is so uncertain this is the only safe ground we can take. I have thought much about how, "One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh." Some of our best mortuary statisticians say that out of every two thousand persons, sixty-nine will be dead at the end of the first year; at the end of ten years, five hundred and eighty-eight; at the end of twenty years one thousand and seventy-eight; and so on in the same ratio till all are dead. This uncertainty of life and rate of death ought to be very alarming to all who are not prepared to meet God in peace. It will add greatly to the peace and happiness of your lives to feel assured that you are the children and heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ.

J. G. JONES.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl thirteen years old. I am papa and mamma's only child. Papa takes your nice paper. It is always a welcome visitor. I have been reading the letters in the children's department, and like them very much. I read one lately from my little cousin, Lucy Robinson. I have never seen any names from this section, and I thought I would write you a short letter. Papa, mamma, and myself are members of the Methodist Church. Rev. S. H. Whitley is our pastor. I walk two miles to school every day. My company is my cousin, Oma Williams. My teacher's name is Mr. Dulaney. I will try to answer the questions asked by J. R. Lockhart, Jack drove a nail through Sisera's temple. It is found in Judges iv, 21. Josiah was eight years old when he began to reign. It is found in II Kings xxi, 1. I will close by asking a question: Who fell asleep when Paul was preaching and was taken up dead? Your little friend,

MATTIE A. JULES.

BROOKLINE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I saw a letter in the Christian Advocate from my little cousin, Dan, A. James. I want to see my name in the paper too. I like my school very much. Mamma has a teacher for us, and I like her very much. I have three brothers and one sister, and all of us go to school except one little brother that is three years old. I will tell you what I study: Reading, spelling, arithmetic, geography, and grammar. Mamma takes your paper, and she likes to read it. I am eight years old. Mamma is going to St. Louis with Cousin Dan's mother. Mr. Editor, I hope you will publish my letter, for it is the first I have ever written for a paper. With love to your father and all the children who write for your paper, I will close.

MAVY SMITH.

TRINITY, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl and and I have a very nice mamma and I like her very much. I like to write to you, and I hope to write you a letter all by myself some day. I like to hear about the little heather children, and feel very sorry for some of them.

My grandma Edwin gave me a but I had had luck with her this year. I send you fifty cents for missions. I have two grandmas, and they are good to me. I have such a sweet little brother, nearly a year old. His name is Willie Evan. He is named for papa, grandpapa, and two uncles. I am named for mamma, grandma, and two aunts. Your little friend,

MYLES, Mississippi.

MARY E. SHELLEY.

MR. EDITOR: Your good paper comes to us once every week. I love to hear the little letters read, and would like to answer two of little Carl Roberts' questions in the last paper. "Jesus went" is the shortest verse in the Bible. "The one hundred and seventeenth Psalm" is the shortest chapter. Will some little writer please tell me where the word "confederacy" is found in the Bible? I am trying to learn to write, and hope soon to send a letter written all by myself. I will close by wishing you, kind editor and my little friends, a good time at Christmas.

Your little friend,

JERRY E. SMITH.

OAK GROVE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old, and am a sister of little Maggie who wrote to you a few numbers ago. Since then God has seen fit to call her to him, and now she, with our papa, is reaping the reward of a life spent as Christians. We miss them so much, but feel that time will soon unite us in eternity never to be separated. I am going to school now to Miss Birdie Lanier. She is an affectionate, kind and good teacher, and we all love her very much.

Your little friend,

SALLIE BROWN.

LOO TOWN, Louisiana.

P. S.—Mamma wrote sister Maggie's obituary, and ask that you be kind enough to publish it in the number you publish this.

A. D.

MR. EDITOR: I have not written to the Advocate for a long time. Our Sabbath-school is organized. I run in the Bible class, and mamma is my teacher. Our superintendent's name is Bro. W. Garrison, and we like him very much. Our preacher's name is Bro. Porter. We love Bro. Keener, our presiding elder, for sending us such a noble preacher, and do hope we can keep him another year. Now I will ask a question: What part of the Bible speaks of a left handed man?

Your little friend,

DORA WIMBERLY.

HAYNE STATION, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I am a little girl nine years old. I am going to school. My teacher's name is Mr. Goodwin. I like him very well. I take your paper. I go to the Methodist Sunday-school. My Sunday school teacher's name is Mrs. Lave. We made up five dollars in our class for missions. Now I will answer Melie Robinson's question: The name in the Bible that spells the same both ways is "Hannah." It is found in I Sam. i. I will now ask a question: Where is the word "meal" mentioned in the Bible? Your little friend,

LUCIE WOODS.

CARROLLTON, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: I am thankful of an opportunity of saying to you that my mother takes the Advocate, and I love it very dearly. My home is at Rayne, and I like it very much. It being so near Rayne Church. Bro. Porter is our pastor. We think so much of him because he preaches so well, and is such a Christian. We reverence Bro. Keener, and love him for being so kind to us. He is our presiding elder. I wish he would give us Bro. Porter next year, and many people wish the same. If I see this in the Advocate I may write again, and may tell my name. I will now go by the name of

L. E. S.

RAYNE, Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: Will you allow me to write to the boys and girls' column? I am fifteen years old. I have eight brothers and three sisters. Two of my brothers and all of my sisters and my father and mother are all members of the church. Father takes your excellent paper, and says he likes it ever so much; that it is a good paper. I like to read it also. I will close by answering Annie Foreman's question: It was King Artippa, in speaking to Paul, said, "Amos thou persuadest me to be a Christian." It is found in Acts xxvi, 28. Your little friend,

E. T. HIRLAND.

LAKEVILLE, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As I never see a letter from this part of the country, I thought I would write one. I am in my teens. I have four brothers and two sisters. Crops are very short here, but God has been with us. I am sorry to say that we have no Sunday-school. Bro. A. J. Foster has been our pastor here for the last two years, and I hope that he will be the two next. He is such a good man, and so earnest about his work. I will now ask the little boys and girls a question: What letter in the alphabet is contained the most in the first chapter of the Bible? Your little friend,

J. A. GLOVING.

NEW BRIDGES, Mississippi.

Two Very Ugly Twins.

They were born in Mississippi, and lead very different lives. One is a very good boy, and the other is a very bad boy. They are both very ugly, but the good one is very kind, and the bad one is very cruel. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

very ugly. They are both

very different, but they are both

MISCELLANEOUS.

BLACK RIVER, La.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

Cap. L. L. Lyons.

[illegible]

WHOLE NO. 1481.

[illegible]

Treasurer.

PROFANE WORDS.

The Alabaster Box.

1. That it was wasteful extravagance. To what purpose was this waste? Once the devotion of Jadas would have justified any expenditure upon Jesus. This remark of his implies, if he was not altered toward Christ, or Christ degenerated, that the use of money is only to supply the lower wants of our natures—bread, clothes and shelter. Suppose that principle were universally applied, how many industries would be destroyed! Millions would be thrown out of employment and reduced

Foolish speculations are waste. A child in Lafayette, Ind., tied an eight-hundred-dollar diamond to the string of a toy balloon and turned it loose. He

But before we leave this criticism of Judas let us stop to consider it as a dark lantern turned upon his own character. It indicates a real opposition to both the poor and the Saviour. John, in his gospel, darts a ray of light on to this mysterious protest when he says: "Not that he cared for the poor, but he was a thief and had the bag and bare what was put therein." If the poor were freezing with cold, he was burning up with covetousness, I do not know but what he imagined himself righteously indignant at a real waste (covetousness is so deceptive); but God saw within him a devilish force that had overmastered and strangled all the generous and noble instincts of his nature. Oh! how wily and deceitful is this glittering fiend! How abundant in tricks and stratagems as he worms his way among the purest affections of God's children! Balaam begged the Almighty for permission to curse with defeat his chosen people in order that he might get the reward of Balak, Israel's inveterate foe, Judas

There is a necessity for fire, flood, flames and revolutions—if for nothing else—to unlock hoarded treasures. A thousand noble enterprises must go forward, and if men who have means will not advance them, you may be sure that God will give the money to

2. Another quality of this gift, in which it was like those of our Lord, and which is commended to us, is that it was unolicited. It comes out of her overflowing and unconstrained sympathy. David gave magnificently to build the temple, but only after the rebuke of Nathan. But this woman gave like the Macedonian Church, who prayed the apostle "with much entreaty" that he would receive their gift. She, like they, had an idea of that noble creature who cast their crowns at the Savior's feet, and said, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power and riches and honor and glory and blessing;" and into this glorious fellowship of the saints she sought admission. They had fellowship with Christ, and such a fellowship as none might have who had not, like himself, given everything. She gave, ambitious of loss for him, as in times of persecution later

The prophecy of my death you are beginning to see and will soon realize. Some of you will go back to your acts and forget my warnings and promises. Judas here in despair of political promotion is already plotting to surrender me to the priests and to rise if not for me, at least to rise upon me. But this woman who sees so clearly all that I have foretold of what is to be humiliation, painful and revolting in my betrayal, mock trial, shameful surrender to my enemies—who who clearly sees my peaceful surrender to infernal hate and rage and marks the quivering of my painless flesh yet sees vastly more. By her faith she has made this place and the cross and the tomb not only royal, but divine with the rich triumphs of more than royal state. She sees the triumph of my resurrection, the joy of my ascension, and the glory of my future reign. She invests me now with the glory of more than my resurrection hour—with the resources of infinite wisdom, power, and holiness, with all the array of the judgment. She has imported into these last days of mortal life the glories of my endless reign, by her undimmed and triumphant faith. The gathering storm clouds are about me and you blanch and shiver in the blasts. But in her is the faith of the eagle, which seated upon the topmost mountain crag where the darkness deepens and the thunders roar, defiantly plumes its wings and soars into the unshadowed and thunderless realm of the golden day. I call all men to witness the quality of this faith.

It is prophetic. Abraham by faith was a sojourner in the rich and beautiful land of promise, because he looked for a city whose builder and maker was God. By faith Noah under a cloudless sky tolled 120 years to build an ark against the day of an universal deluge. By faith Moses declined the luxury of Pharaoh's court and chose the afflictions of the desert with the people of God, "for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward." Faith is always prophetic. Faith is the evidence to the understanding and to the affections of things not seen by mortal eye—the power, wisdom, the truthfulness of God—the reality, the beauty, wealth, the glory, the reward and rapture of heaven. By it the weary foot of earth's pilgrim rings upon heaven's golden pavement, the knarled and stiff hand of the toiler clasps its "lucid lute of gold," the wrinkled and care bent brow gleams with the radiance of a "crown of life." The poor man is rich with eternal gains, and he who is beaten with the fall of adversity exults in a festive scene of unmingled joy. Faith draws into the domain of sense and the sphere of time, the actualities of the future land and the things belonging to the life of the Spirit. Hence it can afford to let go of its gold—it can afford to ignore the pomp and splendor of sensuous life. It can afford to surrender the pleasures of sin which at best are temporary because it knows that they are all but unlit bubbles which perish in the using.

Faith sees the awful passages of eternal wrath. It hears the roar of the chariot wheels as the Judge cometh into judgment and the crinkling of the forests and cities, and the grinding of the rocks as the earth twains and turns in the throes of the final conflagration. It sees the sheeted dead, both small and great, just and unjust, as with varied feelings of dismay and joy they come to meet the Lord in mid air. Faith therefore can afford any disaster here that prevents a final disaster.

Brethren, here's the quality that deserves a monument, and the Savior erects one in this act of Mary's.

Men erect monuments to conquerors, poets, philosophers, statesmen. The men who most intensely realize the opportunities and conditions of temporal advantage and most skillfully combine thought and force to secure them, are our heroes. But here is a quality that seems to shut the perception of temporary good and to open the susceptibility of the soul to eternal good. Here is a quality that enables the soul in oblivion of all the factions, disputes and circumstances of time to populate their earth with the form of invisible spirits, to realize the pressure of invisible forces, and to participate in the inevitable triumph of the spiritual over the material and the eternal over the evanescent—and Jesus commends it.

We estimate men to be sagacious in proportion as they are incredulous; as Jesus in proportion as they are believing. The profoundest sagacity is that which relies the firmest upon themselves, the invisible and true forces which are not discovered by sense but revealed by God's spirit. We, on the other hand, esteem sagacity that which eliminating all sentiment and all speculation, regulates its life upon facts which appeal to the eye and ear and which have a monetary significance. We think him sagacious who makes fewest mistakes about conditions of material prosperity. No, the true sagacity and the only one worthy of a monument is that which reposes heaven and earth, time and eternity upon the sure word of God, by which it is enabled to disrobe the present of its illusions, and make the reluctant and shuddering body obey the tranquil and triumphant spirit within it. That quality is faith—and faith stands in the estimation of Christ for the truest sagacity.

Hence God has so ordered that all true greatness—such as the world will not forget, and all true success—such as brings genuine happiness, and all true character—such as will not consume in the fiery vortexes of the world; has been and will be the product of that faith which brings heaven down to earth and inflates time with the vigor of eternity. If you want to know what made Lord Brougham, Palmerston and Gladstone great, see them teaching classes in Sunday-school. The key to Bismarck's strong character is his strong faith in God and his reliance upon the merits of a crucified Savior.

We say that man is a fool who does not see, or seeing, ignores the palpable facts of human nature—the teaching of history and the truths of material science; but what shall we say of one who shuts out of consideration, the nobler, more real and more permanent facts of the spiritual world. In the case of just such a man the Scripture says, "Thou fool, this night shall thy soul be required of thee." This woman's benevolence proceeded from her faith. So bring all your benevolence to Christ under a firm persuasion that upon all worldly prosperity the storm of the last judgment lowers—and upon all worldly unrighteousness and sorrow and poverty sanctified by religion, the glorious rewards of infinite grace shall flash.

IV. Another and the last reason for commending this act was the gratitude it expressed. The meeting of Simon, the leper, Lazarus and the Savior at a feast given in honor of the Savior by Simon brings involuntarily to mind the Savior's kindness to them. And when Mary, sister of one and sister-in-law to the other, presents her precious gift we can not, if we would, disbelieve that she who had such strong domestic and family attachments was moved by gratitude for the health of one and the life of the other renewed. But over and above all she had been the subject of direct spiritual blessing. She had sat at his feet, had heard of heaven and learned the way. Her own sin-sick soul had been cured and her heart swelled with grateful emotion. Did it ever occur to us to bring to Jesus an alabaster box of very costly ointment as a grateful return for healing our sick? Gratitude comprehends both a joyful appreciation of a benefit received and affection for the person of the donor, and both sentiments are worthy of a divine commendation. If I had the time I would like to break up this thought and give each part its due emphasis, but I have transcended the limit of this discourse.

I must call attention, however, to the fact that faith is an act of the understanding and benevolence and gratitude of the heart; but even faith, before it accomplishes anything great, has to enlarge its circuit so as to take in the heart. And so the Savior is really spending his praises upon love. Men set great value upon forces that are snubbiary and overlook those really that are basilar. They exaggerate the value of connective genius or wit, or arms or oratory. They rear their monument to trade, to art, science and patriotism, and build for their heroes in these lines pillars and arches, altars, temples and mausoleums.

The real force is love—it never fails. God is love. Gratitude is so important an element in character that the Almighty has spent great efforts to root it in the heart of the race. This, with other things, was the object of the feasts of the Passover, Pentecost and the Tabernacles, to keep which entailed such prodigious expense and inconvenience upon the Jews. So there were required also the stated sacrifices of the peace and drink offerings as testimonials of gratitude. In the Old Testament there frequently occur exhibitions of this grace, and several in the New Testament stand out so conspicuously in the narratives as to fix the attention and fire the conscience of all readers. We never can forget the stone which Jacob raised after the angels ascended and descended and at which God's promise to be his defense and blessing—the stone which he called "Bethel." Nor can we forget the stone which Samuel raised after Israel's victory over the Philistines at Mizpeh and which he called "Ebenezer"—hitherto hath the Lord helped us. They stood for many generations silent monuments; not only of Divine power, but of human gratitude, and the memory of them is an eloquent remonstrance against an insensate enjoyment of the Divine gifts.

If any man ought to bring a liberal, yea a magnificent free will offering, at least once in a lifetime, it ought to be the Christian man. He has received the most splendid gifts which the Divine resources could either invent or bestow—gifts to obtain which, for a time at least, staggered the thought and poised in breathless awe and trepidation the entire intelligent universe. And yet to how many men is this thought entirely new, and how poor their offerings when contrasted with their ability. I heard of a case once where a man fell into a river and was in danger of drowning when another, an entire stranger, at the peril of his own life, rushed to the rescue and saved him. On reaching the bank the rescued man put his hand into his pocket and drew from an ample store, a testimonial of his appreciation, the enormous sum of four cents. "No, thank you," said his rescuer, "I see you have a clear and very accurate idea of the value of your life; no, I thank you." It is fair to judge of the value a man sets upon his immortal interests by the proportion of his property he gives to religion. Think you that the Lord is pleased with your smug when you can bring an alabaster box?

III were put upon the block and sold there is many a negro with more sense who would bring a better price. If I were valued for service in the counting room, I might bring two or three thousands a year. If for service as an author, or even as a preacher, I would, but bring much. But there is something about me which reduces to insignificance all values. If my Maker should ask me what I would take in exchange for my soul, I would reply that he never made worlds enough, though they were all solid gold to buy my soul. And yet he has voluntarily paid a price I would not dare to ask in the gift of his only Son. God's estimate must be great when he took the pallor from my cheek and put it into Christ's, and freed me from pain and fear and faith to inherit them upon him. What I walk by the cross where Jesus hangs that I might go free what shall I bring to express my gratitude?

Were the whole realm of nature mine, That were a present far too small; Love so amazing, so divine, Demands my life, my love, my all.

Address all mail to NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Orleans.

Don't fail to read the "ad" headed "Mullum in Pyro."

Sketch of the Life and Ministry of Rev. Geo. Shaeffer.

(Continued.)

On Monday night, at Unity Camp Meeting, Bro. William Vaughan, preached a most eloquent discourse on the transfiguration, after which many came to the altar deeply convicted, and a powerful excitement took place among the professors of religion. The power of God was present to kill and to make alive—about ten persons were converted. During the excitement I called on Bro. Devers to pray for the mourners. He had been a member of the church some years, and was in the habit of praying in public. He commenced praying and became much engaged, and towards the close he commenced praying for himself, and soon broke out in praises to God, declaring that God had converted his soul. He was in a perfect rapture of joy. He talked incessantly for a long time; telling his feelings, his intentions, his former exercises and future purposes. He told me his friends had tried to persuade him that he was converted, but he always believed that when he obtained religion he should know it. He said he had often wondered how he should feel when he got religion, where it would strike him first, and said, "It struck me all over at once, and went right to my heart, and I closed my prayer as quick as possible and began to give God glory," said he, "I thought I would not do him justice if I did not give him glory."

We had a very interesting camp meeting at Hargrove's Camp Ground, which closed September 26. At the close of the exercises at three o'clock, the last day of the meeting, I requested all the Christians to retire to the grove and spend some time in private prayer and charged them not to go in companies, but each to himself. This had a happy effect in exciting a spirit of devotion. After supper they commenced singing in several of the tents with great animation. When the signal was given at the stand the congregation assembled promptly and commenced singing with the Spirit. I went out and entered the pulpit and commenced selecting a hymn, while doing so one of the members began to rejoice in God, another brother struck up a lively song. In the midst of the singing a sister commenced shouting and arose and ran to her husband, who was a preacher, and embraced him and sunk into his arms. The excitement continuing to increase, I called on Bro. Seth Byers to pray. He prayed with power and was much blessed. We then sang, and the excitement became general. The Christians began to shout all through the congregation. I then called for mourners, and the altar was soon crowded, and the work of conversion soon commenced. The excitement continued without intermission till two o'clock A. M., and eighteen were converted that night. Many of the people of God were preoccupied with the weight of religious excitement that rested upon them. [There were forty conversions in all.] I felt much blessed, and my faith was much increased. I hope to see many more converted before the close of the year. There is a revival influence abroad, and I will improve it as much as possible.

November 27, 1884: I arose early, while the stars were yet shining, this morning. It was a clear, cold and frosty morning, and I sallied out without going to the fire and went to the woods to pray. I was blessed and felt revived. I want more religion, more spiritual strength and light. I want my Savior to reveal himself in my heart, "the chief among ten thousand and altogether lovely." I preached yesterday on the parable of the ten virgins. At the close an old brother said to me, "You have given me a pretty severe whipping, I felt it every word applied to me." I told him I was glad to hear it, and hoped he would profit by it. He said, "I had almost lost confidence in every person, but I have been looking through false spectacles." I remarked, "I hoped I had broke the glasses out of them, and he would see more clearly." It is always a bad mark when a Christian begins to find fault with everybody, and nothing suits him in Church or State. It is often a mark of his own declension.

The Alabama Annual Conference, for 1885, met at Columbus, Miss., January 16, and closed on January 24, at midnight. It was a very interesting session as well as one of the most laborous that I ever attended. We had afternoon sessions every day but one. The trial of Rev. P. P. Neely excited great interest in the public mind as well as in the Conference. He was cleared of immorality, but reproved for imprudence, and was stationed in Columbus. I am appointed to a new circuit called Columbus circuit, composed of part of Carrollton and part of Fayetteville circuits. I have enjoyed the meeting of the Conference very much; it has been profitable to me, especially our sunrise prayer meetings, devoted to the subject of sanctification exclusively. I humbly hope those meetings may prove greatly beneficial to our ministers, and send out a haloed influence among the people of our charge. I feel the need of more religion. I am not as spiritual as I desire. My love is too cold and my faith too weak. I want a deeper work of grace to qualify me for usefulness. Oh, to be filled with all the fulness of God!

(To be continued.)

Don't fail to read the "ad" headed "Mullum in Pyro."

Don't fail to read the "ad" headed "Mullum in Pyro."

Don't fail to read the "ad" headed "Mullum in Pyro."

This. An esteemed friend often sends me newspapers with certain articles marked with black, blue or red pencils to call my attention to the same; and when some article of special merit or interest is read he writes the word at the head of this article over it.

Reader mine, I have a special message for you to-day; so, like my friend, I write this at the top. You will remember that in our ADVOCATE, a few weeks ago, there was a notice to our much-loved correspondent, "Invalid," to the effect that her long-delayed "Wood Notes" were in the hands of the publishers at our Publishing House at Nashville, and would be issued by them as soon as $800 was deposited by the subscribers. But as yet very few have responded to her appeal which, if the truth was known, was more a prayer to the readers of the ADVOCATE to come to the rescue and enable her by their subscription to save her dear home-rod from the creditors' hands.

This has been the cherished object for which she has so long labored in pain and sadness; not for herself was this task taken up, but for her widowed mother, aged grandmother and sisters that they might not be homeless when she had gone to her long-sought home in heaven. What a "red letter day" it would be to them to know that the required sum was in the publishers' hands and that "Wood Notes" would soon be in the hands of the subscribers!

Can not some young ladies and gentlemen "go on a mission" and canvass their vicinity for subscribers for this forthcoming book? Who speaks first? What Sunday or day-school will bear off the banner by putting "Wood Notes" in every home? It will be a mission of love and bless the missionary as well as those for whom the mission is made. Every good book that is issued and read helps to drive out the vicious literature "whose name is legion," and which is creeping like the frogs of Egypt into almost every household. Who will be one of sixteen to make up a club of fifty subscribers at $150 for this book and send the amount direct to the Southern Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.? Reader, do this; and thereby help the writer of this to possess her soul in

PATIENCE.

CHASED BY A SPIDER.—The klug of the spiders on the pampas is not a Mygal, but a Lycosa of extraordinary size, light gray in color, with a black ring round its middle. It is active and swift and irritable to such a degree that one can scarcely help thinking that in this species nature has overshot her mark. When a person passes near one—say three or four yards of its lurking place—it starts up and gives chase, and will often follow for a distance of thirty or forty yards.

A spider says: "I came once very near being bitten by one of these savage creatures. Riding on an easy trot over the dry grass, I suddenly observed a spider pursuing me, leaping swiftly along and keeping up with my beast. I aimed a blow with my whip, and the point of the lash struck the ground close to it, when it instantly leaped upon me and ran up the lash, and was actually within three or four inches of my hand when I flung the whip from me."

The gauchos have a very quaint belief which tells that the city of Caracas was once invaded by an army of monstrous spiders, and that the townspeople went out, with beating drums and flags flying, to repel the invasion, and that after firing several volleys they were forced to turn and fly for their lives. I have no doubt that a sudden gust of wind, or the noise of the firing, in a year exceptionally favorable to them, suggested this fable to some rhyming satirist of the town.

THAT HORN.—The country is a strange place to poor children whose life has been spent in the narrow streets and dingy tenements of a city. One of these, who had been so fortunate as to spend a day or two in the country, owing to the New York Tribune Fresh Air Fund, thus relates his experience to a companion:

"The first thing when we got there this horn blew, and we had breakfast, lots of good things to eat. Then we went out to play, and before long the horn blew again, and we had a nice dinner. We went out again after dinner, and in a little while the horn blew again and we had supper."

After supper we went out to play again, and pretty soon the horn blew again. We went in, and the lady said it was eight o'clock and time to go to bed; but before we went, she gave us a bowl of splendid bread and milk. When I went upstairs, I was just as sleepy as I could be, and wanted to go to bed right away, but I told them that horn blew again to be sure and wake me up.—Yours Companion.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CATARRH

CATARRH IS A DANGEROUS DISEASE, yet it can be cured by the use of our Catarrh Specific. Thousands suffer without knowing the nature of this almost universal complaint. It is an inflammation or necrosis of the lining membrane of the nasal passages. There are several varieties of Catarrh, with widely different symptoms. The most common kind is characterized by an excessive secretion of mucus or matter in the nasal passages, which must either be blown from the nose, or drop back behind the palate, or is hawked or sniffled backward to the throat.

Other indications are hawking, spitting, weak and inflamed eyes, frequent sneezing of the throat, often ringing or roaring or other noises in the ears, more or less impairment of the hearing, loss of smell, memory impaired, dullness and dizziness of the head, and dryness and heat of the nose.

All persons thus affected take cold easily. The breath sometimes reveals to all around the corruption within, while the patient often loses all sense of smell. The disease advances slowly, until pain in the chest, lungs or bowels, startsles him; he hacks and coughs, has dyspepsia, liver complaint, and is urged by his doctor to take this or that; perhaps, cod liver oil is prescribed. Perfectly ridiculous! The foul ulcers in the head can not be reached by pouring such stuff into the poor, jaded stomach. The patient becomes nervous; the voice harsh and unnatural; he feels disheartened; memory loses its power; judgement his zeal; gloomy forebodings hang over him; hundreds, yes thousands, in such circumstances, feel that to die would be a relief, and many even die out the thread of life to end their sorrows.

Thousands are Dying

In early life with consumption, who can look back a few years—perhaps only months when it was a Catarrh. Neglected when a cure is possible, very soon it will transform the features of health and youth into the dark, pallid appearance; while the hacking cough, the excess of blood gushing from the lungs, or night sweats, all significantly proclaim it is too late; and thus a neglected Catarrh ends in the consumptive's grave.

Nasal Catarrh.

Sometimes the disease only affects the membranes lining the nasal passages, and may be cured by simple means. But when it is located in the "frontal sinuses," or in the "posterior sinuses," or if it has entered the "Eustachian tubes," and is injuring the ears, nothing but timely medical aid can effectually reach it and destroy it. And certainly after it has affected the throat and bronchial tubes, as all well read physicians will readily attest, nothing can be relied on to effect a permanent cure but the inhalation of properly medicated vapor. In the same manner that we breathe a common air we can inhale and breathe a medicated air; and it is perfectly simple, any one can see, thus to treat a disease of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. How much better this method by which remedies are conveyed directly to the seat of the disease, than to resort to the uncertain and too frequently mischievous action of medicines taken into the stomach.

The Cold Air Inhaling Balm.

This part of my treatment I regard as very important, especially in warding off colds, which is left to battle and in relaying the head and lungs while under their effects. The balm is composed of several kinds of gums, balsams, oils and essential oils which are separately used by the best physicians in treating throat, bronchial and lung diseases. These I have combined and concentrated their virtues, which, by the inhaling process, are drawn through the various passages of the head and respiratory organs, reaching and leading every irritated spot. I used when cold first makes its appearance—which usually begins by irritation of the mucous lining of the nose, and as a preventive of the cold, and by inhaling it with extraordinary check it; and by producing a quicker circulation, and by throwing the blood to the surface, the bad effects of a cold are ward off. It is pleasant to use and almost instant in its effects.

Some Bad Symptoms.

The long continued corruption of the air that is breathed passing over the foul matter in the nasal passages poisons the lungs and from thence the blood. The morbid matter that is swallowed during sleep passes into the stomach, enfeebles the digestion, vitiates the secretions and pollutes the very fountains of life. The patient becomes feverish occasionally, there is less buoyancy of spirits, the appetite is often fickle, the heat less clear, it is difficult to keep the energies up to the old standard, and often, without knowing why, he is conscious that he is not as well as all the time he is told he is. These symptoms indicate that the vital organs are becoming impaired so that they can not perform their natural healthy functions. No surgical or medical treatment is devised to assist nature in removing all poisonous material from the system and to neutralize and counteract its baneful effects on the vital organs and on the blood.

AMONG WOMEN Catarrh is very common. The decree of fashion compel women to go from the dry atmosphere of furnace-heated houses into the open air, with the head poorly covered. Many suffer keenly from bronchitis and influenza of the throat and lungs.

TEACHERS IN OUR SCHOOLS are greatly subject to this fearful malady. Confinement in close, ill-ventilated school-rooms; the over-heated atmosphere, charged with the steaming poison exuding from the bodies of the not-always-over-clean children, breed this disease with fearful rapidity.

LAZINESS IN THE CHURCH ROOM and Judges on the bench, from the same general cause, are also often afflicted with this fearful disease. MEN IN THE CITY, after leaving the pulpit over-heated with the strain of their mental and physical effort, neglect sufficient precaution and cold is the result. This neglect opens the way to Catarrh, and to a possible loss of voice. I have said and so keenly myself that I can not urge upon public speakers too strongly the necessity of removing this disease while a cure is possible.

My Experience.

Eighteen Years of terrible headache, discharging nasal discharges, dryness of the throat, acute bronchitis, coughing, soreness of the lungs, rising bloody mucus, and even night sweats, impeding me from my professional duties, and bringing me to the verge of the grave—all were caused by, and the result of, nasal Catarrh. After spending hundreds of dollars and obtaining no relief, I commenced my Catarrh Specific and Cold Air Inhaling Balm, and wrought upon myself a wonderful cure. Now I can speak for hours with no difficulty, and can breathe freely in any atmosphere. At the calls of numerous friends, I have given my cure to the public, and have now thousands of patients in all parts of the country, and thousands of happy fellow-beings whose sufferings I have relieved. My cure is certain, thorough and perfect, and is endorsed by every physician who has examined it. It relieves my fellow-beings as I have been relieved of this noxious disease, which makes the possessor of it an obstacle to himself and others. I shall be satisfied and feel that I have done my little toward removing the ills of mankind.

T. P. CHILDS.

THE FOLLOWING FROM OTHER PUBLISHERS HAS GIVEN US EVERY CONFIDENCE IN RECOMMENDING MR. CHILDS TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS:

"The publishers and editors of the Journal and Messenger, Cincinnati, have known Rev. T. P. Childs for many years, and feel every confidence in any statement he may make. Our subscribers can feel every confidence in giving their cases into his hands for treatment." "While not supposing that all cases of Catarrh will be cured by the prescription advertised, the publishers of the Illustrated Christian Weekly, of New York, after diligent inquiry, have reason to believe that it has, in many cases, proved effectual." "The publishers of the Congressionalist, of Boston, with multitudes of other people, are somewhat suspicious of patent medicines as a rule, and when we received the advertisement of Mr. Childs, we at first declined its insertion; but on making inquiry, we received such satisfactory replies, and one especially from a well known Congressional pastor not far from Rev. Mr. Childs, the proprietor of the medicine, that we withdrew our objections." "The publishers of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, after careful investigation, are satisfied that Rev. T. P. Childs' treatment for the head, throat and lungs is all that it is represented to be."

Only Fair

We deem it only fair that every one who wishes should accomplish all that we claim; and for this purpose we add a few of the many thousands of unsolicited certificates which have been sent to us by grateful patients—almost all of whom will doubtless respond to any inquiry by letter, if accompanied by a stamp to pay postage. Having been cured themselves, they will be willing to let the world know where they can find certain relief. We have thousands of these certificates from all classes—physicians, clergymen, lawyers, judges, merchants, bankers, business men, farmers, young men and old, children and adults.

Mr. Z. Z. LEE, of Greenville, S. C., writes: "I have used your Catarrh Specific, and it has cured me of my Catarrh, and I feel every confidence in recommending it to my friends." "I have used your Catarrh Specific, and it has cured me of my Catarrh, and I feel every confidence in recommending it to my friends."

Mr. A. J. FOLEY, of Greenville, S. C., writes: "I have used your Catarrh Specific, and it has cured me of my Catarrh, and I feel every confidence in recommending it to my friends." "I have used your Catarrh Specific, and it has cured me of my Catarrh, and I feel every confidence in recommending it to my friends."

Mr. W. W. WILSON, of Greenville, S. C., writes: "I have used your Catarrh Specific, and it has cured me of my Catarrh, and I feel every confidence in recommending it to my friends." "I have used your Catarrh Specific, and it has cured me of my Catarrh, and I feel every confidence in recommending it to my friends."

Home Treatment

Children's Treatment for Catarrh, and all diseases of the Head, Throat and Lungs, can be taken at home with perfect ease and safety, by the patient. We especially desire to treat those who have tried other remedies without success. A full statement of method of home treatment and cost will be sent on application.

Address, REV. T. P. CHILDS, Troy, Ohio.

Mention the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE LUTHERAN, METHODIST AND
NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF
THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL
CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:
REV. T. A. S. ADAMS. REV. J. T. SAWYER.
REV. W. L. O. HENRICHT.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1884.

$1056 751

Centenary offering, Jefferson Street
Church, Natchez, Miss.

The New Creature, a treatise by
Rev. J. B. Walker, of New Orleans,
La. This pamphlet, by our worthy presiding elder of the New Orleans district, will be read with interest by the Doctor's numerous friends and admirers. Copies can be obtained at this office at ten cents per copy.

We give the readers of the ADVOCATE this week a rare treat in the sermon of Dr. Evans, of Shreveport, La. It will do you good to read it carefully, and if you will "inwardly digest" the same, it will do you more good. Maybe you need just such a tonic, and the Doctor comes just at the right time.

Denying Christ.

The Apostle Paul writes to Timothy these solemn and weighty words: "If we deny him, he will deny us." The apostle speaks here of denying Christ. There is much more meaning to these words than many people are accustomed to get out of them. Like all Scripture, the more we study them the more they deepen and broaden. They are like the sun; the lines of light radiate in all directions from a common centre. One of these lines leads in a direction which shows that there is one sense to these words which discloses an awfulness equal to that which attaches to any other Scripture. When a man denies his fellow-man, it often means nothing more than a refusal of recognition. When a man denies Christ, that is all it can mean. But when Christ denies a man, it does not mean simply that he will not recognize him, but it means a positive and prompt withdrawal of his presence and of all the blessings that attend his presence. It means more than that. It is an absolute barring out of the doorway that leads to the fountain of good and a closing of the entrance to the broad and rich fields of the Divine providence and a letting down of the black curtain that shuts off the vision of hope. It means disaster of the direst kind. Nor does it affect only the individual. Others are involved in the same ruinous overthrow, for "no man dieth to himself," Christ, by the perfections of his nature, must be faithful to himself and to those who trust him, and by the same perfections of nature he must deny those who deny him. Christ's denial begins sometimes in an unexpected manner, but it is none the less crushing in the end. Read the following from the Baltimorean, of December 6.

"The spectre of atheism is over that house," says a Christian journal commenting upon the fine, new residence of Col. Ingersoll in the nation's capital. Socially and intellectually its inmates are charming people. Mrs. Ingersoll and her two daughters possess a rare and delightful talent as entertainers, but their weekly reception during the fashionable season fails to attract their social peers, owing to the anti-Christian sentiments so fearlessly promulgated by its master.

Ajax defying the lightning is not a pleasant picture to contemplate; and there is nothing grand or noble in the old defiant cry of the Jews: "We will not have this man to rule over us." This man? Christ Jesus, the blessed Redeemer of the world! Many persons who are not professors of religion are ashamed to be seen within the portals of this subordinate, self-loving Ingersoll, for there is an in-born recognition of the divine One, which has its place in every soul, and even the barbarous Indian will grow eloquent with the grandeur of his theme when he talks to you of the great Spirit and the "happy hunting grounds," in which the disenthralled spirit will exultantly roam through vast infinity.

We have rarely read anything so pathetic as Ingersoll's funeral oration over his faithful brother. It is an eternal farewell conched in the most beautiful and despairing language. Its antithesis is found in the sublime declaration of the dying Paul: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all who also shall love his appearing." How marked the contrast in the closing scenes of the atheist and the devout Christian.

Ingersoll, with all his silvery eloquence of tongue and pen, is not "the coming man," and friends and reputation do not "hang like blushing honors thick upon him." He has defrauded himself and his family of their precious birthright, and now when he can never undo the pernicious influence of his atheistic course, it is said he is giving up lecturing.

Editorial Correspondence.

Our trip northward to this capital city of the nation was by way of the Queen and Crescent to Cincinnati, and higher by the Baltimore and Ohio. As a traveling companion we had the genial and cyclopedic Dr. C. K. Marshall, of Vicksburg, who has a rare treasury of knowledge in persons, places and things. The Queen and Crescent affords the amplest accommodations, including attractive and appetizing eating-houses along the line. Though by no means an epicure, we have a pleasant memory of that breakfast at Entaw, Ala. Such an establishment would be a good investment for every railroad. A traveler will forgive a dingy car, a rough roadbed, a burly and a snappish conductor, but seventy-five cents for an indigestible meal is an unpardonable sin. It will condemn the entire management of a road.

At Birmingham a familiar incident occurred. The North Alabama Conference had been in recent session, and some pastoral changes had been made. Rev. J. M. Newman and family, who for three years had been stationed in the growing city of Birmingham, took passage with us en route to Gadsden, their new home. With cheerful faith and faces they were leaving friends to go among strangers. Bidding fond associations adieu, they looked for a warm welcome into another generous field of labor. What a marvel is this itinerant system of ministerial supply! And there is no less heroic devotion to its demands than in the days of our fathers. Indeed, there are fewer locations and "local itinerants" than in any period in the history of American Methodism. From Bro. Newman we gathered many interesting facts concerning the growth of the church in that rapidly developing North Alabama country. Birmingham is itself a marvel. Its iron and coal industries have attracted millions of capital and made it already the Pittsburgh of the South. Whereunto it will grow up prophet can foresee. We were glad to learn that the church was keeping step with the march of restless enterprise, and in every growing town was planting herself with large expectations. That is good religion. The church must plan as liberally as the world. She can not afford to lag behind the eager movements of daring commerce.

The route from Chattanooga to Cincinnati was traveled in the night much to our disappointment. The memory of a day's travel along that line, enraptured with the sublime scenery along Emory river, and on to the famous "high bridge" over the Kentucky, only intensified desire to see it again. The far-famed picturesqueness of the Hudson, with all its historic associations, had no more attraction for us than the ever-varying kaleidoscope of natural wonder along the line of the Cincinnati Southern. This disappointment was in part compensated by a night in the new "boudoir car." It is fitted up with different apartments like the state-rooms on a steam-boat, and with the most lavish display of artistic finish and beauty. Connected with each room is an electric bell for summoning the porter. There is a nice library of a hundred volumes, a restaurant, hot and cold water for bathing, and the entire car is brilliantly lighted with gas. Rather an improvement on the methods and conveniences of travel enjoyed by our itinerant fathers.

After a delay of two hours at Cincinnati, we left at nine A. M. on the Baltimore and Ohio for Washington. At Parkersburg we crossed the Ohio and began the ascent of the Alleghenies. And, in crossing that stream, we had to move up our watches nearly an hour to keep up with the railroad. There they change from the nineteenth meridian of time to the seventy-fifth. On our return we will have to reverse the dial or else leave Parkersburg nearly an hour before we get there. As we passed over the mountains in the night, they could only be seen robed in the silvery light of a full moon. And, although two dollars were spent for a berth in a sleeping-car, several hours were given in admiring the scenery as the moonlight shimmered on the bosom of the Potomac and crowned with glory the overhanging mountain peaks. An unimaginative lowlander from the far South can not repress his enthusiasm amid such scenes; so we make no apology for not getting value received for a berth in the sleeper. Washington was reached at six o'clock, just as the lofty dome of the capitol building had caught the first golden rays of the morning.

Loyal to our cause, though anxious to hear some visiting celebrities in other pulpits, we repaired at eleven o'clock to Mt. Vernon Place, and had the pleasure of listening to an instructive, excellent sermon by Dr. Hendrix, of Missouri. In the communion service which followed the sermon quite a number of our Southern delegates took part. Against persistent resistance the lot fell upon this editor to preach at night. Mt. Vernon Place is a beautiful church, well located of admirable, ample appointments in every respect. The congregations were good, and the singing first-class, though without much help from the pews. There is a large choir of many fine voices. How difficult it must be to preserve the bond of peace in that family of singers! Choirs need special grace, for their trials are very great. Dr. S. K. Cox, the accomplished pastor, is serving his third year in that church, and is greatly beloved by his entire congregation. He is an industrious, prudent pastor as well as a man of letters, and has one of the finest private libraries we have seen. In the audiences on the Sabbath we were glad to note the presence of several senators and representatives from the South. Amid the excitements of Washington life our brethren need much gospel preaching and ought not to miss an opportunity, and while there duty to their own church should prompt a regular attendance at Mt. Vernon Place. It is right that Southern Methodism has a church in the capital of the nation, and we look for it to enjoy increasing prosperity.

On the early morning of Monday we began industriously to "do up" the city. On this second visit it has all the attractive interest of the first. The streets are paved with asphalt and are as smooth as a floor. They are swept and garlished like the rooms of a dwelling. Last night we observed the sweeping machine at work on Pennsylvania avenue, and after it passed along that broad, popular boulevard, under the blaze of the electric lamps, looked as clean and fresh as a child with its face washed. Over this asphalt pavement gentlemen glide on their bicycles and tricycles without noise and with the swiftness of a horse at full speed. A stranger is also attracted by the vehicles of every style and cost. In addition to ample street car accommodations, the herdic and hansom are very popular and great conveniences. The latter is much used in England, but is not often seen in America. And what a multitude of statues, equestrian and other, to national heroes and patriots! This is indeed a city of stately greatness.

A letter about Washington and its many attractions will be reserved for another time. The days spent in our national capital were full of entertainment and suggestion. For much of this pleasure we are indebted to Representative Barksdale, from Mississippi. He introduced us to many leading statesmen in both Houses of Congress, and anticipated just what a curious visitor would like to know about men and things. An account of what was seen and heard will be given our readers at another time. We occupy the space with notes from the Centennial Conference.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 8, 1884.

THE CENTENNIAL CONFERENCE.

The preliminary meeting of the Centennial Conference was held on Tuesday evening at the First Methodist Episcopal Church, corner of Charles and Fayette streets. This church is situated on the very spot where the old Lovely Lane Meeting-House once stood, and where the "Christmas Conference" of 1784 was held. It is a substantial structure and capable of seating about twelve hundred persons. The house itself marks the growth of years. Lovely Lane was a small plain building, without a stove, and seats without "backs" except a few for the older brethren. The First Church is elegantly furnished with upholstered pews arranged in semi-circular form, heated by a furnace, having a spacious gallery on three sides and supplied with a magnificent pipe organ. What a change in the bulwark itself—to say nothing of the congregation that crowded the First Church on last evening!

The address of welcome by Bishop Edward G. Andrews, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was a grand effort. Fraternal and cordial in spirit, it sparkled with happy reminiscences of the far past and thrilled with thoughts of mighty power. His peroration, an apostrophe of Bishops Pierce and Simpson, was a magnificent burst of eloquence and stirred the vast audience to loud "amens" and unexpressed applause. The responses were made by Dr. J. B. McFerrin and Rev. J. C. Price, of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. Dr. McFerrin spoke in his happiest vein and several times "brought down the house." The colored speaker, Rev. J. C. Price, who gained laurels at the Ecumenical Conference, in London, several years ago, did not sustain himself. He spoke too long and said things that had better have been unsaid. He has a full, rich voice and is capable at times, doubtless, of considerable oratorical effort, but he has no genius for discreet speech.

Bishop A. W. Wilson, in feebleness of frame, was present and presided in the administration of the Lord's Supper. We were all delighted to look upon his kindly face, chastened, we thought, by his long lingering so near the grave, and hear the tremulous tones of his voice. He is improving, and hopes are fondly cherished of his restoration to accustomed vigor and activity. That was an imposing scene when venerable divines from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf knelt reverently together and partook of the blessed sacrament.

Promptly at half-past nine o'clock this morning the Centennial Conference was called to order by Bishop Andrews. The meetings are held at Mt. Vernon Place Church—said to be the second in imposing and costly architecture of all Methodist Churches on this continent. The Metropolitan Church, in Toronto, built by the late Dr. William Morley Punshon, is larger and more elaborate in architectural finish. Mount Vernon will hold about sixteen hundred persons. The body of the church is occupied by delegates and the families who entertain them—all of whom are admitted by tickets. The galleries are for the general public, and every inch of standing room is occupied. In the building there is a postoffice, a telephone and a telegraph wire for the convenience of the Conference. The delegates of the several Methodist families sit together, and the attendance of each is quite full. But two of our Bishops are present as yet—Bishops Wilson and Granbery. Of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Bishops Bowman, Foster, Andrews and Fowler are in their seats. Bishops Campbell and Wayman, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, are of the delegation from that body.

Bishop Granbery presided at the first morning session, and Dr. John H. Martin, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was elected the permanent secretary, with Dr. John, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, assistant. In conducting the devotional exercises Dr. Joseph Cummings read from the Bible owned and used by John Wesley in his private study and field preaching. It is a sacred Methodist relic and was the object of much curious interest. Two other historic treasures were shown—the Bible of Bishop Asbury, and Bishop Foster used it in reading the text of his sermon, and a Discipline published in 1785. After the appointment of a Business Committee and a Committee on Credentials, Bishop Randolph S. Foster proceeded to deliver the opening sermon of the Conference. To characterize it adequately is impossible. Its effect upon the congregation was overwhelming. The universal sentiment was that its like could hardly have been produced by any other man in American Methodism. He has a large frame, perfectly white hair and chin whiskers, and a thin voice with rather fervid tone. His sermon was read from manuscript and consumed two hours and ten minutes; but the interest never flagged, and he was frequently interrupted by handclapping applause. Such a manifestation in a Southern church would be considered a gross breach of propriety; but here it seems to be a common and popular practice. Bishop Foster has a broad, philosophical mind of the highest grasp and a literary style of finest finish. In chaste, scholarly language, lucid statement, compact, commanding thought and fervid utterance we have rarely, if ever, heard its parallel. In the published proceedings of this occasion Bishop Foster's sermon will have the chief place. During the delivery of the sermon an amusing incident occurred near where we sat. While the Bishop was stating with stirring power the leading doctrines of Methodism, calling out frequent responses, he said, "And we believe in one eternal hell for the finally impenitent," when an enthusiastic old brother shouted, "Amen!"

The first morning session closed with a grand chorus of song, after which there were handshakings and greetings. Brethren from all points of the compass rejoiced in a common historic and spiritual heritage and greeted each other as members of a single family.

DECEMBER 10, 1884.

At the afternoon session yesterday Rev. Dr. James Gardner, of Canada, presided. He is a tall, hardy son of the voice of a real Bonapartes. The first essay on the "Work of the Christmas Conference," by Rev. Dr. John Miley, the well-known theological professor and author, was a scholarly, able paper, though read in a monotonous, heavy tone. His work, entitled "Miley on the Atonement," whatever the estimate of its orthodox correctness, ranks him among the distinguished theologians of America. He was followed by Rev. Dr. H. B. Ridgeway on the "Personnel of the Christmas Conference." Dr. Ridgeway is a small man, scrupulously neat in dress, and in every attitude and expression shows forth the cultured gentleman. This was a unique, delightful discussion and was intensely enjoyed by all. The apostolic heroes of that venerable body passed in review with vividness of perspective that we often felt transported back over a hundred years to old Lovely Lane. His sketches of Freeborn Garrettson, converted on horseback, Richard Whatcoat, Thomas Coke, Francis Asbury, and others, were worthy of the pen of Macaulay or James Anthony Froude. With the reading of this paper the afternoon session adjourned.

At night platform meetings were held in seven churches—in each of which two addresses were delivered. Living near St. Paul's, one of our largest Southern Methodist Churches in the city, we went there and heard Dr. O. H. Tiffany and Bishop C. H. Fowler.

Dr. O. H. Tiffany, of New York, was born in Baltimore, July 3, 1825; graduated from Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., in 1844, and entered the Baltimore Conference the next year. He has been stationed in Baltimore, Chicago, San Francisco, Washington and New York. For years he has been one of the most popular orators of the Methodist Episcopal Church. At the Ecumenical Conference, in London, his powers of oratory were signally displayed on several occasions. He is a large man, carrying possibly two hundred and twenty-five pounds, with a broad, massive forehead, light reddish side whiskers, firmly set lips, a keen nose and mild blue eyes. He has a pleasant voice, especially in its minor tones, and an enunciation unusually clear, but hardly equalled our expectations in the grace and skill of the orator. He has a passionate style, rising at times to vehemence, with some violence of gesture. His address on "The Relation of the Witnessing Power of the Church to the Cause of Missions" was a fresh and eloquent discussion containing some passages of real beauty and others of striking, epigrammatic statement—all born of a rich scriptural exegesis and breathing the fragrance of a true religious spirit.

He was followed by Bishop Charles H. Fowler, whose name and fame are well known to our readers. He discussed the opportunities and hopes of the future, grouping facts and figures with skill and power, but not with his reputed eloquence. He is a young man as yet, being about forty-seven years of age, with a strong, well-knit frame, and promises years of active service to his church. His forehead is a remarkable development indicating quick perception and large mental grasp.

On entering Mt. Vernon Place this morning we were glad to see Bishop A. H. Wilson in the chair, and he was able to preside during the session with accustomed ease and ability. After papers were read by Dr. Jesse Borling, of Georgia, on "The Superintendency of Asbury, and What It Did for Methodism," and by Dr. Alfred Wheeler, of Pennsylvania, on "The Relations of John Wesley to American Methodism," there was a spirited general discussion in which a number of delegates took part.

The afternoon session to-day is presided over by Bishop J. P. Campbell, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. He is a short, stout, elderly man, and very black. There is no trace of any Anglo-Saxon strain in his blood. He speaks rapidly and accurately and departs himself with becoming modesty. In the chair he handled the gavel sparingly, and was regarded as a worthy representative of his race.

The first paper read was by Dr. Daniel Dorchester, of Boston, on "Statistical Results, Membership, etc." He is the great statistician of the country, and in this essay displayed the fullness of his knowledge. His array of figures and their careful analysis were a revelation of mighty power. That paper will do to keep. He was followed by Prof. J. H. Carlisle, LL.D., of Wofford College, South Carolina, in an able discussion of "Statistical Results, Educational and Financial." This great educator of Southern Methodism was entirely equal to the hour. Several times he was interrupted by demonstrations of approval. Facts concerning the growth of our educational institutions, churches, etc., were stated with striking emphasis. And he closed applause was loud and long, and friends, North and South, gathered around him with hearty congratulations. General discussion ensued led by Dr. James Gardner, of Canada.

DECEMBER 11, 1884.

NOTES.

Baltimore has cherished with joy its sacred Methodist heritage and has cultivated it with diligent hands. Instead of the small society at Lovely Lane, in this city, in 1784, there are now over one hundred Methodist churches within its corporate limits, and many of them most prosperous congregations. Our Southern Methodism here is moving steadily onward, having now seven self-supporting congregations.

In the Sunday-school room of Trinity Church there in Jan oil painting of Strawbridge's log meeting-house on Sam Creek. It is a very crude structure with only one small window.

Over the pulpit in Mount Vernon Place Church is a picture of the old Christmas Conference and the ordination of Bishop Asbury. The young Bishop is on his knees, with hands clasped in prayer and his face wearing an expression of angelic sweetness. While the hands of venerable men rested upon his fair young head Dr. Coke pronounced the words of consecration, and the curiously dressed congregation looked on with profound reverence.

Dr. J. B. McFerrin, Dr. Jesse Borling and Dr. J. E. Evans, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and Dr. J. M. Trimble are the only members of this Centennial Conference who were members of the General Conference of 1840. Drs. McFerrin and Trimble are the only ones who were delegates to the General Conference of 1840.

On Rutaw street is a church where Bishop Asbury often preached, and under whose pulpit for a long time his body slept. Some years ago his remains were removed to Mt. Olivet Cemetery, where, with other Methodist worthies of the early days, he rests awaiting the morning of the resurrection.

The Board of Publication of the Texas Christian Advocate, at a meeting, December 5, unanimously re-elected Dr. L. G. John, editor of that paper. In reply, to a communication stating that fact to him, Dr. John says: "I appreciate the honor that has been conferred upon me by this renewed expression of the confidence of my brethren and the church and tender my most grateful acknowledgments of this action. I am satisfied, however, that the success of the Advocate demands the utmost harmony between all its departments. Its success is to me a matter of far more importance than my own personal advancement. I, therefore, tender you my resignation of the important office to which I have again been elected." The Doctor's resignation was received, and Rev. G. W. Briggs, of the Texas Conference, was elected editor of the Texas Christian Advocate.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—Ministerial members and delegates to the Louisiana Annual Conference, which took place at Minden, La., January 8, 1885, can secure tickets from New Orleans to Vicksburg and return, via Illinois Central railroad and Mississippi Valley railroad, for $9.15, from Vicksburg to Minden and return, via Vicksburg Southern and Pacific railroad, for $7.95. At intermediate points, on Mississippi Valley railroad, north of New Orleans to Vicksburg, four cents per mile to and from Vicksburg. Tickets will be good from the 15th to the twentieth of January.

Dr. G. W. W. Price, of Nashville, Tenn., gave us a call last week. He is in attendance upon the Exposition in the interests of the educational exhibit of Tennessee.

Books and Periodicals.

THE MODEL SINGER. A book for singing schools, conventions and choirs. By W. O. Rogers. Published by Oliver Johnson & Co., Boston.

A new, and to appearance an excellent, book for singing classes. Mr. Perkins' work as a composer is well known, and Mr. Towner's music evinces taste and ability. The book contains 192 pages, well filled. The usual singing school course is well furnished with graded exercises. There are many bright and singable harmonized songs, and a good assortment of hymn tunes and anthems. The moderate price is a recommendation.

Received the Silvered Messenger for December, containing what we suppose to be an interesting table of contents.

Seed Time and Harvest is an illustrated monthly devoted to rural affairs, and will perhaps be useful to our country friends. Issued by F. Tillinghast, 18 Plume, Pa.

The Musical Herald, from Boston, is full of advice for all people who can be moved with "concerts of sacred sounds" and items of news about the musical world. The Musical Herald Co., Boston.

Wide Awake, for December, comes as a Christmas number, and is filled with the brim and running over with choice reading to make the little ones happy during the holidays. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston.

The English Illustrated Magazine, published by Macmillan & Co., 12 Fourth Avenue, New York, has a good table of contents and many beautiful illustrations, and will not fail to please its many readers.

The Electra, a magazine of pure literature, is published in Louisville, Ky., at $2.00 per annum. Edited by Amie E. Wilson and Isabella M. Lay. The December number contains several articles worth deep attention.

THE MENTOR.—This little book purports to be a guide for such as would like to be a guide to the better society of a people. It is written in good style by a man of letters, and we suppose it is intended for society manners. Published by Funk & Wagnalls, 10 and 12 street, New York.

The numbers of Little's Living Age for Nov. 20th and Dec. 5th contain the Works of Alexander Pope, Edinburgh; Country Life, and The Croker Papers; Quarterly; Some Lessons from the Bible; National Review; Mrs. Carlyle's Lilo, National Review; Mrs. Carlyle's Temple Bar; A. Marshall's Training; and Chinese Horticulture, all the Year Round; Artificial Jewels; "Quiet Weather," Speeches, and with instruments of "The House of the Beast," and "Alexander Nesbitt, Ex-Schoolmaster," and poetry.

We have received from Fowler & Wells, New York, through G. T. Lathrop, of this city, the new edition of "Children of the Bible," by Miss Frances C. Armstrong. This edition is gotten up in good style by the publishers, and is introduced to the public by an introductory notice by Miss Frances C. Armstrong. The introduction is beautiful. The Bible is very gracefully told by the Rev. Armstrong. We commend the book to all. It can be procured direct from the publishers, Fowler & Wells, 23 Broadway, New York, or from G. T. Lathrop, 103 Canal street, New Orleans. Price $1.00.

Advocate Calendar.

Jan.	Feb.	Mar.	Apr.	May	June
July	Aug.	Sept.	Oct.	Nov.	Dec.

Publisher's Department.

No fraudulent advertisements will knowingly be allowed in the ADVOCATE. If one ever appears it will be by accident.

In ordering from those whose advertisements appear in our columns please state that you have seen the same in the ADVOCATE.

CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

How to Relieve Catarrh and Diseases of the Respiratory Organs.

Why do people who are sick with nasal catarrh, throat or lung trouble, go to Colorado? For change of air, and because the dry air of that region has been found beneficial to diseased lungs and air passages. But to express the truth in another way, people go to Colorado for a remedial air. One day's inhalation of the remedial air. One day's residence there would not help. It is the continuous use of the air that cures. It is a well recognized fact that air poisoned with sewer gas or decaying matter, if breathed for a continuous period will impregnate the body with disease. Hence, come diphtheria, typhoid fever, etc. Let a man put the Pillow-Inhaler over the pipe of a sewer and sit there for a few weeks. Any one knows that at the end of that time he would be a sick or dead man. This proves that prolonged inhalation of any air has a specific effect on the human system. Remedial air for good, poison-ous air for bad.

The Pillow-Inhaler is an invention that makes an atmosphere in your room and in your nose and lungs for eight hours out of the twenty-four (while sleeping ordinarily at night) that cures Catarrh, Bronchitis, and Lung trouble. Its results for good, and its power to cure a diseased condition of the nose and lungs is simply wonderful, and without any parallel in the history of the treatment of this class of diseases. In a pillow are hidden reservoirs filled with medicines that throw off a remedial vapor or air. The sufferer goes to bed at night and the inhaler goes to work after he is asleep in the usual way, and sleeps on it. As he inhales the air from it night after night, gradually the fire of inflammation in his nose or lungs are soothed, discharges and cough cease, pain gives place to ease, and in a short time he is a well person.

The Pillow-Inhaler has been in existence over six years, and during that time it has cured persons who were hopeless and expecting death.

Sent for expensively pamphlet and testimonials. You will find it will open up to you the hope of life.

THE PILLOW-INHALER, No. 1520, Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

WELL WORTHY OF NOTE.—The Times-Democrat, of this city, has given tangible evidence of possessing more enterprise and public spirit than any secular paper ever published in New Orleans, and not content with the wonders it has accomplished in the past it is constantly pushing forward and extending its sphere of usefulness. One of the latest features of the enterprising publishers of the Times-Democrat is to offer the weekly edition for one year and a Waterbury steam winding watch for $3.00, or the paper without the watch for $1.50. This offer is more than liberal and will unquestionably materially add to the already very large circulation of this interesting and progressive journal. Read carefully their other which appears in another column, and send in your subscription at once.

A country sent—The walking stool.

"Can any good thing come out of it?" our swamp? "Come and"—learn the facts about the New La. Swamp, and you will answer the question in the affirmative—and enthusiastically.

There is one town in Connecticut that has no fear of the measles. It's Haddam.

Now is the time to send to the Publishing House at Nashville, for Sunday school supplies. Write for catalogue and prices.

Thanksgiving having passed, now is the time to purchase poultry at low prices.

The glory of woman is a beautiful head of hair—her very crown. Parker's Hair Balsam excels in restoring it. Only 50 cents.

"John, I am very despondent. I can't seem to get on in the world. I believe I'll blow out my brains." "Good scheme, my boy. I believe if you do you will strike a blow at the real cause of your trouble."

Christmas presents are in order. See the list of first class publications of the Southern Methodist Publishing House in this issue, and order one or more for your friend.

Boarding-house keeper: "Why, how do you care for the best Mr. Smith. You must be an idiot." Smith (with a grunt of exertion): "Yes, I am; I'm a wood carver by trade."

Don't fail to read the "ad" headed "Mullin in Parvo."

A Swiss jeweler has invented a clock which needs winding but once in five years; but that isn't what the world wants this time of year. Give us a clock that will shake itself.

Notice to subscribers who order their address changed. Please give full address of last Postoffice, otherwise change cannot be made.

Press the ADVOCATE circulation now.

CHANGES.—We have quite a number of changes to change the address of subscribers; some without signatures, and others who do not give the former address. Under these circumstances, change cannot be made.

The edition of Jamieson, Pauset and Brown's Commentary, issued by Messrs. Jerome H. Barnes & Co., of Toledo, Ohio, and offered at a premium in another column. It is a really bound in half morocco, four volumes. It gives home information given. Every preacher in the patronizing conferences can secure a complete set. See notice.

Mr. Philip Worlton, 135 Canal street, New Orleans, sells pianos and organs at low prices and on easy payments. This house is reliable and fully guarantees satisfaction. Chickering, Mathews, Wernick and other pianos can be bought for $500 and $10 monthly payments. A fine Wernick, either square or upright, is for 100 per cent off for cash—$200. From factory, New York, direct or from Waterbury, New Orleans. Mason & Hamilton's organs can be had at very low prices; other popular makers also. Other pianos taken in exchange for new ones, as part payment. An organ can be bought for $50 monthly payments. $15 as first payment. No $15 monthly payments. It is a really bound in half morocco, four volumes. It gives home information given. Every preacher in the patronizing conferences can secure a complete set. See notice.

W. C. Shepard sells dinner and tea sets, refrigerators, bath tubs, ice boxes and cream freezers.

For all points in Texas and California take the Southern Pacific and San Antonio via Houston.

Sent the ADVOCATE to your friend for the next year and you will not regret it.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROVER.—I have favorite to all summer resorts. It has been rebuilt with steel rails; its adapted the standard gauge with a half ballasted track and increased speed. They offer the advantages of fast time, through cars, sure connections, and accommodating offices.

We would again call the attention of subscribers and agents that, in making remittances, to make them payable to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE please keep this in remembrance.

To those of our subscribers, not contented to a money order office, we would say, please inform us by postal card whether to continue the ADVOCATE at 10.

Send fifteen cents in stamps for a copy of Kendall's Treatise on the Horse.

Ask your neighbors to subscribe for the ADVOCATE.

Business Notices.

QUERU'S COD LIVER OIL JELLY.

Approved by the Academy of Medicine of New York for coughs, colds, bronchitis and other pulmonary affections, and general debility. The cod liver oil, bland and nutritious form in which, cod liver oil can be used with more benefit to the patient by a single teaspoonful of this Jelly than by the quantity of the liquid oil, and the most delicate stomach will not reject it. For sale by all druggists, and E. H. THURMAN, New York.

A Good Investment.

Please send another $12 box of CANADIAN BACON. This remedy has entirely cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box of Queru's Cod Liver Oil Jelly that has cured me of trachoma and cataracts. I cannot offer praise to you enough. The 100 you wish you had done more good for me than the $200 paid for the medicine.

HEN. F. JONES.

No. 824 Carroll Ave., St. Louis, Mo.

This remedy is the most effective. There is not a single instance of failure or permanent cure. It is a single box

Christian Advocate.

VOL. 30.—NO. 52.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1884.

WHOLE NO. 1482.

PUBLISHED FOR THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI, AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

Christian Advocate.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.
CARVER & JAMIESON, Publishers.

OFFICE—112 CAMP ST., NEW ORLEANS.

Subscription, $2 per annum.

Ministers and wives of deceased Preachers half price.

All Preachers of the M. E. Church, South, are authorized Agents to whom payments may be made.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.
REV. F. L. R. HILL,
REV. O. W. CARTER, D. D.,
REV. CHRISTIAN KREMER.
MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.
REV. JAMES A. GODFREY,
REV. W. L. O. HUNNICUTT,
REV. C. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.,
REV. W. T. J. SULLIVAN, D. D.,
REV. W. P. BARTON,
REV. J. D. CAMERON.

A HAPPY CHRISTMAS TO YOU!

BY FRANCES RIDLEY HAYWARD.
A happy Christmas to you!
For the Light of Life is born,
And his coming is the sunshine
Of the dark and wintry morn.
The greatest gift of all,
The joyous peace that fills our soul,
Is his gift to us all.
His shadow-keeping beams shall never pass away.
A happy Christmas to you!
For the Prince of Peace is come,
And his reign is full of blessings,
Their reign is full of peace.
No earthly calm can ever last,
Till he comes to dwell in our hearts,
And his kingdom in the heart can never pass away.

Wedge-Wood.

We were discussing the manner of altering programmes to accommodate favorites—two classes of which are always around when a conspicuous position is to be occupied, viz.: Those who have positions already and may be influenced to confer favors; and those who want to be considered as coming men. My friend and I thought certain changes in the programme under review had spoiled rather than improved it, and that the masters of ceremonies in haste to be polite to the favorites had been discourteous to others who even if not even friends ought to be accorded the rights of gentlemen. Said he, "Nobody has a right to make wedge-wood of any man."

It is certainly not complimentary to push and change a man from place to place. It may make him feel conspicuous, but not pleasantly so. To decline to put him on a programme is the right of the managers, but when once announced for a certain part he does not like to be changed arbitrarily. He has a right to protest. It has the appearance of a comparison in which he is rated No. 2. He may be ready to accord superiority to the man substituted for him, but he feels that it is not the best of manner or friendship to make the comparison naked. The character of the conduct of the substitute depends upon several things. His work may be necessary, his time limited. But of that he ought not to be sole judge. Important matters seldom make their way to the front by self-assertion. He is self-evident. So is his mission. To be continually reminding the world of what we are is to play fly on the chariot wheel.

But we are not intending a lecture upon the ethics or etiquette of public programmes. All of them are of a very transient nature. The wind of it passes off like that of a toy balloon. We have been studying wedge-wood to know if its value was not undervalued in the sentence quoted. We think so. For not all kinds of wood will make wedges. Some are too hard, some too brittle, some too coarse, some too soft, some too cross-grained. In fact, it requires a good piece of timber to make a wedge. It is thought that it is merely to fill a crack. And if that were all it would still require nice fitting, and nice fitting is impossible with snappy or coarse timber. But a wedge means more than filling a crack. It means tightening something grown loose, raising that which has sunk below its place, opening that which is tough and difficult. Wedges have a holding power as well as a dividing power. Much disaster has resulted from the loosening or jumping of a wedge. Much has been lost by its splitting or turning aside.

I remember when a boy standing by when a piece of timber was being cut and fitted. A large block was sawn and split out and the master ordered it to be laid away for wedge-wood. A hundred other blocks lay around, but this one alone was considered fit for preservation. Some were sun-cracked, some sappy, some knotty, some spongy, some variable in hardness. I began to gather them and put them with the other. "Take them away!" cried the boss. "I want the other where I can find it." The rest were rubbish, but this block was valuable down to a chip two by four or less.

Later in life I learned to look upon men as pieces of timber being sawn to fit their places in the great superstructures of state, society and church. Now and then one is found whose very scraps are wedge-wood. Some men's seconds and minutes are as carefully saved in the order of Providence as the days and weeks of others. God wants them for wedge-wood. Then, like children, we begin to urge all to save the odds and ends of time and to pack them all into an unassorted pile. "Take them away!" cries some spirit unseen save in the drifting of great rafts of rushes from time's river out into eternity's deep sea. But on the shore where God wants them lie the odds and ends, in the shape of anecdotes, or aphorisms, or incidents of some grand life that has disappeared bodily in the walls of the house not made with hands. These anecdotes, or sayings, become themselves spiritualized so that in after ages they can never be traced to their author, yet races tighten the joints of social structures or differentiate themselves in lineage and religion by these weird shibboleths.

It would be a great pity—rather let me say disaster—were not some men of that character to be utilized as wedge-wood. Not that a great man should be seen into three-inch blocks and split into a million shivers. Yet even thus he may more truly serve the world than to be turned into a shipmast or liberty pole. But the shipmast and liberty pole are good things. America's measurable debts to Columbus and Washington. But what would either of these have accomplished without the tree split into wedges, greater than either? Some men, like trees, are worked in a single piece because they cannot be made into anything else. These we are in the habit of calling great men, when the truth is if they had not filled the place they adorn they would have been hopelessly in the way, puzzling the wits of Providence to know what to do with them.

Wedge-wood implies fractional adaptation. Life's true assimilations are upon this line. Soul-yearning, mind-appetency, are tracking through the sedge and weeds of thought-growth after the winged bird that is to soar onward slinging. Who knows where they will find them? Not the sportsman, but the heart-longing. In vain we dream of conquering humorous fame and happiness, panoplied and sword in hands on fiery, foaming steed. At some hour when these are laid aside for the day and we are unblest by the fireside, a smile, a word, the gift of a toy or the slinging of an old time child song touches the electric springs of barred citadels that will shut no more forever.

I look above me at the picture of a Norwegian landscape. Tall pines, steep mountains, silver moon, placid lake are there. But I look at the picture frame. The delicate molding there could not be made from the rough tree. Grandeur and beauty kissing in the moonlight over a moss-hung bridge. But under that bridge a boat freighted with an immortal twin glides like a phantom on spirit wings, not safe by reason of the bulk of the material, but because that which is there is fitly joined and securely fastened. Within the hold are not alone the anchor, the cable and other great necessities, but the block from which a wedge may be made in a moment lies there worth its weight in diamonds.

T. A. B. A.

Rev. W. H. Maxfield.

MR. EDITOR: Very sad indeed is it to hear of the untimely death, announced in last week's ADVOCATE, of this promising young minister. You were right in saying that his death "will cause sincere sorrow in North Louisiana, where he was so well known and highly esteemed." Although known to the people here but a few years, and some of those as a prodigal youth who had wandered a long way from home, (he having come originally from Maine,) yet since his conversion and call to the ministry, he has given the most marked proofs of sincerity, earnestness and devout consecration. A little under medium size, he was of a compact and manly form; and this, added to a countenance that expressed firmness, candor and unguanquility of soul, made him an engaging presence in any company. While not a thorough scholar, yet so general had been his reading and wide the scope of his associations, that he easily passed for a man of culture. Quick perceptions and rapid evolutions of thought, together with remarkably varied experiences with the world for one of his age, made him able to adjust himself to new conditions very readily. But his modesty was equal to his mental aptitudes, and his consecration was as thorough as his popularity was assumed. He had the courage of his convictions. While never courting the opportunity of preaching, yet he was equally far from a cowardly shrinking from duty. His sermons were well prepared, fresh, vigorous and delivered with an ease and grace that made him an acceptable preacher anywhere. No young preacher ever started in this country who seemingly had a brighter future before him, the only drawback being a weakly, physical constitution. It was on account of bad health that he decided to go to the North-west. He very reluctantly left us, and his friends with equal reluctance gave him up. But they confidently expected a good report from him wherever he went. But now how sad! The fair prospect is blighted, so far as this world is concerned; but the heavenly Father has taken him to himself.

J. W. MEDLOCK.

HOMER, LA., Dec. 11, 1884.

Rev. Baxter Clegg.

The subject of this sketch, being a member of our Conference and a faithful and good man, I feel that his death claims more than a passing notice from his brethren, and as no other brother has written a memoir, I offer the following as a tribute to his memory:

I have gathered some facts of importance in making up this memoir from a paper published in North Carolina, his former home, which I give here: "Bro. Clegg was born November 11, 1811. He was a native of Chatham county, N. C., and belonged to one of its largest and most honorable families. He was educated at Randolph Macon College under the presidency of Dr. Olin. He entered the ministry soon after graduation, and consecrated a long and useful life to preaching and teaching. For years he conducted a school, which was eminently successful at Mocksville, in Davie county, devoting his Sabbaths to the pulpit. He afterwards founded the high school at Olin, in Fredell county, and continued at its head till 1859, when he removed, with his family, to Louisiana, where he still continued his labors in the pulpit and school-room. As a preacher he was clear, pointed and forcible. His preaching was always logical, instructive, evangelical and often pathetic. As a teacher he was capable, accurate, diligent and progressive, and made his pupils feel the force and power of an educated head and a sanctified heart."

My first acquaintance with Bro. Clegg was at Homer College, which he took charge of in 1859. Being a pupil there at the time, had the privilege of being under him, and received instruction from him, and to him I feel that I owe a great deal. He was one of the few teachers who could impart knowledge, therefore I feel that it was a privilege to have been his pupil. I ever found him a faithful and true friend, kind and affectionate to all. A better man I do not think I ever knew. He was a man of determination, was always found at his post, unyielding in whatever opposed him in the path of duty.

He was at the head of Homer College only a few years, when he resigned his position and entered the regular work as an itinerant in the Louisiana Conference, where he has been actively engaged up to the time of his death.

Bro. Clegg was beloved by all who knew him and many mourn his death. I have been intimately associated with him during the last two years, visiting him often in his home, and have always found him the same good and holy man of God. In him I found a true and safe counselor. The more I knew of him, the more I saw in him to love and admire. His life has been long and useful, but his labors are ended, for God called his servant from labor to rest on the morning of October 16, 1884. He suffered much during the last few months of his life, and especially during his last sickness; but never did a murmur escape his lips, he was patient and submissive under all. He frequently called on his sons to read to him some of these beautiful Psalms of praise and thanksgiving in the midst of his sufferings, and just as he stood upon the shores of time, when life was tailing fast, he asked Judge Clegg, his son, to read to him that beautiful twenty-third Psalm. His life passed out without a cloud—"was a glorious, golden sunset. Thus a good and faithful man of God has gone to his reward in the land beyond the shadows."

T. S. R.

From Beauregard, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: It will be remembered by many of your readers that on April 22, of last year, our comfortable and commodious church in Beauregard was demolished by a cyclone, which laid that town in ruins and killed and wounded many of its citizens, while it impoverished those who escaped physical injury. These, though most of them poor, needed and desired a place of worship. But it was simply impossible for them, unaided, to build one. Therefore an appeal was made to the public to assist them. I regret to say that the call was unheeded, except by a few, whose donations amounted to only $30; after waiting in vain a sufficiently long time for remittances, I called upon the people of Hazlehurst, Crystal Springs, Wesson and as many of the people at Providence and Crystal Springs Camp Meetings as were disposed to help us. What they contributed with what we raised among ourselves enabled us to build a house of the same dimensions of the one we lost. Our church is now finished inside and outside, except painting the ceiling and the addition of a few more seats. We propose to dedicate it next Sabbath to the service of God—entirely free from debt. It stands in a beautiful oak grove on the west side of the railroad, on a lot given to us by a worthy brother of the Baptist Church. The total cost, building and furniture, is at least $1,200. The building is an ornament to the town, now slowly growing up, and a great accommodation to both the town and vicinity. Although our number has been reduced by death and removals, we still have a membership of eighty-five, and a Sabbath-school of fifty scholars and teachers. In this connection I wish to say that this charge, composed of Wesson and Beauregard, has had some prosperity during the year. There has been a considerable number of conversions and additions to the church and a marked increase of interest manifested by the churches and people for religion. The Wesson Church has been re-seeded with new and comfortable seats. The pulpit and altar have been carpeted.

By the energy and kindness of a young physician of the place, the church lot will, in a few days, be enclosed by a new, neat and substantial fence. This done, and a few repairs made on the exterior of the house, we will have as respectable a church as any in the town.

J. L. FORSYTHE.

DECEMBER 11, 1884.

Christ's Birth.

On the night of the birth of Christ a group of shepherds lay out, with their flocks, on the hill-side. Some of them were keeping their turn of watching while the others slept. St. Luke expressly tells us they were "watching the watches of the night." To have received such surpassing honor from above they must have been members, though poor and humble, of that true Israel which included Mary and Joseph, Zacharias and Elizabeth, Simeon and Anna, the representatives in those dark days of the saints of the nation in their brighter past. They must have been men looking out in their simple way toward the invisible and eternal, and seeking that kingdom of God for themselves which was off day, as they believed, to be revealed in their nation at large. Only that mind which has sympathy with external nature can receive in their true significance the impressions it is fitted to convey, and only the heart which has sympathy with spiritual things can recognize their full meaning. Poetic sensibility is required in the one case, and religious in the other. In each it is the condition of sincere emotion. The stillness over hill and valley, broken only by the bleating of the sheep, the unclouded brightness of the Syrian sky with its numberless stars, and the associations of these mountain pastures, dear to every Jew as the scene of David's youth, were over and around them. With the ever-memorable anthem—the first and last melody of heaven ever heard by mortal ears—the light faded from the hills as the angels went away into heaven, and left earth once more in the shadow of night, knowing and thinking nothing of that which so supremely interested distant worlds. Wondering at such a vision, and full of simple trust, the shepherds had only one thought—to see the babe and his mother for themselves.

Climbing the hill, therefore, with eager haste, they hurried to Bethlehem, and there found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger, as had been told them.

No details are given; no brightening of the picture of this first act of reverence by the new-born Savior. Nor are they needed. The lowliness of the visitors, the pure image of the virgin mother and her child, are better left in their own simplicity.

Infancy is forever dignified by the manner of Bethlehem; womanhood is ennobled to its purest ideal in Mary; man, as such, receives adding honor in the earliest act of homage to her Son being that of the simplest poor.

A great teacher has pointed some striking lessons on the way in which the whole incident was received, as St. Luke relates, by those immediately concerned. "The shepherds spread abroad the story with hearts full of grateful adoration; the shepherds wonder at it, but Mary ponders in her heart all that had been told her. More even of the tribe of David, than she," says the great preacher; "but she was the chosen of God. It was natural, and it is easy to understand, that when a second appearance of angels, like that which she had already herself experienced, was seen, she should ponder in her heart their words, which concerned her so nearly. But if we ask ourselves, was this pondering the words in her heart already the true faith that carries the blessing, the fruitful seed of a personal relation to the Savior? did Mary already believe, firmly and immovably, that the Savior of the world should see the light of life through her?—the Gospel leaves us too clearly here—the opposite. There was a time, long after this, when Christ was already a teacher, when she wavered between him and his brethren, who did not believe in him; when she went out with them to draw him away from his course, and bring him back to her narrower circle of home-life, as one who was hardly in his right mind. Firm, unwavering trust, that knows no passing cloud, is a work of time with all who have an inner personal nearness to the Savior; and it was so with Mary. She reached it only, like us all, through manifold doubts and struggles of heart, by that grace from above which raised her, ever anew, and let her on from step to step."

Dr. C. G. Kieck.

There is more nearness,
A love, is every passing day,
A love, is every passing day,
By every proper way.

No evil propensity of the human heart is so powerful that it may not be subdued by discipline.—St. James.

Intellect has been called the starlight of the brain. Religion is the starlight of the soul.—Russett.

No pain, no pride; no throne, to throne; no glory, no glory; no crown, no crown.—William Penn.

Many of our ears are but a morbid way of looking at our privileges.—Walter Scott.

No man was ever so much deceived by another as by himself.—Greville.

Many things are good for me, but none so good as to draw nigh to God.—Jay.

Ideas are pitiless.—Lamartine.

"The Christian Type of Character."

The following editorial from the Irish Christian Advocate, of November 28, we commend to the careful perusal of our readers:

One of the products of architecture which every day presses itself upon the attention of builders is, how to unite in the same structure the two properties of strength and beauty. In a low state of civilization men are satisfied with what answers their notions of utility. They want shelter, protection and domestic convenience, but as society progresses in wealth, in arts, in refinement, a craving for beauty is developed, and considerations of taste make themselves felt. Churches must not only be strongly built, and made commodious, they must show dignity, have an impressive aspect, and possess attractiveness. In every class of homes, from mansion to cottage, ornament is as urgently demanded as utility; indeed, so much have harmony and beauty been ennobled in our society, that architecture has been called "frozen music." Now, corresponding to these two material properties of strength and beauty there are two analogous moral elements requiring a similar combination in human character, and it is the glory of Christianity, that it is capable of bringing them, as a matter of personal experience, into full and permanent union. "Be strong in the Lord and in the strength of his might" is an apostolic command. "Strengthened with all might by his spirit" is an apostolic prayer. "Blessed are the meek" is the Lord's central benediction. To the same intent and not merely as marking distinctions of sex, St. Paul uses the words "male" and "female." "There is neither male nor female" in Christ Jesus. The apostle is speaking of great types of character, the "Jew" and the "Greek," the "bond" and the "free," and between these he places the masculine and feminine. Under one he includes strength, energy, independence, the predominance of reason and conscience, over feeling or sentiment; under the other he includes meekness, gentleness, dependence, the predominance of affection and of combining trust. Both lead to what is good; but the one because it is right, the other because it is lovely. To one religion appears a system of principles, to the other it is the expression of deep feelings. In the one there is more power to set, in the other more patience to endure.

One is a willing, the other is a willing grace. But it is the distinction of Christianity that it alone blends the two in a simple, real, identity, and of both, forms one universal type of character. Had the gospel type of character borne the impress of either male or female only, it would have been felt that there was an ideal beyond it, that was free from its peculiarities. But it is not so. It is not grand alone, or amiable alone; it is not noble as distinct from beautiful, but both in an equal degree, being complete, so that however long may be the gaze, or however piercing the insight, one can not discern whether the character of a perfect man in Christ Jesus is more an object of reverence or of love.

The type of character which the gospel sets forth is a complete embodiment of love in both its aspects of action and affection. Such being the case it is impossible that Christianity should ever be superseded by a higher type of excellence, or ever be found in antagonism to the moral progress of mankind. There is nothing conceivable higher than love as a principle of action, and nothing higher as a source of beauty; it would seem, therefore, that the Christian type of character, being the highest possible, is the final type. But, God, not as a foreclosing history, rather as a comprehending it. Whatever efforts after excellence other generations may make, as they pass through phase after phase of the movements that are possible, their advance in excellence will be an ever increasing approximation to the fullness of the Christian type. There may be divergence from the Christian ideal, but to whatever extent this shall happen it will be degeneration, not progress. Men, it is conceivable, may abandon Christianity, but they can never go beyond it. It represents the maximum strength of all that is potential in virtue, and it embraces all that is beautiful and glorious in love itself. Love is the essence of man's moral nature; it is of God's. "Whoever dwelleth in love dwelleth in God and God in him." Beyond this there is no greater strength, and outside it there is no higher glory.

Central Conference Committee.

HEADQUARTERS, NASHVILLE, TENN.

REV. E. R. HENDRIX, D. D., Chairman.

REV. W. P. HARRISON, D. D., Secretary.

JUDGE JAMES WHITWORTH, Treasurer.

YABOO CITY, Mississippi.

R. ABBEY.

ly,

51 CAMP ST., BELOW FORT DRASS, NEW ORLEANS. 94 Camp street, 1

From the Work.

NATCHEZ, MISS.

Mrs. Editor: Since I last wrote, concerning Wesley Chapel, our people have been sadly straitened by the shutting down of the cotton mills during the summer, working on half-time and reduced wages during the fall, besides being afflicted with an epidemic of dengue. On Saturday, December 11, we commuted to the grave Mrs. Nancy J. Mergan, aged about fifty years. She was baptized and received into the church September 30, 1883. She suffered much during her last illness, but we hope the end was in peace to her weary soul. The next day we laid to rest the remains of Mrs. Melinda Woodall, aged about thirty-eight years. For many months she had been sorely afflicted, but was able to thank God for the affliction as it yielded the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto salvation. She was baptized by Rev. Dr. C. Andrews, Friday, December 5, and gave assurances of humble trust in Jesus.

T. L. MELLER.

DECEMBER 11, 1884.

NATCHEZ, MISS.

Mrs. Editor: The Centenary contribution of Jefferson Street Church is $1,156 75. Of this, $876 75 is in cash, the remaining $280 in subscriptions that are perfectly good. Our total finances for the year will foot up nearly $1,83,000, not including the anonymous above named. The accessions to our membership aggregate forty-nine. The accessions during the four years pastorate, now closing, number two hundred and four. Yours,

W. C. BLACK.

DECEMBER 11, 1884.

Don't fail to read the "ad" headed "Multum in Parvo."

MISCELLANEOUS.

From the Bloody Ground.

TOLLESDORO, KY.

DR. S. B. HARTMAN & Co., Columbus, Ohio.—I keep the largest stock of medicines of any store in Lewis county, with the exception of a drug store at Vandalburg, our county seat, and am selling great deal of your PERUNA and MANALIN. It is giving the best satisfaction of any medicine that I ever handled. In one case the constable for the precinct, I have been very sick and low spirited for a long time. For several years he has tried the doctors here, and we have some good ones, and they did him no good. After much persuasion I sold him two bottles of PERUNA and MANALIN. He took both of the medicine. I could see the change in him, and now he is as sound a man apparently as there is in this vicinity, and he says he is entirely well. He is a number one man and is highly respected. He is satisfied that your medicine saved his life, after all the doctors and all medicines had failed. Being acquainted with you, I refer you to J. H. Shillite & Co., Alto, Pinefork & Co., and other business houses of Cincinnati.

R. L. GILLESPIE, M.D.

Messrs. Adamson & Shipley, Waynesburg, Pa., write: "Please send some 'Bills of Life' immediately. We are having a big run on your medicine PERUNA. Instead of dying out, like most medicines, in course of time, it seems to be growing in favor. We sell lots of 'Please send the books soon.'"

Messrs. Wirthorn & Urban, of Allegheny City, Pa., write: "Having a large supply for your PERUNA and MANALIN, we have also many calls for your book, 'Bills of Life.' Please send us a supply of both German and English, and oblige."

S. Wolf & Son, Wilmet, O., write: "Gentlemen: We handle your goods, and they give good satisfaction."

A. G. Soland, Greencamp, Ky., writes: "Gentlemen: I am handling your names, and having a good trade on them."

J. C. Saunders, Martinsburg, W. Va., writes: "Gentlemen: Your PERUNA sells fast and gives good satisfaction. We sell more PERUNA than any other preparation we handle."

W. Bauer, St. Mary's, Pa., writes: "My son is still improving in health. Your PERUNA is just the thing for him."

H. L. Day & Co., New Vienna, O., write: "S. B. HARTMAN & Co., Columbus, Ohio.—Gentlemen: Your PERUNA sells as well as any medicine with. Quite a number have told us that PERUNA is the best thing they ever used."

ARTHUR WACKERBARTH. L. B. H. JOSE

WACKERBARTH & JOSE

MANUFACTURERS

—AND—

Wholesale Dealers in

Tobacco, Cigars, Snuff, Pipes,

45 MAGAZINE STREET,

New Orleans.

NEW STYLES.

MOQUETTES.

VELVET.

BODY BRUSSELS,

With or Without Borders.

Tapestry Brussels, 70 Cts. a Yd.

Lace Curtains, Window Shades.

MADRAS COTTEENS AND LACE.

OIL CLOTHS. LECM. CORT.

A. Brousseau's S

23 and 25 Churches Street

Rumey & Co's Hydraulic Ram in Operation

1874-25

FARMERS AND OTHERS

burying spring or running water can have their conveyed to their premises for using a H. Rumey & Co's different styles and sizes and Force Pumps, Hydraulic Rams, Send for Circular and Price List.

RUMSEY & CO.

Seneca Falls, N. Y.

Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF THE JOURNAL, DISCUSSION AND NOTES: MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE OF
THE SOUTHERN METHODIST CHURCH, SOUTH.

CHAS. S. GALLOWAY, D. D., Editor.

Corresponding Editors:

REV. T. A. S. ALLEN, REV. J. T. SAWYER,
REV. W. L. L. HENRICHS.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1884.

Christmas Chimes.

Oh! Christmas bells, your music tells
A tale of joy and gladness,
Of peace, of rest, of love,
And of a tale of gladness,
For even poverty lifts up
Her head and thanks you,
And for the lowly and the poor,
And for the lowly and the poor,
Of goodly cheer, rejoice.

The incarnation of the Son of God is the most stupendous fact in the history of the human race. It reveals more of the Divine Being and means more for man than all other facts put together. It is the crowning revelation of infinite love and the only solid foundation for human hope. Now is a good time to meditate with deepest gratitude upon those fatherless words: "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

"There's a song in the air, there's a star in the sky,
There's a mother's deep prayer, and a baby's low cry,
And the star rains its fire, while the beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a King."

The anniversary of the birth of Jesus of Nazareth reminds us that his personal character has been before the world for nearly nineteen centuries, and that the searching eyes of the most scrutinizing criticism have never yet discerned a shadow to dim his beauty, nor a spot to stain its excellence, nor a flaw to mar its symmetry. Its lustre is growing brighter and purer, under the broadening light of the ever-dawning years.

"There's a tumult of joy over the wonderful birth,
For the Virgin's sweet boy is the Lord of the earth;
And the star rains its fire, while the beautiful sing,
For the manger of Bethlehem cradles a King."

Human history is a picture gallery in which hang portraits of human character. This season of the year attracts our eyes to a portrait that has been on the canvass of human existence for 1,850 years. Among all the glorious pictures in that gallery we look at that portrait to-day as the highest model of human excellence, the brightest manifestation of human perfection, representing the only character in all history in which all the glories of humanity center and the only person who represents God's idea of a man! That portrait was drawn by the evangelists, and represents Jesus of Nazareth.

In the light of that star in the ages imperishable,
And that song from afar has swept over the world;
Every heart is radiant, while the beautiful sing,
In the homes of the nations, that Jesus is King."

When the fullness of time was come the secret that had been locked up in the bosom of God from before the foundation of this world was disclosed, and it was more than the angels could keep, and a bright embassy sped away to earth on glad wing to announce in song the glorious tidings. That song, fragrant with the aroma of salvation, vibrated through the airs of Judean hills and filled the souls of humble shepherds with wondering joy, and the light of hope dawned upon the darkness of the world!

"We rejoice in the light, and we echo the song
That comes down through the night from the Heavenly throng;
Aye, we shout to the lovely evangel they bring,
And we greet in his cradle our Savior and King."

Christianity started with a hallelujah chorus. Its first words to men were words full of peace and good will, and it is passing through the world singing its heavenly music, subduing hard hearts and charming serried spirits and filling the atmosphere of earth with the melodies of the skies. The burden of all its songs is: "Unto you this day is born a Savior, who is Christ, the Lord."

"Angels sing to your faithful watches keeping,
Sing as sweet fragments of the angels' song;
Till morning's light shall end the night of weeping,
And life's long shadows break in cloudless love."

Bishop Parker came to Raleigh after the Conference adjourned and spent the Sabbath in our city. He preached at Blanton Street in the morning and at Person Street in the evening, and he certainly had crowded houses. The communion service at the close of the morning sermon was a most precious occasion, and was largely attended. The Bishop's sermons were of a high order and made a profound impression upon our church in this city. He makes no effort at display, but you can see in every sermon he delivers that his object is to save souls. He has done a noble work for our church in this State. He won all hearts, and we will hail with delight his return to our State at any time. His stay, while in the city, with one of the editors of this paper was truly a benediction. His will never be forgotten by the members of that household. Many prayers will be offered in this State for his continued health and long life.—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

Editorial Correspondence.

THE CENTENNIAL CONFERENCE.

Last evening was devoted to the reception of fraternal delegates from the Bible Christians and Methodist Protestants. The magnificent auditorium of Mount Vernon Place was crowded from floor to gallery. Bishop Bowman presided and Dr. Samuel Redgers introduced the fraternal messengers. Addresses were made by Dr. L. W. Bates, Rev. Dr. Scott, editor of the Methodist Recorder, and Dr. J. M. Herring. Their words breathed a true brotherly spirit; but we could not help asking why they did not join with us in this great family gathering.

This morning's session is presided over by Bishop C. H. Fowler. Immediately after devotional exercises the little breeze of discussion started yesterday afternoon by a remark of Dr. Edwards, of Virginia, about the negro was resumed, the colored brethren taking a leading part. The speech of the morning was made by Bishop Campbell. It was in capital spirit and had a good effect. There was no disturbed temper; but unless wisely stayed by a few conservative speakers a gale would soon have begun to blow. Thus far the Southern delegates and the colored brethren have taken the lead in the general discussions. Some of these five-minute talks are spirited and witty, and give a pleasing variety to the programme from the more dignified and learned essays read from the platform.

The first paper was read by Dr. O. H. Warren, editor of the Northern Christian Advocate, on "Methodism in 1784, and Its Outlook." We have long known the polish and power of his pen as seen in the columns of his paper. For editorial writing he occupies, possibly, the first place among the ablest journalists of his church. His essay evidenced clear philosophical analysis, spiritual discernment and the skillful hand of a belle-lettre scholar. He was followed by Rev. Dr. J. D. Blackwell, of the Virginia Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with a paper on "Methodism in 1884, and Its Outlook." Though not gifted with a strong voice, and without the arts of an elocutionist, his discussion produced a happy, hopeful impression. Frequently his ringing statements were roundly applauded, and his brethren of the South felt proud of their representative.

Bishop Walden arrived this morning together with other leading men of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The absence of Drs. Curry and Buckley, of New York, is much regretted. They are expected every day.

At the afternoon session Dr. J. B. McFerrin is in the chair. He asked to be excused from the service, but the Conference would not grant his request. He is the patriarch and wit of the body. His voice commands first profound silence, and then uproarious applause. The first essay, by Rev. B. P. Lee, D. D., on the "Causes of the Success of Methodism," was read in the absence of the author by Dr. R. T. Tanner, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. He was followed by Rev. Dr. H. Vincent on the "Possible Perils to Future Methodism." No man is better known in all the religious world of America than this great leader of modern Sunday-schools and author of the International Lesson system. His open, handsome face itself attracts, and when his mellow, clear voice is heard uttering words of practical wisdom he commands the respectful homage of his congregation. He made points and sharpened them. The possible perils he indicated showed the keen observant eye and presence of an ecclesiastical leader. By general consent his paper is the feature of to-day's meetings. He is one man of great reputation, who doesn't dwindle at a near approach. When close to him you feel the presence of a master. General discussion ensued led by Dr. W. H. Yarrow. One fact we have noticed—our brethren from the South, unaccustomed to handclapping in such assemblies, had become the most vigorous applauders.

DECEMBER 12, 1884.

At the close of yesterday afternoon's session the Conference passed a resolution commending to the several branches of Methodism the publication of a common hymnal. There was some discussion on this resolution—all looking to strengthening the words of recommendation, and it passed at length by a unanimous vote.

The resolution we had the honor to introduce, requesting the Board of Management of the Cotton Centennial and World's Industrial Exposition, at New Orleans, to close the gates of the same on the Sabbath, was reported back favorably by the Business Committee, and it passed by a rising, rousing, unanimous vote. Representing a communicant membership of over four millions and a population of nearly twenty millions, this expression is significant and must be respected. The integrity of the Sabbath is infinitely connected with the success of the gospel and the purity of our civilization. Its desecration has awakened the alarm and excited the activities of all evangelical churches. This Centenary Conference has given no uncertain sound on this vital, imminent question. At the suggestion of the Business Committee a special committee, larger and more representative of the several sections, was appointed, to which all moral questions are to be referred. The committee is as follows: D. A. Wheeden, J. H. Bayless, Oliver Hoyt, Clement Studebaker, E. R. Hendrix, J. H. Carlisle, James Gardner, Bishop Wayman, Bishop S. T. Jones and J. R. Daniels.

Last evening platform meetings were held in five churches—the subject for discussion being "The Educational Work and Spirit of Methodism." In the Mount Vernon Place Church Bishop Granbery was one of the speakers. From the full report published in this morning's paper, and the favorable comments of those present, we are glad to know that he fully sustained his high reputation and the church that has so highly honored him. His preaching at Mount Vernon Place to-morrow at eleven o'clock. We attended the meeting at Bethany, and heard Chancellor C. N. Sims, of Syracuse University, and Dr. Alexander Martin, president of DePaul University. Dr. Sims delivered a fresh, clear, original address with the force and effect of a born orator. He stands in the front rank of Methodist orators in the North, and is deservedly popular for his large administrative ability and amiable spirit.

We find in the chair of the Conference, this morning, Lt.-Gov. Shaub, of Mississippi. Long used to the presidency of deliberative bodies, he fills the position with dignity and conducts the business with admirable tact and spirit. His chairmanship is provoking congratulations on all sides. Our honored young friend has before him a career of the largest usefulness and distinction in both Church and State. This afternoon the chair will be occupied by Gov. Pattison, of Pennsylvania, the youngest governor in the United States and the son of a Methodist preacher.

This first paper of the morning, on the "Rise and Progress of Methodism in Canada," was read by Rev. John A. Williams, D. D. He is a large, slender man, clean-shaven and with snowy-white hair. Many curious and blessed incidents connected with the planting of our cause in the far North of this great continent were woven into an interesting story. It is an important contribution to the literature of this Conference. The next essay by Rev. Charles J. Little, professor in Dickinson College and librarian of the State of Pennsylvania, on "Methodist Pioneers and Their Work," carried the congregation by storm. He put the Methodist spell upon the whole body. Tears flowed, "amens" were shouted, "hallelujahs" rang out and round after round of applause continued after the essayist resumed his seat.

The fraternalizing spirit of the Conference grows with the days. There has been no disposition to gush on any side. Without stiffness or shyness, there has been free interchange of Methodist regard, and this has increased as acquaintance has ripened into personal friendships. The distinguished kindnesses shown to us of the South has been responded to in grateful spirit. In no essay or address has sectional prejudice been even hinted at, while on the other hand everyone seems to give his brother greater honor than himself. The pastors of the Northern Methodist Churches in the city sought Southern men to occupy their pulpits to-morrow. Trinity and St. Paul, our principal churches, will be favored with sermons by Bishops Foster and Andrews.

Among the distinguished arrivals to-day are Bishops Merrill and Nide and Dr. Buckley, of this Methodist Episcopal Church, and Dr. A. M. Shipp, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

At the afternoon session, presided over by Gov. Pattison, the first paper was read by Bishop S. T. Jones, of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, on the subject, "Is Methodism Losing Its Power Among the Masses?" Well written and well read, his essay was well received. This was followed in a short address by the Rev. G. C. Rankin, of the Holston Conference, opening the general discussion. Then what a scramble for the floor! Some of the five-minute speeches were quite eloquent, the most brilliant of which was delivered by Dr. Buckley of New York.

After this discussion closed there was a delightful episode. One of our native Mexican preachers, Riverro, represented the work in Spanish, interpreted by Rev. A. H. Sutherland, the superintendent of our Mexican Border Mission. He is a bright, handsome young man, and spoke with rare, chaste beauty of expression. When referring to his own experience his face lighted up with a strange glow and his voice trembled with deep emotion.

DECEMBER 13, 1884.

Yesterday was a great day in Baltimore Methodism. The pulpits of all the Protestant Churches in the city, except the Episcopalians, were filled by members of the Conference. There was an appointment to the Reformed Episcopal Church. We had the pleasure of hearing Bishop Andrews at St. Paul's, and his sermon was a clear, masterly gospel statement. In the afternoon twenty-one churches were thronged with old and young to attend Centenary Sunday-school mass meetings. Fully thirty thousand persons joined in this celebration. Galleries, choir galleries, vestibules and aisles were occupied, while hundreds had to turn away. There was a common programme for all the churches, with two speakers on each platform. The subjects designated were: 1. "The hand of God as seen in the Sunday-school work of the last century." 2. "The promise of the Sunday-school work for the incoming century, if God's people are faithful." We had the privilege of hearing Dr. Carlisle, of South Carolina, on the first topic, and Dr. Boaz, of Kansas, on the second. Notwithstanding a bitter storm, the churches at night were attended by respectable congregations.

At this morning's session, Bishop Hood, of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, is in the chair. The paper by Bishop L. H. Holsey, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, on "Methodist Means of Grace," in the absence of the author on account of sickness, was read by a member of his delegation. This was followed by an able and charming essay by Dr. A. S. Hunt, of New York, on the "Aim and Character of Methodist Preaching." Discriminative in thought, reverent in spirit and chaste in expression, this paper will occupy a conspicuous place in the forthcoming published volume. The author is well known in the South as the senior fraternal representative to our General Conference, at Louisville, in 1874. From the grace of those brotherly utterances he has never fallen. In all these subsequent years he has been consistent with the generous, catholic spirit of that eloquent address.

When Dr. Hunt resumed his seat amid loud applause, by special request Dr. J. H. Vincent delivered a stirring address on "The Youth of Methodism." Right earnestly did he plead for awakened and more intelligent interest in this class. Their perils and temptations were graphically portrayed, and the duties of the church urged with irresistible eloquence.

DECEMBER 15, 1884.

At the afternoon session yesterday Bishop W. X. Nide, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, presided. He has an amiable, winning face and is said to be the St. John of the Episcopal college. The first paper read was by Rev. Dr. Anson West, of North Alabama, on "The Doctrinal Unity of Methodism." What it lacked in an eloquent rendition on the platform it will gain in a quiet reading at home. Strong in thought and vigorous in treatment, it will do to preserve for future use. The next essay, on the "Guards to the Purity of Our Doctrinal Teaching," was read by Rev. Dr. R. N. Davies, of Illinois. A committee on a paper, by Dr. Vincent on "Oxford Leagues," and another on the same subject by Dr. C. K. Marshall, was appointed as follows: J. H. Vincent, M. C. Briggs, J. W. F. White, G. D. Shands, C. B. Galloway, C. S. Smith, H. A. Monroe, J. H. Adderson, F. M. Hamilton.

Immediately after adjournment the Conference in a body repaired to the Academy of Music, where a reception was tendered them by the Methodist ladies of Baltimore. It was a delightful social event. The mayor of the city delivered an address of welcome, to which responses were made by Dr. McFerrin, Gen. Risk and Dr. Buckley. Music, conversation, good cheer and an elegant collation made up a pleasant episode of the Centennial Conference. The platform meetings last night were held in the interest of Sunday-schools in eleven churches.

In the chair this morning we find Rev. Dr. McAnally, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He is a veteran journalist and one of the oldest members of this body. Papers have been read by Dr. J. E. Evans, of Georgia, and Dr. J. M. King, of New York. The latter, on "The Influence of Methodism on Other Denominations," was enthusiastically received. The author referred to an utterance by Archbishop Spaulding, that Roman Catholicism had more to fear from the Methodist Church than any other force or organization.

At the afternoon session Bishop Walden presided, and excellent papers were read by Dr. Fry, of St. Louis, and Dr. Fitzgerald, of Nashville, on "Methodism and the Press." These essays were the marks of practiced pens and ably discussed a most vital and growing interest. The report of the committee on the formation of "Oxford leagues," recommending to the Sunday-school departments of the several churches the adoption of some such scheme, was passed after an interesting discussion. The purpose of this plan is to interest young people of the church in Methodist history particularly and advanced culture generally. If put into practice, we doubt not its vast utility to the church.

DECEMBER 16, 1884.

NOTES.

We have noted the conspicuous absence of the smoker about the Conference-room. Not a pipe or cigar have we seen in any of the offices or committee-rooms of the church. If the habit is indulged, it is at home and in the hotels. This is a fact and a prophecy. The Methodist preacher of the future is to be innocent of the taste and fumes of tobacco.

In company with our excellent host, Mr. T. J. Tolbert, we enjoyed a visit to Mt. Olivet Cemetery and stood by the graves of historic dead. First we were attracted by a tall marble shaft. At its base were three graves—Bishop Asbury in the center, with Bishops Emory and George on either side. Near by was the sleeping-place of Bishop Beverly Waugh, Robert Strawbridge, who huilt the first Methodist "meeting-house" in America, and Jesse Lee, the apostle of New England Methodism. These, with a score of other brave men who planted our cause in the new world, rest together in what is known as the "preacher's lot." In other parts of that silent city of the dead many preachers rest. What blessed thoughts came trooping up like angels from those graves! By those verdant couches we promised the Lord better and holier service.

The Omnipresent Christ.

The man Christ Jesus has been the subject of more thought and talk and writing than any other person that ever lived. He is the subject of conversations and sermons and songs and poetry and essays and books innumerable. In the farm and on the road, in the shop and by the desk, in the markets of trade and on the streets men and women are continually muttering of Christ. In the mid-day, when the sun pours his warming rays upon the earth, they think of the Sun of Righteousness shedding the beams of hope over the gloom of the moral universe! When the stars peep through their purple canopy, they think of that "bright morning star" which ushered in the dawn of the world's fairest day! In rosy health, they muse upon him whose word sends the life-stream bounding through the channels of existence! When the heart throbs with fever, and the brows are clammy and the fingers are twitching and the lips are whitening, they think of him who stood by the bedside of disease and drove it away by a touch of his gentle hand! In the domestic circle, when quiet and happy love breaks away all restraints, they talk lovingly of him who was the honored guest at the hearth-stone in Bethany! At the family meal, they speak in wonder of him whose blessing, expanded the five loaves into bread enough to feed hungry thousands! In the crowded city, their thoughts revert to him who was surrounded by a joyous multitude shouting "hosannas" in the streets of Jerusalem! In solitude, they meditate upon him who in the desert place, by a dexterous use of the word of the Lord, foiled the deep-laid plan of Satan and saved the universe from ruin! When they "go down to the sea in ships," they remember him whose word of authority stills the raging tempest and calms the surging waves! When they clamber up some mountain-side, memory carries them back to that time when he climbed a mountain to spend a night in prayer! When they look at the waving grain fields, they are reminded of him who walked through the "corn fields on the Sabbath day," and taught the meaning of the holy day to all the generations of men! When they meet together at the cheerful gathering to witness the union of two hearts in the bonds of love and two souls in the labor of life, they think of him performing his first great work at "a marriage in Cana of Galilee!" When on their way to the burial-place to consign the bodies of friends to their last rest, they think of him meeting a funeral procession and restoring the dead to life and to his mother!

Thus by almost everything men are reminded of Christ. By his wonderful life he has stamped his image everywhere. In his incarnation he communed with the outer world which his own will had called into being, and now nature from all her varied forms reflects something of his character. He stands out in full view on all the planes of human life. He discloses himself in all the fields of human research. He shows himself on all the lines of human thought. To-day he occupies more of the range of mental vision, has a larger share in philosophical inquiry and takes a broader place in scientific discussion than any other being ever did! He even discloses himself in all the departments of art and labor. The painter sees him with Divine pencil giving the delicate tints to the rose and the finishing touches to the lily. The builder beholds him as a wise man rearing the grand mansions of heaven. The farmer looks with amazement at this grand sower sowing the world with seeds of truth. He pours upon the poets high airs of celestial glory. The eloquence of men is dumb before the mystic power of his words. The philosophy of the schools pales before the radiance of his philosophy of salvation. The ethics of the world pays its richest tribute to him by drawing its best teachings from his sermon on the mount.

The life of Christ shows that he not only impressed his image upon all the forms of nature, but that he projected his influence into all the affairs of men. All the interpretations which the past has given us of that life are simply elementary; but the view is getting broader, and after "while we shall come to see plainly that the life of Christ on earth introduced a new factor into all the forces at work in the world, and that factor is modifying and molding everything. The influence which he sent out has stirred the world in every direction. His teachings have opened to human souls possibilities before unimagined and lifted all the conditions of life to higher planes and revealed clearly to men their relations to God and nature and each other. This influence is now a fixed element in all human affairs, operating with incalculable power upon all the conditions of earthly existence. This influence is now an unalterable law, and can no more be abrogated and gotten rid of than the law of gravitation. Just as his human body rose from earth to ascend to heaven, he uttered the Divine paradox: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Those words secure all the future and exhibit the man of Nazareth as the Omnipresent Christ.

The Exposition opened last week with great éclat. Flags fluttered and banners waved all over the town. Every means of transportation was put into service to convey the crowds to the grounds. The great Music Hall, estimated to seat ten thousand, was packed long before the opening hour. Rev. Dr. Talmage, of Brooklyn, invoked the Divine blessing upon the undertaking. Maj. Burke, Col. Richardson and Gov. McIlwain made appropriate addresses. A poem, written for the occasion by Mrs. Townsend, was read, and celebrated bands supplied the music. When all was ready Pres. Arthur, surrounded by government officials and foreign diplomats, in the east-room of the White House, at Washington, City, touched the "magic button," and in response to the weight of his finger the great engine in the Main Building started its ponderous wheels, and the "World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition" was opened for inspection. Come and see the sights.

While we are rejoicing in the abundant blessings of a kind Providence, and our hearts are gladdened by the return of another Christmas time, let us remember those who are not so favored with temporal goods and show the genuineness of our gratitude to God by distributing to the necessities of the poor. Christ left the church two legacies—his own gracious love and "the poor." Let us show our love by remembering the poor in our Christmas gifts.

The Southern Cultivator.

From this date we will receive subscriptions for the ADVOCATE and SOUTHERN CULTIVATOR for two dollars and seventy-five cents, postage prepaid. Subscribers wishing Dickson's System of Farming, in connection with the above arrangement, will send twenty-five cents extra, or three dollars for the three publications, postage prepaid. Unless such accommodations are made, no attention will be paid to orders. No reduction allowed for postoffice orders or registered letters.

CARVER & JAMIESON.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LOOK AT THIS LIST.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS
OF THE
Southern Methodist Publishing House,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

SLERAW, LIFE OF BISHOP J. H. By the Rev. G. G. Smith. 2 vols. Cloth. $1.50

FOREW JACKSON POTTER, TIM Fighting Parson of the Texas Frontier. 12mo. Cloth.....	1 00
PHIEM, A FEW PLAIN WORDS ON. By the Rev. J. L. Simmons. Pamphlet. 12mo.	0 10
PHISM: IN A NUTSHELL. Revised and enlarged. By Chas. Taylor, D.D. For Devo- tion.	0 40
PHIE, A Story. By E. T. Dwyer. 7mo. Cloth.....	0 60
PHIE DICTIONARY. By Bishop J. C. Gran- ville, D.D. 12mo. Cloth.....	1 00
PHIE METHODS FOR THE PUPILS OF THE

OPHISM, Delvaio , Cloth.....	2 00
Cloth, illustrated.....	2 00
Half uppers, illustrated.....	2 00
Morocco gilt, illustrated.....	4 00
BEAKERS' BROKEN, A True Story. By S. L. H. Blum, Cloth.....	0 60
URKITE'S NOTES OF THE NEW TESTA-

MEN. 2 vols. 8vo. Sheep. 5 00
 CURIAL. A Narrative of Pioneer Days in Kentucky. By Morrison Healy. 12mo. Cloth. 1 00
 CALIFORNIA SKETCHES. With Steel Portrait of John W. Fremont. San Francisco. By O.
 P. Fitzgerald, D.D. 16mo. Cloth. 0 75
 APOCRYPHAL BAPTISM. By the Rev.
 Richard Ferguson. P. bound. 0 20
 MILD IN THE MIDST OF THE. By W. M.
 Lattinich, D.D. 16mo. Cloth. 0 60
 CHRISTIAN CHILDHOOD. A Sermon. By

President Wood, British Wesleyan Conference, Pamphlet	0 50
CHRISTIAN CRADLE-BOOK. By the Rev. R. Abney, D.D. Cloth	0 75
CHRISTIAN GROWTH. By C. P. Fitzgerald, D.D. 12mo. Cloth	0 50
COMMENTARY ON ROMANS. By E. H. Sumner, D.D. 12mo. Cloth	1 25
GOSSIN, JULIA, OR A CATHOLIC CON- VERTIBLE. By the Rev. J. B. Farland, Brock, Collo. 12mo. Cloth	0 60
SATURDAY, R. G. 1854. 12mo. Cloth. 100 A.

M. JONES, PUBLISHER, by the Rev. A. V. Jones, P. Jones, Colby, Conn. 1 00
 CHILDREN OF THE BIBLE, by M. S. Fane, E. L. Armstrong, P. Jones, Conn. 1 00
 "GAL. BIBLE," THE, by Mrs. C. G. Fane, by Mrs. Florence E. Row, L. A. Jones, Colby 1 10
 "COLORADO RACE WEIGH-IN IN THE BALANCE," by C. K. Marshall, P. Jones, P. Jones, Conn. 1 25
 "E. V. A. A Story of Phobos and Pteronians," by Hon. H. W. Hilditch, L. Jones, Conn. 1 25

M. JONES, PUBLISHER, by the Rev. A. V. Jones, P. Jones, Colby, Conn. 1 00
 CHILDREN OF THE BIBLE, by M. S. Fane, E. L. Armstrong, P. Jones, Conn. 1 00
 "GAL. BIBLE," THE, by Mrs. C. G. Fane, by Mrs. Florence E. Row, L. A. Jones, Colby 1 10
 "COLORADO RACE WEIGH-IN IN THE BALANCE," by C. K. Marshall, P. Jones, P. Jones, Conn. 1 25
 "E. V. A. A Story of Phobos and Pteronians," by Hon. H. W. Hildner, L. Jones, Conn. 1 25

PUTZER ON BAPTISM. 12mo. Cloth.	1 00
"ECCLESIASTICAL PUMP." By the author of "A Logical Catechism." Pamphlet.	6 10
EVIDENCES OF CHRISTIANITY. By E. N. Landon, D.D. 8vo. Cloth.	1 50
FAIRBANKS REPRINTS OF WESLEYAN HYMNS. 475-472. 12mo. Cloth.	78
FIVE YEARS IN THE WEST. How an In- experienced Young Man finds his opor- tunity. By A Texas Preacher. 12mo. Cloth.	1 00
GLIMPSSES OF TRUTH. By P. Fargead.

OLD TIME. Cloth.	1 00
INAS VISIT TO VIRGINIA. A Story. By John Leathers Hunt. Bound, Cloth.	0 50
INFANT BAPTISM. Essay. By the Rev. W. M. Rush, D.D. Bound, Pamphlet.	0 10
JOHN NEWCOMB. A Tale of College Life. By a Virginian. Bound, Cloth.	1 00
LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF FORTY YEARS. By Henry Dearwell. Bound, Cloth.	2 00
LESSONS FOR YOUTH. By the Rev. J. W. B. Allen. Bound, Cloth.	0 00

LITTLE OR CHILD-LIKE LIFE IN HERNESALEM. By Lydia M. Finkelscher. Photo. Göttingen. 0 60
 MISTAKES OF INGERSOLL. By J. N. Bethune. 12mo. Cloth. 0 50
 MARY SINGLETON, OR, THE QUESTION ANSWERED, by the Rev. J. P. Cuthbert. 6mo. Pamphlet. 0 20
 METAPHYSICS IN A NUTSHELL. By the Rev. W. W. Moore. 12mo. Pamphlet. 0 20
 METHODISM IN NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA. Statistical Phenomena. By Rev. M. B. McKim. 6mo. 1 00

METHODS IN SOUTH CAROLINA. By A. M. Snapp, D.D., Edw. A. Hodges.	1.50
MINISTRIES, PAPER ON. A Treatise on the Support of the Ministry. By W. P. Harrison, D.D., Portland.	0.80
MISSEONS OF THE METHODIST SOUTH. By Bishop A. W. Wilson, D.D., Iowa, C. M.	0.50
MORAL REFORM. By J. H. Rogers, Iowa, C. M.	0.60
MORALS. A Sermon. By Mrs. French Williams, Iowa, C. M.	1.50

NOVEL CLASS OF FIRES. By the Rev. J. Spencer. Boston, Pamphlet.....	20
OUR NUMBER IN PLACE. HIS REFORM AND HIS FUTURE. By A. G. Day. New York, 1846. Cloth.....	1 00
THEY'VE GOT A FORTUNE. By the Rev. P. H. Hayes. B. & B. Index. 1846.....	55
PHYSIOLOGY OF MELANCHOLY. By the Rev. Wm. Black. Boston, Pamphlet.....	25
IS THERE A FUTURE. By T. C. Briggs. New York, 1846. Prose (verses) Vert.

SERMONS. By Isaac B. S. P. 125. 100
Large. Cloth	1.50
SERMONS. By Phil. P. Neely. Large. Cloth 100
SERMONS. By SOUTHERN METHODIST
CHURCHES. Large. Cloth	1.25
SERMONS AND SPEECHES. By A. C. Hay-
den. 125. Large. Cloth	1.25
SERMONS FOR THE TIMES. By the Rev.
A. B. McFerrin. Large. Cloth	1.00
SERMONS ON THE ACTS. By J. C. Phillips
125. Large. Cloth	1.00

JERMONS ON MATTHEW. By J. Con-dylan Jones. 12mo. Cloth. 1 00
 STUDIES IN THE FORTY DAYS Between Christ's Resurrection and Ascension. By the Rev. A. V. Lapsley, D.D. 12mo. Cloth. 1 00
 THEATRE-ING AND DANCING INCON-VENIENT WITH THE REV. MEMBER-
 SHIP. By Rev. W. A. Gaudet. Pamphlet. 0 10
 THE CONFIDENT CENTURIES. By W.
 Mader, D.D. 12mo. Cloth. 1 00
 THE DANCING HOUSE. By W. P. Harrison.

THE METHODIST ALMOH. By the Rev. H. T. Robinson. 12mo. Cloth.	1 00
THE SOUTHERN ALMOH. And THE METHODIST ALMOH. By Rev. J. A. Robinson. 12mo. Cloth.	1 00
THE PEOPLE OF PILAVER, &c. by the Rev. J. H. B. Fox. 8vo. Pamphlet.	0 50
THE HISTORY AND THE LEGENDS OF THE ILLINOIS INDIAN. By Geo. Catlin. 8vo. Pamphlet.	0 10
THE WORKS OF THE REV. J. H. B. FOX. 8vo. 10 vols.	10 00

THE LIFE OF FREDERICK DOUGLASS, BY THE REV. J.
H. NICHOLS. 42mo. Pamphlet $0 10
BUTTER TIDINGS NOW. By the Rev. H. W.
Faulstich. Pamphlet $0 10
"WHO'S TO BLAME?" A Story. By Henry
Ford. 42mo. Pamphlet $0 60
YOUNG MEMPHISITES. A Memoir. By the Rev. G. Manning. Pamphlet $0 60

*Any of the above may be ordered post-paid.

ELKIN & CO.
100-CANAL STREET-100

CHINA MATTINGS.
All varieties of CARPETING at very low prices.

Oil Cloths,
Window Shades,
Curtains, &c.

Shot Guns

Large Ill.
Catalogues free.

Address
Great Western Gun Works, Pittsburg, Mo.

Revolvers,
Rifles,
Etc.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kind, and it makes the best loaf of bread. With the multitude of low test, short weight, adulterated and inferior powders, sold only in cans.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., New York.

IRON BITTERS
THE BEST TONIC.

This medicine, combining Iron with pure vegetable tonic, completely cures Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Weakness, Impure Blood, Biliousness, Chlorosis, and all the ailments of the blood. It is an infallible remedy for Diseases of the Kidneys and Liver.

It is invaluable for Diseases peculiar to Women, and all who lead sedentary lives. It does not irritate the stomach, and does not produce constipation—after free medicines do. It enriches and purifies the blood, stimulates the appetite, aids the assimilation of food, leaves the heart and lungs healthy, and strengthens the muscles and nerves.

For Intermittent Fevers, Lassitude, Lack of Energy, &c., it has no equal.

See the genuine name above trade mark on each crossed red line on wrapper. This is the only genuine name.

MADE ONLY BY DR. J. C. WATSON & CO., BURLINGTON, N. C.

TUTT'S PILLS
25 YEARS IN USE.

The Greatest Medical Triumph of the Age!

SYMPTOMS OF A TORPID LIVER.
Loss of appetite, Bowels constipated, Pain in the head, with a dull sensation in the back part, Pain under the shoulder-blade, Fullness after eating, with a disinclination to exertion of body or mind, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, with a feeling of having neglected some duty, Weariness, Dizziness, Flushing at the heart, Heat before the eyes, Headache over the right eye, Headaches, with a full dream, Highly colored urine, and CONSTIPATION.

TUTT'S PILLS are especially adapted to such cases. One dose effects such a change of feeling as to astonish the sufferer. They increase the Appetite, and cause the body to take on flesh. They cleanse the bowels, and by their Tonic Action on the Digestive Organs, they regularize the bowels. Price 25c. & 4 Murray St., N. Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.
GRAY HAIR OF WHISKERS changed to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. It imparts a natural color, acts instantaneously. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.

Office, 44 Murray St., New York.

Mrs. POTT'S COLD HANDLE SADD IRON

ADVANTAGES
DO NOT BURN THE HAND.
DETACHABLE WALNUT HANDLE.
DOUBLE POINTED, IRON BOTH WAYS.
BEST IN USE AND CHEAP.
ONE HANDLE AND A STAND TO A SET.
FOR SALE BY THE HARDWARE TRADE.

"THE PIANO TEACHER'S IDEAL."
The New Musical CURRICULUM

By DR. GEO. F. ROOT.
"A Perfect Instruction Book."

This book is the culmination of four years of labor. It is a complete course in piano playing, and is the best work of its kind.

Published by JOHN CHURCH & CO., CINCINNATI, OHIO.
For Sale by all Book and Music Dealers.

Weekly Market Review.

For Week Ending December 23, 1884.

COTTON.

Low ordinary	7 1/2 @	—
Ordinary	8 1/2	—
Good ordinary	9 1/2	—
Low middling	10	—
Middling	10 1/2	—
Good middling	10 3/4	—
Middling fair	11	—
Fair	11 1/2	—
Good fair	11 3/4	—
Mobile middling	10 1/2	—
St. Louis middling	10 1/2	—

SUGAR.

Inferior	21	3 1/2
Common	22	3 1/2
Good common	23	—
Fair	24	—
Good fair	25	—
Prime	26	—
Strictly Prime	27	—
Choice	28	—
Seconda	31	—
Yellow clarified	4 11-16	—
Gray clarified	5	—
Choice whites	5 5-16	—
Granulated	5 13-16	—

MOLASSES.

Syrup	22	3 1/2
Fair	27	—
Strictly Prime	40	—
Choice	42	—
Fancy	45	—

RISE.

Fancy	—	—
Prime	5 1/2	—
Good	5 1/4	—
Fair	5	—
Ordinary	4 1/2	—
Common	4 1/4	—
No. 2	2 11-16	—
Rough	3 5-16	4 1/4

FLOUR.

Minnesota bakers	4 25	—
Minnesota patents	5 37 1/2	—
Extra fancy	4 50	—
Winter wheat patents	5 00	—
Choice	5 00	—
Fancy	4 25	—

CORN PRODUCTS.

Corn meal	3 00	3 10
Cracked	3 00	3 10
Hominy	3 25	3 50

GRAIN, ETC.

CORN:	—	—
White	—	50
Yellow	—	50
Mixed	—	50

WHEAT.

Western	30	—
Texas rust-proof	42	44

BRAN.

Choice	57 1/2	90
Prime	17 00	18 50

PROVISIONS.

MEAT:	—	—
Prime mutton	12 00	—
Prime mutton	11 00	—
Rumps	10 00	10 50

CHOICE BREAKFAST.

Choice breakfast	10 1/2	—
Sides, clear	6 1/2	—
Sides, clear rill	7 1/2	7 1/2

SALES MEAT.

Sides, clear	4 1/2	—
Sides, clear rill	5 1/2	—
Sides, clear rill	6 1/2	—

FISH.

MAKRELS:	—	—
No. 1, in blis.	14 25	—
Half blis.	7 75	—
No. 2, in blis.	13 75	—
Half blis.	6 25	—
No. 3, in blis, large.	13 25	—
Half blis.	7 00	—

GROCERIES.

COFFEES:	—	—
Rio, choice	9 1/2	11 1/2
Cordova, choice	12	13
Java, choice	22	23

BETTER.

Western dairy	20	—
New York dairy	20	—
Country	16	18

LEADS.

Choice	7 1/2	—
Choice	50	1 00
Fair	25	50

OLDS.

Coal, cokes	19	—
Coal, bit	4	—
Cotton seed	50	55
Lard	65	70

VEGETABLES.

CABBAGES:	—	—
Western, bulk	9	10
Country	—	—

KROUT.

Western	1 30	1 00
hbl.	4 50	5 50
ONIONS:	—	—
hbl.	1 75	2 75

BALING STUFFS.

BAGGING:	—	—
12 lb.	10 1/2	—
2 lb.	11 1/2	—

BALING TWINE.

hbl.	—	12 1/2
------	---	--------

TIES.

hbl.	1 35	—
------	------	---

SUNDRIES.

POULTRY:	—	—
Chickens, Western	4 50	5 00
Young	2 50	3 50
Chickens, South'n	3 00	3 50
Young	1 50	1 60
Turkeys, Southern	9 00	12 00

Eggs.

Western	23	27
Southern	27	28

WOOL.

Lake	17	—
Louisiana	15	—
Rumy	7 1/2	—

Hides.

Green salted	7	—
Dry salted	10	10 1/2

New Orleans Christian Advocate.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

CAITIA, Mo., Dec. 17.—The Royal New Brunswick Lottery has collapsed. Nate S. Read, of Philadelphia, was the leader of the enterprise. The company, it is said, paid the government $30,000 a year for postage, and the postmaster at St. Stephen derived a large income from its office than any postmaster in Canada. The concern was never known to have a drawing or give a prize.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 17.—A desperate fight took place last night between 10 and 11 o'clock in the Dunegan settlement, eight miles from Gainesville, between deputy collectors and a gang of moonshiners, headed by three of the moonshiners, who were shot and ran away. Big Anderson Grant was shot dead, also Moonshiner Prator. When the moonshiners saw their leaders fall dead they got away, as fast as possible.

BALTIMORE, Md., Dec. 17.—Capt. Forbes, of the bark Albemarle, arrived at this port yesterday from Rio de Janeiro. In an interview he says he left Rio de Janeiro November 12. There were numerous war rumors from Brazil and the Argentine Republic. The Brazilian authorities are conspiring for the army.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18.—Rev. H. Colclazer, for fifty-seven years a well known Methodist Episcopal minister, died this morning. He was one of the founders of the University of Michigan. He was seventy-five years old. He retired from the ministry last March.

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Blackened walls and smoking ruins were all that remained this morning of St. John's Home, or the Male Catholic Orphan Asylum, of Brooklyn, which burned yesterday. Crowds of spectators gathered to see the ruins. The fire broke out in the morning and police digging in the ruins. The dead recovered until a late hour this afternoon number thirteen. Sister Mary St. Joseph was killed.

Children were received at the Home on various conditions. Most of them were orphans and some of them had been committed by the police when their parents were either incapable or unwilling to provide for them. The boys learning the last named class were in the greater part unwilling inmates and these, it is believed, composed mainly the missing 125. The last seen by the fire they were trying to remain at large.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—The joint commission in charge of the Washington Monument to-day submitted to Congress a report showing its progress during the past year. The report shows that the weight of the monument is 81,120 tons, and it cost $1,877,710, of which Congress has appropriated $887,710.

HELENA, Ark., Dec. 19.—Yesterday morning about 9 o'clock the clothing of Mrs. W. W. McAlpine, wife of the mayor of this city, caught fire while standing before an open grate, and in a few moments the unfortunate lady was enveloped in a sheet of flame. She fortunately escaped with a few scratches, but her hair and dress were consumed. Her mother, Mrs. Ware, came to her rescue and succeeded in putting out the fire. The lady is very seriously burnt, but will recover.

JACKSON, Dec. 19.—Rev. H. F. Johnson was robbed of $100 by a pickpocket from Cincinnati, on the arrival of a train from New Orleans. As he was getting off the car the thief rifled his pocket, and Mr. Johnson caught him in the act and held him till he had him arrested. In trying to make his escape, pulling Mr. Johnson along, he wadded his handkerchief, thereby having the money to one of his purs, there being two other suspicious characters hard by. The money was not recovered.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 21.—A fabulous find has been made in an abandoned gold mine in North Georgia. The tract was bought some months ago by capitalists in the city. They had specimens taken from a vein sixty-five feet from the surface of the ground and sent them to some of the leading chemists of the United States. One assay shows the ore to be worth $100 per ton, and another to be worth $200. The veins are said to extend for miles, and an experienced mining chemist says the mine will be equal in value to the bonanza mines of Colorado. Other rich finds are reported from that region.

FOREIGN.

PARIS, Dec. 17.—Admiral Peyron, Minister of Marine, received a dispatch from Gen. Briere de Lisle, saying: "Two or three thousand Chinese left the mountains, intending to attack a village eight kilometers north-east of Chin. A portion of the Chatteron, assisted by some friendly natives, dispersed the Chinese, inflicting a severe loss." The French lost twenty-four in killed and wounded.

The Miser and Faith's Bible.

A STORY ABOUT CHRISTMAS.

BY RAY McOWELL.

In every neighborhood is found some one whose habits the gossips are delighted to exaggerate and talk of, and that of Club Alley was the old miser, Paul.

It was regarded as a fixed fact that Paul had possessions; but how great? Children's arms were stretched forth full length to indicate a small portion of the size of the chest which contained his money, and being too large to have been admitted by the door, must have been built in the house. If Paul knew the fabulous tales his strange life had suggested, he took no pains to deny them, and his silence and indifference to everything and everybody added significance to the reports.

One bitter cold night Paul throws on the dying fire a few coals from a basket near by. Then laying aside his pipe he prepares for a nap by tipping back his old chair. His companions seemed to exchange significant glances as they got ready to follow their master's example. It was not long before they were both dozing, but as for Paul he never seemed so wide awake in all his life. He knew that the next day would be Christmas, for he heard little Pat Mulogay ask his mother if Santa Claus would mind the holes in his stockings.

He remembered, too, how long the tin-peddler stayed in Club Alley, and that all the mothers invested in tin for their children; but what was Christmas to him? There was a time when he and his little sister Paul had welcomed the day, eating sugar-plums at early dawn, as they dived into their well-filled stockings, but that was long ago. Paul had died long since. All the family had passed away, leaving him a rich man. This last thought brought a contented smile to his lips, and he ventured to show his satisfaction by stroking Pussy's fur, which caresses so astonished the cat that she quickly sprung out of reach. Paul made a hasty kind of sound, the nearest he could come to laughing, and moved around restlessly, in his chair. No! sleep will not come, but thoughts of old times grew and multiplied in his mind.

Fifty years ago that very night, Paul had been sitting in his little Bible and asking him to promise to read it. How had that promise been kept? He tried to evade the question, but it repeated itself constantly. He rose from his seat, and going to a little chest returned with the book.

"But, hark! A sweet voice under his window was singing an old carol—yes, one that he and Faith used to sing together. Oh, why does everything bring thoughts of the past? He listened to the window and, pulling aside the old curtain, saw the boy who was caroling:

"O, come, let us adore him."

He left the window, and lighting a half-burned candle, opened Faith's Bible. The verse which he eye was on, was this: "Unto whom much is given, of him shall much be required." He shut the book and listened to the sweet voice that was going farther and farther down the alley, until it had passed the corner and was in a large and busy street and could hardly be heard. He threw up the window and eager to hear the old carol, he listened to the sweet voice that was going farther and farther down the alley, until it had passed the corner and was in a large and busy street and could hardly be heard.

A new carol was commenced—one that his sister sang during that illness. It was enough. He put down the book, and catching up an old cap pulled it well down over his face, and started out, followed by his dog, who took his master's lead by the door.

Paul followed the boy, keeping a respectful distance from him. The little fellow was no longer plugging, but blowing his fingers as he ran. He turned into a narrow passage, and Paul, quickening his pace, was near him. The boy entered a house and through the uncurtained window could be seen a woman, a woman. After a few words together, they both came towards the door and stepped out, while Paul hastily found a hiding-place near by.

"Isn't it beautiful, mother?" said the boy, pointing towards the heavens. "I felt just like singing."

"The snow lay on the ground, The stars shone bright."

but no one seemed to hear me, and I haven't had even a penny given me. I don't want any more. There were beautiful Christmas trees in square of the houses, and when I looked at the happy children dancing around them, I couldn't help thinking of poor little Faith's empty stockings. Oh, mother, how disappointed she will be, for I told her how certain she would find them both full, and she said she would rather have a shoe on each one. I expected to get lots of money—enough to make her happy and pay the rent too."

The familiar name of Faith and the boy's sad tone brought the tears to the old man's eyes. He strove to keep them back, but they would not. He said to himself: "To-morrow will be the saddest Christmas we ever knew! To think of being without a home for old Dan will turn us out, mother, as he has the rest. If we do not pay by to-morrow morning, and the boy gave vent to a sigh, and he comforted the house."

Quarterly Conferences.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

SABIE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Shannon station	Dec. 20, 11
Shannon and Vicksburg	21, 11
Shannon and Vicksburg	22, 11
Shannon and Vicksburg	23, 11
Shannon and Vicksburg	24, 11
Shannon and Vicksburg	25, 11
Shannon and Vicksburg	26, 11
Shannon and Vicksburg	27, 11
Shannon and Vicksburg	28, 11
Shannon and Vicksburg	29, 11
Shannon and Vicksburg	30, 11

ABERDEEN DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Shannon station	Dec. 13, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	15, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	16, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	17, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	18, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	19, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	20, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	21, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	22, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	23, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	24, 14

CORINTH DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Shannon station	Dec. 27, 28
Shannon and Vicksburg	29, 28
Shannon and Vicksburg	30, 28
Shannon and Vicksburg	31, 28
Shannon and Vicksburg	32, 28
Shannon and Vicksburg	33, 28
Shannon and Vicksburg	34, 28
Shannon and Vicksburg	35, 28
Shannon and Vicksburg	36, 28
Shannon and Vicksburg	37, 28
Shannon and Vicksburg	38, 28

ORRENVILLE DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Shannon station	Dec. 21, 22
Shannon and Vicksburg	23, 22
Shannon and Vicksburg	24, 22
Shannon and Vicksburg	25, 22
Shannon and Vicksburg	26, 22
Shannon and Vicksburg	27, 22
Shannon and Vicksburg	28, 22
Shannon and Vicksburg	29, 22
Shannon and Vicksburg	30, 22
Shannon and Vicksburg	31, 22
Shannon and Vicksburg	32, 22

COLUMBUS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Shannon station	Dec. 23, 24
Shannon and Vicksburg	25, 24
Shannon and Vicksburg	26, 24
Shannon and Vicksburg	27, 24
Shannon and Vicksburg	28, 24
Shannon and Vicksburg	29, 24
Shannon and Vicksburg	30, 24
Shannon and Vicksburg	31, 24
Shannon and Vicksburg	32, 24
Shannon and Vicksburg	33, 24
Shannon and Vicksburg	34, 24

HOLLY SPRINGS DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Shannon station	Dec. 15, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	17, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	18, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	19, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	20, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	21, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	22, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	23, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	24, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	25, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	26, 16

GREENADA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Shannon station	Dec. 13, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	15, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	16, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	17, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	18, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	19, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	20, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	21, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	22, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	23, 14
Shannon and Vicksburg	24, 14

WINONA DIST.—FIRST ROUND.

Shannon station	Dec. 15, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	17, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	18, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	19, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	20, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	21, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	22, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	23, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	24, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	25, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	26, 16

SHREVEPORT DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Shannon station	Oct. 2, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	4, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	5, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	6, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	7, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	8, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	9, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	10, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	11, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	12, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	13, 3

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shannon station	Dec. 15, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	17, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	18, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	19, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	20, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	21, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	22, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	23, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	24, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	25, 16
Shannon and Vicksburg	26, 16

WINONA DIST.—FOURTH ROUND.

Shannon station	Oct. 2, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	4, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	5, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	6, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	7, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	8, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	9, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	10, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	11, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	12, 3
Shannon and Vicksburg	13, 3

December 25, 1884.

OPRELOUSAN DIST.—FOURTH R
 Shannon station
 Shannon and Vicksburg
 Shannon and Vicksburg
 Shannon and Vicksburg
 Shannon and Vicksburg
 Shannon and Vicksburg
 Shannon and Vicksburg
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon
 Shannon